Finally, the Senate passed a motion asking that a study hall program similar to ones already in operation in the Worcester and Berkshire Dining Commons be implemented in the Franklin Dining Commons.

"It's a nice, quiet atmosphere to study in," said McDonald, who added that numerous students have already approached him about the plausibility of providing such a service.

According to McDonald, these study hall programs do not add to the cost of the student meal plan.

"We're not asking for wide, sweeping reforms here," said Ramsey, who pointed out that many other universities across the country make these same services available to their student body.

These motions were the latest installment in what has been a major student-led campaign to reform on-campus dining services.

This semester, a motion has been passed that would allow sophomores to live on-campus without being on the meal plan.

Proposed by Ramsey, the proposal has already met stiff resistance from the Administration.

Ramsey said that by the second year of college, especially for older returning students who do not have the credits to be considered a junior, the meal plan requirement is simply not fair.

"They're adults — the University should not force them to eat this low quality food," Ramsey said.

McDonald passed a motion through the Senate which would refund students the $50 they are currently required to pay if they withdraw from the meal plan at the beginning of the semester.

McDonald was advised by the administration that this cost was necessary to cover paperwork and others related expenses. However, upon further investigation he discovered that removing a student from the meal plan can be done in virtually a few seconds on a computer.

"They totally gave me the run-around to try and cover it up," McDonald said.

The motion has not been viewed in a positive light by the administration as have previous ones.

However, McDonald maintains that these changes will come, albeit slowly.

"These are the stepping stones that you have to take to improve the quality of life on this campus," he said.

In other matters, SGA President Christine Lopes officially withdrew her candidacy for Student Trustee, endorsing Secretary of Finance Sean Carter for the office. While not a official ticket, Carter will support Sen. Maurice Caston in his run for President.

Elections are to be held before Spring Break. More students are expected to announce their candidacy soon.

The Senate also passed a motion to prevent any University employee from entering a student's room with in a Residential area "for maintenance reasons" without prior notice, which is not stipulated in the Maintenance Policy of the Residential Contract.

"For maintenance reasons" is just way too ambiguous for someone to go into your room," said the motion's sponsor, Sen. Damon Berger.

According to University policy, "if any illegal items such as marijuana plants, weapons, etc. are found during the normal inspection, the evidence can be documented or seized [by police] and used in a campus hearing."

Scott replies to RSOs, supports ways to help restructure the SATF

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Responding to student pressure to restructure the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) that culminated in Monday's march on Whitmore Administration Building, Chancellor David K. Scott has issued his formal reply — committing himself to reaching a satisfactory agreement for all sides involved.

While Scott made no mention of the march in his letter, dated Feb. 26, he did recognize the extent to which Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) were determined to carry out this campaign for SATF relief, according to Mike Hass of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

> "I strongly support the programs and activities funded by the SATF and believe we must find a way to increase funding available to them."
>
> — David K. Scott

"He's said, 'We have to solve this in some way.'" Hass said.

Scott did not endorse any specific plan to provide for SATF relief, but advised students that he fundamentally supports any move which would provide more funds to student groups.

"I strongly support the programs and activities funded by the SATF and believe we must find a way to increase funding available to them," Scott said. "I fear, however, the solution suggested by the Senate will not necessarily produce the desired result of more funding available to allocate to the RSOs and other student initiated programs and activities."

Student groups have been pushing Scott to remove all administrative taxes on the SATF, as well as the financial burden of the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) and the Five-College Bus System.

Students justified these demands by pointing to the fact that the SATF is funded specifically by the student activities fee which appears on each undergraduate's semester bill, and thus is not intended to fund various campus services such as the PVTA.

Scott countered in his letter that students only finance a total of 10.6 percent of the total PVTA budget, totalling $285,000.

"To abruptly eliminate student contributions could destroy the system, disrupt many students' lives and diminish their academic opportunities," Scott said.

Students who met Tuesday night to review the Chancellor's response, disagreed with his take on PVTA funding. They are attempting to convince Scott to provide for SATF relief within his Strategic Thinking Document, which will reallocate $33 million within the University.

Despite differences still present, students remained optimistic about the prospects of reaching a compromise in the coming weeks.

"He's opened the door," said Speaker Dan Castellano of the Student Government Association (SGA) Senate. "I think that we will have SATF relief by the end of the semester."

Scott said that students must work directly with Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson.

"I believe that these issues can be resolved by the administration working in concert with the students," Scott said.

Some students, however, are still skeptical of Scott, fearing that he will deliberately drag out the process over a number of years to take momentum out of the students hands.

"They stole from us in the first place," said Glenn Grant of University Productions and Concerts (UPC). "I don't trust them at all."

Other students said that a positive working relationship with Scott is possible, and said they would be as constructive as possible in reaching an agreement.

Education is key in rehabilitating prisoners

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

Budget cuts in University of Massachusetts programs for prisoners, combined with a rising prison population may hrow disaster for both prisoners and Massachusetts residents, according to the UMass Prisoner Support Group.

The University's Prison Education Project which was run through the Division of Continuing Education, allowed prisoners to enroll as University students. When federal resources were cut in 1994, so was the program, which had provided jobs and a lower prison return rate.

The United States has the highest rate of incarceration in the world. There are currently over 1.5 million people incarcerated in the nation's prisons and jails and another 3.5 million on probation and parole, according to the Prisoner Support Group.

"As activists working for progressive change, we obviously face a huge challenge," said Associate Professor of Physics and Astronomy and prison activist Jennie Traschen.

According to Traschen, creating a society without crime involves looking at the basic problems and giving people means to support themselves through work.

"Education seems to cut down in recidivism rate," said Traschen. The recidivism rate is measured by the number of people who get out of prison and return within a few years, explained physics department lecturer and prison activist David Kastor.

Group organizers of the Prisoner Support Group hoped to establish an accredited two to four year degree program for inmates before Congressional action ended federal educational grants for prisoners. The group consists of faculty and graduate students who voluntarily organize educational seminars in state prisons such as Gardner State Prison. Educational seminars on prisons touch on topics such as race and class issues.

Most inmates are eventually released into our communities with fewer options, less hope, and more anger than before, according to members of the Prisoner Support Group.

Bureau of Prisons statistics show that a college degree cuts recidivism by 70 percent.

The rising prison population is "a matter of policy" where there is a trend toward longer and longer sentences, Kastor said.

Crime has maintained itself at a steady rate despite rising prison populations, Traschen said. It is clear that imprisonment does not deter crime, she added.

"People learn more crime at prison, typically, if no programs are

Turn to PRISON, page 2

Newest survey favors Clinton over Buchanan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maverick presidential candidate Pat Buchanan is gaining support among the public at large, but at the expense of antagonizing traditional Republican voters, according to a survey.

Buchanan's rating among the public at large was 45 percent favorable and 44 percent unfavorable in the poll, released Wednesday by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press, a week after Buchanan won the New Hampshire primary.

According to the poll, Buchanan's favorability rating of 45 percent trailed President Clinton, whose ratings were 55 percent favorable to 43 percent unfavorable. The 1,500 adults surveyed gave Sen. Bob Dole a 55 percent positive rating and a 39 percent unfavorable score.

The poll said public evaluations of Buchanan were more positive than at the end of his 1992 campaign and better than Hillary Rodham Clinton's ratings of only 42 percent favorable to 54 percent unfavorable.

But while Buchanan's popularity increased after his New Hampshire victory, it was at the expense of possible support from typically Republican voters. For example, a 52 percent majority of college graduates and 53 percent of those who earn $75,000 a year or more expressed displeasure with Buchanan's success, the poll said.

Among working-class Republicans, Buchanan got a 57 percent favorable rating compared to 32 percent who were displeased with his views.

The poll said Buchanan would lose to Clinton by a 59 percent to 36 percent margin if the election were held today. Clinton would also defeat Dole by 52 percent to 44 percent and Lamar Alexander by 54 percent to 42 percent.

In response to another question, the poll found that 51 percent of respondents said Buchanan's New Hampshire victory made them more interested in the presidential race. Only 4 percent said they were less interested, while 63 percent said Buchanan's success had no effect.

Respondents were asked to provide one-word descriptions of the candidates, and were easily able to do so for Clinton, Dole and Buchanan.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Feb. 29

Workshop — There will be a free note-taking workshop offered by the Learning Resources Center from 4 to 5:30 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. Call 454-5334 to register.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be having a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For information, contact Nana at 546-0358 or the office at 545-1925.

Special event — Northeast/Sylvan Residence Life presents "African Heritage Celebration" at Hamlin Hotspot. Food will be served at 6 p.m. and performances including music, films and stories run from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The cost is $2.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting at 3 p.m. in the Herter Hall 6th floor lounge for students interested in studying in Spain or Latin America. A short video will be shown and several students who have recently studied abroad will speak about their experiences overseas. There are opportunities available for summer, semester and year-long study options. If unable to attend the meeting, contact the International Programs Office at 545-2710 or visit the office on the 4th floor of Hills South.

Lecture — The Wildlife Society presents "Restoration of the Atlantic Salmon," a lecture by fisheries biologist Mickey Novak. Novak will discuss both the history of the restoration of the Atlantic salmon, and goals for the future, in Holdsworth 203 at 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — Alpha Phi Alpha, the first and foremost African-American Fraternity, and the honorable brothers of the Alpha Kappa chapter will hold a Spring '96 interest meeting at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 902.

Workshop — The Hunger and Homelessness campaign of MASSPIRG will hold a Hunger Cleanup workshop at 7 p.m. in the MASSPIRG office, 423A Student Union. All are welcome. Call 545-0199 for more information.

Friday, Mar. 1

Comedy — Comedians Julie Barr, Janine DiTullio and Dwayne Perkins will appear at the Bluewall cafe at 8 p.m. Opening the comedy program will be UMass student Jonathan Powell on guitar and voice. The film "Mallrats" will be shown immediately following the comedy show.

Religious event — The Alliance Christian Fellowship presents "Time Out Fellowship" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. The event will focus on encouragement, sharing, friendship and live worship. Please check the Campus Center Information desk for the room number. For more information, contact Mark Grey at 253-7206.

Rally — There will be a rally in protest of alleged rapes in connection with fraternity row, starting at Haigis Mall to Frat Row at 4 p.m.

Saturday, Mar. 2

Talent Show — In capping off Black History Month, the Brotherhood of Iota Phi Theta presents the Umoja Spring Talent Show in the Fine Arts Center from 7 to 10:30 p.m. First, second and third place finishes will receive cash prizes. For more information call 546-3646.

Religious — Graduate Jewish students for Hamentaschen baking meet at Jodi's house at 7 p.m. Call the Hillel House for more information at 549-1710.

Lecture — The Italian Department and the Women's Resource Center of Smith College will sponsor a presentation on Silvia Baraldini, an Italian national who has been imprisoned in the U.S. for the last 15 years. Elizabeth Fink, Baradini's defense lawyer, and Toby Emmer, a close friend of Silvia and a member of the NYC defense committee will speak. Scenes from the PBS documentary Through the Wire will be shown. On International Women's Day, at Smith College, Seelye Hall, Room 106 at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

Notices

Religious — For the first time Chabad House at Amherst is offering the United Purim Service. They will deliver a special Mishloach Manot, food basket, to any student or faculty member to an address on any of the Five College campuses. The baskets will include a bottle of grape juice, homentashen (traditional Purim cookies) and various goodies, along with a personalized card from the sender. The cost of the basket is $10, with a $2 discount for each additional basket. To place an order or for more information call Yonah Blum at 549-7855 or e-mail at blumser@external.umass.edu. Orders must be received by Feb. 26.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586-5812 or 549-2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253-0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Correction

In yesterday's story about the vigil at Hillel House, the Collegian mis-identified the Haitkvah. The Haikvah is the national anthem of Israel. The Collegian regrets the error.

■ prison

continued from page 1

offered," said Traschen. Without educational programs, prisoners are not going to have many resources to join society in a positive way, Kastor said.

Prison guards and prison administrators want inmates to have a television in their cell and access to weight rooms in order to keep inmates occupied, according to Kastor. Still, "prison is not luxurious in any way," he said.

Since 50 to 60 percent of inmates are black, Kastor said he believes racism is involved. Racism is evident from initial arrest, to treatment in prison, to length of sentences, he said.

"Even if you don't care about the immense inhumanity in prisons, you're kind of shooting yourself in the foot," by ignoring the inhumanity, said Traschen.

"The prisons are intrinsically abusive," Kastor said, speaking of inhumane acts such as beatings, tortures and mental abuse. There is an emphasis on punishing prisoners by keeping them locked up for 22 to 23 hours a day without windows and with 24 hour lighting, he said.

"Whenever people are given power over people, then some people get treated horribly," Kastor said. There is no checks and balances of power over the prisoners, he added.

On March 2, there will be a panel discussion about what is going on in the prisons and why. The discussion of Economics of Prisons and Sentencing Issues will be at 10 a.m. and one on Rehabilitation versus Retribution: The Demise of Higher Education in Prisons will be at 2 p.m. at Memorial hall. The conference will end with a speech by Judge Bruce Wright, retired New York State Supreme Court Justice and author of Black Robes, White Justice.

ELECTION '96

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not responded.

"Overall, do you think the world trade agreement and North American Free Trade Agreement have advanced U.S. interests to date?"

Bill Clinton

"Yes, because the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and North American Free Trade Agreement have eliminated tariffs in sectors where the United States is most competitive overseas. As a result, we have opened new foreign markets for American products, boosting U.S. exports, added billions of dollars to our GDP and produced hundreds of thousands of good-quality jobs at home."

Bob Dole

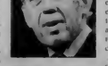
"I supported the North American Free Trade Agreement and the GATT agreements because I support opening foreign markets to U.S. goods and services. At this time, we need to step back and assess whether these agreements have in fact, benefited working Americans as originally hoped. On the issue of GATT, it is my hope that Congress will soon pass legislation, that I introduced, that would allow us to withdraw from the World Trade Organization if the United States' rights are being abridged by bureaucrats in Geneva."

Pat Buchanan

"In 1995, NAFTA cost the U.S. 300,000 lost jobs, brought us a multibillion-dollar trade deficit and put American taxpayers on the hook for most of a $50 billion bailout of Mexico. I favor free and fair trade only with free and fair traders."

Lamar Alexander

"Yes. More trade means more jobs and economic growth for America. That creates a lot of turbulence in the economy and forces many people to change jobs. Yet in order to remain the most competitive country in the world, we have to trade. I believe we should actively work to reduce barriers to trade and subsidies all around the world and pursue more free trade agreements so that we have even greater access to foreign markets."



Richard Lugar

"Yes. The United States stands to gain more than most nations from GATT. ... Strong economic growth in this country will not occur without a vigorous export effort. GATT will enhance this effort. During 1994, U.S. exports to Mexico surged. ... This was true across virtually every sector, leading to thousands of new jobs. The collapse of the Mexican economy was not a result of NAFTA, but of mistakes relating to the management of the peso."

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
PRESENTS IN COLLABORATION WITH:
BLACK STUDENT UNION, HILLEL, OFFICE OF JEWISH AFFAIRS
MORRIS S. DEES JR.
WHO WILL LECTURE ON WHITE SUPREMACY HATE GROUPS IN THE UNITED STATES

TUESDAY, MARCH 5, 1996
7:00PM
FINE ARTS CENTER
UMASS AMHERST
TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE AT THE FINE ARTS CENTER. FREE ADMISSION AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

This program has been made possible by the Financial Support of the following: Chancellor's Office, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Graduate Student Senate, Greek Affairs, Housing Services/Residential Life, Human Relations, Student Government Association, Women of Color Program.

Jodi's Creation ALANA AFFAIRS 1996

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
TO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

SUMMER AND FALL CO-OP POSITIONS STILL AVAILABLE!!

DON'T DISPARE: IF YOU MISSED THE CO-OP FAIR

HUNDREDS OF CO-OP POSTIONS WITH COMPANIES LIKE:

SIMON AND SCHUSTER PUBLISHERS, DIGITAL SEMICONDUCTOR, MARRIOTT HOTELS, MONSANTO CHEMICAL, IBM, DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT, CAESARS LAKE TAHOE, RAYTHEON

STILL AVAILABLE!

FOR MORE INFORMATION ON THESE AND OTHER INCREDIBLE POSITIONS CALL
The University Career Center, Field Experience office 545-6265
Get your Experience NOW, before it is too late...

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Need a job?

Alyson Levine, a junior theater major, speaks with Matt Stoltz at the "Sports and Arts Center at Island Lake" table during "Camp Day," where students could talk with people for jobs at summer camps. It was held yesterday in the Student Union Ballroom.

NCCC helps realize poignant vision

By Anastasia Kudrez
Collegian Staff

In Milton, Del., a middle school teacher dreamed of building an amphitheater classroom. One week before construction began, she was killed in a car accident. No one else in town could build it, so the Americorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC) came to help.

"It was such a great feeling," NCCC member Meredith Snellings said. "They called in the NCCC, and we built the amphitheater in her memory."

Snellings, 23, is a member of Americorps*NCCC, a two- year-old national service program based on the Civilian Community Corps of the 1930s. Americorps*NCCC is part of the Americorps National Service Network, which has 25,000 members in 1,100 communities. Americorps*NCCC is a 10-month, full-time position. It accepts 18 to 24-year- old men and women to work in four areas of community service: environment, education, unmet human needs and public safety and disaster relief.

Americorps*NCCC teams work on various projects, including emergency disaster relief, the construction and improvement of urban and rural parks and restoration of streams and rivers. Members may teach environmental and public safety workshops, or help ensure children receive immunizations.

"Basically, we want to strengthen communities, go in and get things done that have fallen through the cracks," Snellings said in describing the role of her team.

The team she works with is based in Perry Point, Md. They are now working at the Capper Center, a subsidized senior center in the District of Columbia.

"We're painting, putting up drywall, fixing the ceiling. But we're not just a construction team. We want the people to know that we're here to help," she said.

The team will work in various communities over the 10- month period, or be sent on quick-dispatch disaster relief projects. Many members are now in Oregon, assisting the American Red Cross with flood relief.

Although the organization is civilian, it has similarities to the military. Members wear different uniforms, including Battle Dress Uniforms (BDUs) and combat boots. Snellings described a "good day's" itinerary: Waking up at 5:30 a.m. for physical training, getting home by 6:45 a.m. to shower, getting to work at 8:00 a.m. and returning home at 5:00 p.m.

Americorps*NCCC members live in barracks on down- sized military bases in Charleston, S.C., San Diego, Calif., and Denver, Colo. At the fourth location, Perry Point, members live in Veterans Hospital housing.

Snellings pointed out that the program differs from the military because "it's not where you're just recruited and serve your time, but a place to better yourself."

The program recompenses members with a modest living allowance, room and board, and limited health benefits. As an educational incentive, Americorps*NCCC awards $4,725 for tuition or to pay back student loans after members put in 1700 hours of community service.

Snellings said she loves the Americorps*NCCC, and hopes to continue working for them in some capacity after her 10 months are over.

"I could never go back to life without a cause," she said.

*Americorps*NCCC is now accepting applications for positions in October 1996. The application deadline is May 3. For more information or an application, call 1-800-942- 2677.*

Award-winning book discussed

Professor, author tells of research for Deerfield Massacre tale

By Tami Sartor
Collegian Correspondent

DEERFIELD — Professor John Demos of Yale University spoke Sunday about the process of writing his award- winning 1994 book The Unredeemed Captive: A Family Story From Early America.

The presentation, held in the White Church on Memorial Street, was a part of Historic Deerfield's 1996 Winter Lecture Series.

Demos said he wanted to write a narrative history that involved Native Americans. He decided on the story of Eunice Williams, the seven-year-old daughter of Deerfield's minister John Williams who became a captive in Canada following the Deerfield Massacre of 1704. Though her father was released from captivity, Eunice remained with the Mohawk Indians her entire life.

Demos did extensive research for his book, traveling to France, Canada, Rome, Philadelphia, Missouri and Chicago. He received most of his information, however, in Deerfield.

Demos said he "had a variety of good and bad leads." He found many opposing viewpoints on the story, especially about the Indians, and found little written by Eunice herself. Towards the end of his research, Demos realized he had to change his angle due to a lack of information. Instead of writing on Eunice's personal experiences, he wrote how her family and the people she knew felt about her captivity.

Despite these setbacks, Demos managed to write a compelling story which received the prestigious Francis Parkman Prize in American History and was a finalist for the 1995 National Book Critics Circle Award.

Campus swan gets special winter abode

While the ducks remain at the campus pond through the cold weather months, Sydney the swan goes inside. The hot- tempered swan joins the pigs and lambs in his own kiddy- size pool at the University of Massachusetts livestock barn.

According to Joanne Morris, a student employee at the barn, Sydney can neither survive the winter nor fly south because his wings are clipped.

"His pool is even temperature controlled," said Morris, referring to the hot and cold faucets that provide a heated environment for Sydney.

Patty, a Muscovy duck, shares the pool with Sydney. Her bill and webbed feet still show the effects of frostbite from other winters.

Barn Manager Betsy Skribiski sometimes lets them outside to roam the barn and hang out with the pen-dwelling animals.

Sydney is famous at the campus pond for being feisty, Skribiski said.

"Around here he's really mellow," she said. "You can even pick him up." Skribiski's theory is that the swan becomes territorial out on the pond.

At one time, the University had two swans in hopes of breeding. Unfortunately, according to Morris, they both turned out to be males. The other male passed on, leaving Sydney alone.

Sydney will be single forever since "swans are mates for life," according to Skribiski.

At the end of the winter, Sydney goes back to the campus pond. Morris said that although the swan seems content in the barn, the minute Sydney sees the campus pond he flails with excitement, pecking out of the windows of the Bronco in which he is transported.

—Meagan Farley

go for GREAT

We didn't get where we are today by waiting for great things to happen. We've made them happen. With alternative approaches. A high energy, across the board commitment to total quality. Innovation. And great people dedicated to changing today's working world, for the better.

That formula has made Interim Services, Inc. the fastest growing company in one of America's top three growth industries.

But when it comes to careers, why should your "Go for Great" with Interim? Creativity. Diversity. Stability. Potential. Reward. A balance of individual thinking and team spirit. The same reasons we've attracted a talented, motivated workforce- fast-track players who've helped us redefine roles and rules as we create solutions to tomorrow's staffing issues, today.

And every day, as we put quality— and quality people— to work within our own corporate and franchise structure, throughout every Interim division, we "Go for Great." Maybe you should come along.

Interim offers exceptional career options in Sales, Operations, and Branch Management while providing personnel for the Legal, Financial, Medical and Light Industrial fields.

Interim SERVICES INC.

Please consult the Career Placement Office for more information by March 6, 1996.

One of the ways Interim Services, Inc. has excelled is by supporting Equal Opportunity throughout every facet of its hiring environment.

sarah jessica parker
eric schaeffer
elle macpherson

IF LUCY FELL
A comedy for the romantically challenged

TRISTAR PICTURES PRESENTS A MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION OF AMERICA PRODUCTION IN ASSOCIATION WITH BRAD KREVOY & STEVE STABLER
SARAH JESSICA PARKER ERIC SCHAEFFER BEN STILLER ELLE MACPHERSON "IF LUCY FELL" JAMES REBHORN
CO-PRODUCER ADAM BRIGHTMAN STORY BY CHARLTON PETTUS AND AMANDA KRAVAT DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY RON FORTUNATO STORY BY ERIC SCHAEFFER & TONY SPINOSAKIS
SCREENPLAY BY ERIC SCHAEFFER PRODUCED BY BRAD KREVOY STEVE STABLER BRAD JENKEL DIRECTED BY ERIC SCHAEFFER
SEE IT SOON AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU
VISIT THE SONY PICTURES ENTERTAINMENT SITE AT http://www.sony.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Opinion/Editorial

A few minutes with Andrew

Q

Andrew Bryce

ProViding The Answers

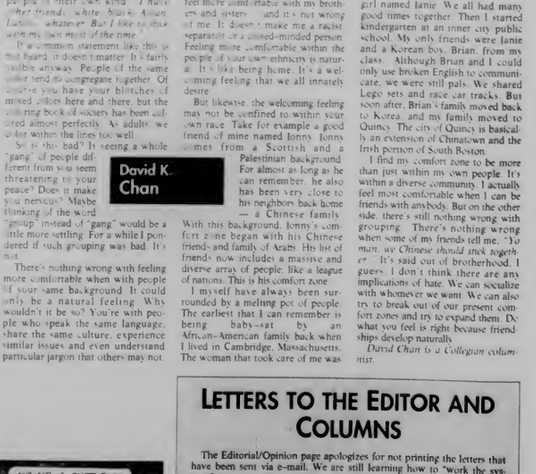
Evan Young

Hero worship

Tara Ruelle

The ties that bind

David K. Chan



By Garry Trudeau
MIKE! MY GOSH-WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE?
I WAS GOING TO ASK YOU THE SAME THING, BOOPSIE!
YOU MEAN YOU DIDN'T HEAR? I'M A BACKER OF CAFE CAMEO! ME AND CHARO AND KATO KAELIN AND HEIDI FLEISS AND A GILLIGAN STAR
AND IT'S GOING GREAT! WE'VE ALREADY GOT CLUBS IN FOUR CITIES!
AMAZING! ARE YOU IN TOWN A LOT?
NO, NO. I JUST FLEW UP HERE FOR JOEY BUTTAFUOCO NIGHT.
JOEY'S HERE? IN SEATTLE?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Bob Dunn.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday February 29, 1996
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 85

Women rockers riding techno highway

People establish web pages as shrines for their favorite musicians, so it is no surprise there are innumerable pages dedicated to today's female musicians.

From established female musicians such as Tori Amos and Natalie Merchant to obscure younger acts such as Letters to Cleo, they all have pages in their honor.

A page I have book marked is the Official Unofficial Cr@nberries Page at http://www.mecr.net/cranberries. The page is nice because it has both a graphics version and a text version for lynx users.

This page has it all for fans of Dolores and the boys. It has a complete discography, lyrics, reprints of articles about the band and their work and even guitar transcripts. I like this page, but there is one drawback — it is slow. However, the immense resources on this page counter balances the lack of speed. If you have the same problem, just use the text version because I found the images were what was slowing down my computer.

Another page I book marked is the Letters to Cleo Homepage at http://www- personal.umich.edu/~bstahl/letters.html. Letters to Cleo is an up and coming band from Boston fronted by a woman. Their page, like the Cranberries Page, has the same features.

The page is great because it provides information such as tour dates — they almost always seem to be touring the nation when they are not in the studio recording. The page is also aesthetically pleasing, and

Turn to ONLINE, page 10

GIRLS JUST WANNA HAVE FUN

Taking over the industry

Once upon a time there were bands consisting solely of men. In fact rock 'n' roll was defined as basically a male dominated industry. But times sure are changing and the influx of both female solo performers and female bands into the music industry has been phenomenal.

Tara MK Connelly

Early pioneers

Beginning in the '80s we saw promises of a new day with female performers like Cyndi Lauper, the Bangles, Sheena Easton and Pat Benatar. Soon these pioneers would give rise to stars (short and long lived) like Madonna, Paula Abdul, Tiffany and Debbie Gibson.

These female performers were exactly that — performers, mass marketed and pre-packaged for mainstream appeal. How they sounded wasn't half as important as how they looked. Girl bands and singers were novelty items, nice to look at, but never really given much of an after thought.

Not just a Pretty Face

Newcomers like Joan Osborne, Tori Amos, Jewel and Faith Evans have brought the musical genres of hip-hop, R&B, alternative and rap to new heights. Women are receiving more recognition for their efforts both on and off stage. VH-1 recently dedicated a whole month to top female singers like Bonnie Raitt, Madonna and Janet Jackson. The music channel also ran a series of live duet performances teaming up and coming female stars with more established performers like

Turn to TAKING OVER, page 6

Country not just for cowboys

Though country music has been around for generations, it has just recently begun to become popular in regions other than the south. The past 10 years have seen the emergence of many young, new country rockers. However, with the few exceptions this genre has been dominated by males. But the women who have blasted onto the scene prove that they can do it just as well as their male counterparts.

Lisa Oliveri

Under the influence

Ask most female country artists for their influences and they will almost always cite their foremothers, the pioneers of chic country rock. Perhaps the biggest influence to today's musicians is Patsy Cline, who gave her final concert in 1963, the year she was killed in a plane crash. But many other women have also paved the way for today's contemporary artists. Loretta Lynn, Barbara Mandrell, Dolly Parton and Tammy Wynette are just a few who have inspired females to showcase their talent.

There are countless more artists who have contributed to making country music what it is today. So rather than trying to mention them all, this article will spotlight the brightest female stars on the present country scene.

Country's shining stars

Reba McEntire is perhaps the most successful female country artist of today. Her popularity grows larger each year. The daughter of a cattle farmer, Reba has grown to be one of the most powerful women in Nashville. She has won numerous awards and this past year was named American Music Female Country Singer of the Year, her ninth consecutive title. She

Turn to COUNTRY, page 6

FEMALE PERFORMERS ARE NO LONGER CONTENT WITH SECOND STAGE

Underground girls surface

"Oh Bondage Up Yours!," the hit debut single from the seminal late '70s rock band X-Ray Spex turned the music world upside down — proving that angry young women can scream just as loud as any punk rock guy. Though the song never hit the Top 40, it influenced a generation of females to pick up an instrument, turn up an amp and just rock. If for nothing else the punk rock revolution of the late '70s broke the ground for women artists and allowed them a place in underground music. Recently acts such as Hole and Liz Phair have emerged with commercial and critical success but there have been hundreds of other critical female-led bands that have paved a clear path.

Mike Burke

Golden Oldies

Rock n' roll in the '50s and '60s was almost entirely a male dominated genre. With a few exceptions (for example, the Supremes and Aretha Franklin) female artists were seen as mere novelty items that looked pretty and had beautiful voices.

The same held true for most of the '70s until the revolutionary ideas of DIY (do it yourself) drifted into the heads of young girls who went on to form bands such as the Raincoats, Joan Jett & the Blackhearts and Blondie. It wasn't until the late '80s though that female artists finally stood on their own.

The most obvious individual to shape the prominent role of women in underground rock is Kim Gordan, bassist for the premier art-noise band Sonic Youth. While her band broke down musical barriers, Gordan tore apart old gender stereotypes. From her girl power lyrics to her sometimes extreme political views, Gordan helped shaped the mind of countless rockers.

The Go-Go's may have had more commercial success with singles like "We Got the Beat" but they also played a crucial role as an all female band. Throwing Muses and Blake Babies were two more premier female-led acts, while other notable bands, such as the Pixies and Yo La Tengo, had/have female members but were overshadowed by their male counterparts.

Alterna-women

While the rest of the world was obsessing over Tiffany and Debbie Gibson another revolution was taking place in the Northwest. Simultaneously grunge and underground pop were taking off. Bands such as Beat Happening took the punk rock themes into their bedrooms where they pro-

Turn to UNDERGROUND, Page 6

■ country

continued from page 5

is also the first female country artist to have five albums to sell over 3 million copies each. Her 1995 tour was one of the highest grossing in all categories of music. Reba has helped bring country music into the spotlight.

But her life has not always been a bed of roses. A few years ago she lost her entire band in a freak plane crash. Before she got her first recording contract she lived in a one room shack with her first husband, without even the comfort of electricity. She knows what it is like to be poor. Yet Reba uses her past experiences as the basis for her songs. This knowledge is the reason why she seems so sincere in songs like "Fancy," the tale of a poor teenager who is forced to leave her run-down home and survive on her own. Reba has proven herself to be as talented as she is popular.

You've Come A Long Way...

Monticello, Ga. native Trisha Yearwood has come a long way since her days as a receptionist at MTM Records. She got her break recording demos for songwriters, and was heard by mega superstar Garth Brooks. Soon she began singing backup for Brooks, then opening for him on one of his U.S. tours. She released her debut album Trisha Yearwood in 1991, which spawned the #1 single, "She's in Love with the Boy." Since then there has been no stopping her.

Three of Yearwood's albums have gone platinum. She was a contributor to the Eagles tribute album, recorded a duet with Aaron Neville for Rhythm Country and Blues and has even appeared with the London Symphony Orchestra. Yearwood's sound transcends traditional country music. On her critically acclaimed sophomore release, Hearts in Armor, she combined a mixture of country, rock, gospel and blues producing one of the best albums in the history of country music. With her powerful voice and meaningful lyrics, Yearwood has proven that she is here to stay.

Hailing from Star, Miss., Faith Hill is one of the newcomers on the scene. Her debut single, "Wild One" held the #1 spot for four weeks, a distinction that had not been achieved since 1964. She has been nominated for two Academy of Country Music awards including Female Vocalist of the Year. Her latest single, "It Matters to Me" has enjoyed a multiple week stay on top of the charts. Since recovering from throat surgery last year, Hill has been quite busy. She is currently touring with Tim McGraw. Be on the lookout for Hill's next single, "Someone Else's Dream" due out soon.

Mary Chapin Carpenter has carved herself a niche in today's country music scene. The New Jersey native has been recording her folksy tunes since 1987. She has since won three consecutive Grammys and been named Country Music Association's Female Vocalist of the Year in 1992 and 1993. Carpenter has taken country music to another level. She writes about a myriad of topics, from winning the lottery to the failings of modern day romance. Her lyrics read like poetry — she is able to convey strong emotions in only a few lines. Having won numerous awards, Carpenter is worthy of all the recognition she has achieved the past few years.

1992's Horizon Award winner Suzy Bogguss is one of country's most notable artists. The former Dollywood theme park performer has slowly gained popularity with her distinct soprano voice and meaningful songs. Her most successful album to date, Aces, which included the tearjerker, "Letting Go," the story about a young girl leaving for college, has sold over a million copies. Bogguss has also collaborated with country legend Chet Atkins, resulting in a critically acclaimed album released in 1994. She is expected to release a new album sometime this year, proving her talent once again.

One of Nashville's most versatile entertainers is the 1994 Female Artist of the Year, Lorrie Morgan. In addition to being an extremely accomplished musician, Morgan has appeared in over 25 television programs including the ABC Movie of the Week, "The Enemy Within." Like her peers Morgan has been nominated for and has won numerous awards, including one for Vocal Event of the Year for a duet she did with her deceased husband, Keith Whitley. She is perhaps best recognized by her hit single, "Something in Red," the tale of honeymoon bliss. Morgan even has her own Visa Card. She will be releasing a new album, Greater Need, in June.

Last But Not Least

Although I have chosen these six artists to highlight, they are no means the only female country artists that have made an impact. It is proper that other musicians be recognized as well. Pam Tillis, Wynonna & Naomi Judd, Martina McBride, Kathy Mattea, Lari White, Shania Twain, Tanya Tucker and many others all deserve credit for shaping country's female scene. With the emergence of many new female artists, country music fans can be assured that the women have shouted their message loud and clear — they are here to stay!

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian correspondent

■ underground

continued from page 5

duced minimalist masterpieces. Their idea was simple: Anyone can be in a band even if you don't have much talent — all you need is soul.

Calvin Johnson of Beat Happening began K Records to release independent records by small bands such as his own and the Cannanes. In 1991 just a few weeks before Nirvana broke big, K Records held the International Pop Underground, a multi-day festival in Olympia Wash. showcasing the best in an independent talent. Surprising most outside critics, women played a crucial role. Nearly every band featured women, from Heavens To Betsy to Courtney Love (the band) to Mecca Normal and Scrawl. Women had finally found a home they could call their own.

Shortly after the festival a new label from Olympia emerged — Kill Rock Stars. And as the name entails, KRS wasn't your average record label. For the last five years KRS has been the premier sight for the influential riot grrrl crowd and other feminist bands. Their impressive all star line-up includes Bikini Kill, Free Kitten, Bratmobile, Excuse Seventeen and Huggy Bear. Bikini Kill are the most recognized for their political lyrics which often deal with incest, rape, girl love and spousal abuse. Lead singer, Kathleen Hanna is considered by many to be on the forefront of the feminist rock movement.

While K was releasing underground pop singles Sub Pop was supporting the grunge scene by putting out bands such as L7, Hole and Babes In Toyland. All three bands, who have all toured with Lollapolloza, are primary examples of feminist rock bands that haven't scared away the mainstream. Hole, led by the controversial Courtney Love, has garnered rave reviews for their recent album Live Through This. L7 and Babes In Toyland have both proved that angry women can be just as loud, if not louder, than their male counterparts.

Cute girl or grunge baby?

Not for little kids anymore, baby doll dresses and berettes are now synonymous with the cuddle-core movement, a genre of music where the musicians dress and sing about childhood fantasies. This largely female-led field features "cute" bands such as Cub, Bunnygrunt and Plum Tree. Much like the riot grrrl movement, these bands are ignoring industry standards and producing the music they want. This is simply the ethics of most underground labels to release music that the major labels fear for financial or political movement.

The uphill fight for more recognition is hardly over for women. Far too often girls are encouraged to play bass because guitar is not a feminine instrument, but that age old theory is just lame. There are few male guitarists out there who can match Mary Timony of Helium for her innovative guitar licks.

The recent surge in independent record labels has helped countless women to get the music out there. Finally, 40 years after the birth of rock n' roll, women are finding their niche in the music industry.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist

■ taking over

continued from page 5

Osborne and Melissa Etheridge.

Today's female superstars are no longer content singing back up for their male counterparts. Indeed there is almost a sense of empowerment in their music. A perfect example of a woman holding her own in the industry is Alanis Morissette.

From teen-actress to female temptress, Morissette has created songs that showed that women can be strong and sexy. "You Oughta Know" blasted the airwaves and became the anthem for disgruntled women everywhere.

But even before Alanis dared ask if her man's new love would deliver fellatio in a theater, Liz Phair's debut, Exile in Guyville, had enough base needs and language to make Alanis look like the Virgin Mary. P.J. Harvey also follows in Phair's footsteps. Her song, "Rid of Me" had ex- boyfriends quivering in fear at her throaty lyrics.

And speaking of religion, Sinead O'Conner dared to go against the grain when she tore up a picture of the Pope on "Saturday Night Live." She further expressed her beliefs when she refused to have America's national anthem play before a concert. The final coup de grace came when she dropped out of this summer's Lollapalooza tour because of her pregnancy and refused to name the father.

But despite O'Conner's antics, she is in no way to be discredited as a singer with no talent. On the contrary, songs like "Nothing Compares 2 U," "Mandinka" and "Emperor's New Clothes" more than proved that she can deliver the goods. However, just as many male singers with half her talent have done far worse and have received only mild criticism.

Women of Independent Means

Natalie Merchant, Courtney Love and Bjork are three female musicians who have broken free from the shadows of men and into a light all their own. With Tigerlily, Merchant has shown that she was the true flame that ignited 10,000 Maniacs' candle. While they were reduced to touring Pearl Sreet sans Merchant, the got top billing at the Mullins Center.

Courtney Love (although walking a fine line between drama queen and singer) is another example of a woman holding her own. Despite her attachment to Kurt Cobain, Love's band, Hole, has a sound and a life all its own, managing to snap up a sweet spot on last summer's Lollapalooza tour.

Ex-Sugarcube, Bjork more than proved that she had what it takes to succeed. Her self-titled debut electrified Europe's charts for months and her second album, Post is nothing short of sheer genius. All these women have made it easier for new comers to spread their wings and take off.

Heather Nova, another music fledgling, charged the airwaves with her song "Walk This World" inciting many a male fantasy with the song's breathy chorus. In fact almost every new female singer has a strong hold of her sexuality.

TLC, a still fairly fresh group, is almost legendary for asking for exactly what they want. Lisa Lopes burnt down her fiancee's mansion when she suspected him of cheating, and the group's song "Red Light Special" lets listeners know that the guy ain't leaving the room until she's satisfied.

Some singers however take a less direct route by creating catchy one hit wonders that dominate the airwaves for a month than fade into obscurity. Lisa Loeb's "Stay" was given more air-time than presidential candidates' spots. Ace of Base drove us nuts with "All That She Wants" and later "The Sign." And at least one woman called the police because her 17-year-old neighbor wouldn't stop playing Whitney Houston's "I Will Always Love You." (Houston is an exception to the rule in that she creates more sappy love songs on one album than anyone else, thus giving a listener plenty of options to mope to.)

It would almost be safe to say that there are more female groups and singers eager to get into the music industry than ever before. Just when you think everything has been done before, someone like Sheryl Crow comes along and blows everyone away.

Marking Milestones

Top 40 music is a veritable breeding ground for would be super stars sporting the chic one name thing like Monica, Soraya and Brandi. All of them, want a place in music history and all of them have the talent and PR people to get their 15 minutes of fame. In order for women to keep up their progressive pace, they have to be more than a pretty face. In a decade where music and music stars are a dime a dozen, it's talent that will boost female singers and nothing else.

Girl bands and girl singers are no longer "cute" and no longer in the background. They have proven to be formidable competition in the music industry getting bigger, better and more powerful every day.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Associate Business Manager Position Open at the Collegian

Are you . . .

- Sophomore S.O.M. Major
- Strong Communicator
- Leader

Pick up an application at the Collegian (113 Campus Center Basement)

"Experience is necessary when entering today's work force."

Application Deadline: March 2st
Questions? Contact Alycia or Earl at 545-3500

You're Invited!

Chancellor David K. Scott Invites The Entire Campus Community To NOMINATE AN OUTSTANDING INDIVIDUAL

who is most worthy of recognition for his or her contributions toward a diverse, multicultural campus. A Certificate of Appreciation and four $1,000 awards will be presented at a reception to honor and celebrate their achievements on May 6, 1996.

One award each will be presented to an undergraduate student, a graduate student, a staff member, and a faculty member of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Faculty members are invited to use their award for research or scholarships.

Criteria will be based upon one or more of the following related to multiculturalism: a) original contributions to the University; b) attainment of high priority objectives; c) crises of "beyond the call of duty" service; d) achievement of significant improvements in the area of teaching or curriculum development; and e) promotion of the awareness of multicultural issues and concerns.

Nominations should be typed and include specific reasons or examples based on the above criteria, along with biographical and other pertinent information (including a resume or vitae, if possible) regarding the candidate's current position on campus. (Self-nominations will receive lower priority.)

DEADLINE - FRIDAY, MARCH 29, 1996
To: Chancellor's Awards for Multiculturalism
C/O Julie Fifield
129 Herter Hall

For further information, call 545-3517.

~ MOVIES ~

Julia Roberts can run, but she can't Hyde; Before and After a let–down

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

MARY REILLY
Directed by Stephen Frears with Julia Roberts, John Malkovich, Glenn Close
Playing at Hampshire Six

The sun never shines in the dark and gloomy Mary Reilly — nor does the light of wisdom ever dawn on the ignorant housemaid Mary Reilly's face.

The grey fog that permanently sets in over Dr. Jekyll's London estate is representative of the muddy plotline from which Mary Reilly suffers. The film tries to make us forget what everyone already knows — Robert Louis Stevenson's tale involving the insidious Dr. Jekyll and the malicious Mr. Hyde is about one man with two personalities.

Mary Reilly (Julia Roberts) apparently isn't that smart. Even though she is the only member of the house staff who converses personally with Jekyll, and later Hyde, Reilly just doesn't pick up on the similarities between the men (both played by John Malkovich).

Roberts makes a valiant attempt at pulling her character out of the muck of this drama, but she can't go it alone. Her acting range is displayed as Reilly, who generates an intimate relationship with Jekyll by confiding in him about the childhood abuse she suffered at the hands of her father.

What is bizarre, however, and contradictory to Reilly's ignorance, is that her subconscious almost makes the connection between Jekyll and Hyde. As she becomes closer to Jekyll during the day, she dreams about making love to the despicable Hyde at night. This is a very thin strand to support a plot, though.

Malkovich is crafty and delivers some slick lines as Hyde, but when he's in the Jekyll persona, his acting is as limp as the dead eel Reilly and the cook skin in the nauseating opening scene.

In his feeble attempt to recreate Dangerous Liaisons as a horror movie, director Stephen Frears drops the ball. Writer Christopher Hampton simply doesn't add a spark to the characters in Mary Reilly, and the regurgitation of Malkovich and Close's characters is sorely misplaced. While their chemistry in Liaisons garnered the film several Oscar nominations, the two do not even interact in Mary Reilly. Close serves as a mere cameo, playing the ridiculous whorehouse madam, Mrs. Farraday.

COURTESY CLIVE COOTE

Julia Roberts stars as maid torn between two men in one body in Mary Reilly.

Whatever potential Mary Reilly had to be a gothic tale, with its shadowy, semi-disturbing sequences and buried erotic undertones, is completely lost in the disastrous ending. Apparently filmed and debated over several times, Frears resorts to a foolish, Alien–like sci-fi ending that is simply ludicrous.

This latest venture into the realm of dark period pieces only proves, sadly, that we really didn't need to hear the Jekyll and Hyde story again. C

BEFORE AND AFTER
Directed by Barbet Schroeder with Meryl Streep, Liam Neeson, Edward Furlong
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

Before and After is yet another example of a drama with a compelling premise that falls victim to a calculated screenplay and mishandling by the main actors.

Set in a sleepy little western Massachusetts town, Before and After looks at the life of a family both before and after a brutal murder occurs in their community. The girl who is slain is not a member of this family — however, the boy accused of committing the heinous crime is.

Before, the Ryan family lived in perpetual happiness and affluence in their giant white farmhouse. Carolyn Ryan (Meryl Streep) is a pediatrician in town and her husband Ben (Liam Neeson) is an established artist. Their daughter Judith and son Jacob (Edward Furlong) are pretty normal kids who go to school and help with chores around the house.

After, the family is spun into a horrific whirlwind of allegations and accusations, searching for the truth and a way to save their son and their sanity.

As the title also indicates, Before and After is constantly reminding us to think about the consequences of our actions. When Jacob vanishes after his girlfriend is murdered, his father Ben doesn't think — he acts. He doesn't care if Jacob is guilty or innocent, and would do anything to protect him — including destroying important evidence found in his son's car.

Tension mounts in several areas of the film, even after Jacob returns and tells his family the true story. He is fearful of letting down his father, yet worries that his father's chosen course of action to defend his son may be potentially damaging to him. Ben hired a slick defense attorney, played to perfection by Alfred Molina, who devises a plan to get Jacob off.

Carolyn disagrees with Ben's methods too, and although she never really gets much say in family matters, tries to stand up to him and the lawyer. Carolyn also has to deal with being violently snubbed by the town, and a chilling confrontation with the victim's mother. Accusing Carolyn of trying to get her son off with "all of her money and big shot lawyer," the already present tension between social classes is exacerbated.

Usually a portrayer of strong women, Streep's role as Carolyn Ryan is disappointing and serves as a noose to her creativity, as both the actress and her character are stifled by Neeson's Ben. Neeson's overly passionate portrayal of the distraught father is too far over the edge to seem real.

The film's most realistic and refreshing performance is that of Furlong's Jacob. The skinny, pale-faced boy facing such a bloody and serious matter sits in stony silence in his first few scenes. Jacob's emotions do pour out eventually, and Furlong handles the performance maturely.

The aspect of morality in parent–child relationships is an intriguing foundation for the film, but what director Schroeder builds upon that turns into melodramatic drivel. Although the before seems promising, the after is a let- down. C–

COURTESY JAMES BRADLEY

Meryl Streep and Liam Neeson play parents torn between the law and their love for their son.

RESTORATION
Directed by Michael Hoffman with Robert Downey Jr., Sam Neill, Meg Ryan
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

Just when you though there were enough period pieces to fill every art-house in America, out comes Michael Hoffman with his 17th century story about a confused young doctor searching for his identity in the turbulent Restoration period.

Based on the novel by Rose Tremain, Restoration takes place in London in 1663, where Oliver Cromwell had been brought to his demise, and Charles II reigned as king. This was a confusing time in history, both economically and socially. Scientific theory was trying to emerge, yet ridiculous practices still occurred. Partying and debauchery took place on the same street as Puritanical worship. It was a constant conflict of dark versus light — people trying to be enlightened and restored.

One man embodies this light/dark dichotomy in Restoration, and his name is Robert Merivel. Played by Robert Downey Jr., Merivel muddles his way through medical school, only to come out as a doctor with great potential and little application. Spending his days in wretched hospitals, and his nights whoring, Merivel seems to have little in his future.

By chance, the king (played by an enigmatic Sam Neill) recruits Merivel as his royal physician to his dogs. Merivel then becomes a token husband to the King's mistress (Polly Walker), only to fall in love with her, and then become banished. This dramatic rise and fall, from colorful wealth to depressing poverty illustrates yet again light versus dark.

Merivel winds up working as a doctor again, curing and falling in love with a poor, abandoned Meg Ryan. As he makes his way through plague-ravaged corpses, Merivel discovers his calling as a doctor.

Downey Jr.'s performance is one of his best, as he can portray an array of emotions with his face rather than words. Neill is fitting as the curious Charles II, and a hilarious cameo by Hugh Grant as the court's artist is the shortest, yet most entertaining bit in the entire film. Though the setting is beautiful, Restoration is made a worthy watch by its talented acting. B

"MARCH" OVER TODAY FOR GREAT SAVINGS!!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS

Coors — REGULAR - LIGHT - GOLD CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS — $12.99 + DEP
GUINNESS — PUB DRAUGHT 4 PK. CANS — $4.69 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK — REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES — $12.99 + DEP
MICHAEL SHEA'S — IRISH AMBER 12 PK. BOTTLES — $6.99 + DEP
BECKS — CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES — $17.49 + DEP
½ KEGS — BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT., MICHELOB DARK, LITE, ICE HOUSE, RED DOG — $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
CARMEN VINEYARDS — IMPORTED FROM CHILE CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, SAUVIGNON BLANC — $4.99
LIVINGSTON CELLARS — ALL FLAVORS 3 OL — $5.99
B&G — CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L — $7.99
HAYWOOD — CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML — SALE $5.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $3.49
NEW SCARLATTA — MONTEPULCIANO & TREBBIANO 1.5L — $4.49

SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L — $13.49
KENNEDY'S BLENDED WHISKEY 1.75L — SALE $9.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $7.99
OLD SMUGGLER SCOTCH 1.75L — $13.49
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN 1.75L — SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
BUSHMILL'S IRISH WHISKEY 750ML — $14.49

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/1/96 THRU WEDS. 3/6/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217

Opening Early This Saturday
at 1:00 pm for the Last Basketball Game of the Regular Season!!
Featuring: Great Menu, Microbrews & Large Screen TV's
Regular Hours: Mon. - Sat. 4:00pm - 12:30am
Positive ID Required

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + Dep.
PETES WICKED 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + Dep.
MOLSON GOLD 24-12 oz. Bott. $15.99 + Dep.
MOOSEHEAD 24-12 oz. Bott. $13.99 + Dep.
RED DOG 24-16 oz. Bott. $13.99 + Dep.
BEERBALLS! BUD, BUD LT., & KILLIANS $22.99 +dep
KEGS!!! BUD, BUD LT, RED DOG, LITE, LITE ICE, M.G.D., LOWENBRAU, MILLER, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB BOCK, M.G.D. LT., BUD ICE $39.99 + DEP.
BUSCH & LT. 30 Pks. $11.99 + Dep.
MICHELOB & LT. 18 Pks. $9.99 + Dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bot Bott. $9.99 + Dep.
KEYSTONE, ICE/LT. 24-12 oz. Cans $8.99 + Dep.
HAMM'S 24-12 oz. Cans $7.99 + Dep.
ICE! 10 Lbs. .....$1.29 50 Lbs. .....$5.49 100 Lbs. ....$9.99 WE DELIVER!
ICEHOUSE!! KEG OF THE WEEK! $38.99 + DEP. SALE THRU 3-6-96
CAPT. MORGAN 1.75L $15.99
GOLDSCHLAGER 750 Ml. $14.99
POPOV VODKA 1.75L $9.99
JAGER MEISTER 750 Ml. $14.99
BUTTERSHOTS .750 Ml. $6.99
MIRASSOU Sauv. Blanc & White Zin. 1.5L $6.99
R. M. WOODBRIDGE Chard. & Cab. Sauv. 1.5L $9.99
DRAGANI Montepulciano .750 Ml. $2.99
FROGS LEAP Sauv. Blanc .750 Ml. $5.69
ROUND HILL Chard. & Cab. Sauv. 1.5 L $8.99

"EVERY DAY, A NEW OPPORTUNITY TO WEAR, SIPS JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DRESS."
"IT SURE CAN'T MAKE, IT'S ENCHEMENT OF ITS PURSUE TOOM."

Amherst Sunshine Car Wash
Automatic Wash/Wax Open Daily
Self-Service Bays Open 24 Hours
VACUUM CLEANERS BILL CHANGERS
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East) Amherst

~ PREVIEWS~

Rand Theater hosts Pterodactyls

Sliver's latest deals with modern day problems with a twist

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Pterodactyls, the hilarious new social comedy by Nicky Silver, opens tonight at the Rand Theater. The outrageously funny and brutally honest tale begins at 8 p.m.

The play deals with such hot issues such as sexual abuse, alcoholism and AIDS, and how to handle these delicate topics with a dash of humor. The modern day cautionary tale is played out by a wealthy Main Line Philadelphia family.

Silver, whose other plays include My Marriage to Ernest Borgnine and Fat Men in Skirts, is known for laying bare parts of our society that usually remain neatly covered up and doing so with great humor. In this newest work, Silver couches potent social and political issues in the disarming structure of a drawing room comedy.

In an interview in American Theater last year, Silver said, "I believe theater is about communication. And in order to communicate effectively, the person to whom you are attempting to communicate has to be open. Humor has a lot to do with creating that openness."

Sam Rush, a familiar name to Valley audiences, directed Pterodactyls. Of the play, Rush explained that, "It's one of the few recent plays that really makes me laugh out loud. It's funny and painfully funny at the same time, painfully funny that its truthfulness often strikes a raw nerve."

While the play explores the reality of living with AIDS, Rush sees it more as a treatise on denial and how family members can hide from each other.

"We live in a time when the phrase 'family values' is used in political battles," Rush said. "This play addresses some of those underlying issues in a real way."

Pterodactyls will be performed in Rand Theater on February 29–March 2 & March 5–9 at 8 p.m. and at 2 p.m. on March 2. Tickets are $6 general public, $3.50 students and seniors. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511. For group discounts, call 545-6820. To volunteer as an usher and see the play for free, call 545- 6809. The Rand Theater is wheelchair accessible. Subject matter may not be suitable for young audiences.

Peggy Kennedy, David Mason, Amy Allard and Jerry Marciano in Pterodactyls.

COURTESY BARNHART

War will play Pearl Street this Friday night.

COURTESY AVENUE RECORDS

Waging WAR in Northampton

By Aaron Brandes
Collegian Staff

WAR, a '70s ultra-soul and funk ensemble hits Northampton on Friday night. WAR is a band that has been grooving all over the country after somewhat of a hiatus from the music scene. The group is touring in support of Peace Sign, their most recent record release 18th major release, giving you the clue that these guys have history written all over them.

They played with guitar god, Jimi Hendrix on what was unfortunately the great man's last show on this Earth. WAR is probably most widely recognized for the everlasting hit "Low Rider" revitalized by its spot on the Dazed and Confused soundtrack. They are the type of band that you might not recognize by name but probably have cranked their tunes when they are played on the radio.

In 1970, Melody Maker called WAR, "the best live band we've ever seen." Throughout the years spanning from 1969 to the present day, WAR has kept fans movin' and groovin' with record after record, going gold with song after song and becoming regular favorites.

The success of the band is easily linked to the immense talent the band produces. Eric Burdon, lead singer of The Animals, became part of the soul in the early years of WAR. Many other legends have came and gone through the years of WAR including the incredible harmonica playing of Lee Oskar.

In 1992, as a tribute to the effect WAR has had on the music of today, many rap and hip-hop stars, including the likes of Beastie Boys, De La Soul, Poor Righteous Teachers, 2Pac and Nice 'n Smooth created a compilation of covers. These rap masters not only sampled much of WAR's material, but the album is a collaborative effort between WAR and the artists it has influenced.

Now WAR, with many of its original members intact, (including guitarist Howard Scott, drummer Harold Brown, keyboardist Lonnie Jordan, and second drummer, Ron Hammon — all of who sing lead and background vocals as well) continue to grace us with their deeply imbedded roots in soul, blues and funk. They mix experience and talent with a variety of instruments including: two saxophones, another keyboardist, a percussionist and a harmonica player. This vast span of talent and instrumentation is a sure-fire recipe for an incredible show.

Opening for WAR is the new funk sensation Fat Bag, a band originating from the Boston area. You may not have heard of these guys yet, but it is vehemently advised to show up to WAR early to enjoy the fantastic funk, hip-hop and jazz sounds that Fat Bag always produces. This band, simply put, is awesome and will blow your mind!

Human Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m. $5.99
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Lunch Buffet Mon.-Sat. 11-3 $3.99
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 BELCHERTOWN RD. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY. WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY!
Collegian Graphics
Where it pays to play!

THE UNIVERSITY ADVISING CENTER has Job Opportunities for Undergraduate Students Available for Summer and Fall 1996.
We are looking to hire students from every major.
5-8 hours per week (Semester) or 18-25 hours per week (summer).
Our Student employees act as Peer Advisors to Undeclared Students, and assist Graduate, Faculty, and Professional Advisors.
If you are interested, please stop by the University Advising Center in E-20 Machmer for an application, or call Danielle or Dennis at 545-2191 for more information.
Deadline:
Friday, March 15th.
Training sessions begin in April.

Save up to $120 plus get a FREE trip*
Save up to $120 when you purchase a college ring, and, as a bonus, you get a FREE trip to destinations in the continental U.S.
ARTCARVED College Jewelry
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • 545-2619
Date: February 26- March 1
Time: 10:00 a.m.- 3:30 p.m.
Location: Campus Center Concourse

New books takes a look at the roots of today's popular children's stories

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

GEORGE PURVIN
The Scholarly Inquiries of Jonathan Fane
Northwest Publishing Inc.

Ever wondered where fairy tales such as "Little Red Riding Hood" or "Cinderella" came from? Neither had I, but this entertaining novel examines the roots of such tales and subtly recreates their abstract symbolism.

The novel is centered around an eccentric professor called Jonathan Fane. When not acting as marriage guidance counsellor and all-round good-egg, Fane is delving through archives to solve the mysteries which have intrigued historians for centuries. His sidekick cum surrogate son is Joel Holder, the narrator of the story.

The novel can be complex at times — historical fiction often is — but its main purpose is to amuse and entertain, not to historically inform. There are moments when it appears that Fane is just too much of a "Santa-Claus" figure, but murder, violence and the first "F"-word soon persuade the reader that it won't all be plain sailing.

The fairy tale of Little Red Riding Hood is the first to be explored. The novel opens with the revelation that Fane is being sued by his daughter for the squandering of $50,000 on historical research. What finally emerges in court is the truth behind the centuries' old tale. Little Red Riding Hood's grandmother was savagely murdered, but the wolf is exonerated as nothing more than a scapegoat. Lust, greed and passion are the motives for the senseless murder of which another stands accused.

Holder and Fane become unlikely partners but soon they find themselves aligned against — amongst other things— the Mafia. Fane, having turned his talents to commercial genealogy, is soon commissioned by a dubious figure to unearth a family tree.

The second half of the novel finds the two protagonists in Spain, but this time the truth behind the fairy tale (in this case, "Cinderella") is far from dead and buried. They soon discover that the age-old tale is derived from incest, the Spanish Mafia, a barbaric matriarchy and an unnatural twist of hereditary evil. Their own lives are put in danger and a trail of deceit and violence is unearthed.

Purvin has managed to fashion an absorbing and, above all, humorous novel. It is surprisingly unpredictable and the historical background is very convincing — a good literary diversion for Spring Break. B+

Oh No!... I wouldn't give up my llama that's not for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Hay Nay! The nut really matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$* the %$@93*- CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam

CLUB METRO AND EXTREMOS PRESENT
5 College Spotlight Nights
Thursday, February 29th
The Big Bad Bollocks
Celtic pub rock early show 9pm
Paulzilla
Boddington's Beer Special: Free T-shirts for the first 20 people
This Thursday & Friday $1 Admission with College ID Every Friday Deep House Dance Party with DJ Nick Warren
Sunday, March 3
Vavoom 1 Festival of Original Music
7 Live Bands from 1-9 pm
CLUB METRO
492 Pleasant St. Northampton, MA (413) 582-0303 open 'till 2am

Jazz legend Billy Taylor to warm up UMass

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Jazz enthusiasts will have the opportunity to pep up their winter blues as Dr. Billy Taylor and friends take the stage at Bowker Auditorium for a benefit concert. The 8 p.m. concert will benefit the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund for University students who demonstrate outstanding musical talent and merit in the area of Afro-American music and jazz.

Taylor, a world renowned jazz pianist, composer and teacher, will be joined by Niek Brignola on saxophone, John Faddis on trumpet, Chip Jackson on bass, drummer Steve Johns and vocalist Michelle Mailhot.

Taylor has performed with such legends as Dizzy Gillespie, Roy Eldridge, Billie Holiday, Miles Davis, Lester Young and Charlie Parker. He holds a doctorate in music education from the University of Massachusetts and seven honorary degrees. In addition to those achievements he has received two Peabody awards and an Emmy. Downbeat magazine awarded him their Lifetime Achievement Award and he has performed as a guest artist at the White House on five occasions.

Brignola, a jazz baritone saxophonist, has performed and recorded with Woody Herman, Chick Corea, Herbie Hancock, Doc Severinsen and many others. Winner of the December 1993 Jazz Times magazine critics poll, he has also been placed among the top baritone sax players in Downbeat's readers poll for the past 10 years.

Faddis began playing the trumpet at an early age and is currently the musical director of the Carnegie Hall Jazz Band and was the music director of the 1995 Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra "The Majesty of Louis Armstrong Tour" and the "Newport Jazz Festival 40 Anniversary Tour." His remarkable career also includes performances with Lionel Hampton, Charlie Mingus and Sarah Vaughn.

Tickets are $15, $10, $8 for age 17 and under. $5 for Five-College Students. For tickets, call 545-2511 or 1-800- 999-UMAS. Bowker Auditorium is located in Stockbridge Hall at the University of Massachusetts.

Billy Talyor

COURTESY NIK BRIGNOLA

Latino Theater ends season with "English Only"

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Colorado-based theater group, Su Teatro, will conclude the Latino Theater Project's year-long schedule of residencies and collaborative productions with a two-week stay. The group will spend their time conducting workshops and performances of new and repertory work at the University of Massachusetts and in the community.

On Mar. 2, Su Teatro will perform their popular La Carpa Aztlan Presents: I Don't Speak English Only, a collective creation by the company and scripted by artistic director, Anthony Garcia. The play satirizes the "English Only" movement that has been sweeping the country. La Carpa is a bilingual show performed in the Mexican carpa vaudeville tent show tradition. Set in the year 2020 when the melting pot has fused all Americans into one race and culture, when English is the official language and speaking Spanish and other languages is a crime.

Chicanos, who have survived the '90s and remember their language are forced to live underground. Alberto, the central character, has been raised in the culturally devoid "outercore" of the city. When he gets lost on a field trip to the "innercore" he encounters a group of underground rebels led by Don Guillermo Aztalan who guide through a magical odyssey and include him in their carpa vaudeville production of I Don't Speak English Only, a show filled with music, drama, dance and laughter.

The cast of I Don't Speak English Only

COURTESY SU TEATRO

Based in Denver, Su Teatro is a regular guest on New WORLD theater's series and is committed to the advancement of Chicano and Latino cultural arts. Their present residency is the last phase of New WORLD Theater's year-long five part series.

Tickets to the performances are $6 with $2.50 for students, seniors and children. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Concert Box Office, which can be reached at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Tickets can also be picked up before the performance at Bowker. For more information about New WORLD Theater and the Latino Theater Project, call 545-1972.

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible. All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT is now recruiting for VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb. 28, 29, March 1
Open House at the North Fire Station, March 1st, 5:00 p.m.
Call 549-5419

Attention RSOs/GSOs/Agencies

Space Allocation Procedure has begun!

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission has once again begun the Space Allocation Procedure for office spaces within the Campus Center/Student Union Complex.

Pick up an application at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union!

A person from each RSO/GSO/Agency has to sign out an application at the Campus Activities Office.

Complete applications should be dropped off at the Campus Activities Office by 4:45 p.m. on March 29, 1996.

Applications Available: February 28, 1996, Noon
Applications Due: March 29, 1996, 4:45 p.m.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.
Thank You For Your Patronage
Shop Scott's & Save!!
Check The Rest Shop The Best!
Quantity Discounts
Busch & Busch Light 30 Packs $11.99 +dep
Dozens Of In Store Specials!
We've Got The Competition Beat!!!
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

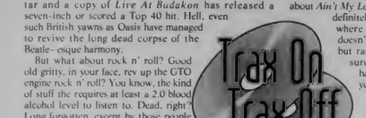
~ MUSIC ~

Grifters latest makes A–list; Pogues back again

2Pac releases fourth album on Death Row Records; first ever double-disc hip hop record

THE GRIFTERS
Ain't My Lookout
Sub Pop

Classic rock just isn't very cool anymore. Think about it — in the last three years the music world has exploded with a resounding "pop." Ever since Kurt Cobain mentioned that he was a closet pop-music junkie, every sucker with a guitar and a copy of Live At Budokan has released a seven-inch or scored a Top 40 hit. Hell, even such British yawns as Oasis have managed to revive the long dead corpse of the Beatle–esque harmony.



But what about rock n' roll? Good old gritty, in your face, rev up the GTO engine rock n' roll? You know, the kind of stuff the requires at least a 2.0 blood alcohol level to listen to. Dead, right? Long forgotten, except by those people who actually own, and listen to, Guitar Rock?

Wrong. Memphis' good ole' boys the Grifters remember rock n' roll and for years have been churning out their own warped version through an endless stream of self–released seven–inches and full–length albums. Picture the blues, Bowie and a dash of punk and prog–rock, mixed with whatever drugs Beck just took, and you'll pretty much be on the right track.

On previous releases such as One Sock Missing and Crappin' You Negative, the Grifters managed to keep things interesting by never giving the listener something concrete to latch on to. Songs would shift and churn, dart this way and that, before finally offering up a delicious hook, and then snatching it away just before anything got comfortable.

Frustrating, yes. Intriguing, definitely. Now, after jumping ship to Sub Pop, the group has gone into a proper studio and released their sell–out album, Ain't No Lookout. But what a sell–out!

Where the Grifters' past material always felt as though it was going to fall apart at any given moment, Ain't My Lookout is built on a much more solid foundation. The album quivers rather than quakes, and the boys are better off for it. But before purists scoff, let it be known that the band is still using its same plan of attack. It's just that this time the whole thing is a little more refined. Songs such as "Parting Shot" and "The Straight Time" leave you hanging on before drawing you in with a irresistible chorus and then spitting you back out — just like the old stuff — but this time around, the group is simply just writing better songs.

Don't be mistaken, there is nothing very revolutionary about Ain't My Lookout. Listen closely and you will almost definitely swear you've heard all the hooks somewhere before. But the beauty of the Grifters doesn't lie in the band's ability to be original, but rather how they take familiar guilty pleasures and tempt you with them. You'll be hard pressed to find a better album yet this year. A (Matt Audette)

The Grifters aim to please with latest release.

COURTESY DANIEL BA...

2PAC
All Eyez On Me
Death Row

2Pac likes to do things a little differently. Not only does he release himself from hospitals without permission from doctors and manage to get caught in the crossfire during a bank robbery, but he has also become the first rap artist to put out a double disc album in the history of the genre.

All Eyes On Me is the artist's fourth solo album on Death Row Records and is comprised of 27 tracks all written shortly after his release from prison. Lasting over two hours, the albums contains a myriad of tracks on topics such as gang violence, inner pain and moving on — all emotions 2Pac felt in prison.

Maybe it was the inner rage, but 2Pac's songs come off sounding only mediocre with the exceptions of the few songs he did in collaboration with different artists. "California Love" which he recorded with Dr. Dre and "2 Americaz Most Wanted" with Snoop Doggy Dog, are two of the most memorable tracks along with "No More Pain" and "Life Goes On," a song about remembering old friends.

2Pac wants to express himself but gets caught up in his own emotions, giving this album a rushed feeling with a lot of pent up frustration. This is a guy with a mission, a man hell bent on getting his side of the story out. Nothing new, but consistently good. All Eyez On Me is worth a spin. B (Tara MK Connelly)

COURTESY DEATH ROW RECORDS

2Pac releases first ever double disc rap album.

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Home Alive: The Art of Self Defense
Epic

The hype over Seattle may have drifted down to Southern California, but this benefit compilation may revive some grunge–mania all over again. According to the liner notes, Home Alive organization is "a collective of performances and visual artist (and other freaks) hell bent on fighting all forms of violence including rape, domestic abuse, gay/lesbian beating, racism and all forms of oppression."

The compilation is an impressive collection of well known musicians, sporting three unreleased tracks from Seattle's Big Three (Nirvana, Pearl Jam and Soundgarden) interspersed with 42 other artists.

Nirvana contributes a decent live version of "Radio Friendly Unit Shifter" recorded two years ago in France. Eddie Vedder and company cover the 1963 tune "Leaving Here," while Soundgarden appear with "Kyle Petty (Son of Richard)." There are also appearances by hipsters the Presidents of the United States, Fastbacks, The Posies, Ann & Nancy Wilson (Heart), 7 Year Bitch and Love Battery.

The real highlight is "Go Home (Seattle Version)" performed by Joan Jett and the Black Hearts with Kathleen Hanna of Bikini Kill. The live tune, written by Jett and Hanna, captures the legacy of both figures perfectly.

Another bright spot on this double disc extravaganza is the numerous spoken word contributions by many of the scene's hottest speakers from Jello Biafra to Jim Carroll to Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka. These best capture the true spirit of the Home Alive organization. Overall this compilation breaks little ground musically, but the proceeds do go to a good cause and hey, you can't go wrong with another Nirvana track, can you? B– (Mike Burke)

NOFX
Heavy Petting Zoo
Epitaph

While so called punk bands like Face To Face and Propaghandi emulate NOFX's sound, they still fall short of Fat Mikes (the group's singer/bassist) songwriting capabilities. NOFX, who hail from southern California, have a chunky metal sound that's mixed with smart, crude and humorous lyrics which gives them a sound that's all their own.

On their latest release, Heavy Petting Zoo, NOFX takes what they did on their last album, Punk In Drublic, one step further, by changing their usual song writing formula around. On the song "Hot Dog In a Hallway," sounds of a wah–wah pedal can be heard from Eric Melvin's guitar. Also check out "Drop The World," which is the most emotional NOFX song to date. The song uses a violin in all of the right places, adding a whole new dimension to their sound. Another amazing tune is "Freedom Like A Shopping Cart" which has an almost epic sounding intro that eventually breaks into a hard NOFX groove.

From the look of the album cover and the liner notes, it is easy to tell NOFX isn't for everyone. Although some of the songs on Heavy Petting Zoo might seem more accessible then past material, there is almost no chance for a buzz clip or a major label switch. Just read their liner notes, where they ask MTV, major labels and commercial radio stations to quit bugging them! B– (Jason Flax)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Bootlegged
Colorwater Records

Each of the 13 tracks on Bootlegged explores fairly new musical groups as they display their so–called forte, live music. Many of these bands have been the buzz of their hometown and furthermore several have gained small notoriety.

Aquarium Rescue Unit have played the H.O.R.D.E. tour and Gov't Mule features members of the Allman Brothers. Zero includes a musician that performed with Jefferson Starship, Hot Tuna and Sly & The Family Stone. Also Zero's lyricist happens to be the one and only Robert Hunter, known for his classic work with the Grateful Dead.

Credentials like these got my toes wiggling and my blood flowing but they only make a difference on the CD jacket as they certainly do not transcend into the music. This only proves that while these bands are definitely not short on talent (neither is Pink Floyd), the dehydration of these bands comes with the ingenuity and the unique quality that each of these bands is severely lacking.

Turn to TRAX, page 11

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PRESENTS
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES: SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
FEATURING THREE COMEDIANS
OPENING ACT FEATURING "The Phil D. Powell Expansion" High Energy Acoustic Guitar
JULIE BARR
JANINE DITULLIO
DWAYNE PERKINS
immediately followed by
BLUEWALL
March 1, 1996
8pm FREE
What the Did You Expect From The Director Of "Clerks"?
MALLRATS
Superhero Anatomy! Topless Fortune Telling! Bunny Bashing! And More!
R
GRAMERCY
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a grant from the UMASS Auxiliary Services Office and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs

CONFIRM YOUR SPRING 1996 COURSE SCHEDULE!
Starting Wednesday, February 21, the Registrar's Office will mail to you, at your local address, your course schedule for Spring 1996. Your schedule will be accurate as of February 16, including any Five-College classes you might have.
Please check your printed course schedule carefully!
If you have questions about your course schedule, contact the Registrar's Office. If you never attended a certain class, or are enrolled in a class not on your schedule, contact your undergraduate deans office as soon as possible, but no later than March 8.
If you do not receive your schedule by Friday, March 1, contact the Registrar's Office to confirm both your course schedule AND your local mailing address.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Genuine Draft" $9.99 cse bots
S.S.P. VODKA $8.99 750 liter
Bud & Bud Light - $14.99 cse "16 oz" bots
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
New Amsterdam- Amber, Ale, Blk/Tan, & "Winter Anniv."
Saranac- Amber, Stout, Chocolate, Pale Ale, & Black & Tan
Brooklyn- Lager & the "Famous Brown Ale"!
Catamount- Porter, Amber, Gold, Pale Ale, & "X-Mas"!
Harpoon- I.P.A., Ale, Pilsner, & Alt
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Concha Y Toro $4.99 1.5 liter (all flavors)
Rolling Rock $13.99 cse bots.
Bacardi amber or silver $7.49 750 ml.
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Night Life at
PRUDDY'S
9:30 pm to 1:00 am
• FOOD • TROPICAL DRINKS • FRIENDS •
253-2899 Main St., Amherst
WE'RE BUBULING HOT !!
Thursday
RETRO NIGHT
DJ Yuseph spins the best of the 70's & 80's
NO COVER CHARGE
Saturday
Reggae
Come to Pruddy's and feel alright
Friday
Hip hop
dj play the best of hip-hop in town

■ Trax

continued from page 10

They all sound like Phish! They all sound like Blues Traveler! They all sound like the Dave Matthews Band and Little Feat! But they have nothing more to offer. Maybe these band can do the trick in their own hometown or elsewhere as replacements, but that is where the buck stops — they are just replacements. When the real stuff gets there, when the ground–breaking music is heard, people know the difference.

The jacket cover reads, "the live music of the best live bands." If this statement had a mere shred of truth, a slight kernel of fact, perhaps this would be an interesting find. Unfortunately this CD, which spotlights several jam–oriented bands from all over the U.S., is undoubtedly terrible. The opening song by Moon Boot Lover is the compilation's only saving grace. D (Aaron Brandes)

THE POGUES
Pogue Mahone
Mesa

The Pogues get bonus points for impeccable timing, releasing their latest album just three weeks before St. Patrick's Day. And what better way to enjoy one of Ireland's finest bands than with a pint of Guinness?

Mixing Traditional Irish music and contemporary rock n' roll, the Pogues have a sound few can emulate with success. While falling short of their brilliant first two releases (Red Roses For Me and Rum, Sodomy & The Lash), Pogue Mahone is a pleasant comeback for a band that was left for dead after the departure of lead man Shane MacGowan. Original member Spider Stacy steps up to take control as lead vocalist again (he also appeared on Waiting For Herb.)

The first track recorded for the album, an excellent cover of the Dylan tune "When the Ship Comes In," is given a catchy Celtic feel. The brief number "Amadie," (a tribute to the Cajun singer Amadie Adouin) mixes up Celtic and Cajun influences surprisingly well. "Love You Till The End" is one of the better love songs in recent memory, while "Bright Lights" is a toe–tapping Irish drinking number made for a quick Irish step dance.

While this is certainly not as good as the days when MacGowan led their band in his drunken stupor, Pogue Mahone — Gaelic for "kiss my ass" — is a surprise treat and a sure winner on St. Patty's Day. B (M.B.)

New store offers solution to aching backs, muscles

Those stressed out over exams, caught in the pressures of work or sore after winter sports may be interested in a massage at Traditional Asian Healing Arts, nestled a block north of CVS in downtown Amherst.

The ancient Japanese massage therapy known as Shiatsu brings contentment to the mind while physically strengthening the body, according to Hayley Mermelstein, 27–year–old co–owner of Traditional Asian Healing Arts.

The technique is different from a typical health club massage because instead of kneading at sore muscles, the therapist applies pressure to certain points of the body to equalize the flow of energy or "ki" through the body. This therapy, similar to acupuncture without needles, has been known to cure sore muscles, headaches, stomach pains, the flu and even bronchitis, Mermelstein said.

She claims the massage not only relieves tense muscles, but quiets the mind and strengthens the body. It is a preventative medicine because it "brings balance to the body," Mermelstein said.

It is a "healthy alternative to stress relief," the massage artist said.

Mermelstein opened the practice with co–owner Kristin Elizabeth Kirk. Both are University of Massachusetts graduates who were inspired by therapist Janet Murphy to pursue physical health and healing. Murphy was a guest lecturer in UMass Professor Alby Reiner's course "Biology of Cancer and Aids."

Kirk and Mermelstein pursued separate degrees through the BDIC (Bachelors Degree in Concentration) and opened the business soon after graduation.

Since then, their business has attracted a mixture of clientele including students, locals and still other people who travel long distances for the massage.

— Holly Anderson

■ Online

continued from page 5

does not take too long to load. To see this page in all its glory, you will need Netscape 2.0 because it uses Java scripting.

A page I stumbled upon while cruising the web was the Unofficial Natalie Merchant Home Page at http://www.primenet.com/~inforhas/natalie.html. Like the other pages it uses the standard formula of providing tour dates, discographies, lyrics and the sort. This page is full of basic information.

The page is mostly text with a fatigues camouflage background. My major qualm with this page is the fact that the concert dates are not on a separate page like most pages. It also lacked a centralized location to launch into the page, in other words all the links were scattered about the text. Unless you are a big Merchant fan, do not bother stopping by here.

My final stop in cyber space before calling off my search for web pages dedicated to female musicians was Hanging with the Raisin Girl at http://pages.prodigy.com/R/A/N/raisin. Obviously this page is dedicated to Tori Amos — I think all the gratuitous photos of her makes that obvious.

What attracted me to this page was its title. This page is like the others providing articles and lyrics. The information is easy to find like most of the other pages because all the links to sub–pages are on the top of the page. The page is pretty simple too. It does not have anything fancy about it, and the photos of Tori are basic promotional ones which can be found in CDs and press packets. If you are a Tori fan, you might want to bookmark this page.

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Rockwell Kent exhibit at AC's Mead Art Museum

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

An exhibition of prints, drawings, posters, book illustrations and decorative designs by a famous American artist will be on display at the Mead Art Museum at Amherst College starting tomorrow. The exhibit, titled "The Graphic Art of Rockwell Kent," will remain on view until April 28.

The 25 works of art are drawn from the holdings of the Museum and from the Robert Frost Library, which has substantial amounts of Kent's material in its Special Collections department, including first editions and bookplate designs.

Two of Kent's textile designs, on loan from the Bowdoin College Museum of Art, further demonstrates the wide range of his graphic endeavors.

Throughout his career as an architect, painter and designer, Kent (1882–1971) was a politically active socialist who believed that graphic art was the most democratic form of artistic production. From the '20s to the '50s, Kent's graphic work reached the masses as fine prints and illustrations in popular books and magazines.

His choice of emotionally charged subjects ranged from the overtly political, such as his wood engraving, Works of the World Unite! (1937), used as the cover illustration for the radical magazine New Masses, to the deeply psychological lithograph, Nightmare, reproduced in Carl Zigrosser's book on medical prints, Ars Medica (1959).

As an avid explorer and adventurer, Kent frequently portrayed scenes from his travels. Immortalized in prints and writings are images of Alaska, Greenland and Tierra del Fuego. One of Kent's best known books, N by E (1930), offered up wood engraved illustrations of nautical subjects. His personal obsession with the rigors of life at sea resulted in his critically acclaimed edition of Melville's Moby Dick, produced by Lakeside Press in 1930.

Rare collector's editions, as well as a sample of popular editions of Kent's illustrated books, will be shown along with the wood engravings and preparatory drawings.

In conjunction with the exhibition, curator Susan Danly will present a gallery talk, "Rockwell Kent: Myth and Masculinity," on Tuesday, Apr. 9 at 12:15 p.m. at the Mead Art Museum. Her lecture will focus on Kent's self–portraits and autobiography, the preponderance of images of the male nude in his prints and the issue of gender studies in American art of the period.

Amherst College is located at the intersection of Routes 9 and 116 in Amherst. The Mead Art Museum is located off the east side of the college quadrangle. Admission is free. Hours are weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and weekends from 1 to 5 p.m. For further information and to schedule tours, please call (413) 542-2335.

Getting High on Getting Thin:
The First of Two Workshops on Eating and Body Issues
My Best Friend, My Worst Enemy
Myths and facts about eating disorders, food and weight.
Date: Thursday, March 7, 1996
Time: 3:30 pm to 5:00 pm
Place: Campus Center, Rm 811-15
Drop-in workshops are sponsored by University Health Services. Free and open to UMass students.
CONFIDENTIALITY ASSURED
For more info, call 549-2671 ext. 233 or 545-2337

Pearl Street Nightclub
THURSDAY FEB 29
HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Downstairs 8:00 pm
THE SOUL CAFE
FRI. MAR 1 6:30 PM
WAR
RETRO NIGHT
Downstairs 9:00 pm
MAX CREEK
SAT. MAR 2 6:30 PM
LETTERS TO CLEO
CLUB NIGHT
Downstairs 8:30 pm
THE SIGHS
SUN. MAR 3 7:30 PM
25 TA' LIFE
MON. MAR 4 7:30 PM
FACE TO FACE
TUE. MAR 5 7:30 PM
DANCEHALL CRASHERS
WEDNESDAY MAR 6
GAY NIGHT
THURS MAR 7
HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
Downstairs 8:30 pm
FROM GOOD HOMES
FRI. MAR 8 6:30 PM
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Downstairs 8:00 pm
EVE'S PLUM
SAT. MAR 9 6:30 PM
SEVEN MARY THREE
Downstairs 8:30 pm
THE UPPER CRUST
2/12 LADYSMITH BLACK MAMBAZO
3/15 THE PIETASTERS
3/16 BIG BAD BOLLOCKS
3/17 FRANK BLACK 18+
3/21 PRO-PAIN/CRIBBS
3/23 THE OCTOBER PROJECT
3/28 THE MACHINE 18+
3/29 JOHN VALBY "Dr. Dirty" 18+
3/30 THE RADIO KINGS
3/31 SAM BLACK CHURCH/ TREE
4/2 SHOOTYZ GROOVE
4/7 BROTHER CANE 18+
4/9 THE SUBDUDES
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-584-7771

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together New England's Largest College Daily.
When our job is done, your day is just beginning.

BIG GUY LIQUORS
Welcome Back! Come down and check out our new wine selection!
Wild Spirit $15.99 1.5ltr • Bud Dry Cans $11.99 -6pc.
Miller Genuine Draft 24 bottles $10.49 -6pc.
BEER BALLS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
•FULL LINE OF BEER, LIQUORS, & WINE•
Open Mon-Sat 10am-10pm
Rt. 63 North Amherst 549-1555
KEGS

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

UMass Theater Presents Nicky Silver's
Pterodactyls
The Comedy That Puts the Fun in Dysfunctional
Rand Theater, UMass, February 29-March 2 & March 5-9, 8 p.m. & March 2, 2 p.m. Tickets: $3.50, $6, Call 545-2511 Contains Mature Content

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

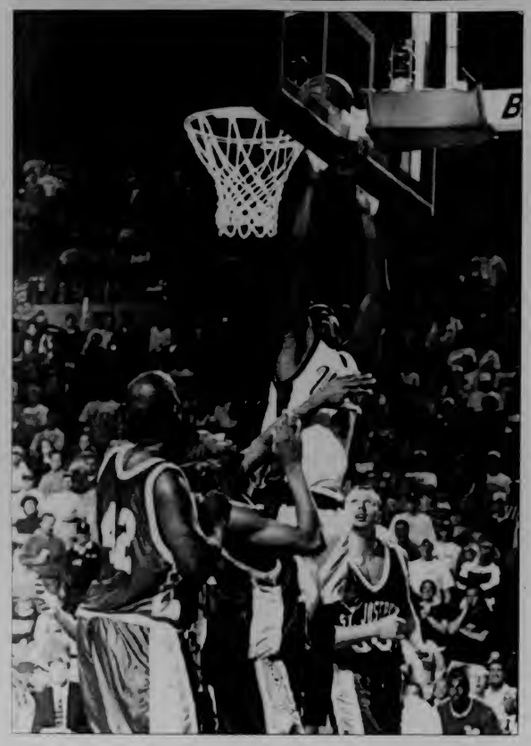
Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!
MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN 113 Campus Center 545-3500

In Celebration of Black History Month
The BLUEWALL Cafeteria presents a special luncheon:
Choice of:
BBQ Ribs or Fried Chicken
Any 3 Below:
Collard Greens
Black Eyed Peas
Candied Yams
Red Beans & Rice
Choice of:
Pecan or Sweet Potato Pie
TODAY ONLY $4.99

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 11-11 pm Fri-Sat 11-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Your last weekend to see it.
Arrive early.
Academy Award Nominee for "Best" Actor, Actress, and Director.
"SIMPLY ONE OF THE YEAR'S FINEST FILMS"
"TWO VERY ENTHUSIASTIC THUMBS UP!"
"ONE OF THE YEAR'S TEN BEST! A COURAGEOUS AND PASSIONATE DRAMA."
"AN OVERPOWERING, DEEPLY MOVING FILM EXPERIENCE."
★★★★
OUTSTANDING PERFORMANCES! ONE OF THE YEAR'S TEN BEST!
SUSAN SARANDON SEAN PENN
A FILM BY TIM ROBBINS
DEAD MAN WALKING
R
GRAMERCY
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
Cinema Treasures
584-8435

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, March 15
for events after April 3
Grants for
Visual Art & Design
Literature, Theater, Performance Art
Film & Video
Music
Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance, & information:
The UMass Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck Hall
545-0202



RYAN TEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Donta Bright's jumper with 3.7 seconds left in regulation sent the game into overtime after the Minutemen had trailed by six with 2:01 left.

■ Nunez

continued from page 16

that lucky because it's not a bad thing, but I have no skills for that."

His coach felt that the proper call was made.

"He got hit," UMass coach John Calipari said. "That was not an act, he got hit. It was just that one of the referee's didn't want to make the call.

"That's Rigo though. He's the best at doing what he needs to do."

* * *

Prior to last night's contest, all Minutemen seniors were honored for their service to the team over their tenure. Padilla, Cottrell, Nunez, Bright and co-captain Dana Dingle all were announced to the crowd with their accomplishments as well as the three senior managers, Matt "Cheese" Komer, Lou Castellano and Craig Goodfriend.

Coach Calipari spoke to the fans with kind words for the UMass basketball Class of 1996.

"How about what these seniors have meant to this school, this state and this program over the past four years," he said. "This is a hard day for me. What we owe to the seniors and managers, we could never repay."

■ hoops

continued from page 16

go. Myers sank the first shot and missed the second, but Will Johnson tipped the ball in to pull the Hawks to within one.

Padilla had a chance to give the Minutemen some breathing room when he went to the charity stripe with 16 seconds left but the usually solid free-throw shooter missed both. He went to the line again three seconds later, this time making one of two making the score 68-66. A last second attempt by Myers fell short, preserving the win.

"If we're down by 100 points with two minutes to go, we still think we have a chance to win," Bright said.

A big reason why UMass was able to come away with the victory was its tenacity on the boards, as the Minutemen held a 60 to 34 advantage on the glass including a 32 to eight edge on the offensive boards.

"The game came down to rebounding. Our No. 1 priority was rebounding, rebounding, rebounding. It was not to play close or to entertain anybody," St. Joe's coach Phil Martelli said. "[UMass] is one of the finest rebounding teams because they are so relentless. To give up 32 offensive boards, that's embarrassing."

"St. Joe's just came ready to play," Camby said. They played a hard-fought game. You can't take anything away from them."

The Minutemen led throughout most of the first half and entered the lockeroom at halftime with a 24-19 lead. They increased that lead to as much as 10 with 15:56 left. But that's when UMass started to fall apart. St. Joe's proceeded to go on a 12-3 run to making it 37-36 UMass and then took its first lead since the first half on a Mark Bass free throw with 9:34 left in the game.

"We came up here to win the game and we didn't get it done," Martelli said.

RYAN TEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Dana Dingle played his usual solid game scoring nine points and grabbing four rebounds while playing in his 128th game as a Minuteman.

You'll gain valuable experience, and a lot of character references.

The Walt Disney World® College Program offers industrious students a unique opportunity to experience "the magical world of Disney" from the inside. You'll be part of a top-notch team all working toward the same goal of a spectacular guest experience!

Representatives will be on campus to answer all your questions concerning the Walt Disney World® College Program.

Interviewing: All Majors' Positions available throughout theme parks and resorts (attractions, food & beverage, merchandise, lifeguarding, and many others)! Ask the Disney Representative about special opportunities for students fluent in Portuguese

Presentation Date: March 5, 1996
Time: 7 p.m.
Location: Herter Room 231
For More Information Contact: Jeff Silver, (413)545-6265

Walt Disney World®
An Equal Opportunity Employer • Drawing Creatively from Diversity

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst
CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS...
D.J. Hiza
of the infamous Dance Afrique
Thursday February 29th
9:30pm-1:00am
Free Admission
At The Bluewall
This performance is made possible by:
DAILY COLLEGIAN Classifieds
SEF, a grant from the Cultural Enrichment Fund, and a grant from Greek Affairs.

Amherst Cinema
Lowest Popcorn, Soda and Candy Prices in the Valley!! Get a Small Popcorn, Small Soda and Small Candy Bar - All three for just $2.00!!
Free refills on all large and extra large sodas with UMass I.D. !!
Ticket Price for Students with ID always just $4.00 . . .
Located in Downtown Amherst - Across from the Jones Library
Call 253-5426 for Current Movie Listings & Times.
Now Playing . . .
Leaving Las Vegas
Running Feb. 25 through Feb. 29
Showing at 7:30 p.m.
Rated R

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Specials . . .		For the Connoisseur . . .
Ice House/ Red Dog	$6.99 12-pack bottles	Black Dog (Ale, Pale Ale, Wheat, Honey Raspberry)	$4.99 /six
Michelob Regular & light	$7.39 12-pack bottles	Harpoon I.P.A.	$8.99 12-pack bottles
T.G.I. Friday's Mudslide 750ml	$3.99	Otter Creek (Copper Ale, Stovepipe, Porter)	$5.49 /six
Cuervo Gold	$10.99 750ml	Quarter Keg of Sam Adams Lager	$45.00
Gordon's Vodka	$6.49 750ml	J.W. Dant 100° bourbon	$11.99 750ml
Boone's Wines	5 for $9.99

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

■ NBA

continued from page 16

team that temporarily deflated the Bulls juggernaut or the one that lost to Portland by 29 at home. Antonio McDyess has clearly proven his worth. However, leadership from their guards is often questioned. Dikembe Mutombo is a free agent at season's end and his status is uncertain. Checking out those ping-pong balls guys?

5. Dallas Mavericks— Grade C-. Strengths: young core, Jason Kidd. Weaknesses: No presence down low. Dick Motta? The Mavericks are arguably the league's biggest disappointment. The three J's (Jason, Jimmy and Jamal) have been unable to gel in their quest to build upon last season's improvement. With Mashburn out for the season, the Mavs are reeling. When Motta was hired, owner Donald Carter was thinking dynasty. Was last season a short story or are the Mavs struggling with the table of contents?

6. Minnesota Timberwolves— Grade C. Strengths VP Kevin McHale, Kevin Garnett. Weaknesses: Time to recover. With almost as many coaching and executive changes as years of existence, the T-Wolves need time. McHale is a solid administrator who knows the game. Eventually, he will mold Minnesota into winners, well.., eventually. A personal favorite, Garnett is earning his keep, not to mention giving Wolves fans something to cheer about. Although they are a long way away, it is safe to say Minnesota is — finally — rid of Christian Laettner.

7. Vancouver Grizzlies— Grade D. Strengths: Patience, Greg Anthony. Weaknesses: the reality of expansion. Unlike the Raptors, their expansion counterpart, the Grizzlies (11-40) have struggled ever since starting off 2-0. Ex-Knick Anthony has been solid at the point but the Grizzlies seem to be constantly looking at the right mix. Who knows? Who cares?

Pacific Division

1. Seattle Supersonics— Grade A. Strengths: an improved Shawn Kemp, road record. Weaknesses: Playoff past. Knowing that head coach George Karl is surely headed to Portland after the season, will the Sonics (40-12) get past the first round? Little has been said about Gary Payton's desire to return. Is that championship feeling finally reigning in Seattle?

2. Los Angeles Lakers— Grade B+. Strengths: Magic Johnson's presence, something to prove. Weaknesses: very young, poor shooting. Since the Magic man's return, the Lakers have been on a roll, winning seven of their last nine. Even though Johnson is currently sidelined with a calf injury, his knowledge of the game has enhanced the morale of his team. Oh, by the way, has anyone seen Nick Van Exel? L.A. is out to prove that last year's playoff run asserted them as contenders, not spoilers.

3. Phoenix Suns— Grade B. Strengths: Charles Barkley, experience. Weaknesses: Injuries, injuries, injuries. Since Cotton Fitzsimmons return as head coach, the Suns have been as hot as Pamela Lee. Under Paul Westphal, they looked like Rosanne Barr. Michael Finley has been a diamond in the rough and Danny Manning is starting to work his way back into the lineup. Bottom line: Barkley is on a tear, so, depending on whichever falls first— McDonalds or the Western Conference, the Suns could be there come Finals time.

4. Golden State Warriors— Grade C+. Strengths: scoring ability. Weaknesses: inconsistency, team unity. OK, Tim Hardaway is out, Kevin Willis (of all people) is in, so now what? If the season ended today the Warriors (26-28) would be in the playoffs. "Ordinary" Joe Smith is far from simple, now giving Damon Stoudamire a run for Rookie of the Year honors. As usual, the question in the Bay Area is can the Warriors keep we before I, not to mention try and keep the doctor bills down?

5. Sacramento Kings— Grade C. Strengths: Solid core, depth. Weaknesses: streaky, point guard. Two weeks ago the Kings were seven games above .500 and playing solid basketball. Since that time they have lost 12 in a row and are on collision course with futility. Trading Walt Williams was a mistake since Billy Owens is not the answer. Too many questions here — at best they should make it no further than the first round.

6. Portland Trailblazers— Grade C-. Strengths: Rod Strickland, not much else. Weaknesses: no emotion. This is a blah ballclub. They consistently hover around .500 and never seem to show any desire. In suspending Strickland, lame duck president Bob Whitsitt is simply making things worse. Owner Paul Allen has recently focused his attention on buying the Seahawks. Cool, now he can own two mediocre ball clubs.

7. Los Angeles Clippers— Grade D. Strengths: Vancouver is in their division. Weaknesses: Bo Outlaw is starting, you figure it out. Ahh, the Clippers, who better than them to bring up the rear of the Pacific Division. Hey, at least Brent Barry showed that white men can jump. Give me an L, O, T, T, E, R, Y... what's that spell?

Where are they now?

1) Purvis Short
2) Joe Courtney
3) Alaa Abdelnaby
4) Joe Barry Carroll
5) Mike Peplowski

Darren Cohen is a Collegian Columnist.

■ college

continued from page 16

maybe.

Big Sky: Weber State.

Big South: Liberty.

Big 10: Purdue, Penn State, Michigan, and Iowa. Indiana looks iffy, but will probably go.

Big West: Long Beach State, most likely.

Colonial: It might be Virginia Commonwealth, but don't count out Old Dominion.

Conference USA: Cincinnati will a lead a corps that includes Louisville, Memphis and probably Tulane.

Ivy: It'll either be Princeton or Penn.

Mid-Atlantic: Iona.

Mid-American: If Miami (Ohio) wins the tournament, Eastern Michigan will get an at-large bid.

Mid-Continent: Valparaiso.

Mid-Eastern: Coppin State falters at tourney time, so look for North Carolina A&T or South Carolina State.

Midwestern: Wisconsin-Green Bay deserves the nod.

Missouri Valley: Some people are saying Bradley, but I'll go with Tulsa.

North Atlantic: Drexel, unless Boston University wins the conference tourney. Drexel would probably get an at-large then.

Northeast: Mt. St. Mary's

Ohio Valley: Murray State.

Pacific 10: UCLA, Arizona and Stanford. Most likely Cal, too.

Patriot: Holy Cross, but maybe Colgate.

Southeastern: Kentucky, Georgia and Mississippi State. Arkansas, probably.

Southern: Davidson.

Southland: It'll be either Stephen F. Austin or Texas-San Antonio.

Southwest: Texas Tech and Texas.

Southwestern: Liz Brown picks Mississippi Valley State.

Sun Belt: Most likely Arkansas-Little Rock, but don't count out Western Kentucky.

Trans America: This is the conference Florida International came out of last year. College of Charleston (not eligible for conference tourney) will probably get an at-large bid. The automatic is up-for-grabs. Look for Stetson or Southeastern Louisiana.

West Coast: Santa Clara.

Western Athletic: Utah, New Mexico and Fresno State.

Now where do other teams stand?

BC has faltered and general opinion is that they will not go. Illinois has a shot. Duke and Maryland have to finish strong, and good showings in the ACC tournament won't hurt. Clemson and Virginia need to win the ACC tourney if they expect their names to be called March 10.

For a while, it looked like Washington had a shot, but a rough weekend in California's Bay Area has them now precariously on the bubble. Rhode Island has probably lost its chance, while Missouri is clinging to a chance.

Marquette and Oklahoma are both sitting on the bubble, but Auburn's chances are slowly slipping away. Other teams which have chances include: Houston, and Manhattan.

The guessing has begun, the water-cooler chatter now dwells on NCAA pools, rather than office gossip. With Selection Sunday only a week away, who's bubble is about to burst?

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

■ volleyball

continued from page 16

and aiding Lambert's kills.

"Despite the loss of key players and a tendency to play down to weaker teams, we still managed to pull out a victory in the end," Greenlaw said.

En route to gain the recognition that the team feels they deserve, UMass pulled out key wins against Amherst College, Connecticut and the U.S. Coast Guard in order to keep their momentum alive. In looking forward to the A- Flight Tournament, UMass has a legitimate shot at taking the tournament and moving up to the No. 1 seed.

This is crucial to UMass's hopes of playing in the Nationals in Toledo, Ohio. Having played well enough to earn a spot, there is one road block— money. Without funding from the university or other organizations, all of the expenses come out of the pockets of the team's members.

Winning the A-Flight Tournament would lighten the blow financially, earning the team roughly $2,000. Without these earnings, UMass is unlikely to have the funding to attend the Nationals.

"We have shown that we can play with some of the best teams in the country," Greenlaw said, "And we'd like a chance to prove it."

Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay,Nay!.. The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!* tlic ¡%$@#$*! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look.. It's still all the same to the clam

Perfectly Natural
LOSE WEIGHT BY SPRING BREAK!
5% off any bottle of program
We have every confidence that we carry the best weight loss programs available!
Ready to put on that bathing suit?
SAFE, EASY, effective, all natural herbal combos STANDARDIZED
Herbal Health & Fitness Products
321 Main St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)253-7716 • Closed Wed

MIKARA'S
MUSIC ROOM & NIGHT CLUB
200 Cooley Street • Springfield • (413) 796-7127
The Mighty Mighty Bosstones
Saturday, March 2
9:00 PM
18+
Special Guests:
The Bouncing Souls & Mung

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in So. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
505 West Street, South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook & The Boulders

JUNGLE RED SALON
(413) 549-1840
• Perms • Colors • Nails
Special Haircut Day
Lower Level, Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant / Amherst, MA 01002

Minuteman Volkswagon
Ask For First Time College Program!
Patricia Dolan
Salea Representative
TEL. 617-275-8000
39 North Road
Bedford, Mass. 01730

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating optometrists are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4. We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Frederick R. Myers, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Program

University Health Services • 549-2671 X244

Shoe Sale.
Final Winter Markdowns.
ZUM

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20 Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
Soups • Entrees • Appetizers
Regular Lunch and Dinner Menus Always Available • Full Liquor License
10% off PICK UP/TAKE OUT ORDERS
Cannot Combine With Other Offers • 1 Coupon Per Person
"Bringing The Traditions To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery area Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

If You Are Driving Around With A Dirty Car...CUT it Out!
Save $5.50
Express Wash, Blue Coat Polish, Undercarriage Wash, Rust Inhibitor, Spot Free Finish
Reg. Price $4.50
Reg. Price $4.00
Reg. Price $1.50
Reg. Price $1.50
Reg. Price $1.50
Total Reg. Price $13.00
Discount Coupon -$5.50
You Pay Only $7.50
Golden Nozzle Car Wash
Not valid with any other coupons.
Locations- E.L. Roberts
Amherst/Hadley 456 Russell next to BP
Chicopee 520 Montgomery St.
Easthampton 124 Northampton St.
East Longmeadow 141 North St.
Ludlow 425 Center St.
Springfield 1385 Boston Rd
Springfield 599 St. James St
Springfield 93 West Broad St
Westfield 90 South Maple St.
West SPFLD. 518 Memorial Ave
West SPFLD. 2685 Westfield St
West SPFLD. 928 Riverdale St

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid for a great selection of men's suits and knowledgeable, professional service
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA
586-5302

Lincoln Real Estate
Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Skiers and Snowboarders ... (UMass) ... Call Greg, The Mtn. ... Club ... Subscriptions ... 545-3431

ANNOUNCEMENTS

New Mail Order System! Order any ... online and call-in reduced prices. 50% ... postage supplies. $6 for posters. Star ... Wars for $26. Harvey $3 bookies $7.50 ... give us terms at the CC concourse every ... on Tuesday and Gerrit @ 6-5287.

Alpha Chi Omega welcomes their new members Tressa, Pamela, Lianka, Wendy, ... Stacie E., Jennifer, Amy ... Emma, Danielle!

KAI CHI intervening Sunday thru Thursday ... per club every Friday and Saturday ... Jen 586-1174.

FOR A GOOD TIME ... on the web: http://www. ... edu/~jolson/index.html

AUDITIONS

Open Auditions for UMass Theatre Guild ... evening. Mon., Wed., Thurs. Feb. 5th, 7th, ... 8th. Sign-ups begin at 6:30pm. Please be ...

Attention Animal Lovers! Pet personal ... letter each to hear your pet ... is being a companion, a protector ... or just a friend. Letters to PO Box 36 ... Amherst, MA 01004 or e-mail Petters ...

Guardstaff Work ... Guardstaff Work ... interested per ... Barteno ... Apply in person ... Bartenders ... Serving ... Need to know ... Apply in person ...

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apt for rent ... one bedroom ... Available ... Call Steve ...

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Mustang LX ... 5 Spd, good condition, ... $1500 or best offer. 549-0915

95 Chevy Celebrity ... 4 cyl., one owner, ... 24K miles, ... $4800/b.o. ...

1984 Oldsmobile ... Runs and body good ... Needs some work. $500 or b/o. 323-4 ...

95 Civic Si ... Black, 5 spd, ... Call 549-1 ...

Purchasing a used car? ... Having one ... know about? Let ... Consumer Report ... Buyer's Guide ... Library ...

1996 Dodge Colt ... Available ... Call Steve ...

EMPLOYMENT

Glacier National Park ...

EMPLOYMENT

...ing, arts & crafts, woodworking, drama, ...radio and archery. Pioneering staff needed for both land and canoe trips and for our ropes challenge course and rock climbing. Experienced mountaineering staff also needed. Other openings may be available. Salaries $100-$200 per week plus room board and travel. We will be conducting on campus interviews on February 20th. For information call 1-800-988-7 CAMP (2267) or write Camp 42 Underwood DR West Orange, NJ 07052

Get the best internships in the country! Send us your resume! We'll get you in touch with the right people currently looking to hill sports at MTV, SNL, ABC news, The Today Show, Datetime. Top ad agencies and accounting firms. Call 212-545-2074.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742

Office study spaces Beautiful building. Parking, bustine. $200/750. 253-2822 or 253-9725.

FOR SALE

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto ... lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans. script, write text 2 speed ... detachable CDROM PCMCIA slot! Bulletin ... get games! $2,000 549-4378

35 GALLON ... fish tank call 549-4929

Kramer acoustic bass ... $300. Peavy 160 ... bag, 150. Premier maple snare 200. ... 15/50MI and 18" Basscab 350 ea. 367-9774

MTN ... Bike All Shimano components ... hardly used, great cond. $250 Bo 8-2027.

Powe: Macintosh ... plus monitor, laser ... printer, speakers, stabhouse, and loaded with graphics software $2,800 or b/o 253-0342 Zach

Slow Computer ? CALL SCREAM ... 1AVERS! ... Memory ... installation ... $39 megabyte ... (most ... PC's) ... Hardware/Software upgrade $, Free consultation and house calls 549-0083.

Powerbook 165 10mb ram 160mb Hard Drive System 7.1 internal modem call Fred at 532-1158

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Rack systems and seperate components, used/reconditioned. Large selection. Honest advice, warrantee, and great prices. We buy audio, video, DJ/musical equipment. Stereo & Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. (Open Sundays only 9-5 Often does call Amherst 256-0941

100 disc Sony CD changer Never used 4 yr warranty $450 non-549-0455

Yamaha RX V570 Receiver DSP, Night Club, Prologic Move, Jazz Club, Live Concert, Mirage. PS 12" W subwoofer. Klipsche KG4 2-FB speakers. For demo & price. Please Call Wes 546-8786.

1/3 C.T. White Diamond Sold For $1800 ... need $800. ASAP. Call ... 665-2138.

FAT CHIC FOR SALE

Freestyle 94 snowboard bought new ... used three times, will sell for reasonable ... b/o. 253-1804 Casey.

Macintosh Color Classic 8/80, Mouse, Keyboard. Software $699, call 256-0090

FOR SALE

Sage Saturn ... plus various games. ... Reasonable price call Kevin 549-4488

Platform bed with mattress. $300 or b/o. Will 256-8522

FOUND

Found single dorm room key on chain at 1008 North Pleasant St. Friday night. Call to claim 549-3996.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals ... Waterfront Houses—Falmouth Area 508-477-8000

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Lessons Beginner to Advanced ... contact Stephen at 253-3354.

Learn to Scuba Dive 2 credits OPE G 09 ... 800 262-0877 / 545-2328

LOST

Lost from DUDrive 126 black check ringmaster bag—brown leather tool bad contains important electronic equipment. ... Reward offered. Please call 413 253-1914.

PERSONALS

Punk rock boy seeks punk girl 6-5258. Adam Hodgs 21st birthday.

To the Delta Zeta spring '96 new member class: Jenn, Kim, Jackie, Michelle, Grace, Ivy, Lauren, Kristen, Kim, Lisa, Sara, Stephanie, and Lise. Welcome to DZ! Get psyched for a great semester! The best is yet to come! Love in DZ, the sisters

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent! Available now! Nice home on Leverett/Amherst border. 270 a mo. for LARGE bedroom. Call 548-9171.

Spacious three bedroom apt Convenient location. On bus route. One mile from campus. Very affordable. No pets. 549-1649.

Room for rent ... One bedroom available for 3 - 1 '96. Ideal for one or two persons. On two bus routes, also a clinic walk to campus. Call Colleen or Angela @ 549-5265.

Room For Rent, Belchertown, beautiful house, for info call Jumi 323-7560.

ROOM WANTED

Female, N/S, cat-lover wanted as a great room-mate in a lovely third-floor apt. in Mill Valley Estates. $295 mth plus 1/2 util. heat/hot water incld. Please call 256-1734 for more info.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Vegetarian ... non-smoking, semi-cooperative household seeks 25+. Car needed $250+ 584-6441

Female n/s, cat lover wanted as a great room mate in a lovely third floor Apt. in mill valley estates. $295 mth plus 1/2 util. heat/hot water incld. please call 256-1734 for more info.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906.

SERVICES

Say I Love You with a Sugar Jones giant heart shaped cookie decorated with your sweet message written in delicious icing. Hand delivered with a long stem rose and a personalized card. $20.00. VISA/MC call Sugar Jones 549-1663.

Jewelry Repairs watch batteries, eye glass frame repair, and ear piercing. Silversmiths Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. 253-3324.

Experienced Russian tutoring available. Flexible schedule, moderate rates. Call Marina 546-0315.

Questions about your lease, security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Hot! Hot! Hot! New metabolism breakthrough. Loose 8-100lbs. Guaranteed results. 1 800 600-7389.

English teacher's writing help, ideas, organization, spelling, grammar. Rates reasonable. Will Dx. 256-4522.

TRAVEL

One way ticket from Bradley to San Francisco non stop on 2/16. $175.00 OBO. 549-8946.

Ski + Snowboard Campus Reps needed Winterbreak and Springbreak '96. Intercollegiate Ski Weeks only $219! Includes 5 day lift ticket 5 nights lodging 5 tasty Condos! 5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18). Sponsors include Molson and Labatts. Mt. Orford Canada (Just across the Vermont border) Group leader trips. Discounts. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1 800 999-ski9.

Cancun Spring Break Best party prices from $249!!! Americas premier travel company earn free trips and highest commissions!! Call 800 798-1926 for info.

Spring Break! Book Now! Spring Break '96. With only 1 week to live don't blow it! Book Now! Florida & Padre $109. Bahamas $359. Jamaica/Cancun $399. Organize a group. Travel free! Sunsplash Tours 1 800 426-7710.

Spring Break! Cancun $499. Daytona ft $119. Panama City, FL $159. Best prices and hotels! Call Inter Campus 800 327-6013.

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington #, 09' s Mass ski club 545-3431.

Organize a full busload Earn free trips roundtrip tickets in your spring break destination. We'll pick you up on campus, send you straight to spring break. At the end of the week we pick you up and send you back to school. 1 800 600-1857. Ask for 12.

Spring Break Complete Packages ... bahamas from $268. Cancun + Jamaica from $399. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and much more! Organize a small group and earn a FREE trip plus cash. Call 1 800-595-9997 NOW!

Hitch the Skies Camel, Mex only $189 rt Europe $169. Free domestic rates AIRHITCH 800 326-2009

WANTED

CASHISS for your magic cards. 585-9382 After 5pm.

JABBERWOCKY! Attention all writers! The UMass Undergraduate English Club is looking for your original works of poetry and short fiction for our 1996 issue! Please bring all submissions to Bartlett Hall Rm 282 - DEADLINE: March 22, 1996.

Wanted: 100 Students! Lose 10-35+ lbs. next 90 days. New metabolism break through guaranteed. Dr. recommended. $75.50 MC/Visa 24hr. Info 1 800-229-7562.

Wanted: Models M/F for spring semester '96. Figure class. TR 2-4:30 for appointment call Ted Fornas (MTW 10-11) Hoteka CC Art Dept. 538-7000 ext. 2492.

Undergraduate Women 18-25 needed for research study on body image call 545-0809.

Research interviewers hiring now for daytime hours. No selling involved. In the nesting part time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills involved. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday 5 p.m.-5 p.m. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour within paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is easy to the free busline. Call between 9 a.m. 5 p.m. Monday-Friday 413-586-8535. Ask Associates telephone research center, Mountain Farms Mall Rt 9 Hadley, Ma 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

Spring Break Daytona Beach
March 15-24
7 Nights at a Beachfront Hotel
$89.00
$219.00 Bus & Hotel
To book, call Breakaway Tours
1-800-465-4257
SPACE IS LIMITED

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trade Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Rose or Sugar
5 Church areas
10 Lights out signal
14 "Norma" highlight
15 Minneapolis suburb
16 Essayist of note
17 Body shop short
18 Carrot location
20 Lawyer's deg.
21 Dynamic lead in
22 The choice part
23 Aerie resident
25 Goalie effort
27 A Marx
29 Feeble
34 Sun shade
36 Auditorium
37 Neither's partner
38 Mortgage
39 Port of Japan
41 Spouser of note
42 Curved letter
43 Way off
44 Mosquito
46 Forsaken
49 "lovely as —"
50 Beget
51 Russian cooperative
53 Jaroby
54 A singing Laine
57 "Born in the —"
60 Create again
63 Economist Smith
64 Alda or Arkin
65 Church council
66 Lily type
67 Polar explorer Admiral Richard
68 Shaping tools
69 Manipulators

DOWN
1 — out: reprimand
2 Russian city on the Oka
3 Uncultivated tract
4 Youngster
5 Stairway anchor
6 Revered
7 Charm for example
8 Terminus
9 Letter enclosure
10 Barn employee
11 Asian range
12 Pub order
13 Marquis de —
19 Carouse
21 Strawberry —
24 "I could hear you!"
25 Perrin's St
26 Dwight's opponent
27 Compelled to go
28 — man vs. strong
Proverbs
30 Chicago seminar
31 Musical moments
32 Time being
33 Fireplace unit
35 Succeed and then some 40 Gravity
41 Italian noble family
43 Xenophobe's fear
45 Defense acronym
47 Port of Belgium
48 Noisiest bumpo
52 Homeless plant
53 — apple
54 Depend on
55 Writer Herbert
56 Ratton
57 Wise
58 Cookie saver of nose
59 South sense, for short
62 Den option
63 Tempe rival

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	L	T	A	R	A	B	A	R	P	A	M
P	A	R	I	S	T	P	A	T	O	M	A	S
A	C	E	R	O	A	L	A	P	O	R	E
R	E	F	R	E	C	H	M	U	N	D
		H	E	A	R	T		T	U	R	R	E
B	E	L	T			S	A	I	L		M	C
U	N	D	E	R	S	T	A	N	D		W	E
T	I	M	E	S		W	A	I	T		L	U
N	O	S		E	L	E	N		S	U	R
S	T	R	A	N	G	E		N	E	A	T
		E	L	V	I	S		F	L	U	N	G
E	L	E	C	T	R	I	C		R	E	D	O
S	E	E	D		E	R	E		E	T	O	E

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuring victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the intuitive in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound, take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

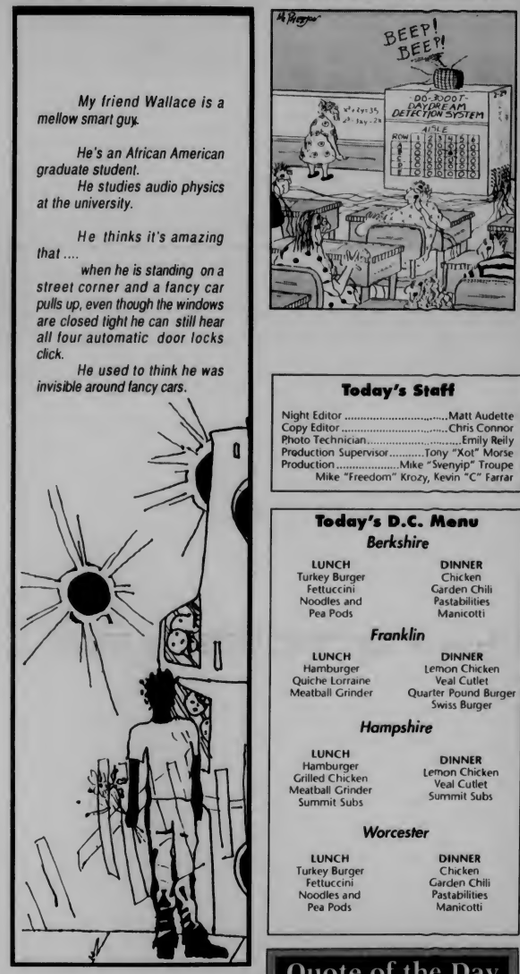
OH, DON'T BOTHER THE COPS. I DIDN'T REALLY BREAK IN. I'M HERE TO GIVE YOU A MESSAGE
OH?
YEAH
(LEMME SEE, WHAT WAS IT?)
OH YEAH! YOUR ROOMMATE IS DEAD.
COME AGAIN?
HEY! HEY! STOP WATCHING THAT!
YOU'LL BE SORRY

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy

"Hey Steve, How come you have so many Guns?"
"To protect my life and property from the federal government."
"You're looking at one American who's not going down without a fight!"

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom



My friend Wallace is a mellow smart guy.
He's an African American graduate student.
He studies audio physics at the university.
He thinks it's amazing that .... when he is standing on a street corner and a fancy car pulls up, even though the windows are closed tight he can still hear all four automatic door locks click.
He used to think he was invisible around fancy cars.

Close to Home By John McPherson

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Jim's Journal By Jim

Tony said he read an article about becoming an astronaut.
"I'm serious about this, Jim," he said. "I really am."
He wants to go to Mars, maybe beyond, even though the trip would take years.
"But it said I'd have to go back to school," he said. "I don't know."

Jim's Journal By Jim

This is the grocery store where I work now.
It's just four aisles, but there seems to be everything.
Today a woman asked me where candles were.
I looked every where and then she said, "wait, we're right in front of them!"

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'VE BEEN ASKED TO FACILITATE THIS MEETING I ALONE WILL DETERMINE WHO CAN SPEAK.
I'D LIKE TO BEGIN WITH A RAW DISPLAY OF MY POWER. YOU MAY NOT SPEAK.
HEY, WALLY... DID YOU EVER HEAR OF A THING CALLED EXERCISE?

Jim's Journal By Jim

Steve was playing on his computer today, sending email to Tony.
"It's so much faster than the post office," he said. "And cheaper."
I asked him if he'd ever write to Tony at all if it weren't for email.
"Not under any circumstance," he said.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

WOW, JAKE! YOU LOOK LIKE A MILLION HUMANS!
SCHNEIDER 5-K-E
GET IT? HUMANS? I'M A BUCK & MILLION HUMANS!
I WAS GONNA LET YOU GET AWAY WITH IT UNTIL YOU IN SULTED ME BY BUFFALOING IT!

One Less Tribute By Gleeson

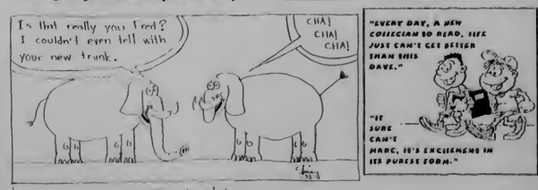
GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY. WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY!

Collegian Graphics

Where it pays to play!

Located somewhere deep in the Campus Center basement. WARNING: may not be suitable for young children.

Company Choose By Kevin Tracy



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Chris Connor
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisor ..... Tony "Xot" Morse
Production ..... Mike "Svenyip" Troupe
Mike "Freedom" Krozy, Kevin "C" Farrar

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Turkey Burger
Fettuccini Noodles and Pea Pods

DINNER
Chicken
Garden Chili
Pastabilities
Manicotti

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger
Quiche Lorraine
Meatball Grinder

DINNER
Lemon Chicken
Veal Cutlet
Quarter Pound Burger
Swiss Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Grilled Chicken
Meatball Grinder
Summit Subs

DINNER
Lemon Chicken
Veal Cutlet
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Turkey Burger
Fettuccini Noodles and Pea Pods

DINNER
Chicken
Garden Chili
Pastabilities
Manicotti

Quote of the Day

"Nixon in '96– Being Dead is No Excuse.

–Bumper Sticker outside Lamar Alexander's Manchester, NH Campaign Headquarters

Sports

Minutemen struggle but come away with OT win

By Condice Flemming
Collegian Staff

When a team shoots just 33 percent from the free throw line and just 34 percent from the field, it usually loses. But when you're talking about the Massachusetts men's basketball team, it's a different story.

The Minutemen shot just 20-of-58 from the line and just 24-of-71, but still managed to come away with a 68-66 overtime victory against St. Joseph's last night at the William D. Mullins Center. With the win, the Minutemen's (27-1, 15-1 in the Atlantic 10) chances for a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament remained high.

With the score 58-55 in favor of St. Joe's with 54.4 seconds to go senior Rigoberto Nunez, one of five seniors playing in their last home game, was involved in the play of the game. The Hawks had the ball, the lead and time in their favor, but before St. Joseph's could get the ball inbounds, Nunez was fouled hard by Terrell Myers. Nunez converted on one of his two free throws to pull UMass to within two and UMass got the ball.

"I was all over him playing defense," Nunez said. "It was crunch time and I didn't want him to get ball. Coach [John Calipari] told me to go out there and don't let the guy touch the ball. He definitely pushed me. I lost my balance and went down."

"I just saw Rigo fall. I didn't see what happened," Donta Bright said. "I think that play right there won the ballgame."

After a couple of missed opportunities, the Minutemen got the ball back with 18.6 seconds left. After a missed jumper by Donta Bright (15 points, 15 boards) and a missed put- back by Marcus Camby (21 points, 15 boards), Bright sent the game into overtime by nailing a 10-foot jumper with 3.7 seconds left.

"I didn't know how much time was left," Bright said. "I just wanted to get [the shot] off before the horn went off."

St. Joseph's	66
Massachusetts	68

After a Reggie Townsend jumper put the Hawks up 60-58 in the overtime period, freshman Charlton Clarke came up with a running jumper off the glass to tie things up. But Myers proceeded to nail a trey with 2:53 left giving St. Joe's a 60-63 lead. Then Carmelo Travieso came up with one of his usual three-point plays, but this time not from downtown. Travieso followed up his own missed three-point attempt with a jumper in the paint and got fouled, sinking the free throw attempt to tie it up at 63.

A Camby basket in the paint and two free throws from Tyrone Weeks (12 points, 11 boards) gave UMass a seemingly comfortable 67-63 lead with 38 seconds to go. But the Hawks made it interesting— helped by the Minutemen's poor foul shooting down the stretch. An Edgar Padilla foul sent Myers to the line with 31 seconds to

Turn to HOOPS, page 12

Nunez makes last home game count

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

It's tradition on Massachusetts' senior night that the graduating Minutemen all start. For Ted Cottrell, Rigoberto Nunez and Giddell Padilla, it was their first start in a Minuteman uniform. Normally, when the Minutemen have already secured the win, the three come in for well-deserved playing time.

Last night's 68-66 UMass win was nothing like that, but Nunez was on the court for, and a part of, the most critical possession of the game.

With 34.4 seconds left in regulation and UMass missing five of its last eight free throws, the Minutemen trailed by three, 58-55. In attempt to make a stop at the defensive end, Nunez was brought in for his defensive expertise.

While guarding Terrell Myers on the inbounds play, the Lawrence native was pushed twice, the second time causing him to fall to the floor of the William D. Mullins Center for an intentional personal foul on Myers. Nunez got two foul shots, but more importantly, gave possession of the ball back to UMass.

After hitting one of two from the charity stripe, Nunez went back to the bench as Donta Bright came back out to the floor. After UMass missed on two attempts to tie, Bright picked up the loose ball of a Marcus Camby miss and hit a leaning jump shot with 3.7 seconds on the clock, sending the game into overtime.

"I think that plays won the ball game for us," Bright, another senior playing in his last game at the Mullins Center, said. "I wouldn't be here talking to you about our win if [not for that play]."

The foul called on Myers was not an immediate one. Before the call was made by referee Thom Corbin, the three officials met at half court to discuss the play before going to the scorers table and announcing the foul.

"I saw the play in 100 percent full view," Corbin said. "The play was off the ball. No. 5 gave a two-handed hard push, [the officials] made the call and took it to the table."

"It's a very strange call," St. Joseph's coach Phil Martelli said. "It's disappointing. I think he made be able to go to Los Angeles for the Academy awards, but I'm not sure."

The former walk-on told his side of the crucial play and commented on his acting career.

"I just didn't want him to get the ball inbounds," Nunez said. "He kept telling me. The ball hasn't been inbounded yet. Get off of me.' But it was crunch time so I didn't want the ball to get inbounded so I stayed on him. He pushed me then he pushed me again. I lost my balanced and fell. So they called the foul.

"I wish I was [a good actor] and could go to Hollywood. I wish I was

Turn to NUNEZ, page 12

Massachusetts 68, St. Joseph's 66, OT

At The Mullis Center

St. Joseph's (19-11)
Townsend 7-16 0-1 14, Domani 1-2 4-7 6, Johnson 4-6 4-5 12, Bass 2-9 6-6 10, Bey 3-9 1-2 8, Myers 4-10 3-4 14, Petrovic 0-1 0-0 0, Page 0-0 2-2 2, Simmonds 0-1 0-0 0. Totals 21-54 20-27 66.

Massachusetts (27-1)
Dingle 3-6 3-7 9, Bright 7-17 1-2 15, Cottrell 0-1 0-0 0, G.Padilla 0-1 0-0 0, Nunez 0-0 1-2 1, Clarke 1-1 0-0 2, E.Padilla 1-8 1-4 3, Camby 8-20 5-8 21, Travieso 1-8 1-3 3, Weeks 2-6 8-9 12, Norville 1-3 0-1 2. Totals 24-71 20-38 68.

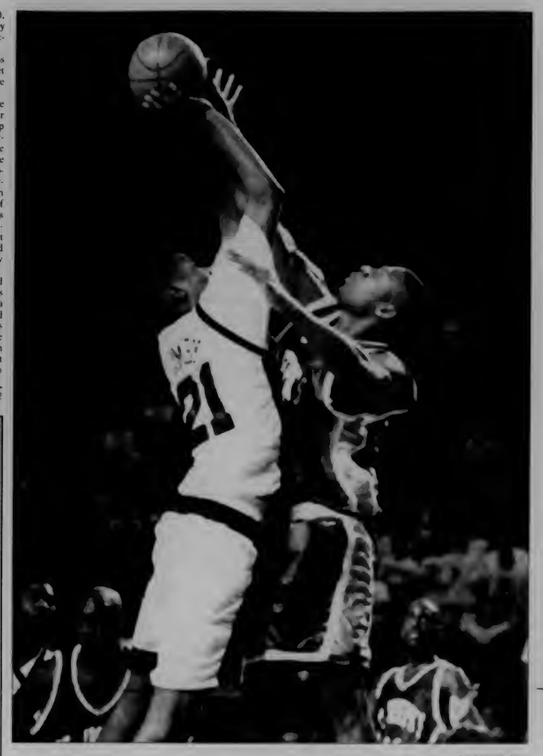
Halftime— UMass 24, St. Joseph's 19 End of regulation— St. Joseph's 58, UMass 58. Three-Point goals— St. Joseph's 4-13 (Myers 3-6, Bey 1-2, Domani 0-1, Simmonds 0-1, Bass 0-3), UMass 0-6 (Bright 0-1, E.Padilla 0-1, G.Padilla 0-1, Travieso 0-3). Fouled out— Domani. Rebounds— St. Joseph's 34 (Townsend 11), UMass 60 (Camby 15). Assists— St. Joseph's 6 (Bey 4), UMass 6 (E.Padilla, Camby 2). Total fouls— St. Joseph's 28, UMass 24. Attendance— 9,493

Player of the Game

Donta Bright–15 points, 15 boards, two steals

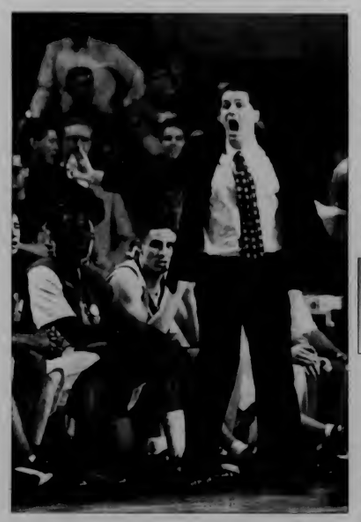
Highlights...

The Minutemen were down by six with 2:01 remaining in the game but went on a 6-0 run to tie it up at 58. Donta Bright's jumper with 3.7 seconds left sent the game into overtime. He finished with 15 points and 15 rebounds... Rigoberto Nunez took a hard foul late in regulation and then sank one of two free throws to help UMass comeback... In the overtime period the Minutemen came back from a three- point deficit with 2:53 left to pull out the victory... Two other Minutemen finished with double-doubles along with Bright— Marcus Camby (21 points, 15 boards) and Tyrone Weeks (12 points, 11 boards).



RYAN TIZZI/COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby goes up for two of his game-high 21 points in the Minutemen's 68-66 overtime victory over St. Joseph's last night at the Mullins Center.



RYAN TIZZI/COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts coach John Calipari voices his opinion towards the referees in last night's win over the Hawks that put the Minutemen's record at 27-1, 15-1 in the A-10.

Men's volleyball defeats Eastern Connecticut

By Daniel M. Kewley
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's volleyball team continued on its unbeaten path by taking three games against Eastern Connecticut State, improving the team's record to 6-0.

In a best-of-five contest, UMass presented few opportunities for Eastern Connecticut State to capitalize.

In taking the first two games 15-8, 15-2, UMass appeered to be on its way to another sweep — a repeat of last Friday's match as the team sunk the U.S. Coast Guard in three straight games. However, a comeback was brewing, as ECS answered back with a 15-6 victory. With its artillery loaded, UMass came out with its spirits firing, winning what proved to be the last game 16-14.

With only two matches remaining, UMass solidified a spot in the A-Flight Tournament. The team's hopes are set high for an undefeated season upon entering the tournament at New Hampshire on April 13. Having home court advantage at their next match on Friday at 7 p.m. at Boyden Gym, their dream is becoming more of a reality.

Overall, Matt Lambert had the best performance on the team with 12 kills and four aces. However, he did have some help in the kills department from teammates — Jay Greenlaw (seven), Ramano DaSilva (seven) and Tom Guzowski (six).

Our blocking was the key to this victory," co-captain Tom Guzowski said.

UMass held its own block party, forcing Eastern Connecticut State's hitters into many awkward situations with minimal success. Middle blocker Chris Lu led the way with six blocks, helping UMass to its most successful blocking effort of the season. Starting the year as a virtual unknown, UMass emerged from the pre-season tournament at MIT with the No. 2 ranking in New England.

"Nobody knew who we were at the tournament until we left," Guzowski said.

During this event, UMass's only downfall came at the mercy of the No. 1 seed UNH.

After the MIT tournament the team's hopes were downed upon learning of the losses of their starting and back-up setters due to unforeseen circumstances. However, Tom Guzowski and Rob Settembro have stepped up to fill the void, allowing UMass to continue its hopes of an undefeated season. Against Eastern Connecticut State, the two contributed with a combined 35 assists setting up

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 13

Flurry of trades change NBA playoff picture

Darren Cohen on the NBA

Oh, what the threat of a losing season can do to a coach. Just ask Pat Riley, caretaker of the Miami Heat. Late Thursday night, just hours before the NBA's trading deadline, Riles turned over one-third of his roster in hopes to avert the threat of finishing below .500. A flurry of trades went down before the inevitable 9 p.m. cut-off. Before breaking down all the action, let's take a minute to review the current post-season picture in the Western Conference.

Western Conference (listed in order of current standing)
Midwest Division

1. Utah Jazz— Grade A-. Strengths: John Stockton and Karl Malone, surprising bench production. Weaknesses: Lack of post presence. Has anyone seen this before? The Jazz sit atop the division throughout the regular season and proceed to lose in the conference semi-finals. Chris Morris has been a pleasant surprise but these Jazz still sing to the same tune. Could this be the year they finish the job?

2. San Antonio Spurs— Grade B+. Strengths: perimeter game, athleticism and hustle. Weaknesses: What are they going to do without Brad Lohaus? Sean Elliot has truly asserted himself as a lethal outside threat. Charles Smith will not make Will Perdue disappear or make Dennis Rodman return. Can the Admiral take his team to the promised land?

3. Houston Rockets— Grade B. Strengths: Knowing what it takes. Weaknesses: injuries, often streaky. Recently this is the point in time where the Rockets decide that the West is theirs and go take it. Well — not this year. With injuries claiming key contributors Clyde Drexler and Mario Elie, Houston will contend but lose out to deeper competition. After all, the "always dangerous" Eldridge Reeasner is running the point these days.

4. Denver Nuggets— Grade C+. Strengths: Home record. Weaknesses: Road record, inconsistency. Which Nuggets team will show up? The

Turn to NBA, page 13

As Selection Sunday nears, who's on the bubble?

Casey Kane on College Basketball

Sunday, Mar. 10 is now the day that people are pointing to. Like the Fates of ancient mythology, those who will gather in Overland Park, Kan. hold the futures of several teams in their hands.

March 10 is Selection Sunday.

There are teams which will watch the selection show just to find out where they will be traveling for the N C A A Tournament. But there are also teams which have a lot more at stake, they will watch to find out whether or not they are in the tournament at all.

Watching will be a mere formality for teams like Massachusetts, Kentucky, Villanova, Connecticut, Kansas and Utah. But as for teams which are on the infamous bubble...

Let's look at which teams have a legitimate shot from each conference:

American West: Without an automatic bid, they won't be sending anyone.

Atlantic 10: UMass, Virginia Tech and George Washington will go. Temple has a shot, especially with its wins over Kansas and Villanova.

Atlantic Coast: Georgia Tech, Wake Forest, and probably North Carolina (although they have been struggling lately). Duke and Maryland have definite shots.

Big East: Georgetown, Villanova, UConn and Syracuse. Boston College has faltered and may not go. Providence might sneak in.

Big Eight: Kansas and Iowa State. Kansas State is a

Turn to COLLEGE, page 13

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 86 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, March 1, 1996

Tourney Time
Melissa Gunle and the Minutewomen travel to Blacksburg this weekend to compete in the Atlantic 10 Women's Tournament (See Sports, page 10).

Becoming part of the solution
The first Black Affairs page of the semester takes a look at black thought and reflects on Black History Month. (See Black Affairs, page 5).

It all started with "Melrose Place"
Popular Boston band, Letters to Cleo, who first gained recognition on "Melrose Place," bring their alterna-pop sound to Pearl Street (See Arts &Living, page 7).

Weekend Forecast
Today the cold and sunny weather continues, but snow is expected over the weekend. It's not going to be a warm one, so don't put the boots, hats and gloves away yet.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 30	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20

Arafat urged to take tough stance

By Nasser Shiyoukhi
Associated Press

AL FAWAR REFUGEE CAMP, West Bank — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat must act decisively against Muslim militants or risk falling victim to them himself, Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today.

Peres has demanded that Arafat disarm and arrest Islamic extremists following two suicide bombings Sunday that killed 23 Israelis and two Americans.

Palestinian police arrested Muslim militants shortly after the bombings, and commanders said today that 250 had been rounded up in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arafat has given the militants until Friday to surrender their weapons. Palestinian officials have said that police will then search homes for unlicensed weapons, and offenders face five to 15 years in prison.

Peres has said he might delay Israel's pullback from the West Bank town of Hebron, scheduled for late March, unless Arafat cracks down on militants from the Hamas and Islamic Jihad groups. He has also said he would keep the West Bank and Gaza sealed for the foreseeable future, barring 2 million Palestinians, including 60,000 workers, from entering Israel.

Today, the prime minister said it was in Arafat's own interest to neutralize the militants.

"We are not asking Arafat to serve the state of Israel," Peres said, according to a statement by his office. "We don't want to break him, but to make clear to him that if he keeps acting the way he is now, he himself will become a victim."

The statement did not explain how Arafat might be victimized. The prime minister apparently was suggesting that if Arafat didn't crack down now it would hurt the peace process and Palestinian interests.

Peres' tougher stance toward the Palestinians is part of his own fight for political survival, three months ahead of elections. A survey published today indicated that Peres has lost his comfortable lead in the polls as a result of the bombings and is now running even with his hard-line challenger, Benjamin Netanyahu of the opposition Likud Party.

Pollster Hanoch Smith said that if elections were held today, Peres would win 45 percent of the vote and Netanyahu would receive 41 percent. The poll included responses from 400 people and had a margin of error of four percent, Smith said.

Hamas confirmed today that the bombers were members of its military wing, and it threatened to carry out more attacks against Israel.

13-year-old gets 'A's as freshman at UMass

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Staff

To most 13-year-old girls, the idea of possessing good note taking skills translates into having the ability to pass notes along in class without getting caught by the teacher. But not for Tess Griffin, who is in her second semester at the University of Massachusetts.

Tess, the daughter of Prof. Robert Griffin of the hotel, restaurant and travel administration department at UMass, spent time in many different schools across the country because her family had moved so often. When the family came to Hadley, Tess spent some time in the junior high school there, as well as some time in Costa Rica, but was left feeling unchallenged by the classes.

"She made straight As, but she wasn't happy," said her father, explaining what prompted them to take Tess out of junior high. "She just wasn't challenged, though. And often times, schools just aren't equipped to deal with children who need special challenges," he said.

Tess said many of her classes left her feeling unfulfilled because things came too easy to her.

"It was too easy," Tess said. "For English papers I would write whatever came to mind, off the top of my head, and my teacher would give me an A. But it was simple, very simple."

Mr. Griffin explained that plunging Tess into college classes was not their first choice. Originally, he said they wanted to see if she could skip ahead to the ninth grade. However, that would involve an expensive battery of tests.

"It was the beginning of eighth grade and we knew she didn't want to go back there. We were thinking we could home teach her, but I didn't really have the time for that," Griffin said. "I teach undergraduates and graduate students here, and I know what kind of a workload there is on undergraduates, and I know my daughter. I knew that she could compete on this level, she is very focused."

Tess obtained "Special Student Status" from the University and enrolled in "College Writing 111" and "History 150" for which she received As last semester. This semester she is taking "Animal Biology," Introduction to Theater," and "College Writing 112." However, she enjoys taking college classes for more than just academic reasons.

"In my junior high people formed little cliques...but here it's easier to communicate with people, they are a lot nicer," Tess said, adding that people in her classes usually don't guess that she's only 13.

"People usually don't think she's very young because of her height, she's tall for her age," said Mr. Griffin.

Tess also said that going to UMass has given her the opportunity to be in classes with a more diverse group of people than in junior high. "I think it's cool that I'm in classes with people of different cultures, races, and in my old school people were usually white Anglo-Saxon," she said.

Since Tess doesn't know what she wants to major in yet, she has spent Thursday afternoons shadowing people in their different professions. "So far I've shadowed a veterinarian and my orthodontist. Shadowing the vet was cool because I got to see actual surgical procedures being done," she said. Tess is making plans to shadow an actress, journalist, and to watch what goes on in an emergency room. Tess has to choose at major at the age of 15.

Overall, Tess is happy to be at UMass. "I feel challenged here with the work I do," she said.

Her father, who is satisfied with the arrangement, asked, "Why not let someone maximize their full potential? That's what UMass is letting Tess do," he said.

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Head Start on Spring...
Unidentified UMass lacrosse player practices with the team yesterday afternoon in preparation for the upcoming season.

Buchanan climbs, Clinton still favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maverick presidential candidate Pat Buchanan is gaining support among the public at large, but at the expense of antagonizing traditional Republican voters, according to a survey.

Buchanan's rating among the public at large was 45 percent favorable and 44 percent unfavorable in the poll, released Wednesday by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press, a week after Buchanan won the New Hampshire primary.

According to the poll, Buchanan's favorability rating of 45 percent trailed President Clinton, whose ratings were 55 percent favorable to 43 percent unfavorable. The 1,500 adults surveyed gave Sen. Bob Dole a 55 percent positive rating and a 39 percent unfavorable score.

The poll said public evaluations of Buchanan were more positive than at the end of his 1992 campaign and better than Hillary Rodham Clinton's ratings of only 42 percent favorable to 54 percent unfavorable.

But while Buchanan's popularity increased after his New Hampshire victory, it was at the expense of possible support from typically Republican voters. For example, a 52 percent majority of college graduates and 53 percent of those who earn $75,000 a year or more expressed displeasure with Buchanan's success, the poll said.

Among working-class Republicans, Buchanan got a 57 percent favorable rating compared to 32 percent who were displeased with his views.

The poll said Buchanan would lose to Clinton by a 59 percent to 36 percent margin if the election were held today. Clinton would also defeat Dole by 52 percent to 44 percent and Lamar Alexander by 54 percent to 42 percent.

In response to another question, the poll found that 31 percent of respondents said Buchanan's New Hampshire victory made them more interested in the presidential race. Only four percent said they were less interested, while 63 percent said Buchanan's success had no effect.

Respondents were asked to provide one-word descriptions of the candidates, and were easily able to do so for Clinton, Dole and Buchanan. The top one-word description for Clinton was "good," cited by 38 percent of respondents. Dole was called "old" by 66 percent, and Buchanan was called "extreme" by 35 percent. The most common description for Alexander was "good man," but only 13 percent gave it.

The poll was based on telephone interviews with 1,500 adults age 18 or older during the period of Feb. 22-25. The overall margin of error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Horsing Around!
These horses were spotted at the Hadley Farm, home to the Equestrian Team, having an early dinner.

Staub speaks on child psychology

UM professor talks about raising children in troubled society

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Staff

Psychology professor Ervin Staub of the psychology department gave a special lecture yesterday on the role of parents and teachers in raising caring and altruistic children for the future.

Staub, who has been extensively involved in studies of altruism and aggression, also teaches a course entitled "Cruelty and Kindness: The Psychology of Good and Evil" at the University of Massachusetts. His speech was the first event sponsored by the Skinner Center for the Family in Skinner Hall.

Staub began by describing the challenges of raising children in today's world.

"This is a difficult time to raise children," he said, listing some of the difficult life conditions that lead to more aggression and hostility in the world. "Severe economic problems, severe political problems and profound changes within a society can generally be the starting point for genocidal processes. These conditions significantly affect the way children are raised," he said.

Staub said he believes that the effects caused by difficult life conditions threaten basic human needs, and frustrate the fulfillment of those needs. "We must have security, the psychological experience of it, and without having some moderate sense of it we will be driven to find it," he said.

Having a sense of positive identity, having a meaningful, constructive understanding of the world and the development of strong, positive connections to other people were also some of the needs that Staub outlined.

"When these needs are fulfilled for children they will develop in to caring, helpful, happy human beings," Staub said. He went on to elaborate about the importance of childraising practices, laying the responsibility of the family and the schools to encourage the "pro-social value orientation" that caring and helpful children possess.

These childrearing practices, according to Staub, should start at infancy. Parental responsiveness is key to developing a child's sense of security and instilling within that child a strong, secure attachment. "Less responsiveness, and neglect often lead to a different type of attachment. The child can be insecurely attached or there can be a lack of attachment all together," he said.

Staub emphasized that children develop positive orientations to others and hold a positive sense of themselves because they feel as if "I am a worthwhile person because I am treated in a worthwhile way." The opposite of those consequences can result in a child, and later an adult, who views everyone he or she sees as potentially hostile, dangerous and completely untrustworthy. This interferes with a person's ability to be altruistic and empathetic.

Staub used an example of children who grow up in abusive homes. When children grow up in a home where one parent is abused by the other, it interferes with the child's relationship to both parents, he said. The child originally feels empathy for the parent who is being abused, but being unable to stop the abuse, the child must cut himself off from those feelings of empathy. Staub spoke of one study that found that boys who had seen one parent abuse the other exhibited more aggressive behavior than boys who had actually been the victims of abuse themselves.

Staub is the first of the speakers that The Center for the Family will be hosting this semester. According to head of consumer studies department Sheila Mammen, The Center for the Family will also be organizing a conference in Boston this fall and are looking for students to be interns involved with various activities.

Jury will not hear of Salvi's outbursts

By Katharine Webster
Associated Press

DEDHAM — John C. Salvi III pressed his hands together in a prayerful position this morning as a witness described his outburst in a Roman Catholic church on Christmas Eve, just days before he killed two abortion clinic workers.

Salvi disrupted the 5 p.m. Mass at St. Elizabeth's Church in Seabrook, N.H., on Christmas Eve, 1994, shouting epithets at the priest and congregants.

Witnesses, including former New Hampshire state Sen. Robert Preston, remembered Salvi screaming that the church wasn't doing enough to help Catholics, who he said were being persecuted and were in danger of losing their homes. It was during Preston's testimony that Salvi pressed his hands together in the courtroom. In her cross-examination, prosecutor Marianne Hinkle tried to portray Salvi as a man angry at his father, who was with him at the church.

John Salvi Jr. said he thought his son would "grow out of" the bizarre behavior he started showing in his senior year in high school.

Salvi Jr. testified Wednesday he now regrets not seeking help for his son, who began to speak of watching people turn into vampires, and seeing evil bird-like creatures.

"I wish I had... I have no excuse... I thought maybe he'd grow out of it somehow," the senior Salvi testified. "Maybe it was a phase."

Salvi's father was a key witness for the defense, which admits the younger Salvi was the man who killed two women and wounded five other people at the Planned Parenthood and Preterm Health Services clinics in Brookline, but insists he was insane.

Prosecutors implied that Salvi Jr. would say anything to protect his son.

They unsuccessfully attempted to put into evidence the fact that John Salvi III stole a car in 1991, and was investigated for setting a fire in 1992. In the first instance, the 23-year-old aspiring hairdresser avoided prosecution when his father bought the car for him, prosecutors said; in the second, his father claimed his son was home with him at the time.

"This witness has shown a pattern of, when his son is in trouble, instead of addressing it," protecting him, prosecutor John Kivlan said.

Norfolk Superior Court Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara declined to let the jury hear this information.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

Friday, March 1

Comedy — Comedians Julie Barr, Janine DiTullio and Dwayne Perkins will appear at the Bluewall cafe at 8 p.m. Opening the comedy program will be UMass student Jonathan Powell on guitar and voice. The film "Mallrats" will be shown immediately following the comedy show.

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship presents "Time Out Fellowship" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. The event will focus on encouragement, sharing, friendship and live worship. Please check the Campus Center Information desk for the room number. For more information contact Mark Grey at 253-7206.

Religious — "Breakaway," the Campus Crusade for Christ's weekly meeting, will be held at 6:30 p.m. in a room to be posted on the sign in the Campus Center Concourse. There will be a social featuring gospel groups from all over the world at Mt. Holyoke College. For more information, contact Pete at 549-4845.

Rally — There will be a rally in protest of alleged rapes in connection with fraternity row, starting at Haigis Mall to Frat Row at 4 p.m. For more information, call 585-7679.

Saturday, March 2

Talent Show — In capping off Black History Month, the Brotherhood of Iota Phi Theta present the Umoja Spring Talent Show in the Fine Arts Center from 7 to 10:30 p.m. First, second and third place finishes will receive cash prizes. For more information call 546-3646.

Religious — Graduate Jewish students for Hamentaschen baking meet at Judi's house at 7 p.m. Call the Hillel House for more information at 549-1710.

Lecture — The Italian Department and the Women's Resource Center of Smith College will sponsor a presentation on Silvia Baraldini, an Italian national who has been imprisoned in the U.S. for the last 15 years. Elizabeth Fink, Baraldini's defense lawyer and Toby Emmer, a close friend of Silvia and a member of the NYC defense committee will speak. Scenes from the PBS documentary Through the Wire will be shown. On International Women's Day, at Smith College, Seelye Hall, Room 106 at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

Sunday, Mar. 3

Religious — The annual Latke vs. Hamantash Debate with faculty and staff members will take place at 12:30 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St. The debate is free, but the preceding brunch at 11:30 a.m. costs $3.

Religious — The Congregation B'nai Israel of Northampton will hold its annual Purim Carnival from 1 to 3 p.m. Refreshments will be served and costumes are encouraged. For more information, call 584-3593.

Monday, March 4

Community Service — S.H.A.R.E. — Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts — will hold a general meeting at 6 p.m. in 504 Goodell. All are invited to explore volunteer and community activities.

Religious — The Hillel Purim Party with live music by Klezamir will take place at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St., at 7 p.m. The party is free of charge, costumes encouraged.

Animation — The University of Massachusetts Japanese Animation and Manga Society will be having its weekly anime showing at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. The Venus Wars, Maison Ikkoku and Ranma 1/2 will be featured. For more information, contact Frank Zado at 436-3065.

Religious — Chabad House At Amherst will be having a Megillah reading and costume party at 6:30 p.m. at the Chabad House.

Film — Theo Angelopoulos' Ulysses' Gaze, starring Harvey Keitel, will be shown at the Pleasant Street Theatre in Northampton. The cost is $5.75 and there will be one showing only.

Notices

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586-5812 or 549-2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesdays through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253-0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546-2363 or 546-5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up" Worship time 10:11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points: 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8-10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549-6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323-6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1-800-750-2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1-800-696-7752.

Grant deadlines — The UMass Arts Council single project/event grant applications deadlines for spring 1996 are February 16 for events after March 6, March 15 for events after April 3, and April 19 for events after May 8 including summer and fall 1996 projects/events.

Skiing — Cross country skiing guides for the visually impaired are needed. Guide training is provided. You must have your own equipment and advanced skiing ability. Contact Chris at 584-0807.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association will conduct free Planetarium Shows every Saturday in February at the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. For more information contact Tom at 256-6234.

Health — The Breast Health Project, a program of the Family Planning Council of Western Mass., provides physical exams, breast and pelvic exams, Pap smears and referrals for mammograms and colposcopies at sites in Northampton and Amherst. For more information on these services call Ellen or Anne at 1-800-696-7752.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association, holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., in the Campus Center. For information call Kamran at 256-8382.

Religious — The Muslim Students Association holds daily Iftar every day in the Campus Center. Weekly prayer service is also held in the Campus Center every Friday at 12 p.m. Check at the information desk for the room. Call Kamran at 546-0619 for more information.

Campus Police Log

Vandalism

Feb. 26

Damage was reported to a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

A vehicle in Parking Lot 40 was reported to be damaged.

Feb. 27

A windshield was damaged in Parking Lot 25.

A swastika was reported to be on a wall in John Adams Residence Hall between the 21st and 22nd floor.

Feb. 28

There was a report of graffiti in a Cashin Residence Hall elevator.

Accident

Feb. 26

A past accident report on Massachusetts Avenue was filed.

Minor damage was reported to a vehicle in Parking Lot 25 from an unknown vehicle.

Feb. 27

A light pole was knocked over near Mahar Auditorium. A witness provided information on a vehicle which had left the scene. The vehicle was located and the operator cited.

Burglary/ breaking & entering

Feb. 26

A stereo was stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 47.

Larceny

Feb. 26

There was a report of shoplifting in the University Store. Individuals will be summonsed to court.

Fine Arts Center staff reported drafting equipment stolen from the Art Department.

Kennedy Residence Hall staff reported a vacuum cleaner stolen.

Feb. 27

An individual in Hills House reported his wallet stolen.

Borden Building staff reported a video camera and a radar gun stolen.

Gunness Engineering Lab staff reported a new vacuum cleaner stolen.

An individual in the Campus Center reported cash and a Walkman stolen.

Feb. 28

An individual in Butterfield Residence Hall reported tapes and a hunting knife stolen.

An individual in Grayson Residence Hall reported his backpack stolen from Totman Fields.

An individual reported a wallet stolen from his Coolidge Residence Hall room.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 27

Brown Residence Hall staff reported that the lounge and bathroom were "trashed."

An individual reported annoying behavior to University Police. The matter was referred to Amherst Police.

Feb. 28

An individual in Washington Residence Hall was unable to get into his room. The door lock had been "penned."

An individual reported having an offensive note passed under a stall in the men's bathroom in the W.E.B. DuBois Library.

Health / safety hazard

Feb. 26

The smell of smoke coming form the 2nd floor of Arnold House was reported.

Warrant Service

Feb. 27

Kenya I. Miles, 22, of 3 Nating St., Dorchester, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, for operating an uninsured motor vehicle, and for not having registration in possession.

Medical emergency

Feb. 27

An individual in Bartlett Hall, having a seizure, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual having a seizure in Hampden Snack Bar was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Feb. 28

An individual in Berkshire Dining Hall, having adverse reaction to medication, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Alarm — fire

Feb. 27

A fire in the Campus Center laundry room was extinguished.

A small fire in a Gorman Residence Hall kitchen was extinguished.

Family offenses, domestics

Feb. 28

An argument between two Baker Residence Hall individuals was reported. No charges were filed and an individual declined to pursue a restraining order.

An altercation between an individual and a boyfriend was reported in Grayson Residence Hall.

The Distinguished Visitor's Program proudly presents:

ALLEN GINSBERG

"I'm going to try speaking some reckless words, and I want you to try to listen recklessly."

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Monday, March 4, 1996, 8:00 p.m.

Free to UMass undergrads with valid I.D.
Admission is $5 for the general public
Call 545-0046 for more information

You'll gain valuable experience, and a lot of character references.

The Walt Disney World® College Program offers ambitious students a unique opportunity to experience "the magical world of Disney" from the inside. You'll be part of a top-notch team all working toward the same goal of a spectacular guest experience!

Representatives will be on campus to answer all your questions concerning the Walt Disney World® College Program.

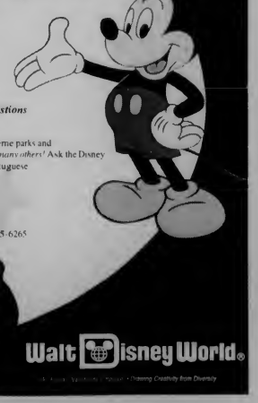
Interviewing: All Majors! Positions available throughout theme parks and [illegible] about special opportunities for students fluent in Portuguese

Presentation Date: March 5, 1996

Time: [illegible] p.m.

Location: Hertel Room 231

For More Information Contact: Jeff Silver, (413)545-6265

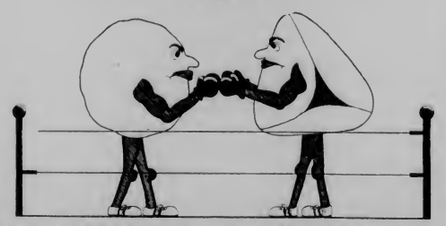


Walt Disney World®

The Annual UMass Hillel

LATKE vs. HAMANTASH

Debate



Sunday, March 3, 1996 HILLEL HOUSE

Brunch 11:30am, $3 Kosher Dining Room

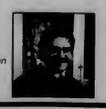
Debate 12:30pm, Free, Lounge

Hillel House is located at 388 N.Pleasant St./Amherst

Featuring Distinguished UMass Faculty & Staff Members . . .

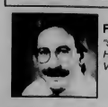
FOR THE LATKE . . .

Carlin Barton
"The Role of Potato Pancakes in the Greatness and Decline of Rome."



Allan Feldman
"The Use of Latkes and Hamantashen in the Construction of Student's Conceptions of Entropy and Enthalpy."

FOR THE HAMANTASH . . .



Frederick Bloom
"50 Dynamic Reasons Why the Hamantash is Better for Your Vision."

Marilyn Kushick
"A Versatile Pastry: Marketing the Hamantash in Our Diverse World."

ELECTION '96

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

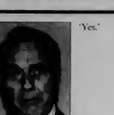
The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not responded.

Do you favor "truth in sentencing" for violent criminals so they serve full sentences with no chance of parole?

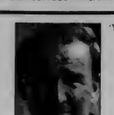
Bill Clinton

"The current policy of 'truth in sentencing' is a good policy because it is wrong for violent criminals to get out on parole before they complete their prison sentence. The sentence given to a rapist or murderer should be the sentence they serve. Serious criminals should know that they will be held responsible for the crimes they commit.



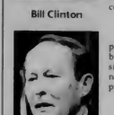
Bob Dole

'Yes.'



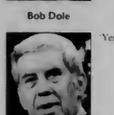
Pat Buchanan

'Yes.'



Lamar Alexander

"Yes, but I think longer prison sentences should be set by the nation's governors and state legislators. Congress has no business trying to run state prisons."



Richard Lugar

'Yes.'

U.N. ambassador speaks about human rights

By Liz Anderson
Collegian Correspondent

NORTHAMPTON — Bilahari Kausikan, the ambassador to the United Nations from the Republic of Singapore lectured on "International Human Rights: An Asian View" Wednesday night at Smith College.

Kausikan began the lecture describing key elements involved in the debate between Asia and the west over human rights, their importance, and why he believes they are over blown or greatly exaggerated. He disagrees with the United Nation's attempts to create a universal policy of human rights. Kausikan believes every nationality has a distinct history that continues to create their country's norms making a universal policy unrealistic.

"Conditions and policies that defined human rights 100 years ago do not define human rights today, because human needs change with the needs of their country," explained Kausikan.

According to western cultural norms, many policies of Asian governments appear to infringe human rights. Traditionally, Asian governments are more involved in their citizens' lives than western governments. This is due to the fact that the foundation of the Asian societies are based on a "group orientated culture." Kausikan believes that western nations, especially the United States, define their cultural norms universal, and thus become protectors of human rights.

"No country can claim its norms as universal. The key concept missing is responsibility. For example, if the United States wants to take the responsibility of the citizens of Singapore's human rights will it also take the responsibility of making Singapore the 51st state of the United States?" said Kausikan, as he described the principle of each country taking responsibility for itself.

"The key question is as societies develop economically and socially, do they have to develop a democracy?" asked Kausikan.

Kausikan concluded democracy is not the solution of social injustice for all countries. He explained there are seven existing universal declarations defining international human rights. Singapore has only signed three of these declarations concerning women, children and genocide. Several western democratic nations have signed all seven declarations, and ironically have committed more brutal acts against human rights than Singapore.

"The United Nations should not try to divide a "universal" theory and make it work for every country in the world. Each country has its own system and it is the responsibility of every country in the world to create laws to promote their citizens' welfare.

Kausikan graduated with honors from the University of Singapore and received an master's degree in political science from Columbia University. After entering the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Kausikan served on the North American desk and in Singapore's Embassy in Washington, D.C. He returned to Singapore in 1990 to the head the ministry's Asian directorates and served as a press secretary to the minister of foreign affairs.

In 1994, Kausikan was named Ambassador to the Russian Federation, with concurrent accreditation as Ambassador to Finland. Kausikan also is the author of a much discussed explanation and defense of the Asian view on the universality of human rights, which was published in a 1995 article entitled, "Asia's Different Standard" in the influential journal "Foreign Policy".

Sponsored by Smith College's East Asian Studies Program, the lecture began at 8 p.m. in the Neilson Browsing Room at Smith College.

Latke, Hamantashen debate continues Sun.

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

For the last two years there has been no conclusive winner in Hillel's semi-annual Latke vs. Hamantashen debate. Perhaps this year, the 14th installment of the debate, will be different.

Hillel is putting on the humorous debate once again this Sunday at 12:30 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Hamantashen are fruit-filled pastries eaten during the holiday Purim, which begins at sundown on Monday. Latkes are potato pancakes eaten during Chanukah. According to Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, the original planners felt it would be more interesting to debate the comparative merits of latkes, not matzohs, the unleavened bread eaten at Passover.

The debate is part of the festivities of Purim, a Jewish holiday celebrating the triumph of Queen Esther over Haman, who attempted to destroy the Jews in her kingdom. It is a festive holiday, with celebrants wearing costumes, and making loud noises during the reading of Queen Esther's tale.

Perlmutter said the debate is appropriate for Purim because the holiday "is a holiday of pure joy, fun and laughter and that's what this debate is all about."

Carlin Barton of the history department and Allan Feldman of the school of education and teacher education are debating for the latke. Barton will speak on "The Role of Potato Pancakes in the Greatness and Decline of Rome" while Feldman is speaking on "The Use of Latkes and Hamantashen in the Construction of Student's Conceptions of Entropy and Enthalpy."

Frederick Bloom of University Health Services and Marilyn Kushick, the director of public relations for the department of music and dance, are arguing for the hamantashen. Bloom will tell "50 Dynamic Reasons Why the Hamantashen is Better for Your Vision" and Kushick will speak on "A Versatile Pastry: Marketing the Hamantashen in Our Diverse World."

The debate is free. There will also be a brunch served in Hillel's Kosher Kitchen at 11:30 a.m. for $3.

Improved S.U.M.A. club plans events for winter snowboarding

Last semester, five UMass students decided to reactivate the snowboarding club, which was not as lively as it is now.

S.U.M.A., the Snowboarding at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst club, a registered RSO, is organizing a bus trip to southern Vermont's Mount Snow on March 2.

The cost for either the bus ride and a lift ticket or the bus ride, a rental and a snowboarding lesson is $40. Students may sign up today at the Concourse in the Campus Center at the S.U.M.A. table from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Currently there are open slots for late registration, and all levels of snowboarders are welcome.

Holly Anderson, president of S.U.M.A. club, said the cost is "a great beginner rate" for first-time or beginner students who are interested in learning or advancing in the sport.

Anderson said that the main goal for the club is "to form a community of snowboarders on campus."

John Newman, another student who helped reactivate the club, said, "We haven't gone competitive, it's more recreational."

"But we wouldn't mind a competitive club in the future," Anderson said.

She said she believes that forming a tightly knit snowboarding community will advocate cultivation of the sport which in Colin Alger's mind, "will promote beginners into keeping the torch burning."

S.U.M.A. members also receive discounts on snowboarding equipment at Fat Trax in Easthampton, according to Anderson who said they are also working on getting discounts at Mount Tom.

The group is planning a weekend trip on March 30 and 31 to Northern Vermont's Jay Peak. Slots are limited to 20.

— Jessica Charlebois

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PRESENTS

A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES: SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

FEATURING THREE COMEDIANS

JULIE BARR

JANINE DITULLIO

DWAYNE PERKINS

OPENING ACT FEATURING "The Phil D. Powell Expansion" High Energy Acoustic Guitar

immediately followed by

BLUEWALL
March 1, 1996
8pm FREE

Sponsored by Campus Activities through a grant from the UMASS Auxiliary Services Office and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs

The UMass Family Business Center invites the 5-College community to attend a special free presentation

How Family Affects Business

March 12, 1996, 1-3 p.m.
Willits-Hallowell Center, Mt. Holyoke College

John Ward, Ph.D.,
Ralph Marotta Professor of Private Enterprise, Loyola College, Chicago

- Which family members can join the family business?
- What if they don't work out?
- How does one evaluate and pay family members?
- How do you deal with conflicts?
- Who will lead the family activities and customs into the next generation?
- How do you cope with public visibility and the public's expectations of successful families?

To register, contact Ira Bryck, Director, UMass Family Business Center, Division of Continuing Education, at 545-1537 (phone), 545-3351 (fax), bryck@admin.umass.edu (e-mail).

Special 5-College Hillel Purim Celebration

Megillah Reading and Masquerade

with PRIZES . . . DANCING . . . FUN . . . FOOD . . . Music

WITH LIVE MUSIC BY KLEZAMIR

Monday, March 4, 7pm

Hillel House • 388 N. Pleasant St.

Free

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marta E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kuhn Advertising Production Manager Syed Muhammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connell Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotte Co Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Muhammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Hugh M. Oliver-Cox Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Wegner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Jose Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradyse News Editor Maureen Mazurowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Rizzo Photography Editor Marti Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Gibson Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

The Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially and editorially independent of the University, the University of Massachusetts system, the Massachusetts Collegian Corporation and the Board of Trustees. The Collegian is published by the Massachusetts Collegian Corporation, a non-profit corporation under the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The Collegian has been published daily since 1890 except during vacations and exam periods. Subscriptions are $147 per semester. Offices are located in the Campus Center Basement. The Collegian can be reached at 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

I guess it's my turn to whine about stuff around the University and basically talk about crap that people don't want to read. I'm pretty good at that.

* * *

University of Massachusetts President William Bulger is an easy target. Do you think if we put Bulger in a cab by himself he would be able to drive from Boston to UMass- Amherst? I doubt it.

Hey Bill, how's your brother?

* * *

I am kind of disgruntled with the communications department here. From what I understand, the department has lost some professors and they are understaffed by several. As a result, we have overcrowded classrooms and a schedule slim with courses, so comm majors suffer.

Another side-effect is over-worked comm professors. Much to many students' chagrin, they can't get an independent study. Come on UMass, give us the education we paid for.

* * *

OK. I have to say something. We may have lost to George Washington to end our undefeated season, but there were two redeemable qualities to that fiasco.

First. I haven't seen UMass fans that rowdy since the days of the Cage. The place was rocking, and leaving out the nauseous feeling I had afterwards, it was one of the more entertaining games I have been to in a while.

Second, anyone who was there got to see former UMass Back-up center Jeff Meyer do the half-time contest. I went berserk when he slam dunked first ball. Don't worry about the missed three-pointers Jeff, you weren't designed for the long-range.

* * *

I haven't heard much from Chancellor David K. Scott yet this semester. Maybe he's still hibernating.

* * *

I got to see the new Adam Sandler movie Happy Gilmore. Without sounding like I am on the Hampshire Six Theater's payroll, that was one of the funniest movies I have seen since Airplane.

Don't go and see it to watch him and Bob Barker beat the pud out of each other, and don't go to see it because Sandler wears some sort of Bruins paraphernalia throughout the whole flick. Go to see it for one reason: Carl Weathers singing "We've Only Just Begun."

* * *

I saw the sun the other day, it was nice.

* * *

I work at an uptown bar. It was a lazy Sunday afternoon and there was only a handful of people having some cocktails. This older guy walked in the bar with a pizza box and a pen. He looked harmless enough. The guy got down on his hands and knees, kissed the floor and then got up and started drawing something on the box. I don't know if he was drawing a person in the back of the bar or one of the Star Trek characters on the pinball machine.

He then got down on his knees again and kissed the floor, only to stand and continue drawing. Everyone was staring at him. I didn't want to say anything because I was afraid he would pull out a machete and tell me it was my turn to meet the maker.

Finally, he looked at his drawing on the pizza box, got down on his hands and knees one final time and licked the floor. He then turned and left.

True story. I thought I would share that with everyone to give them the warm fuzzies. I think I am one of the few bartenders to ever call last call at 6:30 p.m.

* * *

Speaking of wackos, has anyone seen the screaming masked guy lately? He was one of the more entertaining things on my Tuesdays and Thursdays.

* * *

Could someone do something with that mud-puddle we call a walk-way along side the campus pond. I forgot my galoshes at home and the ducks are beginning to mock me.

* * *

It's almost spring, kids. Hold on for a few more weeks and we're home free. UMass is much easier to swallow when it's over 60 degrees out.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Never say never

I have spent eight semesters at UMass over the last five years, and in that time I have learned and been exposed to quite a few things. Still, there are some things I have never seen, never been able to figure out and probably never will be able to comprehend by the time I graduate in May. I've been told to never say never, but...

• I'll never be able to figure out a Campus Shuttle bus schedule. Every time I get on that particular bus I end up very far away from where I want to be.

• Despite my best efforts, I never have and probably never will be shut off at an Amherst area bar. This can be a common occurrence in most any other area of the country, but here in the Valley it provides for a serious lack of entertainment. I have found it quite amusing to watch drunks plead their cases after being shut off.

• Hold your breath, but I have never been to a mens' basketball game as a spectator. Two years ago I did go to every home game as a vendor of ice cream, but that job did not provide me with enough time to enjoy the game. I also had a ticket to the final game in the Cage, but I was too miserably sick to go.

It's not for a lack of school spirit or disdain for basketball. I just have a paranoia of waiting in line for anything, especially when nowadays so many of the games are shown on TV.

• I never will be able to understand why people masturbate in the W.E.B. DuBois library. Perhaps it has something to do with the phallic nature of the building.

• I will never like anybody who takes the "M" out of their UMass baseball cap. They're just too clever for me.

A few years ago there was a similar fad where people fastened Budweiser bottle caps to the back of their hats and wore them proudly as if they were medals they had received for being a loser.

• I never will understand why I became a sociology major.

• And what about this Joel Stanley character? Stanley has been a student here since the Fall of 1985, and since that time he has gone to great lengths to preserve his rightful spot as campus fool.

I first met him a few years ago when I was sitting in on an S.G.A. meeting. It was right after the campus-wide smoking ban went into effect, and Stanley was insisting that smokers were continuing to smoke in "secret smoking rooms" in the Campus Center. For his anti-smoking crusade, Stanley would eventually be hit with an 18-month ban from the Campus Center for enforcing the "no smoking within 20 feet of a building" rule to the exact inch.

During one year, Stanley filed 200 law suits against the University. More recently, Stanley has been seen participating in the futile campaign to elect Bill Weld President while working on a book. The book's subject matter? How to take advantage of eviction laws so that you can live rent free.

I will never be able to figure out where Admissions digs up characters like Stanley.

• I have never seen the ice dispenser on the Hatch soda machine work.

• With all due respect to the residents of that community, I have never figured out the purpose of Hadley. Living in Northampton, most of my Friday afternoons are spent trying to get through the traffic that tends to hang out on route nine. Hadley seems to have the space to spare. Do you think they could consider widening route nine?

• I never was really good at figuring out how to end my columns.

Dave Copeland is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Bob.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Bob Dunn.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

Fans are awesome, baby

Feb. 24, 1996 is a day I will not soon forget. For all UMass Basketball fans it was a day of mixed emotions. It was a day of excitement, sadness but most of all reflection. Some might reflect on a tremendous undefeated run or the pressures of being ranked number one, but my reflections are much different. My reflections point towards respect.

Respect from the fans. In my three years at this University, I have only missed four home games. I have heard the crowd cheer, boo, yell, stomp their feet, clap their hands and virtually go crazy. I have seen the last three A-10 championship games and my ears are still recovering. I thought I'd heard it all, until Saturday's game.

Saturday's game brought a new meaning to the phrase "Refuse to Lose." We have all heard coach Cal say it a million times, and we know that the players have adopted the theory. But on the 27th game of the 1995-96 schedule the fans and the big guns — ABC and ESPN.

Let me start with the obvious, Dick Vitale. When Dick Vitale came to UMass, everyone loved him. He spoke in the Campus Center and signed a billion books. I had the unique opportunity to meet Dicky V and talk one-on-one. He was very courteous and friendly, so I gave in and decided to buy his book.

In the book, he talks about numerous topics related to the college game. One particular section focused on the necessity for unity on the court and that college hoop was not about individual stars. He went on to say that all the great teams played great together, and that one man does not win games.

This year I have heard Dicky V talk about all the UMass starters as individuals. He praises Camby in the middle, talks about the tenacious defense of Dingle and Bright and is mesmerized by the minutes that Padilla and Travieso have played. But as much as Mr. Vitale has talked about individual honors, he says nothing about the whole team. He has picked UMass to lose several games this year and gave us little credit in the pre-season. After UMass started 26-0 I still don't think he opened his eyes. Hey Dicky I'm fed up with the hype, support us as a team or don't support us at all, baby!

I don't want to only pick on Dicky V because many others are to blame. It seemed that all year the crews of ESPN and ABC Sports couldn't wait for UMass to drop a game. They couldn't wait to throw one of their elite and overrated Duke, UNC or Kentucky teams in the #1 slot. They couldn't wait to analyze our loss and tell us what went wrong.

When I came home from the game on Saturday, my friends and I decided to watch the game again (yes I do have a life) because we taped it on ESPN. While watching the tape we listened closely as Ron Franklin and Clark Kellogg of ESPN give the call.

Nothing bothered me more then the analyzation of Donta Bright's missed dunks. The two well educated broadcasters actually said that Donta has a hard time dunking the basketball. They talked about the size of his hands and the sweat on the ball, but bottom line was that Donta simply has trouble jamming. I guess they missed the first 26 games of this year and also happened to miss the previous two years with Donta on the team. Come on guys, give Mr. Bright some credit please. Give him the "Jumanji."

At the end of the half, Franklin and Clark sent it back to the ESPN studio for scores and highlights. Mike Tirico, who was covering the half time show, opened up by saying something to the likes of, "I hope John Calipari is having a fun time watching this one from outside." Then I was furious. This guy was hitting below the belt. It was not that he was letting the viewers know about coach Cal's ejection, but it was the tone and manner in which he said it. He said it in a personal and vindictive way, almost as if he was personally excited that it happened. Would he speak this way about coach K or the General Bobby Knight, I think not.

We all realize that coach Cal is a guy much like Pat Riley or Larry Bird or Magic Johnson. You either love him or hate him. But no matter what your opinion is, you must respect him. Respect the fact that he has brought this team from 10-17 in 1988 to 29-5 in 1995. Respect the fact that he has lead our team to four straight A-10 championships, a Sweet 16 and an Elite Eight appearance in the NCAA Tournament. Respect the fact that he is one of the top coaches in college basketball today.

In retrospect, it doesn't really matter what the media says, views or writes about our team or our fans. What matters is that we have respect for ourselves. However, there is one solution to put an end to all their talk. The solution simply is to win, and that's what we've been doing all along. So if Dicky V or anyone else wants to come to our town and start talking trash, then let him — but I'll bet you I can find 9,493 (Mullins capacity) fans to talk right back!

Brad Davidson is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

War is a waste

To the editor:

Tuesday an article, "The war continues" (Feb 27) was run in [The] Daily Collegian. It contained so much faulty logic that I found it necessary to clarify the War on Drugs. Since the Prohibition of the 1920s, the U.S. government has continually used fear to control the populous. By increased use of imprisonment they have been able to slowly make more government policies restricting individual rights. The philosophy behind imprisonment is not to punish the individual for their actions. How can a society punish an individual for actions which society itself created? Imprisonment is a means to influence people who might be thinking of taking similar actions. Since the 1980s the U.S. government has falsely labeled its crusade as a War on Drugs. War, by definition is forceful action against a conflict. Drugs are inanimate objects which exist as a manifestation of societies [sic] demand for them, just as cars are a manifestation of the desire to drive. It would not be possible to hold a war on cars, only on the drivers. What the U.S. government has done in effect is declared a war on drug users. This is a war upon its own citizen's [sic], and an obvious violation of Constitutional rights. In 1980, one person in 776 citizens was incarcerated in this country. Twenty-five percent of the prisoners were being held on drug charges. In 1994, one person in 250 was incarcerated, 60 percent of these people were being held on drug charges. Also in 1994, 5.7 billion dollars was spent on housing drug offenders. In the 14 years of increased imprisonment drug use has only gone up. The casualties of this war can be measured by the lost time of drug offenders. Life is so short, why make citizens waste it being held in expensive cages? Why use citizen's [sic] as pawns for a fear tactic? These fear tactics used by the current institution aren't working. Drugs have and will always exist in nature. Drug's [sic] are natural even if we create them, because we are a part of nature. It is arrogant for us to fight against nature, we will only be fighting against the forces which have created us. The campaigns to imprison drug users are based on the same

~ CELEBRATING W.E.B. DUBOIS ~

During the concert of Negro spirituals and readings held Feb. 21 in Bowker Auditorium, Shirley Jackson Whitaker, a soprano in the DuBois Dedication Choir, sang "I'll Hear the Trumpet Sound."

Director of the DuBois Dedication Choir Horace Boyer sang uplifting songs during the Convocation to celebrate DuBois' life.

Professor DuBois, keynote speaker at the Convocation held Feb. 23 in Bowker Auditorium, delivered a speech in honor of his stepfather W.E.B. DuBois.

Photo Essay by Emily Reily

Last week the University of Massachusetts held events celebrating the naming of the Tower Library to the W.E.B. DuBois Library. An exhibit was opened on the Special Collections floor of the Library entitled "W.E.B. DuBois - Yesterday, Today, and Tommorow." Student and faculty teach-in activities were held, as well as a lecture by Professor David Levering Lewis, the author of W.E.B. DuBois' biography. The week's activities were capped by a convocation celebrating DuBois with songs and the awarding of honorary degrees.

President William Bulger, left, delivered many honorary doctorate degrees to distinguished individuals while pictures from DuBois' life flashed in the background.

Sports

■ horn

continued from page 10

in the Mullins Center, it couldn't have been any better. One of the most exciting finishes in four years, added to crowd favorite Nunez making the big play, made my senior night a night to remember.

Maybe there is something to all of this "Refuse to Lose" stuff after all.

• Oh, yeah. One more thing about that game. You are wrong if you thought that Hawks' coach Phil Martelli was the most unhappy guy in the Mullins Center when the game went to OT.

That honor went to The Hawk. The poor St. Joe's mascot had to flap its wings for another five minute period.

• Looking south to Red Sox camp, how 'bout Tim Wakefield? The Sox knuckleballer has refused to pitch in any intrasquad games until he signs a multi-year contract.

Wakefield, you all remember, started last season on fire, going 14–1 with a 1.65 ERA in his first 17 starts. He then fell apart down the stretch, compiling an unimpressive 2–7 record, and an ERA over four.

When Wakefield was asked about "the slump," he did his best George Steinbrenner impersonation and passed the "Buck."

"I didn't pitch bad at the end of the year, we just didn't score enough runs to win," said the knuckleballer.

Sure, Tim. I'll bet Dan Duquette can't wait to get you inked for the next five years.

Although, hey, if I was him, I wouldn't want anyone to see my knuckleball get creamed before I was guaranteed a few million either.

• Okay, I'm not much of a hockey guy, but even I saw that "the Great One" Wayne Gretzky is headed to St. Louis after being traded from Los Angeles. Gretzky, who started his career with Edmonton, moved to the United States when he was traded to the Kings in 1988.

The way I figure it, all you Bruins fans should be happy. The nine-time MVP is slowly moving his way to the Northeast.

• Hmmm. Dee Brown will sit out of the Celtics lineup with a sprained right toe, and he didn't show up for the C's 121–116 win over the Hornets on Wednesday.

Let's hear it for the next great Celtic captain.

• It was a phenomenal win for the UMass women's basketball squad to defeat the A-10's top team, Rhode Island, earlier this week in the Mullins Center. The win locked up a No. 2 seed in this weekend's A-10 tourney, and Coach Joanie O'Brien and her squad should merit strong consideration for a bid in what would be the Minutewomen's first NCAAs.

However, on the Minutewomen's Senior Night, I would have loved to see senior forward/guard Nicole Carter get into the game at least once.

• The San Diego Padres and New York Mets are all set to play a three-game series in Monterrey, Mexico, this upcoming season. It will mark the first time Major League Baseball has played a real game outside of the continental United States or Canada.

With all the talent currently entering the big leagues from South of the Border, playing a few games down there is the next step in bringing in a couple of Mexican expansion clubs in a few years.

As baseball becomes more and more international, I have to wonder if these new teams would play in the "American" League?

• If I was a coach playing against the UMass basketball squad in the near future, I would start rubbing elbows with George Washington head coach Mike Jarvis. Heck, if its not some kind of obscure NCAA regulation, I might even buy him lunch a few times. That guy knows something.

Brian Perillo is a Collegian columnist.

■ Vautour

continued from page 10

South Dakota and Northern Wyoming State, i.e. not at all, was all of a sudden a contender.

For me and for so many other fans it completely changed our college experience.

When I first applied to become a Minutemaniac, I was the third person on the list. No lottery to get involved, just go over to Boyden, pay the $25 and you were in. If I recall correctly, the list didn't even fill.

It started humbly enough, a 78–55 win over the mighty Central Connecticut State, but you could immediately feel that you had stepped into something special.

Nothing however compared to what transpired on Jan. 29, 1993...

It was 5 p.m. and two friends and I, as well as about 15 other people, were waiting outside to get into the basketball game.

If 5 p.m. doesn't seem particularly early to you, it was when you realize that the game started at midnight! It was of course the final game in the legendary Curry Hicks Cage, better known as the "Final Rage in the Cage."

We stood for hours chanting UMass cheers, singing drinking songs and begging for them to open the doors and relieve us from the sub-freezing temperatures.

When the doors finally opened, the atmosphere was unmatched. The noise shook the old building like never before.

When the Class of 1996 leaves the Happy Valley, the Cage will be something UMass students will have just heard stories about. The program had grown too big for the Cage's cozy confines, but it was hard to not wish that the atmosphere created in that building couldn't last forever. For some of us it will.

The Mullins Center began its own tradition a week later with an exciting overtime win against West Virginia. The Minutemen stayed perfect in their new home until last Valentine's day.

And the fans loved every minute of it.

It was at Mullins that we saw Marcus Camby's last second dunk to beat GW, Mike Williams heroics, and the continued blossoming of the Temple rivalry.

While I loved my year as a media member and traveling with the team, there is something irreplaceable about sitting with your friends and just letting loose.

The atmosphere around big time college basketball is unmatched. Maybe it's because I sat with the coolest bunch of fans in the building, but I bet everybody there would make the same claim.

It was a helluva ride, I'm going to miss it.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

■ hoop

continued from page 10

rebounder with 851 and has earned 20 or more points on 10 occasions. Combined with the inside threat of Crystal Carroll who averages 12.3 ppg, UMass enters the tournament with a potent front court.

In the back court, starters Beth Kuzneski provides the Minutewomen with an outside threat, while Sabriya Mitchell brings speed to the point.

With such a strong finish to the regular season at its back, UMass has its eyes set on the A-10 title, the final step toward an NCAA berth.

■ Bryce

continued from page 10

Brown Jim McCoy Will Herndon trio who made it to the Sweet 16 in 1992 was low to graduation. Spots opened up. Scholarships were given. Walk-ons had a chance to show what they could give the team. Rigo tried out, and eventually walked on.

In fact, Rigo worked hard enough to be a walk-on for the next two seasons. Enough to earn a scholarship for this, his final season at UMass.

Needless to say, Rigo has made a name for himself. It's not his statistical output that tells the story. It's not what he produces in a scheduled game. It's about a chance. A chance for big-time, for a local guy to hitch on with a nationally- ranked Division I basketball team. It's a willingness to accept the fact his skills do not resemble that of the Carnbys and the Brights, and who voluntarily endures a rigorous practice-player role, despite how minute his game time minutes may be.

And Rigo as a person? See him at a UMass women's basketball game, as he leads the cheers of the young children in attendance. They love him. See him at a UMass men's basketball game, as he acts like a fan in a Minuteman jersey, waving the towel as he bounces up, down and around. We love him.

And so on Wednesday, we were all excited to see Rigo play once more here on campus. We saw him play the first three minutes of the game before being taken out. We all knew the rousing applause given when Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso replaced Giddel Padilla and Rigo wasn't for Edgar and Carmelo. We knew it was for Giddel and, most of all, Rigo.

We knew he wasn't going to play much, since St. Joe's was playing the Minutemen tough. We knew if the game stayed close, we may see him in the end for defensive purposes. We understand that if other players are in foul trouble, Rigo has five to use up in the closing minutes.

So with 34.4 seconds left in the game and UMass down 58–55, we didn't think much of Rigo entering the game. We thought he'd be back on the bench once the Minutemen had the ball. We would never have been able to predict what Rigo was about to do.

Before the ball was inbounded Rigo took a second shove from Hawk Terrell Myers before falling on his back. The referee blew the whistle and the result was an intentional foul. Deadball foul equals two shots and the ball. Rigo made one of two free throws, which led to the possession on which fellow senior Donta Bright hit a short jumper to send the contest into overtime.

In essence, Rigo had taken no time off the clock, was not called for a foul but took one, made a free throw and gave his team the ball in the crucial seconds of the game. On a day to commemorate the efforts of his career, Rigo's effort on that very night was on display for all to see. It typified what he is all about, what his role is and how he performs it, why he is coined "the emotional spark plug." Rigo was the hero on the special night.

His #44 jersey won't be hanging from the Mullins Center rafters any time in the future. Several years down the road, you won't find his name in any of the UMass all-time best lists. Neither a piece of cloth nor an old media guide can fill in the full detailed account of Rigoberto Nuñez.

Doesn't matter. A true UMass fan will not forget Rigo.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

Northeastern falls to Boston University tonight.

UMass ties for sixth: If the above scenario occurs, and New Hampshire loses to Merrimack tomorrow night. The Minutemen would play as the seventh seed in the playoff though because UNH has a better head-to-head record against UMass this year.

UMass faces BU: If it finishes eighth and the Terriers tie either BC or Northeastern this weekend, UMass could also travel to the defending national champions if UMass places seventh with BU getting swept and UMass–Lowell winning at Maine tomorrow night.

UMass faces UMass–Lowell: If the Minutemen finish eighth and BU is swept this weekend, with Lowell beating Maine; or if they place seventh, while BU gets at least a tie out of this weekend, and Maine defeats Lowell but falls tonight to Providence.

UMass faces Maine: Should UMass finish seventh, and Maine beat Lowell and at least tie Providence, then the Minutemen are off on a five-hour bus ride to the frozen tundra of Orono, Maine.

Several other Massachusetts teams will be in action this weekend. Scheduled to compete are:

Women's Gymnastics vs. New Hampshire
Sunday 3 p.m., Curry Hicks Cage

Men's Gymnastics – New England Championships
Saturday, 1 p.m., Boyden Gym

Men's Track – IC4As

Women's Track – ECACs
Men's and Women's Swimming – ECACs

Arts & Living

Poets read works at bookstore

By Julie G. Pfrommer
Collegian Correspondent

LESLEA NEWMAN
Odyssey Bookstore
Feb. 28

An enthusiastic crowd gathered to hear Leslea Newman read from her new anthology of lesbian poetry at the Odyssey book shop Wednesday evening.

Six poets published in My Lover is a Woman joined her at the reading. They included Lambda literary award winners and poets who had never before been published, thus adding many diverse voices and a vast array of experiences. The women featured in Newman's anthology are writers of poetry, fiction and non-fiction from many backgrounds and cultures.

Newman's ground-breaking anthology of poems pays tribute to the lesbian literary tradition. In selecting the works, Newman said she "put out calls for manuscripts in magazines specifically for lesbians and specifically for writers... and read all the books I could find, single author volumnes as well as anthologies." Newman said the process of selecting the poems took her about a year. She has brilliantly brought together a work to be treasured, with every poet present at the reading thanking Newman for the collection and praising the importance and power of the work.

A resident of Northampton, Newman is an established poet and writer, having written more than 20 works of fiction, non-fiction and children's literature, including the famous and controversial book, Heather has Two Mommies. She introduced each of the six poets who read from both the anthology and their other works. She then read a few of her favorites from the collection, including a work by Audre Lorde, and some of her own poems, which explore the butch/femme roles in lesbian relationships.

The audience was responsive and appreciative, laughing and murmuring their praise of the poets and their unique reading style. The first poet, Lynn Goldfarb, had never read in public before, yet her reading was active and confident. Her poem, "You Think I'm Such a Nice Girl" was read in a teasing, cajoling voice as she moved around and flirted before the crowd.

The listeners were very involved in the reading, and it was easy to relate to the issues that the poets addressed. Mary Clare Powell, a professor at Wellesley College, nervously admitted that, though the writer of a poem was often different from the speaker, in her case they were the same. She then read "Lesbian Menopause" and "Love Poem: To Violet," written to her blushing lover who was present.

Poet Liz Query, a social worker, read her first poem to be collected in an anthology, "Kissing Coco." It is about adolescent lesbian love — an agonizing experience with which many lesbians can easily identify. Two women in the audience exchanged an affectionate wink after the reading of Query's poem.

COURTESY MARY VAZQUEZ

Leslea Newman was one of six poets who read poetry at the Odyssey Bookshop.

Susan Stinson, the acclaimed author of the novel Fat Girl Dances with Rocks read next. Stinson's breathy voice and dreamy movements captured the audience's attention, while she read from her collection of poetry "Belly Songs: In Celebration of Fat Women." Another established poet was Carol Potter, who read from her previously published work, Upside Down in the Dark, which includes poems such as, "Digging to China" and others having to do with oceans and bodies of water.

Each poet captured the fears and apprehensions of being in lesbian relationships, as well as writing about their own personal histories as lesbians. For example, Chaia Heller's brilliant work "Girl Scout Camp," explores lesbian crushes in girlhood. Heller also read a poem called, "Plum Poem," an erotic work using fruit as a metaphor for sexuality, and then, "After Language," which poked gentle fun at "all the drowsy metaphors/about women and fruit."

All of the readers beautifully captured sensuality and eroticism in lesbian relationships and everyday life with poems about longing and looking.

Gifted pianist will play at Bowker

Ignat Solzhenitsyn will include 'Variations' in concert program

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

In what has to be one of the highlights of the Fine Arts Center spring season, Ignat Solzhenitsyn will perform a recital Sunday night at Bowker Auditorium at 7 p.m.

The 23-year-old pianist, who has achieved a reputation as one of the most gifted artists of our time, will include "The Goldberg Variations" by Johann Sebastian Bach in his program.

Solzhenitsyn's lyrical and poignant interpretations and the intensity he brings to his performances have won him critical acclaim the world over. In 1993, Rostropovich described the then 20-year-old as "astounding." The New York Times christened him the "star of the evening" for his performance with the Tchaikovsky Chamber Orchestra at the age of 19 for which "Solzhenitsyn played Shostakovich's spiky passages with bristling vitality."

In the fall of 1993, Solzhenitsyn toured Russia and the Baltic states with the National Symphony Orchestra led by Mstislav Rostropovich. This was the first time that Solzhenitsyn, the son of famous Russian dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn, had been back to his native country since his family was exiled when he was a one-and-a-half years old.

In the past, Solzhenitsyn has performed in London's Queen Elizabeth Hall, and at the Evian Music Festival in France where he appeared in both solo recital and with the Emerson Quartet. He participated in engagements in Central America, Europe, the United States and Japan. In 1994, Solzhenitsyn was awarded the Avery Fisher Career Grant.

Solzhenitsyn is a delight for crowds of all ages. This concert is one that should not be missed.

Tickets for Sunday night's 7 p.m. performance are $23, $18 and $10 for 17 and under and $5 for Five College Students. For more information or to order tickets, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Boston's Cleo comes to Noho

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow night Boston's Letters to Cleo will rock Pearl Street with their unique mix of alterna-pop.

Letters recently came off a national club and college tour to promote their latest album Wholesale Meats and Fish, the follow up to their popular debut Aurora Gory Alice.

In 1994 the band gained national recognition after years on the Boston club circuit when their song "Here and Now" was played on "Melrose Place." The video for the single was prominently shown on MTV's "Alternative Nation" and "120 Minutes."

Following their success in late 1994, the band began an extensive national club tour in early 1995 which eventually culminated at the WBCN River Rave on the Hatch Shell in Boston in June.

In late June Letters entered the studio to record Wholesale Meats and Fish which was released in August. After the release, they returned to the road. The new album climbed the Boston album orientated rock charts, and broke into the Top 25.

"Awake" and "Demon Rock" found their ways on to the Boston charts, but more importantly they entered heavy rotation on modern rock stations across the nation.

Wholesale Meats and Fish is a mix of sounds from gritty loud rock to soft melodic ballads. On "Do What You Want," Kay Hanley yells "Do what you want. Yeah!" over the sounds of rumbling guitars. However, Hanley's softer side can be heard on "Laudenum" with quieter acoustic guitars.

Letters to Cleo sound better live than on the silver disc. They know how to electrify even the most docile crowd. In November they played for a hometown crowd at Boston's Avalon. When they took the stage, they immediately broke into "Demon Rock," and brought the crowd to their knees. The show never let up, and the crowd was disappointed when they did not return for a second encore. They even stunned the crowd with a cover of Lovertboy's "Everybody's Working for the Weekend." They are worth checking out before they go on to bigger venues.

Letters to Cleo will be appearing at Pearl Street tomorrow night at 7 p.m. on the main stage upstairs. The show is 18+, and tickets are available at the door.

COURTESY ARIOLA

Letters to Cleo, an alterna-pop group from Boston, will play at Pearl Street this weekend.

Free Spirits jazzes it up with non-stop intensity at Bowker Auditorium

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Staff

THE FREE SPIRITS WITH JOHN MCLAUGHLIN
Bowker Auditorium
Feb. 27

The Free Spirits with guitarist John McLaughlin electrified Tuesday night's crowd as they brought their unusual jazz style to Bowker Auditorium. The intensity was nonstop and the level of technical musical prowess was unmatched.

McLaughlin strolled through all of the music seemingly effortlessly, playing incredible melodies and riffs up and down the neck of his guitar, but understating them, adding a subtlety that is often not heard in fast paced solos.

Dennis Chambers supplied the different grooves and feels easily, using a large array of percussion sounds. While many jazz percussionists prefer to use sharp, crisp sounding drums, Chambers instead calls on his days under George Clinton in Funkadelic and Parliament as a funk drummer, using deep, thundering drums with thudding hits. He was an excellent listener, making musical conversation with both DeFrancesco and McLaughlin as they soloed over his groove.

Joey DeFrancesco did double duty, playing both bass lines and accompaniments on the organ. His work was cut out for him even further, however, as he often had to perform solos after McLaughlin's intense improvisations. Yet he executed flawless, highly dramatic solos which proved why he was chosen by both late trumpet player Miles Davis and McLaughlin as a crucial member to their bands.

The trio demonstrated remarkable discipline as each musician listened to the other two and played accordingly, producing a solid uniformity to the tunes. Even when technical difficulties arose with DeFrancesco's amplifiers at the beginning of the second set, McLaughlin and Chambers demonstrated a unique calmness and deftly filled in the empty space, playing an improvised duet with one another until the problem was rectified.

Several special points of interest included an amazing versatile drum solo by Chambers, which at times worked the audience into a cheering frenzy, and a cover of "Sketches of Spain," a Miles Davis tune in which DeFrancesco abandoned the organ and bass pedals to play trumpet, producing a decent imitation of Davis' sound.

The concert ended dramatically with the trio ripping through a fast paced, straighforward tune after Chambers' amazing drum interlude. At the pressing of the audience, McLaughlin and DeFrancesco took the stage again to pay another remembrance to Miles Davis.

The most rememberable aspect was the intensity and the focus the musicians possessed, yet executed with an ease and finesse that was misleading. McLaughlin made it look easy — he didn't call attention to the astounding melodies he played. Instead, he merely swayed back and forth with the rise and fall of his playing, relying on the listener to realize the dramatic implications of his improvisations.

A satisfying, if not astounding show, The Free Spirits lived up to their name, playing without reservations or restrictions and with an amazing amount of feeling, making for a remarkable concert and a excellent night of jazz.

We Apologize
We Goofed

Our advertising didn't reach our customers in the Northampton & Amherst Areas on our

39th Anniversary Sale

The Biggest Once-A-Year Sales Event!
Everything on Sale!

To rectify our error we offer a special 3-day sale for our Hampshire County Customers.

Friday, March 1	9:00-9:00
Saturday, March 2	9:00-6:00
Sunday, March 3	12:00-5:00

• Accessories • Amplifiers • Basses • Computer Software • D.J. Equipment • Drums • Guitars • Keyboards • Music • MIDI Equipment • Signal Processors • Sound Reinforcement • Synthesizers Most major brands

• Specials •
Guitar Strings -- Buy 1 set & Get Sets FREE
50% OFF Drum Sticks
50% OFF Selected Music
Many more unadvertised specials

Falcetti MUSIC MALL
1755 Boston Road
(413)543-1002
(Next to Eastfield Mall)

Ever Think of writing for Sports?
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

Plan now to attend!

Get Credit for Spending Your Summer in the Seacoast!

The New Hampshire seacoast is a great place to be in the summer. While you're here, why not get credit for it?

UNH Summer Session intensive courses are a flexible 5 to 10 weeks long. In just one term you can enroll in one or two courses and still have half the summer left to relax and enjoy your usual summer activities. Or you can enroll in two terms, back-to-back, and spread your summer coursework out!

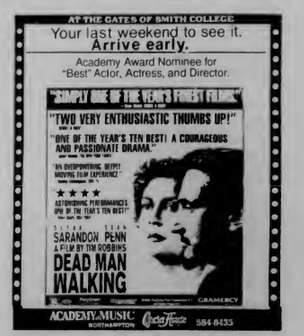
Over 300 day and evening credit courses...take some pressure off fall and spring. Plan now to include UNH Summer Session in your summer activities. Registration begins April 1.

Call (603) 862-4234 for a catalog.

Four Terms
1: May 28-June 28
2 May 28-Aug. 2
3 June 10-Aug. 2
4 July 1-Aug. 2
Take two or more courses back to back by enrolling in Term 1 & 4

Mail to: UNH Summer Session, 24 Rosemary Lane, Durham, NH 03824 or call (603) 862-4234
☐ Please send the Summer Session Catalog
Name
Address
City State Zip

UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE



AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Your last weekend to see it.
Arrive early.
Academy Award Nominee for "Best" Actor, Actress, and Director.
"TWO VERY ENTHUSIASTIC THUMBS UP!"
"ONE OF THE YEAR'S TEN BEST! A COURAGEOUS AND PASSIONATE DRAMA."
SARANDON PENN
A FILM BY TIM ROBBINS
DEAD MAN WALKING
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
584-8433

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMASS BEST

Hurry MSE Applications

For a good time

AUDITIONS

Open Auditions

Attention Animal Lovers!

Gurdjieff Work

Bartend

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apt for rent

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Mustang LX

Purchasing a used car?

Purchasing a used car?

1984 Oldsmobile

89 Civic Si

Purchasing a used car?

1986 Dodge Colt

87 Lynx
1982 edge Arias

EMPLOYMENT

Premiere

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselors needed to lead sports-oriented camp located in northern New York state. We have openings for specialists in both land and water sports, specialty areas include basketball, soccer, lacrosse, hockey, ropes course & mountain biking, ultimate frisbee, aerobics, WSI, lifeguarding, drama, arts & crafts, woodworking, drama, dance, and nursing. Relieving staff needed for kitchen and canoe trips and for various trip tenting, climbing and hiking trips. Counselors must be 19 years of age or older, nonsmoking, non-drinking, and non-drug using. Competitive salary, room & board, and travel allowance provided. Call (315) 348-6211 or write: Camp Al-Mar-Jo, Box 1, Star Lake, NY 13690

RA Position

Co-ed camp

Ski +Snowboard

National Parks hiring

Cruise Ships Hiring

Touch English in Asia

Premiere Brother Sister

Attention Students!

Exceptional Summer Opportunity

Cape Cod!

CAMP WAYNE

Exceptional

Work Study Job

Premiere Brother

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals

Office study spaces

FOR SALE

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto

IBM

Kramer

MTN

Power Macintosh

FOR SALE

Stew Computer ?

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Rock systems

100 disc

Yamaha RX V870 Receiver

Premiere Brother Sister

10 CT. White Diamond

FAT CHIC FOR SALE

Freestyle 94 snowboard

Macintosh Color Classic

Classic Video Game

Sega Saturn

Platform bed

For Sale

Donnon PMA

1982 Dodge Aries

FOUND

Eyeglasses found

INSTRUCTION

Jazz

Learn to Scuba Dive

LOST

Lost

MUSCIANS

Funky rock band with label interest

PERSONALS

Punk rock boy

PERSONALS

To the Delta Zeta

Bob S

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent!

Spacious three bedroom apt

Room for rent

ROOM WANTED

Female, N/S, cat-lover

Female

ROOMMATE WANTED

Vegetarian

Female

Platform bed

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?

Say I Love You

Planning a trip?

Questions

Experienced Russian tutoring

Jewelry Repairs

CASHISS

Will Buy

JARBERWOCKY

Undergraduate Women

English teacher's writing help

Buying STAR WARS

Help

TRAVEL

Ski + Snowboard

Spend Spring Break

Organize a full busload

Spring Break!

Scuba Dive

Cancun Spring Break**

Spring Break!

TRAVEL

One way ticket

Guess what Johnny's bringing for Show and Tell today.
Every day, thousands of kids bring guns to school.
Find out how to help get guns out of the hands of children.
Call 1-800-WE-PREVENT
Not one more lost life. Not one more grieving family. Not one more.
CRIME STOPPERS

Sparky's® Safety Spot™
SECURITY BARS ON WINDOWS CAN TRAP YOU IN A FIRE
Use bars which have a quick-release mechanism that everyone in the family can operate.
NFPA
National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

WANTED

Help

CASHISS

Will Buy

JARBERWOCKY

Undergraduate Women

English teacher's writing help

Buying STAR WARS

Help

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
presents in collaboration with:
Black Student Union, Hillel, Office of Jewish Affairs
MORRIS S. DEES JR.

WHO WILL LECTURE ON WHITE SUPREMACIST HATE GROUPS IN THE UNITED STATES

Tuesday, March 5, 1996 7:00 PM
Fine Arts Center, UMass Amherst
Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center.
Free admission and open to the public.

This program has been made possible by the Financial Support of the following: Chancellor's Office, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Graduate Student Senate, Greek Affairs, Housing Services/Residential Life, Human Relations, Student Government Association, Women of Color Program.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuring victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the initiative in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound; take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

YOU CAN MY ROOMMATE BE DEADLY? WHAT IF I NEVER EVEN MEET HER YET!
AND YOU NEVER WILL
BUT WHAT WHEN'S
THIS MORNING, A TRUCK-LOAD OF FISH WAS ACCIDENTLY DUMPED ON HER HEAD
HER FAULT
BUT... BUT WHERE WAS THE TRUCK DRIVER?
OH, THIS IS TOO EASY
ELMER! GREEN ELVES KIDNAPPED HIM!

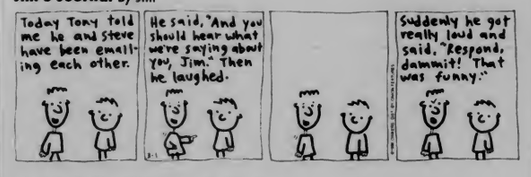
Dilbert By Scott Adams

DOGBERT, I NEED YOU TO FACILITATE SOME MEETINGS
WHAT KIND OF MEETINGS?
WE'RE CREATING A PROCESS TO FIX OUR PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT PROCESS. BUT FIRST WE'RE HAVING SOME PREPLANNING MEETINGS...
...TO DECIDE ON A PROJECT NAME
HOW ABOUT "DEATH SPIRAL"?

Jim's Journal By Jim

At the store today I was putting crayons on the shelf.
They smelled so good I stopped and opened a box.
I hadn't smelled that smell for a long time.
Then I saw a customer watching and I went back to work.

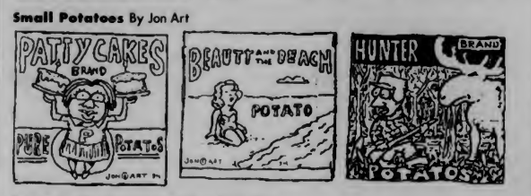
Jim's Journal By Jim



Today Tony told me he and Steve have been emailing each other.
He said, "And you should hear what we're saying about you, Jim." Then he laughed.
Suddenly he got really loud and said, "Respond, dammit! That was funny."

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Big Man On Campus By Dave Schneider

Clue Man By Galen Burke

Normally Crisper would be here with me but he got into an accident over the week-end, so it'll be just you and me this week.
He tried to break up a fight between Earthfoods and Rao's over who had the happiest workers.
Tofu cubes
Organically Grown Lettuce
Honey Grain Bagel
If anybody goes to Health Services today, tell him I said get well soon! (These sun-dried tomatoes sure do leave a mark)

Bastards By Matt De Remen and Greg Fine

100 Lionshead on the Wall Boyz By Glee O went to my brothers to practice counting the Century Club People were fighting for membership

COLLEGE
Our troops projectile hurled and kept trying to battle through the night
I did it man I studied bel I'm UK drunk
You should
He reached right up until he had to hit the bird though.
SMASH
#2 Beating Candidate

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Remember my friend Wallace, the black AfroAmerican?

Well, he finally graduated from the university with a masters degree...pretty cool.

But he says some remarkable things are happening since he's got a job.

Some of the guys at work are already angry at him because he told them he doesn't know how to play basketball so he can't play on the office team.

The same thing happened in a high school jazz band. That time he gave in... he just stood there on stage holding a saxophone.

They told him,.....

"Just hold it, Wallace!"

So, he held it.

He's been holding it ever since.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"It's a new diet dessert. It has 400 calories, but the average person will burn 500 calories trying to open the package."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Copy Editor ..... Laura Stock
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor .. Dave "Lozenge" Voldan
Production ..... Leon W. Latino
..... William M. Darby

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Savory Fish Munchies
Mesquit Chicken
Savory Bow Ties
Tri Bean Caserole

DINNER
Beef Strips/ Snow Peas
Stir Fry Veggies
Pastabilities
Eggplant Parmesan

Franklin

LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Grilled Sneeze
Crispy Fish Munchies

DINNER
Beef Strips/ Snow Peas
Baked Ziti
Charbroiled Chicken

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamboogers
Savory Chicken Cutlet
Tasty Fish Munchies
Stoned Willy's Pizza
Savory Summit Subs

DINNER
Beef Strips/ SnowPeas
Baked Ziti
Stoned Willy's Pizza
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Yummy Fish Munchies
Mesquit chicken
Savory Bow Ties
Tri Bean Caserole
Stoned Willy's Pizza

DINNER
Beef Strips/ Snow Peas
Stir Fry Veggies
Pastabilities
Eggplant Parmesan
Stoned Willy's Pizza

Collegian Graphics, our job is done when your day is just begining

Collegian Comics, so funny we forgot to laugh.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things Thomas Edison would invent if he were alive today:

10. A universal tap for both beer balls and kegs.
9. The wonder jock strap.
8. The anti-Manilow radio.
7. The Jackson home plastic surgery kit.
6. A device you attach to your television that makes MTV not suck.
5. The eternal buzz.
4. Meat-flavored tooth paste.
3. Something men can use when they get that "not so fresh" feeling.
2. A way for Beavis and Butt-head to score.
1. Chia-bong.

Quote of the Day

"Do I know you? Did my wife send you? How do I know you're not with the FBI? So I made a Mistake!!! Can't a man start over? Does he have to keep paying!?!?

–Mr. Horse
From The Ren and Stimpy Show

Sports

Men's & women's hoop face tough weekend tests

■ Men travel to Louisville for regular season finale ■ Minutewomen look for success in A–10 Tourney

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

In its regular season finale, the Massachusetts men's basketball team travels to Freedom Hall to face the No. 21 Louisville Cardinals. Denny Crum's already dangerous crew has been recently bolstered by the return of Samaki Walker.

Walker, a sophomore center, had not played the previous 10 games for the Cardinals due to allegations of NCAA rules violations. The NCAA board was looking into the questionable purchase of an automobile by Walker's father, but the charges have been dropped.

In his first game back, a 80–79 double-overtime loss to Marquette Wednesday, he led the team in scoring with 24 and rebounding with 12.

His counterpart tomorrow, Marcus Camby, has been the big man play and has respect for the 6 foot 9-inch, 240-pounder.

"He's an aggressive low post player," Camby said. "It will be another great challenge for myself. I've been played physical all year, but they're a great team with him back in the line-up."

Louisville (14-4 overall, 10-4 Conference USA) also has a quick and strong backcourt with the combination of Tick Rogers and DeJuan Wheat, which could cause some problems for the struggling UMass backcourt.

Over the past two games, the tandem of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso has combined for only seven assists, while committing 12 turnovers. On the defensive end, opposing backcourts in those two games have averaged over 50 points per contest.

"Carmelo just making shots right now," UMass coach John Calipari said. "They are playing him tougher on defense. He hasn't hurt from the outside but when he goes to the foul line and misses three throws, what kind of defense do they play there?

"On the other end defensively, what happened [Wednesday night] hasn't happened all year. The guy was just quicker."

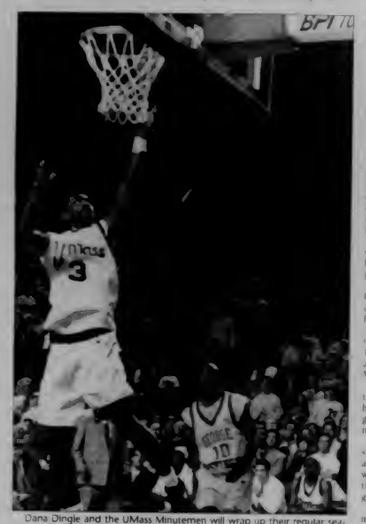
Another outside threat for the Cardinals is Brian Kelser. Over his last eight games, he is shooting 59 percent form behind the three-point arc.

The final regular season test for the Minutemen (27-0, 15-1 Atlantic 10) will prove a good test for Camby and his teammates as March Madness begins.

"This game is what we need before the tournament, playing a game in a hostile gym," Camby said. "This is going to be just like an NCAA tournament game."

"They shoot ball well and create shots for their guards," Calipari added. "They found themselves guys when Samaki Walker went down that didn't know they were that good.

"It's a game they have been targeting and it's a kind of game we look forward to. We know how hard it's going to be."



Dana Dingle and the UMass Minutemen will wrap up their regular seasons at Freedom Hall tomorrow, when they take on No. 21 Louisville.

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The title of the Massachusetts women's basketball media guide reads "Steps to Success." This weekend, the Minutewomen take a step towards success as they travel to Blacksburg, Va. for the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

With this weekend's festivities, coach Joanne O'Brien's squad is beginning to see the top of the stairway.

UMass finished its season with a 19–8 overall record, 11–5 in the A-10. While the '95-96 season has tied the Minutewomen record for most wins in a regular season, the prelude to the A-10 began last Tuesday in UMass' 82–75 win over Rhode Island.

By beating the Rams in a stellar Senior Night outing that saw senior co-captains Octavia Thomas and Melissa Gurile both tally 26 points on the evening, the Minutewomen were able to secure the No. 2 seed in the East Division and a first round bye.

Rhode Island finished out the season on top in the East, followed by Massachusetts and St. Joseph's (15–11, 9–7 in the A-10) in the No. 3-spot. In the West, last year's A-10 Champions, George Washington (22–6, 14–2) claimed the No. 1 spot, followed by LaSalle (17–9, 10–6) and Virginia Tech (10–16, 6–8).

The action begins today at noon in Virginia Tech's Cassell Coliseum, but the Minutewomen don't take to the floor until Saturday at 8:30 p.m., when they will face the winner of today's Virginia Tech/Fordham matchup.

Massachusetts beat Virginia Tech the only time they met on Jan. 18, 65–47, while they dished out two savage beatings to Fordham, 72–50 and 62–34. While numbers and statistics means little come tournament time, this is a favorable situation for the Minutewomen.

"Steps to Success" is a fitting catch phrase to describe the course of events in the Minutewomen's current season.

The first half of the UMass season seemed as though it was played on Space Mountain and not the Mullins Center, as the Minutewomen were stuck in a win two, lose one trend. However, in the second half of the season, the Minutewomen won 10 of their last 12 games, including a six game win streak to round out the season.

Throughout the season, All-America candidates Gurile and Thomas have been the anchors of the UMass squad, highlighting the season by shattering the record books.

Gurile topped the record for all-time blocks with 168, is the only UMass player to score over 1,000 career points, and has not missed a single game in her four-year tenure as a Minutewoman.

Thomas earns the title of all-time leading UMass

Turn to HOOP page 6

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Game Preview

Marcus Camby

Samaki Walker

Tomorrow 2 p.m. Freedom Hall

UMass Probable Starters		Louisville Probable Starters
F Dana Dingle		F Alvin Sims
F Donta Bright		F Beau Zach Smith
C Marcus Camby		C Samaki Walker
G Carmelo Travieso		G Tick Rogers
G Edgar Padilla		G DeJuan Wheat

On the Air
TV: ABC
Radio: WHMP 99.3 FM
Mark Vandameer, Tony Barbee, Jack Leaman

Hockey wraps up regular season at home; playoff picture still hazy

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Nothing is certain as the Massachusetts hockey team heads into its final games of the regular season, tonight against Boston College and tomorrow against Northeastern.

The Minutemen (10–16–3, 4–13–3 Hockey East) could either tie for sixth place in Hockey East, finish seventh or eighth. They could play any of three teams in the opening round of the playoffs next weekend. Furthermore, tomorrow night may or may not mark the final Mullins Center appearances for four seniors.

While the eligibility of Sal Manganaro, Ion Jacques and Dale Hooper will expire after this season, Mike Evans, Dave Kilduff, Jayneen Rissling and Blair Wagar all received an extra year of eligibility in January when Proposition 59 was passed at the NCAA convention in Dallas. These four have the option of returning next year.

The new legislation eliminated the NCAA policy which stated that Division I athletes entering college after the age of 21 receive only three years of eligibility. Evans, Kilduff, Rissling and Wagar enrolled in UMass, out of Canadian junior teams, as 21-year-olds and thus qualify for an extra year of eligibility under Prop 59.

Whether tomorrow will truly mark the final Mullins Center game for the four is still not known. Many have nearly completed their degree requirements and are near graduation. Wagar is married and has that to factor into his decision. All have contributed to the team.

Rissling has been the team's captain for the past three years and a steadying force on defense. Although not an offensive threat, Rissling's +4 rating shows that he plays strong defensively.

Wagar and Evans are solid two-way forwards, who have added to the UMass penalty killing units and its offensive game as well. Two of the team's most consistent players, each is a solid second or third liner, contributing a balance that this young team needs.

Kilduff has been a solid back-up this season to Brian Regan, and produced many memorable games in the two prior seasons. Kilduff was in the goal as the Minutemen notched their historic first Hockey East victory, and posted a then league record 50 saves in a game against Boston University. Kilduff posted a 14–4 mark his freshman year.

Manganaro and Jacques transferred after playing at BC and BU respectively, each have been tremendous additions to the program, bringing a wealth of Hockey East experience. Manganaro has been a fiery leader and top scorer, while Jacques might be the squad's best defensive forward.

Hooper's booming slapshot makes him a powerful asset on the power play. When the team breaks into an umbrella formation, he is generally the trigger man. Hooper will long be remembered for scoring the game winning goal in last year's playoff win at BC with 1:40 to play.

Should the upcoming playoffs represent the final games of their careers, the UMass seniors could play those games in a variety of places, as the playoff possibilities are endless, based upon where the Minutemen finish in the standings.

UMass finishes eighth: If it does not sweep its two contests this weekend, or Northeastern ties BC tonight.

UMass finishes seventh: If it sweeps the Eagles and Huskies, and

Turn to HOCKEY page 6

Senior Night at Mullins; Wakefield wants deal

Senior Day at the Mullins Center was supposed to be a fun for the fans to honor departing co-captains Donta Bright and Dana Dingle, as well as three other senior UMass reserves.

Instead, it almost became a nightmare for Calipari's crew as it had to scratch and claw to pull out a 68–66 overtime win over lowly A-10 foe St. Joseph's. However, despite the nail biting finish, the game did turn into a fan fest honor one of those UMass senior reserves, former walk-on, Rip Nunez.

With the Minutemen down three, just over 50 seconds to go, and the Hawks looking to inbound the ball, UMass should have had to go into "foul and pray" mode. But Nunez, in the game for defense, drew a push from Hawk guard Terrell Myers, and while Nunez hit the floor hard clutching his head, Myers stood over him with a cocky "we got this one, pal" smirk on his face.

Not so fast, Mr. Myers. After conferring, the refs called Myers for a foul. And not only a foul, but an intentional foul, giving UMass two shots and the extra possession it needed.

After missing the first attempt, Nunez, UMass' "Emotional Spark" as he has been dubbed, scored the biggest point of his UMass career on a free throw to cut the lead to two. After a last second Bright jumper, the Minutemen were in overtime, where everyone knows they are unbeatable. Five minutes of basketball later, UMass had the game, and the league's top spot.

Granted, the Minutemen played poorly, and fans around the nation will scoff that UMass needed overtime to dispatch of mediocre St. Joe's.

But for all the seniors witnessing their last game

Around the Horn
with Brian Perillo

Turn to HORN, page 6

Senior fans enjoy last game

We were scared there for a second, well actually for quite a few seconds.

The 9,493 of us that witnessed UMass' OT win over St. Joseph's were frightened. In a it-almost-happened, the hoop team almost lost on Senior Night. After going 54–2 at home in the past four seasons, the Minutemen almost sent their senior fans out on a sour note.

Yes, Senior Night is nice for the players, but their seasons aren't over. In addition to one more regular season game, there is tourney time as well.

For senior fans however, especially those who don't have the cash to take their support on the road, Senior Night is it, the finale, the last time to sit in the student section and watch their team.

Like so many times before, on Wednesday the Minutemen did indeed pull out the W and sent their fans home some of them for the last time, smiling.

Being a fan at Massachusetts is comparable to being a fan in a lot of big time schools, standing the entire game, painting faces... and, well, acting like a complete idiot for the sake of school spirit.

There is however, one notable exception. This is still a relatively new concept to us.

Matt Vautour

About two days after I made my final decision to attend UMass, I was fumbling through the sports page and saw that Massachusetts had checked into the AP Top 25.

"Massachusetts?" I, a mild college hoop fan at best, thought.

Yes, the University of Massachusetts, the same school that had long been mentioned in the same breath as

Turn to VAUTOUR page 6

In final home game of the season, Rigoberto gives fans reason to cheer

The game on Wednesday was put on hold for a brief time for good reason. The Massachusetts basketball team was playing its final home game of the season; meaning five seniors were playing in the last game of their careers on the hardwood of the William D. Mullins Center. The players were escorted to center court by their families and/or loved ones, and the fans got a chance to show their appreciation.

One of the seniors got a particularly large amount of applause, as the ovation started before public address announcer Jack O'Neill even said his name. He was the only one who had his name chanted. He is known by all, and loved by the same. The name is short, but sufficient. Rigo.

John Calipari continued in his commendable tradition of starting his seniors in their last home game. Rigoberto Nunez earned the first start of his career on Wednesday against the St. Joseph's Hawks. Actually, earned cannot be stressed enough just by the use of measly italics.

Andrew Bryce

Not in the case of Rigo.

Four years ago, the Lawrence native showed up on the UMass basketball team's doorstep. The Anton

Turn to BRYCE page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 87 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, March 4, 1996

UMass once again goes to shootout
Junior Warren Norris was the star of senior night as he scored both UMass goals in their 2–2 tie with Northeastern Saturday night (See Sports, page 10).

Celebrating Purim, UMass style
Check out the premiere Jewish Affairs page of the spring semester as Purim is examined (See Jewish Affairs, page 5).

Take a gaze
Ulysses' Gaze, one of many ground–breaking films in the Multicultural Film Festival, premieres tonight (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
If you think the snow has stopped, think again. Although it will be sunny today with a high of 35, there is a 60 percent chance of snow tomorrow night. Get those gloves out now.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 15	HIGH: 35 LOW: 10	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15

700 attend UMass rally to protest alleged rape

A mass of students gathered on Friday at Haigis Mall, to march down fraternity row in protest of recent alleged sexual assaults.

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

There were many disgruntled bus drivers, annoyed commuters and shocked students this past Friday, as approximately 700 students from the Five College area marched in a powerful showing of support against sexual violence.

The group assembled at the Haigis Mall, and marched down fraternity row, pausing to address the Pi Kappa Alpha (Pike) house. The march was organized by Smith student Du Sokol and members of the Third Wave, a national young feminist activist coalition. The demonstration was in response to two recent assaults which allegedly took place at the Pike house.

"This affects everyone. There's something wrong with a system that makes men into objects to be feared and women into objects of sexual conquest. It is each person's responsibility to stop rape. Sexual assault is unacceptable and the people involved must be held accountable," said Sokol.

Many of the students that attended the march felt it was important to address the issue of sexual violence towards women on campus.

Rebecca Bogan, a Mt. Holyoke student, felt that, "women need to speak out against campus violence."

Karre Field also from Mt. Holyoke, said "women convince themselves [sexual violence] is their problem when it's not."

The participants of the march, which included outraged and frustrated men and women, were there simply to show their support for women and their disgust with the lack of response from Massachusetts administration.

Michael Moroa, a participant in the march said, "...at first this might be considered a women's thing, but men are behind them 100 percent to offer support how ever we can. We're pissed at the system."

"I do not think they [UMass] do enough with all the assaults. A lot aren't reported because they [women] are afraid of how they'll be perceived," said UMass student Matthew Rizzo.

The students marched down "frat row" waving signs and chanting lines such as, "Hey, Ho, frat violence has got to go," while fraternity members silently watched from

Turn to MARCH page 3

LSD case goes to Noho court

By Anastasia Kudrez
Collegian Staff

On Dec. 19, 1995, most students were studying for the last three days of finals, but a few noticed a group of six people in the hall wearing street clothes, wearing utility belts with guns.

Patterson Residence Hall was relatively quiet at 9:45 p.m., until six undercover police officers gathered around a doorway in the basement to conduct a drug bust. According to police, they knocked and announced themselves at room 13A, with no response. After waiting several seconds, a detective opened the door with a key issued by Housing Services, and they confronted four men in the room.

On Thursday, Ryan T. Doherty told the Northampton District Court that he and his friends were getting ready to go to dinner when "the door flew open, and a man with a blue jacket came in with his gun drawn." He said a man grabbed him by the throat, pinned him against a wall, and pointed a gun to his head. Doherty said a paper was shoved in his face, which was identified as a search warrant. His affidavit said that he did not hear the police knock or announce themselves.

On Dec. 19, police confiscated 6 items from the room, including a notebook, computer disks, 7 cans of beer, $660.00 in cash, and 4,100 doses of Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD), commonly known as acid.

According to Assistant District Attorney Maureen E. Walsh, acid sells for approximately $5 a hit; at this price, the acid was worth $20,500. A second search warrant allowed police to search a Volkswagen Golf belonging to Eric W. Dupuis; they found three small bags of marijuana. The drug bust concluded a two month police investigation.

Three men were arrested — Doherty, 19, a hotel, restaurant, and travel administration (HRTA) major of Melrose; Dupuis, a 17–year-old carpenter of Weare, N.H., and Ruben A. Almeida, 20, of Stoneham. Only Doherty attended the University of Massachusetts.

Almeida's case was dismissed from District Court and moved to superior court. Doherty's and Dupuis' cases are now being heard in district court.

On Feb. 29, the court heard the defendants' motion to suppress. According to Philip J. Cavanaugh, assistant director of the University Police Department, a motion to suppress is standard procedure in a narcotics case. If the judge rules to suppress, all the evidence gathered by authority of the search warrant will be inadmissible in trial.

Michele L. Leaf, an attorney for the UMass Student Legal Services office, said this stage is crucial.

"You usually win or lose a case on a motion to suppress," she said. "In all likelihood, it will determine if the case goes to trial."

Dupuis' and Doherty's respective attorneys, Sarah E. Schooley of Northampton and George B. Cannon, Esq. of Springfield presented a joint argument, attacking the validity and execution of the warrant. They said the use of an unnamed informant to conduct two "controlled buys" failed the Aquilar-Spinelli standard. This standard demands that "the Commonwealth must establish the informant's basis of knowledge" — the means by which he or she obtained the information — and secondly, that the informant was reliable."

The defense also criticized the "control" of the buys, arguing that police never witnessed the actual exchange of drugs or money.

Secondly, the defense claimed that the police violated the knock and announce stipulation of the search warrant. They said that even if the police did knock, they did not give Doherty reasonable time to open the door.

The prosecutor, D.A. Walsh, countered by defending the validity of the search warrant. She cited Commonwealth v. Richardson, which says, "[in] narcotics cases, a controlled buy is often employed to provide necessary corroboration." She said the informant's basis of knowledge requirement was satisfied because he or she bought the drugs firsthand. Walsh said that police had used the informant before, and the controlled buys were properly executed.

Walsh based her argument for probable cause on Commonwealth v. Warren. In 1994, the Supreme Judicial Court "upheld the validity of a search warrant which relied upon a controlled buy of a confidential informant."

Lieutenant Grabiec, an undercover detective who has worked for the University Police Department for 29 years, described the execution of the search warrant to the court. They said they knocked and announced themselves, waited several seconds and opened the door with a key. Grabiec explained that obtaining a key is standard procedure.

"It's normal procedure for us," he said. "If we have a search warrant, we go in with a key to prevent destruction of the evidence.

He also used cost as a validation.

"It's a big expense to the Commonwealth to keep kicking down doors," he said.

Judge Jacques Leroy praised the attorneys on both sides for presenting skillful arguments. He explained that he will be looking carefully at the validity of the controlled buys. Attorney Schooley said his decision will probably take three or four weeks. If the judge does not suppress the evidence and the case goes to trial, Doherty and Dupuis will be due back in court April 28 at 8:30 a.m.

Reaction to drug arrest mixed; peers offer thoughts on incident

By Anastasia Kudrez
Collegian Staff

Student reaction was mixed when Ryan T. Doherty was arrested on Dec. 19, 1995 for possessing 4,100 doses of Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD).

Doherty lived in room 13A Patterson Residence Hall at the University of Massachusetts. At 9:45 p.m., six undercover officers arrived with a search warrant, resulting in confiscation of the drugs and three arrests.

Draylin Beaudrault, a resident assistant (RA) in the basement of Patterson was "shocked to see the cops in there." He said he arrived shortly after the police entered Doherty's room, but he did not know what was going on.

"The police weren't talking to anyone," he said. "From what I saw, they were just trying to get their job done."

Beaudrault said most residents were shocked and upset, and did not know what to do because Doherty was their friend. He said that some people on the hall knew that Doherty was dealing drugs.

Turn to REACTION, page 2

Student b-ball fans angry at unfair game ticket policy

By Justin C. Smith
& Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team loss to George Washington on Feb. 24 at the William D. Mullins Center left students stunned and disheartened. However, students who found numerous non–students sitting in general admission seats, were angered by who they saw in their seating section.

"Say, [for example] I have tickets for arguably the worst seats in the house," said Thor Bjorn, assistant athletic director in charge of tickets. "I know that [seats in the middle rows] are general admission. I get there an hour–and– a–half before hand, I'm going to sit [at center court], We're trying to get away from general admission being a free–for–all, you ought to have a student ticket to sit there.

"As far as making sure the students have the best seats in the house, it's something we're in the process of getting better at. We are trying to check their tickets. This is a new procedure so it's difficult, but the Mullins Center crew has done a great job."

"If they bought reserve tickets, then they should sit there," said Ian Mead, a junior chemical engineering major. "If they are going to sit in the student section, they should at least stand up."

Student tickets for all home games are distributed the Thursday morning prior to game day. On Feb. 22, tickets for the games against George Washington and St. Joseph's were handed out at 7 a.m. By 9:30 a.m. the 3,000 non– Minutemaniac student tickets for the George Washington game were handed out. Bjorn said an hour–and–a–half later at 11 a.m., the St. Joseph's tickets ran out.

"It is out of the ordinary the extreme difference in time," he said. "I know there was a lot of excitement for the [GW] game, it was a noon game and no one has class on a Saturday. [GW] is the only team to beat us in the Mullins Center.

"When we've had duel pick–ups, two, three, four at a time, it always varies. It's varied as much as 45 minutes to an hour. It's not that different than a lot of times."

The general admission tickets passed out to students all have "Student" stamped on them. Approximately 2,500 of the tickets are pre-stamped before they are distributed to the population. The remainder are stamped as needed in case all 3,500 are not picked up by students with activity cards, so they can be sold to the general public.

An informal poll taken on game–day found only five of the 200 students sampled turned down a ticket to Wednesday night's home finale. Bjorn estimated there were 200 Minutemaniacs who did not pick up their St. Joseph's tickets during their designated pickup.

"Because of what's happened this year," Bjorn said, "we're going to try and look at things much better and make sure that we have the numbers. The student pick–up is always subject to question because certain people aren't getting what they want.

"I think we are accountable to students in that we try and give them the best seats in the house. I am accountable to the students, which is my job to them just as it is to be

Turn to TICKETS, page 2

Israel declares war on Hamas after latest bombing

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel declared all-out war Sunday on the militant Islamic group Hamas after a suicide bomber blew apart a second bus in Jerusalem in just one week.

The blast, which scattered body parts and pieces of twisted metal yards from the explosion site, killed 19 people, including the bomber, and threw the future of Mideast peacemaking into question.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres demanded that Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat do more to combat terrorism. He said if Arafat did not comply, negotiations with the Palestinians on a final peace agreement would not start in May as scheduled.

"There are no negotiations with the Palestinians," a grim Peres told a news conference. "There are only our demands to the Palestinians."

Israel is "engaged in total war against Hamas and other terrorist organizations," said Peres, a dove who will be hard-pressed to prevail over a right-wing rival in May 29 elections.

Arafat condemned the bombing as a "serious and dangerous terrorist act" and outlawed all armed Palestinian groups. The Hamas offshoot that claimed responsibility announced a three-month moratorium on attacks so long as Israel does not crack down on Hamas.

The blast tore through a No. 18 city bus as it drove through Jerusalem's shopping district at 6:25 a.m., almost exactly a week after another No. 18 bus exploded in the city, killing the bomber and 26 others. Hamas claimed that attack and a bombing in Ashkelon the same day that killed two people, including the bomber. The force of Sunday's explosion hurled bodies onto the street and left the bus a blackened skeleton. Ariel Schussheim, a paramedic who was one of the first at the scene, said the bus driver was trapped in his seat and screaming for help.

"Bodies were strewn all over the place," he told the Yediot Ahronot newspaper. "We had to push through the corpses to treat the wounded."

The body of one young man dangled from a blown-out bus window. A stream of blood that ran under the bus was quickly washed away by pouring rain.

Most of the victims were not Israelis. The dead included five migrant workers from Romania, a Romanian tourist, an Ethiopian tourist and two Palestinians, as well as the bomber. Ten people were wounded.

Hundreds of angry Israelis gathered at the scene. Some lit memorial candles and recited prayers. Others sobbed and shouted in fury.

"Enough! Enough!" one woman screamed at anyone who would listen.

About a dozen religious Jews swayed back and forth in prayer. Others tied black cloths to traffic lights.

Five College panel debates Gulf War five years later

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

In the five years since U.S.-lead coalition forces defeated the Iraqi army in Operation Desert Storm, questions continue to arise as to whether military force was necessary and how the conflict impacted global order.

In a panel discussion, entitled "Desert Storm Plus 5: Was It Necessary?", James DerDerian of the University of Massachusetts, Eqbal Ahmad of Hampshire College, Sohail Hashmi of Mount Holyoke College and Michael Klare of the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) analyzed these questions on Thursday, the exact five year anniversary of President George Bush's announcement that a armistice had been reached.

DerDerian, a professor of political science, said that the manner in which the conflict was covered by the mainstream American press establishes a dangerous precedent for the future of war–time coverage.

In a two–minute self–produced video presentation, DerDerian demonstrated that the Western media misrepresented the realities of war in their portrayal of the coalition offensive.

"The military and the public had the inability to distinguish between war and gaming in the age of video," DerDerian said.

The video displayed repeated images of aerial view bombings and advanced, coalition weaponry such as the U.S. stealth fighter.

The media and their American viewing audiences were "satisfied by the sight of the bomb that always finds it target," said DerDerian, because of its arcade–like qualities.

The overwhelming advantage in military capabilities encouraged the armed forces, the media and the American public to resolve the issue of the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait with force.

"Diplomacy was not given a fair chance," said DerDerian. "[Americans] were enchanted by the magic of the war machine."

The reality of over 100,000 Iraqi dead was forgotten amongst the immense exhibitions of power and military might, said DerDerian.

Ahmad, a professor of social science, said that, ultimately, the Gulf War did little to advance Bush's notion of a "a new world order" in which aggression would not be tolerated.

"Within months of the Gulf War, we were presented the spectacle of Bosnia," said Ahmad, referring to the outbreak of civil war in the former–Yugoslavia.

In numerous resolutions, the United Nations condemned the war, labelling it genocide and calling for the cessation of all hostile actions; moves similar to their initial reaction to Iraq's move on Kuwait.

However, said Ahmad, instead of organizing operation "mountain storm" to protect Bosnian–Muslims who were severely routed in the first years of fighting, the U.N. imposed a arms embargo on them.

"Desert Storm provided no model what so ever," Ahmad said.

Therefore, the accomplishments of the operation, once very clear after the decisive coalition victory, are questionable, said Ahmad, as it failed to set a example for the international community to prevent armed conflict.

The Gulf War, in addition, did lit-

Turn to PAWSS, page 2

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Mar. 4

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with a showing of Theo Angelopoulous' Ulysses' Gaze tonight at 7 p.m. at Pleasant St. Theatre in Northampton. Admission price is $5.75.

Community Service — S.H.A.R.E — Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts — will hold a general meeting at 6 p.m. in 504 Goodell. All are invited to explore volunteer and community activities.

Religious — The Hillel Purim Party with live music by Klezamir will take place at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St., at 7 p.m. The party is free, costumes encouraged.

Religious — Chabad House at Amherst will be having a Megillah reading and costume party at 6:30 p.m. at the Chabad House.

Vigil — A Remembrance Vigil for those who were killed in the bombing on March 3 in Jerusalem will be held at 1 p.m. on the front steps of the Student Union. For more information, contact Kim Richman at 549-6786 or Elana Silverman at 546-3476.

Meeting — UMass Update will hold a news meeting at 8 p.m. in UVC-TV 19's studio for those interested in reporting, writing and technical crew. Any questions, call UVC-TV 19 News Department at 545-1336.

Meeting — UVC-TV 19 is having its first general meeting for the semester at 7 p.m. in our studio at 216 Student Union Building. Remember, it is mandatory for all station members to attend at least two of these meetings per semester. This meeting is open for new members as well. For more information, call 545-1336.

Meeting — The UMass Japanese Anime and Magna Society is holding its weekly meeting in the Campus Center. A brief business meeting will begin at 6 p.m. with various Japanese animation films shown from 7 p.m. – 1 a.m. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact 546- 3065 or online: http://edlab-www.cs.umass.edu/~frado/umjams.html

Tuesday, Mar. 5

Meeting — There will be a Third Generation Group meeting and dinner for members of Holocaust families at 6 p.m. in the Valentine Hall dining room at Amherst College. For more information, call Lila Corwin at 542-8018.

Special Event — The Interfaith Pilgrimage for Peace and Life will present a slide show featuring international pictures and speaker Joe Roche at the main lecture hall in Franklin Patterson Hall at Hampshire College. For more information, contact Eleanore at 582-4720.

Book Reading — There will be a reading from the book The One Handed Pianist and Other Stories, authored by Amherst College Romance Languages Professor Ilan Stavans at 7:30 p.m. at the Globe Bookstore, Pleasant Street, Northampton. A combination of fantasy and autobiography, the book explores Jewish life in a Hispanic world. For more information, call the Globe Bookstore at 584-0374.

Religious — There will be a morning Purim service and Megillah reading at 7 a.m. at the Chabad House at Amherst. A final Megillah reading will take place at 4:30 p.m., followed by a Purim Feast and birthday party for the Rabbi at 5:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Mar. 6

Religious — Israeli dancing will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St.

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with Marian Marzynski's Shtetl — a portrayal of a small community in the midst of an indifferent or hostile majority, where difference breeds suspicion and conflict between Jews and Catholics. The film will be screened at 7 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, Room 231.

Meeting — The UMass HANDS sign language club will meet at 7 p.m. at Herter Hall, Room 217. For more information, stop by the HANDS office, Student Union Room 306 or call Shana at 253-0136 or the HANDS office at 545-1925.

Notices

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbalah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Correction

On Friday's Black Affairs page, Randolph Bromery was mistaken for Frank Wright in a photo cutline. The Collegian regrets the error.

Credit card thefts increasing at UMass

By Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has seen an increase in the reporting of stolen credit cards for the spring semester. Thefts have taken place "across the board," including at the Textbook Annex, Boyden Gymnasium and Campus Center. Police also have noticed an increase in credit cards stolen from mailboxes in the residence halls, according to Phil Cavanaugh, associate director of the University Police Department.

"We need to convince students that credit cards are as good as cash," said Cavanaugh. "You have to contact the agency to cancel the cards when you know that they are stolen."

Many times, a student will realize their card is stolen after a bill statement is mailed to them. The card has already been used at local businesses for a two to three day period and then discarded, Cavanaugh said.

"Hours after the cards are stolen," said Cavanaugh, "they are used for fraudulent purposes. Significant purchases — $800 at two different stores — are made in a short time."

Lisa Hargis, a sophomore undeclared student had her credit cards stolen during the intersession. Her credit card agency sent a replacement card to her school address after she reported her original card missing.

"When I returned to school," Hargis said, "I got a bank slip saying that I should have gotten it, but I didn't. Someone must have stolen from my mailbox."

Credit card theft causes many inconveniences to individuals, Cavanaugh said.

"I found out that someone ran up $950 in Georgia," said Hargis. "I had to talk to a fraud investigator and was on the phone with the bank a couple of times a week trying to fix the problem."

Letters from her sister and father never made it to her John Adams Residence Hall mailbox, said Hargis. She heard other people missing mail, but did not know what was wrong.

"You have to trust people handling the mail," she said. They have to be professional about it. I have no choice but to trust them."

Student employees are responsible for putting the mail in the residential mailboxes, according to Ted Mone, operations manager of housing services for Orchard Hill/Central. Adjacent to most cluster offices is a locked room for the mail to be sorted, Mone said.

"We are moving away from mailboxes with glass," said Mone. "The current situation is not acceptable."

Housing services have replaced mailboxes in Sylvan in the last five years, said Mone. He wants to update the boxes in Orchard Hill and Southwest.

"Credit card theft doesn't have as much as an emphasis," said Cavanaugh. "People aren't held accountable.

"A lot of time, I see people throwing their receipts to the ground after using a [money access machine]. The receipts have numbers on them to access cards."

A major credit card theft case is currently set for trial and is waiting for a trial date, according to Cavanaugh.

■ reaction

continued from page 1

but not to what extent.

Jonathan O'Brien, a RA on the first floor, saw the police in the basement lounge that night.

"I was walking by, going to my room, when I recognized a UMass police officer," he said.

O'Brien said many students use illegal drugs in the residence halls, but RAs cannot do anything unless students bring them into the hallway.

Alison Feruollo, a friend of Doherty, said she heard the drug bust from her adjoining room.

"You could hear them tearing the room apart," she said. "You could hear them saying, where's this from? Where's this from? Where's this from?"

Feruollo described Doherty as popular, friendly and ambitious.

"He wants to own a hotel in Boston, to intern at the University of Las Vegas and to run a restaurant in Florida," she said.

Doherty is not enrolled at UMass at this time. Attorney Michele L. Leaf of the Student Legal Services Office said "students sometimes withdraw to avoid having a discipline case adjudicated." If Doherty decides to return, the University may have the option to conduct a disciplinary hearing on the grounds that he violated the Students Rights and Responsibilities code.

The Northampton District Court heard the defendant's Motion to Suppress on Thursday. Judge Jacques Leroy will decide within the next few weeks if the LSD is admissible evidence in a trial.

Despite the legal obstacles barring his re-enrollment, Doherty seemed confident. "I'll see you in September," he said as he left the courtroom.

■ tickets

continued from page 1

accountable to anyone else. I think we do it as well as anyone else, but that doesn't mean we can't get better."

For less popular games like LaSalle, in which 1,100 student tickets were not picked up, students are able and have bought some of the extra tickets. Some then went to Hartford ticket agencies, such as "Ticket World," to sell at higher prices.

Ticket World representatives said season ticket holders sold them tickets for individual games, but could not comment on which games they dealt with general admission tickets.

Changes in the pick-up policy may come with talk of a magnetic strip to scan tickets and eliminate hole punching of activity cards.

COLLEGIAN
EVERYTHING YOU NEED AND MORE FOR YOUR DAILY NEWS.
545-3500

■ PAWSS

continued from page 1

tle to advance the prospects for peace in the Middle East, according to Ahmad.

By 1986, the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and Israel had already established secret contacts. The Gulf War succeeded in nothing but isolating PLO leader Yassar Arafat, forcing him into a agreement which could potentially "bring more war."

Hashmi, a professor of international relations who was in the Persian Gulf during the war, spoke on the Muslim world's perception of the conflict.

"They did not receive the war's end with jubilation," Hashmi said.

The war was viewed as "another disaster for the Arabs," said Hashmi, alluding to a number of defeats to Arab forces in attempts to occupy Israel.

In addition, the war failed to bridge gaps between the western world and the Middle East which have dramatically strained their relations since the end of the Cold War, said Hashmi.

Americans still fail to understand Arab opposition to U.S. foreign policy in the region, Hashmi said.

Klare, who moderated the event, agreed with his colleagues that "the war accomplished very little."

While Iraq's access to weapons of mass destruction were seriously reduced, it remains difficult to justify the costs, Klare said.

According to Klare, the war caused a total of $650 billion in damage to the Arab world and cost Iraq approximately 50,000 lives, significantly less than DerDerians figures.

Klare was critical of Bush, who was too eager to go to war and ignored last minutes efforts by the Soviet Union and France to mediate a sustainable peace agreement, he said.

go for GREAT

We didn't get where we are today by waiting for great things to happen. We've made them happen. With alternative approaches. A high energy, across the board commitment to total quality. Innovation. And great people dedicated to changing today's working world, for the better.

That formula has made Interim Services, Inc. the fastest growing company in one of America's top three growth industries.

But when it comes to careers, why should you Go for Great with Interim? Creativity. Diversity. Stability. Potential. Reward. A balance of individual thinking and team spirit. The same reasons we've attracted a talented, motivated workforce: fast-track players who've helped us redefine roles and rules as we create solutions to tomorrow's staffing issues, today.

And every day, as we put quality— and quality people— to work within our own corporate and franchise structure, throughout every Interim division, we "Go for Great." Maybe you should come along.

Interim offers exceptional career options in Sales, Operations, and Branch Management while providing personnel for the Legal, Financial, Medical and Light Industrial fields.

Interim SERVICES INC.

Please consult the Career Placement Office for more information by March 6, 1996.

One of the ways Interim Services Inc. has enrolled is by supporting Ey[illegible] to nurture diversity and value every facet of its living environment.

Special 5-College Hillel Purim Celebration

Megillah Reading
and Masquerade

with PRIZES . . . DANCING . . . FUN . . . FOOD . . . Music

WITH LIVE MUSIC BY KLEZAMIR

Monday, March 4, 7pm
Hillel House • 388 N. Pleasant St.
Free

■ march

continued from page 1

the steps and windows of their houses. When the mass of marchers reached the Pike house, a list of demands were read by the leaders and members of the crowd.

The demands were directed towards university administration, local legislators, as well as the national chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha.

The demands included the formation of a task force in the Office of Greek Affairs, local legislation creating an ordinance which requires campuses to include statistics of fraternity crimes in their publications, a revocation of Pike's recognition as a chapter, mandatory rape awareness education and university accountability for students in fraternities.

There was no direct response to the protesters demands from Pike house, which appeared deserted. The President of Pike, Taylor Mascovitz, released a statement on Thursday in response to the announcement of the march saying, "we support and participate in various efforts on this campus to educate all members about human relation issues, including violence against women."

Jason Rose, president of the University of Massachusetts Interfraternity Council, also released a statement prior to the march saying, "the Executive Board of the University of Massachusetts Interfraternity Council will not tolerate or condone any form of sexually abusive behavior on the part of its members, whether physical, mental or emotional. This is to include any actions which are demeaning to women including but not limited to date rape, gang rape or verbal harassment."

The march resumed at the Haigis Mall where several speakers voiced their opinions and experiences concerning violence against women. Many of the women were outraged and said that it was time for men to take responsibility for their actions. Several men also spoke on the importance of male involvement and support for women's issues.

One of the first speakers to address the crowd was Karin Dahlstrom. Dahlstrom told the crowd that she wanted to dispel the many rumors that have been circulating campus. She said she had just been in contact with the Amherst Police Department, and according to her findings, two rapes have been reported but neither of the victims have yet pressed charges.

Group accountability was discussed by several of the students, but did not want it to be associated with blame. "If you are in Greek life we are not blaming you, but we want you to be responsible," said one unidentified speaker. She reiterated the connection between fraternities and sexual violence and said fraternity rapes cannot be considered isolated incidents because of the group nature of fraternity organizations.

When sophomore Garret LoPorto, a Theta Chi brother, was asked why there were not more fraternity brothers attending the march, he stated it as a "miscommunication." LoPorto said that the fraternity brothers are "outraged" and are "doing everything they can to turn things around."

During the hour long speak out session, where any participant could address the crowd, many women gave emotional testaments of strength and survival after being raped. The crowd was enthusiastic and attentive, despite the bitterly cold weather.

Near the end of the gathering, a woman from the crowd climbed up onto the table and grabbed the microphone. She identified herself as one of the women who was assaulted the night of the alleged rapes at Pike, though she herself was not raped. Angry and confident, she told the supportive rallyers she was not going to let them get away with it. She read a poem addressed to her assailant, identified as Andrew.

A former UMass student who "was raped on the campus of life" agreed that women should not have to put up with being scared anymore. Women should be able to walk down a dark street or go out alone without being afraid. Other speakers noted that women should not have to feel threatened when they socialize either.

A large show of support was given to Ben Zeman, who is involved with the National Organization for Men Against Sexism.

"Rape is a men's issue because men rape," Zeman yelled. He said that when women talk about harassment and assault men get defensive and "try to shift blame away from ourselves." One way to end male violence, according to Zeman was for "men to take the initiative," and a "great way to disprove stereotype of men would be for all fraternity brothers to come march today."

When the speakers resumed the crowd was full of electricity, excitement and tears. Afterwards a group of about 13 men gathered to discuss plans start meeting and discussing the issues of the demonstration. Under the direction of Ben Zeman they plan to meet this Friday in the Cape Cod Lounge at 5 p.m.

Sokol was extremely pleased with the turnout, noting again, that this would not be the last protest if similar incidents of sexual assault were to occur.

The march was peaceful and absent of any kind of confrontation. The diverse crowd was mostly young people, including a visible representation of men.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Karin Dahlstrom, a STPEC major, read her poetry to the crowd that assembled after the march on Friday.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Students march past the Phi Mu Delta fraternity during the protest on Friday.

Ginsberg to read tonight at FAC

By Marni E. Heffner
Collegian Staff

Allen Ginsberg, well-renowned poet and author of the Beat Generation, is speaking this evening at the Fine Arts Center at 7:30 p.m.

Ginsberg, whose talk is entitled, "I'm going to try speaking some reckless words, and I want you to try to listen recklessly," is brought to the University of Massachusetts by the Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP).

Ginsberg is widely recognized for his position in the Beat Generation of the late '50s and early '60s in which he was seen as the "out homosexual" amongst a slew of writers in the underground culture. As part of this culture, Ginsberg took part in Timothy Leary's experimentation with psychedelic drugs and promoted the legalization of marijuana.

One of the main focuses of Ginsberg's work is the disillusionment he feels with America, and of the role capitalism plays in American life.

Most famous for "Howl," an iliad-length poem dissecting the destruction of the American dream, Ginsberg has also written several other books including, Kaddish and Other Poems, Empty Mirror, Reality Sandwiches, Airplane Dreams and Planet News.

Ginsberg has also been portrayed in several of Beat writer Jack Kerouac's books including On the Road as William S. Burroughs' Naked Lunch.

Ginsberg is also known for his crotchety and curmudgeonous nature, often snubbing critics and readers alike.

In Kaddish and Other Poems, Ginsberg discusses overlapping of religions including Buddhism, Hi Krishna and Judaism, the religion he was raised in.

The presentation is free to UMass undergraduates a a valid student ID, $3 for graduate students, faculty staff and $6 for the general public.

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
PRESENTS IN COLLABORATION WITH:
BLACK STUDENT UNION, HILLEL, OFFICE OF JEWISH AFFAIRS
MORRIS S. DEES JR.
WHO WILL LECTURE ON WHITE SUPREMACIST HATE GROUPS IN THE UNITED STATES

TUESDAY,
MARCH 5, 1996
7:00PM
FINE ARTS CENTER
UMASS AMHERST
TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE AT THE FINE ARTS CENTER.
FREE ADMISSION AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

This program has been made possible by the Financial Support of the following: Chancellor's Office, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Graduate Student Senate, Grook Affairs, Housing Services/Residential Life, Human Relations, Student Government Association, Women of Color Program.

Experience You Need

Looking for a job on campus that will help prepare you for a career when you graduate? Apply for the position of:

Advertising Representative

Seeking responsible, organized, creative individual that is outgoing and comfortable doing telephone and outside sales. The position includes working with existing accounts and generating new sales within your territory. Reliable car a plus.

To apply, stop by our office
DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center Basement, Amherst, MA 01003 413-545-3500

Amherst Cinema

Lowest Popcorn, Soda and Candy Prices in the Valley!! Get a Small Popcorn, Small Soda and Small Candy Bar - All three for just $2.00!!
Free refills on all large and extra large sodas with UMass I.D. !!

Ticket Price for Students with ID always just $4.00 . . .

Located in Downtown Amherst - Across from the Jones Library

Call 253-5426 for Current Movie Listings & Times.

Now Playing . . .
Leaving Las Vegas
Show Times: Friday (3/1) & Saturday (3/2) 7pm & 9pm
Sunday (3/3) thru Thursday (3/7) 7:30pm

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Lisa M. Olivieri Goy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradysz News Editor Maureen Magerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reily Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Housing woes

Students of UMass — it is time to wake up. There are several issues of importance that are surrounding the Housing Services department that you should be aware of. I have been employed by the Housing Assignment Department for three years and have seen enough to make any fee paying student of this university ill.

The most crucial issue that needs to be dealt with is the search for a Housing Director. There are currently five candidates interviewing with various campus groups. This search is a fraud — it is an attempt by the administration to push in their pick Michael Gilbert, the acting Housing Director.

How is this so, you may ask? Well, out of a nationwide search, the University of Massachusetts received approximately 30 applications. After determining the necessary qualifications for the position, the number of qualified applicants to the position fell to about 12. Is the Housing Services situation so horrible that no one wants to apply? That may be the case, or is the word out that Gilbert is a given for the job? Please decide that question for yourself.

UMass has a history of housing problems, from the 1986 World Series race riots to the 1993 Washington Residence Hall incidents. Add to that the sub-par service and the "parental attitude" of Housing Services personnel and you begin to realize that we need a strong leader as Housing Services director. Instead the search committee had a total of 12 applicants to choose from, not much of a selection is it?

Another reason this search is a fraud is the lack of student representation on the search committee. I asked Tom Johnson to be on the search committee and was basically fobbed off. Christine Lopes, president of the student government association, appointed herself to the search committee, but was deliberately not informed about the schedule of search meetings. The search committee meetings were scheduled at 8 a.m. If you wanted students to meaningfully participate in a search would you schedule meetings at such a time?

From what I understand, only one student consistently works on the search committee — that student happens to work for Bob Campbell, an associate director of Housing Services. The student representation can be labeled questionable at best.

Considering all the racial problems this campus has had, you might think there would be diversity among the five finalists for the Housing position. However, all the finalists happen to be white and male. That is not to say that a white male could not be sensitive enough to do the job correctly, but I think there is another reason why these candidates lack diversity. Once Gilbert is chosen, there will be little controversy since there really was no one else whom the students could choose from. None of the other candidates excite us and since there is no diversity among the candidates there is little hope for women or people of color to be represented in any case.

So, the question to ask yourselves is this. Has the chosen one, Gilbert, done anything to improve the services of housing on this campus? Well, we have a new policy for lighting candles and incense. A proposed $40 fee increase is in the works while a proposed plan to hook the residence halls to ESPN and CNN and other cable stations has been scrapped. A better and sleeker Housing manual is on the way and let's not forget the highly touted All-Campus card that we have all been waiting for with baited breath.

David Nunez

So, the question to ask yourselves is this. Has the chosen one, Gilbert, done anything to improve the services of housing on this campus? Well, we have a new policy for lighting candles and incense. A proposed $40 fee increase is in the works while a proposed plan to hook the residence halls to ESPN and CNN and other cable stations has been scrapped. A better and sleeker Housing manual is on the way and let's not forget the highly touted All-Campus card that we have all been waiting for with baited breath.

Finally, one should question Gilbert's ability to manage in this UMass atmosphere. Take a look at his senior staff. For instance, are they really the type of helpful proactive people that we want running Housing Services? Is it possible he doesn't realize that many of his staff are anti-student? Gilbert has also shown in his dealings with the Student Government Association that he himself is hard to find and even harder to deal with.

The bottom line is, as students, we pay a lot of money to attend this University and we are forced to live on-campus for our first two years. We deserve what we pay for and believe me, if this search process continues as it is, we will have Gilbert as a Housing Director and business as usual at Housing Services.

David Nunez is a UMass student.

She is me

Jamie Sinsheimer

he was a beautiful girl. Smart, funny, outgoing, talented and sociable. Those ities were turned into a bre nightmare the day she ped. The way she was raped, he and the place, are permafixtures on her mind. The ent stays fresh in her mind though it happened 14 hs ago. As she begins a new waking up from the shell she created around herself, she zes she slept hight in the ss where her was created. at girl, like sands of other en around the country, is a im of date rape. Date rape, erwise known as acquaintance e, is widespread among col- campuses — including ours. ew days ago, a friend of mine he into my room and we start- talking. She asked me if I ard about the rumors of a rape e occurred at the Pi Kappa lpha (Pike) fraternity house on ampus. I told her I wasn't aware of it and she proceeded to brief me on the rumor she heard. As I listened I couldn't believe what I was hearing. Then I started to realize — yeah, I do believe what I'm hearing. It happens all the time. Every six minutes a women is raped. But here, at my school, it was a scary thing to acknowledge.

The girl in the first paragraph is not fictional. In fact she is someone who is very close to me and is someone whom I respect and have great admiration for. She is my sister, my cousin, my daughter, my teacher, my best friend. She is anyone you want her to be. In this case she is me.

As I walk around campus everyday, I do my best to avoid eye contact with the people I pass. I fear that they will see right through me and even worse I will see right through them. Whenever a man stares at me, I wonder what he thinks, how he's feeling. Then I think about how he makes me feel. Harassed, degraded, alone — all from the look in his eyes. I know what he wants and why he stares at me. Am I naked? No, but he's thinking I am. I know of plenty of other women who feel the way I do when a stranger stares at them. Who deserves this? Who deserves to be raped?

No boys, I am not a man hater, far from it. But, I've been there, I've seen it happen. No means no. Whether you're with your girlfriend or your boyfriend. Whether you know the girl or not. Being drunk or high or intoxicated in anyway is not an invitation to have sex with a women without their permission.

I know how it feels to be hurt. I have on more than one occasion been the victim of an, "I said no, but it doesn't really matter because you're my boyfriend and you don't care," incident. I'm sure many of the women reading this have been through it as well. I used to say no to my ex- boyfriend more than once but he never listened to me, because he felt if I loved him I should sleep with him. I was weak. I always gave into him and then afterwards I would feel so used and dirty. This too is a form of rape. After we broke up, I realized how much he hurt me and how much I hurt myself from giving in to him.

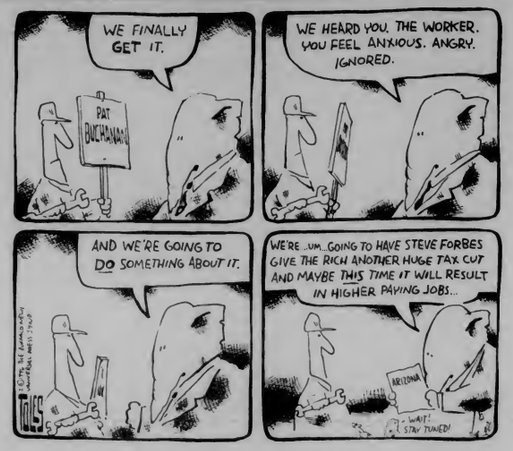
Guys — if a woman says no, she means it. Even if she is drunk. No woman wants to have sex if they say no. Sweet- talking doesn't even work anymore, most women have educated themselves about rape and about the concept of the word "no." For those of you that haven't educated yourselves, you should learn more about what rape is and how to avoid getting into a situation that could be potentially harmful. Every time I hear about a woman raped it hurts me because as a woman I know that the only way we can stop is through awareness. Girls on campus and off campus and in town and everywhere the Collegian is read — be careful. Women are being raped.

Jamie Sinsheimer is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

I'M SORRY YOUR YOUNG MAN COULDN'T JOIN US, DEAR...
WELL, THE PAPER MOVES HIM TO THE BUCHANAN CAMPAIGN.
IT'S NOT LIKE COVERING LUGAR. HE HAS TO SPEND A LOT OF TIME TRACKING DOWN REPORTS ON BUCHANAN'S CAMPAIGN STAFF...
IT SEEMS THAT AN UNCOMMONLY HIGH PERCENTAGE OF THEM SUFFER FROM SMALL WAR SKIN, BACKGROUND PROBLEMS.
MR. WOLFE? I'M RICK REDFERN.
HE/L I MEAN, HI.
Bu For

Opinion/Editorial



WE FINALLY GET IT.
PAT BUCHANAN
WE HEARD YOU. THE WORKER. YOU FEEL ANXIOUS. ANGRY. IGNORED.
AND WE'RE GOING TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT.
WE'RE ...UM... GOING TO HAVE STEVE FORBES GIVE THE RICH ANOTHER HUGE TAX CUT AND MAYBE THIS TIME IT WILL RESULT IN HIGHER PAYING JOBS...
ARIZONA
WAIT! STAY TUNED!

Attention campus ducks and squirrels

There are so many days I see those hills in the distance and something inside me yells and screams at me to run like hell. In that brief instant all logical thought flies out the window and the message travels directly from my heart to my feet. I take a half step forward and am jolted back to reality. I am carrying text books, not a tent in my backpack. Pavement assaults my boots, grass does not cushion them. I am surrounded by people rushing back and forth from class, instead of my thoughts and silence. The wind howls through brick corridors — no gentle breeze through sunlit groves.

In sunset, the deepest longing lies to walk into dusk. But my feet are concrete-bound, held here. But in these moments physical reality has no bearing. a voice is calling form far awas and deep within, whispering in my ear, tugging at my soul.

Daniel E. Levenson

I can remember a day on the rocks some time ago, when I sat staring out at the horizon. While one by one people dropped over the edge, I sat and waited for my turn. How awesome, to fall with control.

In the mindless monotony of day to day life, we often find no place for things like sunsets. If I said that didn't bother me, I would be lying. I worry about these things. We wrap ourselves in this concrete shell, we close our eyes and soon all we know is that which we have created. We become blind even to ourselves, and all that is left are shadows cast by the light with which we tried to see our world.

Instead, we waste so much time arguing, yelling, fighting, screaming out of our windows, complaining, whining, procrastinating, insulting, running and cleaning rooms. Things like laughing ,smiling, enjoying, appreciating, caring and sleeping all seem to take a back burner to the daily load of crap that we and society dump on ourselves.

This self-destructive societal behavior has become ingrained in our collective conscious. We are the Borg (you know, those Star Trek alien guys).

Well, maybe that's a little extreme. I don't think we'll be culturally consuming different species any time soon (Attention all campus ducks and squirrels — Resistance is futile, you will be assimilated!) But I do think that unity of thought, especially when these ideas are negative, is dangerous and unhealthy.

It would seem that optimism is suffering from terminal illness. Maybe it always has been. Maybe there was never a time when anybody was truly happy, but I tend to doubt that. I'd like to think that deep down, somewhere inside, everyone is really happy, but for one reason or another we don't know it. That's the real challenge, finding happiness inside yourself.

But first you have to be willing to look for it. It isn't that it is that hard to find, or requires some great mysterious knowledge. Too often people are afraid to look.

Perhaps I've strayed a little from where I started, but I do have a point, believe it or not. The idea is this — when we get caught up in negative thoughts and negative energy, it becomes a never ending cycle that is anything but constructive.

When we stop seeing the sunset, we stop seeing ourselves.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

O'Brien showed no respect to seniors

To the Editor:

"It's a tradition on Massachusetts' senior night that graduating Minutemen all start." This was the opening line of Justin Smith's article entitled "Nunez makes last home game count" that was featured in Thursday's Collegian. Joanie O'Brien, the head coach of the UMass women's basketball team, made it apparent on Tuesday night that she has a much different definition of senior night then the one Smith described of John Calipari's program. Unfortunately, her definition leaves the friends, family and fans of her four seniors with a feeling of disappointment.

As true fans, we went to the Mullins Center on Tuesday night prepared to applaud the accomplishments of the four seniors who have, in their coaches' words, "created a legacy." As true friends, we went to the game looking forward to celebrating their four years of commitment and friendship. However, we were appalled to watch as two of the seniors remained on the bench at the start of the game, and one of the two never even set foot on to her home court for the last time in her career.

Joanie O'Brien said herself that it was the four seniors who rebuilt the program and she owed the team's accomplishments to them. She said, "These four ladies came into this program when there was nothing. They're the ones that started everything for us and everybody that comes behind them will be part of their legacy."

O'Brien's words of praise seemed long-forgotten on Tuesday night when she neglected to play one senior and failed to start another. We are forced to ask, "Where are their thanks?"

Perhaps Coach O'Brien should look to her colleagues to see how their "class act" programs handle Senior Night. For instance, the UConn Women's Basketball coach, Geno Auriemma chose to start all three of his seniors at their Senior Night this past Monday. One UConn senior, Kim Better, was honored for her accomplishments and commitment to the program by starting in her first game since Dec. 1994. Another example can be seen in her own back yard. All five of John Calipari's seniors started in their final game at the home on Wednesday.

Although Nicole Carter, Melissa Gurile, Trish Hopson and Octavia Thomas were all honored through introductions and recaps of their accomplishments prior to the start of the game, the decision to leave one of the seniors out of the starting lineup and another out of the game altogether portrayed a lack of respect to all in attendance. We all know the saying, "Actions speak louder than words." Coach O'Brien, we think you've said enough. You spoke loud and clear on Tuesday night and everyone heard you. We all watched as you disrespected two members of your so-called legacy and by doing that, you disregarded everything that those two women did to get your program to where to where it now stands. Tuesday's Seniors Night spoke only for your character.

It is unfortunate that after four years of support, we will leave this University with a bitter taste in our mouths when we recall your handling of the women's basketball program.

Kacey Gillen
Laura Williams
Amherst

In defense of Greeks

To the Editor:

As a former president of the Panhellenic Council and a former president of the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, we are writing this letter with great concern in regards to the article that was published on the front page of Thursday's Collegian about the alleged "frat rape." The issue that we are concerned with is not the actual "alleged events" that occurred but rather the fact that fraternity men are being labeled with a "reputation for degrading and harassing females." It seems as if there are continuously articles being printed degrading our Greek area and how much "power" does our system really have?

Is anyone out there aware that these same fraternity men that are supposedly demeaning to women are the same men who sponsor rape awareness workshops, and bring women from the Everywoman's Center to their homes to educate their members? These men are the same people who bring men from their national headquarters down to talk to their members on such serious issues as rape. The Greek men seem to be the only men that take the time to educate themselves on these issues, yet they are the first to have a finger pointed towards them.

We've seen more positive actions come out of the Greek area than on any other area on campus, yet we are always first in line for ridicule. How many other organizations can say that they have raised over $12,000 for the Newman Center so they could keep their doors open?

A fraternity doesn't rape, an individual does, therefore no one house should be put on trial, let alone the entire Greek system. We, as a system, are against sexual assault. That goes without saying, but it seems that a few individuals who have seen Animal House one too many times don't know what being Greek is all about. Being Greek is about finding friends for life and finding a home away from home. We are a tight knit community of students who strive for excellence in leadership positions, academics and community service. We think that we can speak for most Greeks in saying that the Greek area has been nothing but a positive experience for us, giving us the opportunity to meet wonderful people and do a lot of great things. We as a Greek area will work through this. It's all of you who do not know what we are truly about who need to educate yourselves.

Michael Kritzman
Former president,
Sigma Phi Epsilon
Meredith Slovin
Former president,
Panhellenic Council

Jewish Affairs

Monday, March 4, 1995

Remembering Purim; a history of the holiday

By Anna Feder
Collegian Staff

Tonight at sundown starts Purim, a holiday that dates back thousands of years.

The story begins in approximately 300 B.C. in the Persian Empire. It had been 70 years since the destruction of the first temple and the Jews were dispersed throughout the land. The king at the time, Achashverosh just had his queen, Vashti beheaded. He was looking for a new wife.

The king ordered all eligible bachelorettes to appear before him in his palace. Reluctantly Mordechai took his niece, Esther to the palace but told her to conceal her Jewish identity. When she arrived the other women were dressing themselves in lavish costumes and make-up, but Esther refused. Her beauty was natural and apparent even without expensive clothes and jewels. The king noticed apart from the flock of shallow women, she had an inner beauty. He immediately crowned her as his new Queen.

Meanwhile Haman, the king's advisor, was angered at Mordechai for not recognizing his power by bowing to him. Mordechai refused because of the idol that Haman wore around his neck.

Haman was so angered that he decided to destroy all of the Jews. With the king's approval, he sent out a decree to all of the provinces of Persia to rise up and kill the Jews on the allotted day, hence the name Purim, because pur means lot.

When Mordechai learned of Haman's plot, he dressed himself in sackcloth and ashes and summoned his niece at the palace gates. He told her to call upon the Jews to fast and repent and urged her to go before the king and ask him to annul the decree.

Esther knew that to go before the king when not summoned held the penalty of death. After fasting and praying for three days, she had the courage to approach the king. The king's heart was softened and he was delighted at her presence. When she asked for a favor he replied "until have my kingdom is yours." She told him Haman's plot meant her own death — for she was Jewish. When Achashverosh heard that his advisor had been planning the death of his queen and her people, he was hung on the gallows that he had built to hang the Jews.

There are three mitzvot that are observed on Purim. One commandment is to hear the Megillah, the story of Purim read twice, once tonight and tomorrow during the day. Another mitzvah is to give charity to two needy individuals, and if you can't find two it is acceptable to put money in a tzedakah box. Last but not least is mishaloch manot, the giving of gift baskets. It is preferable to give two kinds of ready-to-eat foods, such as cake, cookies, fruit or candy. The baskets should be given to at least one friend tomorrow during the day.

Latke-Hamantashen debate tied

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

For the fourteenth time yesterday, the semi-annual Latke- Hamantash debate ended in a draw after an hour of impassioned speeches.

The humorous debate was put on as part of the festivities of the Jewish holiday of Purim, which celebrates the liberation of the Jews from an oppressive king.

Hamantashen are fruit-filled pastries eaten during Purim, which begins tonight at sundown. Latkes are fried potato pancakes eaten during Chanukah.

The debate was opened by Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, who joked that for the first time there was a complaint received about the debate last year. He said the four members of the "Matzoh Lovers Lobby" complained about the lack of representation for the food at the debate. Matzoh is an unleavened bread traditionally eaten during the holiday of Passover.

To solve the problem, Perlmutter used a matzoh like a coin to determine which side would begin the debate. The approximately 45 people in attendance greeted the flip with cheers, as they did throughout most of the afternoon.

The debate was started by Carlin Barton of the history department who spoke on "The Role of Potato Pancakes in the Greatness and Decline of Rome."

Interspersing food-related terms in her argument, Barton explained how Latin originally came from another language called Latkin. She explained how certain Latin words were derived from Latkin. Papa, which is father in Latin, was potata in the earlier language.

Inserting a little earthiness into the debate, Barton spoke of how the Latins used Potato-derived words to denote strength and vitality, saying well endowed women were said to have "tubers."

Lastly, after the Latin potatoes were taken in the sack of 390, she explained how Romans would comfort themselves by saying "hamantash happens."

The debate then went to Marilyn Kushik, the director of public relations for the department of music and dance, who spoke of the marketing possibilities in her speech, "A Versatile Pastry Marketing the Hamantashen in Our Diverse World."

She started by explaining a variety of different fields the triangular cookie could be marketed in, calling it "a marketer's dream."

For the fashion market, Kushik displayed hamantashen hats, pendants and earrings, saying the fruit inside could be different colors.

The colors of the cookie were a major selling point she insisted, especially compared to the drab latke. She said it could be sold at sports events, with the fruit inside matching the colors of the home team.

Kushik also suggested marketing the pastry to the Catholic Church. While the blood and body of Jesus are already represented in the wafer and wine, the cookie could represent the trinity.

The debate then reverted to the side of the latke, with Allan Feldman of the school of education and teacher education speaking on "The Use of Latkes and Hamantashen in the Construction of Student's Conceptions of Entropy and Enthalpy."

He used the latke to represent entropy and enthalpy, while showing that the hamantash couldn't be used in the same way.

Feldman said getting ready for a Chanukah party, with the heat of cooking, the pressure of knowing guests are coming, and the volume of yelling at kids to not mess up the house was a good representation of enthalpy. For entropy, he had the audience try to make both foods out of cardboard. When they were done, he asked them to return them back to the original cardboard. Most people found this easier to do with the triangular hamantash, instead of the circular pancakes, which Feldman claimed proved it made it easier to teach entropy using it.

The last debate was done by Frederick Bloom of University Health Services whose speech was titled "50 Dynamic Reasons Why the Hamantashen is Better for Your Vision." However, he sheepishly explained that the title was published before his wife edited the list, which meant he now only had 10 reasons.

Bloom paired his top 10 list with slides of various eye problems, many of which seemed to disgust the audience. He said hamantash helped protect the eyes from UV radiation and joked that it helped older people keep their long term vision more than short term, as opposed to latkes, which did the reverse. He said this was good because it lets you continue to see long-distance beauty, while close friends and spouses still looked as good as when they were young.

The last example he gave was that he had confidential information that Lenny Wirtz ate latkes. Wirtz was the referee who gave men's basketball coach John Calipari a technical in a tournament game against Kentucky several years ago.

Bloom finished off his presentation with several magic tricks.

At the end, Perlmutter scribbled on a chalk board, saying it was divine inspiration, and asking the audience if they knew what it meant. When no one responded, he told the groaning crowd that it meant the debate was "a draw."

Hillel hosts Five College function in celebration of tonight's holiday

By Anna Feder
Collegian Staff

As the world celebrates Purim tonight the Five College Hillel is going to having a celebration of their own at Hillel House at the University of Massachusetts.

The highlight of tonight's events is a live performance from the Yiddish band Klezamir. The band members, Rhoda Bernard, Jim Aramenti, Amy Rose, Neil Zagorin and Joe Blumenthal do their own take on everything from jazzy show tunes of the Yiddish theater to Hebrew love songs and lively Israeli folk dances.

The majority of the band have been residents of the Pioneer Valley. Armenti, multi-instrumentalist and songwriter for the band received a bachelor degree in music and anthropology from the UMass. The drummer, Neil Zagorin grew up in Springfield and Joe Blumenthal, the acoustic and electric bass player who has played with Klezamir since its inception, owns Downtown Sounds a musical instrument store in Northampton.

The party will also include dancing, free food and in accordance with tradition, costumes are encouraged. There will be a non-traditional Megillah reading in which the Megillah will be divided into five parts, one for each of the five colleges. Each college has prepared and will act out a skit to represent their portion of the story. Parts of the Megillah will be read in Hebrew. Noisemakers are still welcome to drown out the sound of Haman's name.

Melissa Haas a coordinator of the event hopes that there will be a bigger turn out than the year before. "From what I've heard there wasn't a lot of people. This year we wanted to make it a big event."

The festivities begin at 7 p.m. at 388 N. Pleasant St., the University of Massachusetts chapter of Hillel. The event is free.

COURTESY PHILIP MORSE

Klezamir appears at a special Hillel gathering tonight in celebration of the Purim holiday

Recent bombings are a call to action

Yesterday afternoon as I was putting together this Purim page I was informed of another bombing in Israel. Hamas bombers once again claimed the lives of 19 Israelis in Jerusalem one day before Erev Purim. My heart sunk in my chest and I thought, how can I do this? How can I inform people of tonight's festivities in light of recent events? How can we celebrate when we should be mourning?

Anna Feder

The only answer that I could find was in the meaning of Purim. For those of you who see the holiday as a time to dress in costume, feast and celebrate you're not digging deep enough. Purim is a time of miracles, when a plan to destroy the Jews was thwarted.

In the Megillah, the story of Purim G-d's name is never mentioned yet we see his hand in everything that happens. In todays world we may not see miracles as they did in the time of Moses. This doesn't mean that our faith should decrease. I believe that if we have faith in G-d that this violence will end.

The story of Purim begins with the Jews in exile in the lowest level of impurity. The first B'ais Hamikdash, holy temple had been destroyed 70 years earlier and the Jews were weak. This was a perfect time for the opposition, Haman, to strike. Just as now, when there has been peace in Israel for six months, we let our guards down, giving Hamas the opportunity to attack.

When Esther and Mordechai learned of Haman's plot to annihilate the Jews, they called upon the populace to fast, repent and to return to the Torah. Maybe what we need to do is to think about these things when fasting tomorrow. To give a little extra charity and perform every mitzvah to its fullest. I believe that everything in this world happens for a reason. Maybe the recent tragedies in Israel are a call to action.

With the threat of extermination, the Jews prayed and lifted themselves to a level at which they were worthy enough to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple. It took the threat of genocide to wake them up. In the end, not only were they saved but their oppressor was hung on the gallows he built to hang them.

The moral of this story is that the Jews are strongest when they pull together, strengthen their observance of the Torah and mitzvah and look to G-d for help. Maybe it is time for us to unite as a people and to take action by strengthening our Yiddishkeit.

Tonight when you hear the Megillah read take a moment to hear beyond the words. We read it for the same reason that we read the Torah. There is a message that is revealed to us each time we read it. The message can be applied to us right here, today.

Anna Feder is a Collegian staff member

Living in the shadow, looking for answers

Editor's Note: Jodi Seewald is a junior at Washington University, who is studying for the year at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. This was a letter sent yesterday to a number of her friends and family to express her feelings on the recent bombings in Israel.

Jodi Seewald

I just wanted to send you all a quick message to tell you that I am ok. In case you haven't heard, the past week things in Israel have been very violent. In Jerusalem we have experienced two bombs and a terrorist car crash and in Ashkelon, a city about an hour and a half away, there was another suicide bombing. The latest of the bombings was one that happened in the center of Jerusalem at about 6:30 a.m.

It is very, very scary for me to think that the place I was having dinner last night is only blocks away from this site. I don't know what to expect or what will happen here. I sincerely pray that this is the end, that the terrible string of events that have occurred is now over, but with the elections for the Prime Minister in May and the peace talks with the Palestinians continuing, I don't know if I can say that this is foreseeable.

My mom told me this morning that I should come home, that she worries about my life every day. I don't know what I'm going to do. I don't want to leave; how can I justify leaving when there are over five million Israelis who can't leave, this is their country. If I too as a few call this my homeland, then how can I simply abandon it in times of trouble. Don't worry, I am not rushing onto the next bus. I have absolutely no desire to leave my friends or campus right now.

Today I was reminded how precious and fragile life really is. There is no reason why I was not downtown, or one of my friends at the site and time of the bus bombing this morning. It is said that G-d gave 10 gifts of beauty to the world, and nine of them were given to Jerusalem. Today, in light all of all of the recent upset here, I hope that soon the gift of peace is given to this holy city. I love you all very much and value each of you. Tikvah Y'shalom, hope for peace.

Guide to holiday cooking; recipe for Hamantaschen

Hamentash are a traditional food of the holiday of Purim. They are symbolic of the three cornered hat worn by Haman. They are delicious and simple to make. Enjoy!

Ingredients:
3 cups sifted flour
3 eggs
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 cup oil
1 tsp. vanilla
1/4 cups orange juice
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. salt

Oven temperature: 400 degrees
Cooking time: 10–15 min.

Combine the flour, salt and baking powder. In another bowl, mix the eggs with oil adding sugar and vanilla gradually. Add the orange juice into the mixture. Combine mixtures and blend well. Form the dough into a ball and refrigerate for an hour. Roll out the dough into pastry thickness on well-floured board. Cut it into circles (Suggestion: use the open end of a teacup to form the circles). Add one level tablespoon of filling into the center of each circle. Fold three sides of the pastry into the center. Pinch the sides to form a triangle over the filling. Bake on a greased cookie sheet at 400 degrees for 10–15 minutes or until browned.

Prune Filling For Hamentaschen

Ingredients:
1 1/2 lbs pitted prunes
1/4 lb raisins
1/2 tsp. almond extract water
1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
chopped walnuts (optional)

Put the raisins and the prunes in a saucepan. Add enough water to cover the fruit. Bring to a boil and then turn down heat, or put on top of wood stove. Simmer several hours until the water is absorbed. Stir occasionally to prevent the bottom from burning. Remove from the heat and stir in cinnamon and almond. Then stir in small amount of nuts, if desired. Puree the nuts in a blender or food mill if a smoother texture is preferred. Makes approximately 1 quart of filling.

Any jam or preserves will do for filling the hamentaschen. Apricot, strawberry and poppy are among the most popular. Whatever filling you decide to use for your Hamentaschen, this recipe is good for baking with children and sharing with friends.

Adapted from a recipe from Hillel House.

A note to UMass Students

Hello, my name is Anna Feder; I'm the new Jewish affairs editor. I was hired for this position two weeks ago and was dismayed to find that I don't have much of a staff. That's why I'm appealing to the Jewish community. I need people to write news stories, arts and living, etc. There are so many events that I'd like to cover at Hillel, Chabad, B'nai Israel and the Jewish Community of Amherst but I need writers to cover them.

If you're interested, please call me at the Collegian at 545–1851, or come down to the Campus Center basement and speak to me in person, I'm usually around. Make your voice heard, write for Jewish Affairs.

Thanks,

Anna Feder

Anna Feder

Arts & Living

Play addresses issues of AIDS and denial

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

PTERODACTYLS
Rand Theater
Feb. 28 — May 2

Nicky Silver's play, Pterodactyls — based primarily on AIDS and denial — caused a stir at the Rand Theater last week. It was a modern, powerful performance that sought to throw back the veils of denial and ignorance — features synonymous with many people's attitude towards AIDS.

The play utilized five actors, but by the end four had been killed off — ironically, the man with AIDS outlived the others. The main protagonist was Todd Duncan (played by David Mason), a young man who returns to his family after six years, only to announce that he is HIV–positive.

The reaction from Todd's family is not untypical, they are initially revolted — especially when he admits his homosexuality, drugs and involvement with prostitutes — the main family response is then one of denial.

In this play AIDS is used as a metaphor to represent far more than just a deadly disease, it serves as an icon of denial which can be applied to other members of society who face repression and prejudice — namely ethnic minorities, homosexuals, drug abusers and the disabled. AIDS is used because it is the least understood and currently produces the most hysteria.

Todd's parents (Peggy Kennedy as Grace Duncan and Jerry Marcanio as Arthur Duncan) represent the most powerful element of denial — his mother constantly attempts to identify with him, but she herself is an alcoholic and has considerable problems of her own. His father is an infidel and harbors incestuous feelings towards his daughter, Emma (played by Amy M. Allred). Neither parent can deal with the situation, Arthur loses his job and goes insane; Grace eventually dies of alcoholism.

The fifth actor is Tommy McKonkle (played by Robert B. Ripley). He is engaged to marry Emma but he ends up falling in love with Todd — from whom he contracts the AIDS virus and rapidly dies.

The play is complex and intricate, but serves as a powerful reminder of the kind of society we live in — i.e. one of denial and repression in the face of those that are disfigured or dysfunctional.

Multicultural Film Festival livens up Valley

Harvey Keitel's Ulysses' Gaze to premiere in Northampton; Danzon to be screened

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

COURTESY CFP DISTRIBUTION

Harvey Keitel stars in Theo Angelopoulos' Ulysses' Gaze, which will be shown tonight at Pleasant St. Theatre, Northampton.

The Third Annual Multicultural Film Festival, sponsored by the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies at the University of Massachusetts and numerous other campus, Five College and local organizations, has been screening award–winning films that cross boundaries of language, nation, race, gender and culture since February, and will continue to display a rich selection of work until May.

The Festival kicked off with a documentary produced by Ada Gay Griffen & Michelle Parkinson — A Litany for Survival: The Life and Work of Audre Lorde — about the writer's contributions to women's liberation and lesbian gay rights. Second on–screen was the computer–generated animated film of a Filipino folk song/story by Bren Bataclan, entitled Bahay Kubo.

One of the festival's most anticipated films, Ulysses' Gaze, premieres tonight at the Pleasant St. Theater in Northampton. Greek–born director Theo Angelopoulous will present his challenging film regarding his interpretation of the Bosnian conflict.

Harvey Keitel stars as "A" — a Greek filmmaker working on a documentary about pioneer filmmakers, the Manakias brothers. When "A" learns that three of their "lost" films may be in the Sarajevo film archives, he journeys through the Balkans and Sarajevo in search of the movies.

Other Festival highlights this month include Marian Marzynski's Shtetl (March 6, Herter Auditorium)— a film which depicts suspicion and conflict between Jews and Catholics in regards to the legacy of the Holocaust in a small community.

Danzon, a film by Mexico's leading female director, Maria Novaro, about a switchboard operator and dance hall regular who performs a passionate and precise dance, known as danzon, will be screened on March 29, also in Herter. Tulane University professor of film, cultural and Latin American studies, Ana Lopez, will present "Of Rhythms and Borders" following the movie.

Films scheduled for April include Idrissa Ouedraogo's moving tale of honor and family ties on the African plains, Tilai (April 2 at Herter); a film about the history of warring Balkan states told through the perspective of a young Orthodox monk and a 16–year–old Albanian Muslim girl by Milcho Manchevski, Before the Rain (April 3 at Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College); and Sandra Sunrising Osawa's documentary, Pepper's Powwow, on the first jazz artist to integrate Native American dance rhythms into jazz, Jim Pepper (April 10 at Herter).

Amherst College will host "An Evening of Basque Cinema," which includes screening of Spanish cinema addressing cultural and linguistic diversity on April 17 at Stirn Auditorium. John Pakievich's humorous yet complex journey across cultures, continents and history, If Only I Were an Indian will be screened at Herter on April 24.

As the Festival draws to its conclusion in May, Gurinder Chada's I'm British But... and Kimi Takesue's Bound will both be presented at Herter on May 1. The Festival's finale will be screened in Bowker Auditorium on May 10 — Within Our Gates by Oscar Michcaux.

All events are free and open to the public, except for tomorrow night's 7 p.m. Pleasant St. Theater showing of Ulysses' Gaze, which costs $5.75. For more details on locations, screening times and additional films, check the FYI section of the Collegian, or contact the UMass Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies.

The Distinguished Visitor's Program proudly presents:

ALLEN GINSBERG

"I'm going to try speaking some reckless words, and I want you to try to listen recklessly."

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Monday, March 4, 1996, 8:00 p.m.

Free to UMass undergrads with valid I.D.
Admission is $5 for the general public
Call 545-0046 for more information

Rebel Grrrls excite Hampshire crowd

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

BIKINI KILL & TEAM DRESCH
Hampshire College
Feb. 29

AMHERST — Bikini–mania has hit town. Hordes of punk fans flocked town to see their riot grrrl hero, Kathleen Hanna, the voice of a movement. The anticipation grew higher as hundreds of fans were left standing in sub–freezing temperature waiting to get in. It was all worth it.

Cold Cold Hearts opened up with an anti–climatic short set. Featuring two–thirds of Bratmobile, Cold Cold Hearts were plagued by equipment difficulty, but had an interesting stage presence. It was a bit disappointing, though, as they couldn't capture the spirit or sound of Bratmobile.

Team Dresch appeared in the middle slot and brought the show to a higher level with their anthem–like rock tunes. Since their last show at Hampshire College over a year ago, the all–queer Team Dresch has evolved into one of the most talented and exciting live acts anywhere.

Their brief set included several songs off their fabulous debut album Personal Best as well as new tracks which will appear on their yet untitled follow–up.

In between songs the band discussed everything from how to turn a latex glove into a dental dam to their love lives. But unlike with Bikini Kill's performance, it was the music that propelled the Team Dresch set into excellence.

The quartet was air tight, the drums were precise and the guitar solos were flawless — not your average underground rock band. Songs like "Freewheel," from their debut album worked the crowd into a near–frenzy. Although the crowd was energized by the exciting set, few were prepared for what was to follow.

In black capri leggings with blue underwear on the outside and a tight gray shirt, Hanna, lead singer of Bikini Kill, took the stage dressed more for a high school gym class than for a punk rock show.

For the next hour the packed audience was enthralled by Bikini Kill's awesome amount of power and intensity. Led by Hanna, the band ran through an intense set that rivalled any punk show in the recent past.

Musically the band's sound was straight ahead punk, filled with energy and excitement, though lacking in originality. Unlike most bands, the music took back burner and Hanna took center stage. All eyes were set on Hanna as she preached about all–girl mosh pits and did on–stage gymnastics. Unfortunately her band mates mellowed in the shadows performing their task without all the hoopla.

After countless audience requests for their hit song, "Rebel Girl," Bikini Kill finally broke down to play it, bringing the show to a mind blowing climax. Watching hundreds of girls sing along with Hanna provided an unforgettable scene that hardly occurs in a rock 'n' roll setting. The energy released during this three–minute song by both the crowd and band was unbelievable.

There are not many shows where you leave with a feeling of empowerment and enlightenment but a Bikini Kill concert isn't your average show — instead, it's almost a religious experience. Nearly everyone in attendance was converted.

STOP SLEEPING WITH YOUR PROFESSORS.

Is it the sound of that whispery voice, or those big, intellectual words? If your professors are putting you to sleep, Revive with Vivarin®. Don't let fatigue get the best of you. Vivarin's® the safe way to stay mentally alert, with the same caffeine as about two cups of coffee.

So stay sharp in class. Don't sleep your way to the bottom.

Revive with VIVARIN

© 1995 SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare
Each tablet contains 200 mg of caffeine: equal to about two cups of coffee. Use only as directed.

Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m. $5.99
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Lunch Buffet Mon.-Sat. 11-3 $3.99

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 BELCHERTOWN RD. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, as a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating optometrists are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4. We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you, free postage for normal delivery.
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

University Health Services • 549-2671 X244

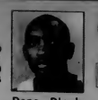
Massachusetts 62, Louisville 59

At Louisville, Ky.

Massachusetts (29-1)
Dingle 4-11 3-4 11, Bright 6-10 0-0 12, Camby 8-18 7-7 23, Padilla 1-1 0-0 2, Travieso 2-7 2-2 8, Clarke 0-0 0-0 0, Norville 1-2 0-0 2, Weeks 2-3 0-0 4. Totals 24-52 12-13 62.

Louisville (18-10)
Sims 3-9 0-0 6, Dantzler 3-7 0-0 7, Smith 1-2 1-2 3, Rogers 5-8 1-3 13, Wheat 2-10 5-5 10, Walker 2-10 2-3 6, Kiser 5-11 0-0 14, Flynn 0-2 0-0 0. Totals 21-59 9-13 59.

Halftime — Massachusetts 34, Louisville 27. 3-Point goals — Massachusetts 2-4 (Travieso 2-4), Louisville 8-16 (Kiser 4-7, Rogers 2-2, Dantzler 1-2, Wheat 1-3, Sims 0-1, Flynn 0-1). Fouled out — Walker. Rebounds — Massachusetts 41 (Dingle 15), Louisville 28 (Walker 8). Assists — Massachusetts 16 (Padilla 7), Louisville 13 (Wheat 7). Total fouls — Massachusetts 12, Louisville 11. Technicals — Massachusetts Coach Calipari.
Attendance — 20,076.



Player of the Game

Dana Dingle - 11 points, 15 rebounds, one assist.

Highlights...

Dingle grabbed a game high 15 rebounds, including four off the offensive glass, the co-captain's defense kept hot scorer Alvin Sims to just six points...Marcus Camby was a major force in the paint with his game high 23 points and five blocks including, rejecting two Samaki Walker shots, one on his first attempt from the field and the last with Louisville making a last ditch effort to grab the lead...UMass was nearly perfect from the free-throw line hitting 12-for-13, including Camby's two from the charity stripe which gave the Minutemen a three-point lead with 6.9 seconds left to play.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

The Minutemen built the lead back to eight points but Brian Kiser hit two 3-pointers to cap an 11-4 Louisville run that cut the lead to 50-49 with 8:35 left.

Louisville stayed within four points the rest of the game by forcing nine second-half turnovers and hitting five of eight from 3-point range in the second half.

Kiser scored 14 points and Tick Rogers added 13 for Louisville, which lost its third game in a row by three points or less.

"We were in the game at the end with a chance to win," said Rogers. "That's all you can ask for. Everybody in the world knows we can play with them. We just made too many mistakes."

Rogers' basket following the opening tip gave the Cardinals their only lead of the game. UMass led by as many as 13 points in the first half.

The game was played in front of a Freedom Hall record crowd of 20,076.

■ UMass

continued from page 10

team was to back off of Mitchell, the Minutewoman point guard, and force her to shoot while constantly double-teaming in the middle.

It was effective as Mitchell missed several perimeter shots in key junctures. Kuzmeski (0–for–6 behind the three–point line) couldn't take advantage from the outside either.

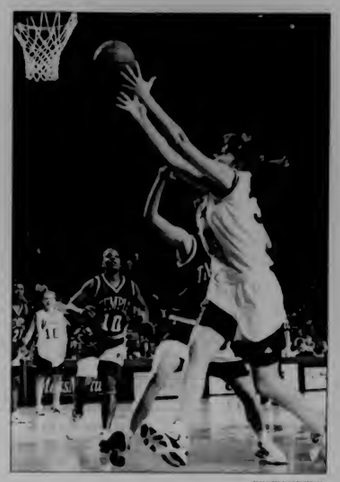
Massachusetts 64, Virginia Tech 42

Saturday, UMass advanced to the semifinals by virtue of their 64–42 drubbing of Virginia Tech, the host team for this year's tournament. The Minutewomen were not pleasant guests as they jumped out to a big early lead of 19–6.

UMass continued to pour it on, running off 11 of the next 14 points, boosting the lead to 21 at 30–9. The outcome of the game was in hand by halftime as O'Brien and her troops went to the locker room with a 25–point lead (40–15).

Gurile led the way for the Minutewomen with 15 points, Thomas helped out with 12 while Carroll threw down 11. UMass shot a red hot 53 percent from the field in winning their single season program best 20th win, while holding the Lady Hokies to a dismal 24 percent shooting.

All Atlantic 10 Honors: UMass forward Octavia Thomas was named to the All A–10 first team. Teammates Melissa Gurile (second team) and Crystal Carroll (third team) also were honored by the conference.



FANEY BERRY/COLLEGIAN

Melissa Gurile and the UMass women's hoop team tried but couldn't stretch their season to the Atlantic 10 finals as they lost last night to the No. 1 seed George Washington, 59–51

■ hockey

continued from page 10

at 2–2 9:37 into the third when sophomore defenseman Bobby Sheehan tallied the first goal of his career on a slap shot from the left face off circle after a long rebound of a Jordan Shields shot.

UMass played tough for the remainder of regulation. The Minutemen killed off a two–man Northeastern advantage highlighted by a sliding block of a booming Dan McGillis slap shot by senior Mike Evans.

After a scoreless overtime, the teams advanced to a shootout, which Northeastern won on goals by Shields and Collett. The Huskies are the only Hockey East team never to lose a shootout, going a perfect 10-0 all time.

"This was a nice way to finish the regular season," Kilduff said. "It would have been better to get a win, but we worked hard and got some momentum for the playoffs."

"It was another playoff, late season type of hockey game," coach Joe Mallen said. "There was a lot of good defense, and a terrific goaltending job by Dave Kilduff. We had a lot of guys play well on a regular shift and this helped us tune up for the playoffs. We needed some momentum, and didn't want to carry a loss [into the playoffs]. We'll take a tie."

The Eagles entered Friday's game steaming from a 10-0 loss last Saturday night at New Hampshire, and was prepared to annihilate what ever team they faced. The UNH massacre was only their second loss since Jan. 13.

Unfortunately the schedule sent them to Amherst.

BC scored the first six goals and cruised to a 7–3 win, but those fans that stayed to the end were rewarded by a strong and encouraging finish by the Minutemen.

Dean Campanale, the often–over–looked sophomore out of Thayer Academy, tallied a pair of goals late in the second period, and Jacques added a goal with nine seconds to play on an unassisted breakaway.

Campanale scored on a perfect 30 foot wrist shot past the glove of goalie Greg Taylor, and an up ice rush where he slipped one between Taylor's pads.

The Minutemen will travel to BU in the opening round of the Hockey East playoffs. The teams will face off in a best–of–three series Friday, Saturday and possibly Sunday nights at BU's Walter Brown Arena.

Sports Notice

Team entries for Spring Softball, Co-rec Softball, and volleyball special are due March 11. Softball and Co-rec soccer captains meetings will be held March 25-26 (6 p.m.); volleyball captains meeting will be held March 27 (7 p.m.).

Paid referees needed for Intramural softball, Co-rec soccer and volleyball. For more information stop by the Intramural office in 215 Boyden or call 545-0022.

GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY.
WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY!

Collegian Graphics

Where it pays to play!

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
Multinational & Entrepreneurial Experience Since 1962

AUP prepares its students to be a part of an increasingly global society.

Bachelor degree programs in ten disciplines.
Fully accredited by Middle States
Traditional Junior-Year Abroad curriculum.
Special Visiting Programs, which include study at the Sorbonne and other French institutions.
Full range of Summer Programs.
Contact our U.S. Office: B.P. 130, E. 11th St., Suite 434, New York, NY 10003-6500
Tel. (212) 677-4870 / Fax (212) 475-5205
Web Address: http://www.aup.fr

AUP, The American university in Europe.

Judie's

Munchie Madness

Nachos Especial
Gorgonzola Buffalo
Shrimp Tempura
Basket of Sweet Potato Fries and more

$7.95 $3.63
$6.95 $3.48
$6.25 $3.13
$4.99 $2.50

51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

!! $99.00!!

FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA

253-3539

AEROBICS

Israelbreak is once again providing 300* free round-trip plane tickets for students who participate in one of over 40 accredited Israel programs.

* Eligible candidates are Jewish undergraduate college students: 1. Who have never before been to Israel * 2. Go to college in one of New York City's five boroughs, Long Island or Westchester. * Simply stated. You pick the program you like, and we will pay for your ticket to go to Israel. * Call Michael Schram at the University Israel Programs Center at Hillel of New York for an application and a listing of accredited programs, 212/696-0248 or send us an e-mail at University.Israel.Programs@mavin.noli.com

Go to Israel. The ticket's on us.

*Availability is limited. Limited NEED BASED scholarships also available. Israelbreak is under the auspices of Hillel of New York and is supported by the Israel Experience Committee of the Jewish Community Commission of UJA Federation of New York and UJA

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™

50% Off!!

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Classes Start
Tuesday, March 5th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn/Amherst

Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover

Shop Around & Compare!

1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Act Now! Space is Limited!!

UMass Jewish Speakers Bureau

The Office of Jewish Affairs invites students who are interested in Jewish issues and public speaking to join the UMass Jewish Speakers Bureau.

Members will participate as panelists in discussions and workshops on campus and throughout the community. The topics discussed will cover Jewish issues of concern to both students and the community.

No experience is necessary.

If interested please call Jenna at the Jewish Speakers Bureau at 545-9476.

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!

Marshall STEINBECK

COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY

53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

- Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
- Users of Sikkens paint products
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.

256-8157 256-1385

Shop Reg # RS1212

You know Bibbig, copying those answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, chest sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the trials school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! Glad those were unwilling studies! I did love them all!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
Your school newspaper free every weekday

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CAMPUS COMICS & CARDS
New mail order system! Order any comics & cards @ reduced prices. 50% off Magic singles. $3 for posters. Star Wars, Blue $35. Starters $7. Boosters $7.50. Pick up forms @ the CC Concourse every Friday or call Chris & Geoff @ 6-2767.

ATTENTION ALL MAJORS! Climb aboard HRTA Career Day '96. Thursday March 7 @ 6:30-8:30 in C.C.A. Career opportunities, internships, and co-ops available, with over 65 of the hospitality industry's leading companies! Non-majors, undergrads and grads welcome!

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
For a good time — Surf's on the web @ http://www.umass.edu/dotcom/cotton.html

LEARN TO BARTEND
Bartend with University Bartending 50% Guaranteed. All you need to know to Bartend. Walking Distance to campus 1-800-822-6649

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available immediately PUFFTON VILLAGE single bedroom apartment. Heated, no lease for now, low $432 per month, available with $565 per month. Call 549-0840.

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Tercel 119000 miles manual 5-speed, reliable $1150 or B.O.

EMPLOYMENT

Photographer Wanted Need photographer for wedding June 29, 1996 portfolio required 2 yrs experience 802-295-7911

Piano Player Wanted for Wednesday evenings. Bring tape to Angela in Rm 820 Campus Center.

Promising Brother Sister camps in Massachusetts counselor positions for talented and energetic students as program specialists in all team sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball, Tennis openings. Also Golf, Archery, Riflery. Pioneering, over night camping, ropes and rock climbing, weights, fitness and cycling, other openings include performing arts, fine arts, figure skating, newspaper, photography, yearbook, radio station, cooking, sewing and rocketry, all water-front pool activities, (swimming, skiing, sailing, wind surfing, canoeing, kayak-ing) Top salaries, room board and travel. June 17th August 17th. Inquire, Mah-Kee-Nac (Boys) 1-800-753-9118 Camp Gorin (Girls) 1-800-392-3352

National Parks Hiring - Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits & bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N9014

Cruise Ships Hiring! Earn up to $2000+/month. world travel, seasonal & full-time positions. No exp. necessary. For info Call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50013

Teach English in Asia Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, China, Thailand, Indonesia & S. Korea. Many employers provide room & board & other benefits. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For more information call (206) 971-3570 Ext. J50013

EMPLOYMENT

$35,000/YR - Income Potential - Reading Books. Toll Free 1-800-898-9778 Ext. R-1732 for details

FOR SALE

35 gallon fish tank call 549-4529.

Pewterbook 165 10MB RAM 160MB hard drive system 7.1 internal modem call Fred at 532-1156.

SailorBoard No equipment $120 EMail EWOLFRAM@KIRA.ECS.UMASS.EDU or call 253-0754.

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans. script into text. 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot). Bubble jet printer. $2,000.549-4736.

Planning a trip? $400 Airline voucher for sale. American Airlines. $375 or b/o. Kristi 549-1414.

FOUND

Eyeglasses found Tues. 2/27 in Cape Cod Lounge. Doug 253-1879. Leave message.

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist. Vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1018 or Jason 367-0198.

ROOM FOR RENT

Montague House 3 rooms for rent. $375 each 367-8608, John Lakeside.

Room for rent — One bedroom available for 3—1.96. Ideal for one or two persons. On two bus routes, also a close walk to campus. Call Colleen or Angela @ 549-5265.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906.

RESUME WRITING. Professional, expansive, on-campus, personalized to your needs. Josh - 546-4982.

TRAVEL

Spring Break Condo!
Marco Island Florida
Pool parties, boats.
$69 pp per week
717-472-1414

Spring Break '96
Panama City Beach from $129
Cancun Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1-800-234-7007

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Bahamas $799! UMass ski club 545-3437

Spring Break Complete Packages - Bahamas from $299. Cancun + Jamaica from $399! Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and much more! Organize a small group and earn a FREE trip plus cash. Call 1-800-595-9991 NOW!

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters door to door affordable advanced reservation 253-3350.

WANTED

CASHHH For your magic cards. 585-9382 After 5pm.

Wanted Models M-F for spring semester '96. Figure class, TR 2-4:30 for appointment call Ted Formas (M1R) 10-11) Holyoke CC Art Dept. 538-7000 ext. 2492.

WANTED

Undergraduate Woman 18-25 needed for research study on body image. call 585-0809.

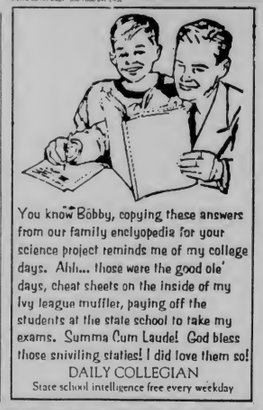
Buying STAR WARS, Transformers, GI Joe and most other toys before 1988. Call 413-552-0413.

The I'M section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept I'Ms over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."



You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivilling staties! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

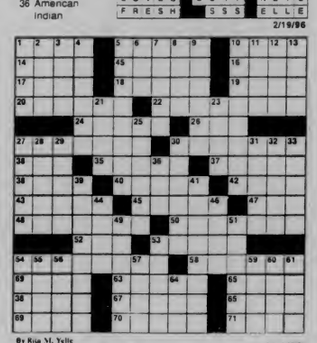
ACROSS
1 Mop
5 Valuable possession
10 Merry play
14 Dynamic beginning
15 River mouth deposit
16 Lamb, to some
17 — pickings
18 Catches
19 Come together
20 Unchanging
22 Court periods
24 Mother —
26 One of a make-merry trio
27 Less dull
30 Slide like a sidewinder
34 Equality
35 Porcine feature
37 Permission
38 Rosary prayers
40 Sum
42 Sketch
43 Begin again
45 Kind of code
47 Netherlands city
48 Nail polishes
50 Beat badly
52 Silkworm
53 Glass printing
54 Applesauce!
58 Make possible
62 Help along
63 Urchin
65 Stock manipulation
66 Wander
67 Best of class
68 Marcel Marceau
69 Forest forager
70 Appraiser
71 Tommy's gun

DOWN
1 Back talk
2 Bug bite
3 Handel highlight
4 Bronx — Yankee
5 Believer
6 Witness
7 Drastic cut
8 To be: Fr.
9 Drapery decoration
10 Sent payment
11 Vegetable oil product
12 Demeanor
13 Sen. Moynihan et al.
21 Folds over
23 Go by boat
25 Military units
27 Surplus
28 Safe place
29 Sports site
30 Posture
31 Seraglio
32 Shun
33 Marry again
36 American Indian
39 School period
41 Robber
44 Part of "to be"
46 Without fat
49 Stay awhile
51 Certain clocks
53 Resign
54 Ginseng herb
55 Musical instrument
56 Granular snow
57 Casa component
59 Incentive
60 Citrus fruit
61 Successor to Churchill
64 Resident Suffix

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	P	E	R		G	A	P		G	L	A	S	S
M	E	R	E		O	B	E	A		A	E	I	O	U
I	R	I	S		S	U	R	E		L	A	N	D	I	I
		D	U	C	H	E	S	S	O	F	P	A	D	U	A
			I	L	I	E			O	T	A
H	A	P	P	Y		P	R	I	N	C	E	S	S	K	A
A	T	A	P	S			D	E	H	A	V	E	N	S
S	T	Y	E		W	I	L	D	E		B	O	N	U	S
S	A	N	D	S	H	O	E			E	M	O	T	E
O	R	E		W	I	N	D	E	R	M	E	R	E	S
			S	E	T		T	O	U	R
A	N	I	D	E	A	L		H	U	S	B	A	N	D
A	M	A	T	I		N	A	E	S		O	B	O	E
L	O	V	E	S		S	O	R	T		N	E	I	L
F	R	E	S	H		S	S	S			E	L	L	E

2/19/96



By Rita M. Yelle
©1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/19/96

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuring victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the initiative in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound; take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I was stocking today and looked closely at Chef Boyardee.
I wondered if he was real.
Chef Boy-ar-dee Beef stew
If he is, he must be retired by now.

Jim's Journal By Jim

Mr. Peterson knows I've changed jobs.
Something at the grocery store must smell good to her.
I don't know what she smells, but it's on my pants cuffs.
I tried to smell what she does, but I couldn't detect anything.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SECONDS BEFORE HOWARD CAN REACH SPIDER-MAN...
I DID IT! I INJECTED HIM WITH THE ANTIDOTE!
WE FOUND HIM!
HE'S ATTACKING! SHOOT!
NO! HOLD YOUR FIRE! LOOK!
STAN LEE JOHN ROMITA

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I THINK YOU'LL AGREE THAT THIS MEETING WENT SMOOTHLY WITH ME AS FACILITATOR.
THE BREAKTHROUGH WAS WHEN I REALIZED I WAS THE ONLY ONE HERE WITH ANYTHING VALUABLE TO SAY.
LET'S HAVE A MOMENT OF SILENCE TO HONOR ME FOR MY BRILLIANT WORK DESPITE BEING SURROUNDED BY DOLTS.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

ADD AN EXECUTIVE SUMMARY TO THE APPROVAL PAGE.
KEEP IT SIMPLE. OUR EXECUTIVES DON'T UNDERSTAND AS MUCH ABOUT TECHNOLOGY AS I DO.
HOW COULD THEY KNOW LESS THAN YOU DO? YOU HAVEN'T FIGURED OUT HOW TO MAKE YOUR CAR GO UPHILL.
WRONG. I GOT AAA ROAD SERVICE.

Kippii By Barry Deutsch

ROBIN! ROBIN! MY ROOMMATE'S DEAD!
WHAT?
MY ROOMMATE'S DEAD! CASS JUST TOLD ME!
JO, SLOW DOWN. EXACTLY WHAT DID CASS SAY?
THAT THIS TOWN'S CORNER HAS BEEN KIDNAPPED BY ELVES AND A TRUCKLOAD OF FISH FELL ON-
I'M NOT SURE IF I'LL DIE OF A MEDIAN ASSIGNMENT HOUR OR IF I'LL GO KILL CASS FIRST.
LIVED TO HELP YOU INDUCE IF YOU KNEW THAT CASS IS YOUR ROOMMATE?

Kippii By Barry Deutsch

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I had a friend. Her name was Placebo Domingo. She was very calm on the weekends.

She was disappointed.

When she was 9 or 10 yrs. old she would boast to me that by the time she was a teenager she'd be able to heal the sick by touching them on the shoulder.....

make the blind see with a kiss on the forehead.....

Well, the last time I saw her at the high school, she told me she was flunking algebra.

If she passes algebra she says she'll start working on healing the sick.

Maybe she'll be the first high school-drop- out- saint....

maybe not the first....

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor.....T. Michael "Burke" Burke
Photo Technician.....Elizabeth Brown
Production Supervisor.....Kathryn Gracia
Production.....Matthew Audette
Ray Keenan

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Grilled Ham & Cheese
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Hearty Latin Stew

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Mandarin Tofu
Pastabilities
Meatball Grinder

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet
Turkey Tetrazzini
Philly Cheese Steak Sandwich

DINNER
Madarin Chicken
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Italian Tofu Balls
Qtr. Lb. Cheese Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Turkey Tetrazzini
Stone Willy's Pizza

DINNER
Madarin Chicken
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Stone Willy's Pizza
Steamat Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Ham & Cheese
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Hearty Latin Stew
Grilled Cheese on Branola

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Mandarin Tofu
Pastabilities
Meatball Grinder

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Quote of the Day

"In San Francisco, 'Smoke Shop' is a code word for BONGS 'R US."

–overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

"There's no need for concern, folks! This is only a precaution!"

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

SportsWeekend

Inside tomorrow's issue:

- No. 9 ranked men's gymnastic's team won its eighth straight New England Championship on Saturday.
- No. 16 ranked women's gymnastic's team vaulted over New Hampshire 191.050-190.250.
- UMass men's and women's track competed in Championship meets this weekend.
- UMass men's and women's swimming and diving teams participated in the ECAC's this weekend.

Read tomorrow's sports page for the inside scoop.

Minutemen shoot down Cardinals in season finale

■ UMass wins 28th vs. No. 21 Louisville

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Once again Massachusetts won with defense.

Marcus Camby made two free throws with 6.9 seconds left and Carmelo Travieso blocked a 3-pointer with two seconds remaining Saturday as No. 2 Massachusetts held on for a 62-59 win over No. 21 Louisville.

Donta Bright also made a key defensive play, knocking the ball off DeJuan Wheat and out of bounds with 8.7 seconds left when Louisville trailed by just one.

"We take pride in our defense," said Camby, who blocked five shots. "Down the stretch, guys made key plays. Donta Bright jumped out on Wheat and I think he scared him a little and lost the handle. Then Carmelo came down and had the big block on Wheat." It was a totally team effort on defense."

The Cardinals (19-10), who trailed by seven points at the half, moved to within 58-57 with 3:46 left when Wheat made three free throws after being fouled by Bright.

Bright then rebounded a miss and scored with 3:14 left to put the Minutemen up 60-57.

Wheat's driving lay-up with 1:59 remaining made it 60-59, but the Cardinals failed to take advantage of two turnovers and a missed shot by Bright on the Minutemen's last three possessions. Samaki Walker rebounded Bright's miss with 35 seconds left to set up Louisville's final play. But Bright knocked the ball off Wheat and out of bounds with 8.7 seconds left, giving the ball to UMass.

After Camby's foul shots, Wheat came off a Tick Rogers screen and tried a 3-pointer but Travieso tipped the ball to Dana Dingle as time expired.

"It was good defense on their part," said Louisville coach Denny Crum. "We had a chance coming down the stretch, but they made a couple of good plays."

Dana Dingle had 11 points and 15 rebounds and Bright had 11 points for the Minutemen (28-1).

"We have a thing at UMass which is finding a way to win, refuse to lose," said UMass coach John Calipari. "We played that game to win. We didn't play it not to lose. Somebody has to come up with big plays. A lot of times it's Marcus with a block or Edgar [Padilla] with a steal.

"Today, it was Donta. It's been a different guy all year."

Louisville trailed 34-27 at the half, but turned five UMass turnovers into seven points in the first five minutes of the second half to pull within 41-38

Turn to HOOPS page 7

EMILY PEEV / COLLEGIAN

UMass center Marcus Camby was at it again on Saturday with 23 points, eight rebounds and five blocks as the No. 2 Minutemen knocked of their eighth ranked opponent this year, beating No. 21 Louisville 62-59.

■ Camby, UM defense rise up to the occasion

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

With its thrilling 62-59 win over the 21st ranked Louisville Cardinals, the Massachusetts men's basketball team proved what coach John Calipari said all along.

They're all right.

For the first time in what seemed to be quite a while, the Minutemen dug in on defense and executed their half court offense as UMass fans have become accustomed to. Though Louisville never gave up and did force a tie at one point late in the game, it was the defense that came up big late to secure the Minutemen's 28th victory of the season.

Donta Bright forced Cardinal point guard DeJuan Wheat into only his second turnover of the game with less than 10 seconds left in the contest. Wheat wanted to drive down the right sideline, but lost his dribble in front of his own bench, forcing Louisville to foul in hopes of a miracle.

The only time the Minutemen trailed was on the game's first possession.

Marcus Camby tipped the opening jump ball to Louisville's Tick Rogers. UMass' starting corps dropped back to cover the wrong basket and the Louisville guard had the easy dunk. It would be the only uncontested hoop that a Cardinal would see all game.

Just three minutes into the contest the defensive tone was set by Camby. Samaki Walker, who missed 10 games due to alleged NCAA rules violations in his father's purchase of an automobile, had just entered the lineup and on Louisville's first offensive possession went right at Camby. This game was Walker's second since being reinserted into the Cardinal lineup, his first was a 24 point effort last Wednesday against Marquette.

The UMass center, a National Player of the Year Candidate, sent Walker's first attempted shot back from where it came and started the Minutemen's transition offense. Louisville's 6-foot-9-inch sophomore superstar would play 27 minutes Saturday, hitting only 2-of-10 shots form the field, finishing with only six points.

With a chance to cut his teams deficit to a single point, Walker once again challenged Camby. As happened on his first attempt, Walker was denied by the 6-foot-11-inch Camby on his final attempt and preserve the UMass lead.

Though Camby's numbers over all were still impressive, game high 23 points, eight rebounds and five blocks to go along with an assist and a steal, he often looked tired, leaving spectators to ponder what he could have accomplished with fresh legs.

The defensive prowess of Camby was also exhibited by his point guard. Edgar Padilla broke the single season steal record for a Minutemen with his second steal of the game, which led to a two handed monster jam. The previous mark was held by Mike Williams at 75 during the 1994-95 season. Padilla now has 79 on the year. In the St. Joseph's game, Padilla became the all time steal leader with 135 in his first three years at UMass.

UMass' dream ends at hands of No. 1 GW

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

BLACKSBURG, Va. — As Massachusetts closed to within two points of George Washington with little over five minutes to go in the second half, the dream was still alive.

But No. 1 seeded GW spurted out to a quick 6-0 run, led by four points from All Atlantic 10 first teamer Tajawa Abraham, and the A-10 dreams of the Minutewomen were squelched. The Colonial Women advanced to the final 59-51, last night at Cassell Coliseum on the campus of Virginia Tech.

That dream was a first ever bid for UMass to the Atlantic 10 tournament final and consequently a bid to the NCAA tournament field. UMass (20-9) now stands as a "bubble team" and must wait until selection Sunday to determine its fate.

"I couldn't have asked for a better effort, my team gave all it had," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We played great defense, just couldn't shoot the ball."

For the game, UMass shot 35 percent, and although better than the Colonials who shot 31 percent from the floor, it still wasn't enough. Seniors Melissa Gurile (2-for-9), Octavia Thomas (3-for-9) and junior Beth Kuzmeski (1-7) had particularly tough nights shooting.

For the Colonials (24-6), Abraham led all scorers with 29 points and put Gurile in foul trouble early. The senior from Ohio picked up her fourth foul with nearly 13 minutes to play and fouled out at the 2:09 mark.

"When the games come down to two great low post players," Abraham said. "It's heart that matters."

Crystal Carroll led UMass with 15 points and 11 rebounds, Thomas chipped in with 14 with Sabriya Mitchell and Gurile getting 10 each.

"Abrahan is a great post player," Carroll said. "But sometimes a [foul] call at one end, isn't a call at the other."

Now UMass plays a waiting game, hoping a school record 20 wins is good enough for the NCAA birth. If not, the Minutewomen may be looking at a return trip to the National Women's Invitational Tournament (NWIT), which was last season fate.

"I feel with our schedule with wins over Stanford and tough losses against Louisiana Tech and Florida gives us the edge to getting the bid," O'Brien said.

Balance that with bad losses to St. Bonaventure, St. Joseph's and LaSalle. LaSalle may be the toughest loss of all, as the Explorers may be the third team to receive a bid after GW and Rhode Island.

"I believe UMass is a tournament team," Colonial coach Joe McKeown said. "They played us tough tonight and should go."

McKeown's strategy for his

Turn to UMASS page 7

Hockey fit to be tied, gets HE 8th seed

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

As many as seven seniors on the Massachusetts hockey team played their final game at the William D. Mullins Center Saturday night, and judging by how the game went it appeared that few seniors wanted their UMass playing days to end promptly.

Boston College	7
Massachusetts	3

For the fourth time in their last five home games, and the fifth time in their last six overall, UMass tied a Hockey East foe on Saturday night, as they played to a 2-2 draw with Northeastern (10-19-5, 6-13-5 in Hockey East). The Huskies took the shootout, and the extra point in the standings, 2-0.

Ironically, the Minutemen (10-17-6, 4-14-6) stand tied with Michigan Tech for the second most ties in the nation, and entered into a four way tie for the Hockey East record for most ties in a season.

The sole interruption in the string of ties was a 7-3 loss at the hands of Boston College (16-15-3, 12-10-2) Friday night at the Mullins Center. The loss was the first non-tie result for UMass since a 4-1 loss at then No. 2 Boston University on Feb. 9.

Although Saturday was Senior Night at Mullins, a junior, Warren Norris, would give UMass the early lead, with a pair of first period goals. The game marked Norris' return to the line-up after a suspension for violating team rules.

The first goal came 7:46 into the game as Norris stuffed a centering pass from behind the net by Sal Mangamaro past Northeastern goal tender Todd Reynolds.

Norris' second goal came on the power play at 17:18 of the first period as the result of some quick, one-touch passing spreading out the defense. Tom Perry sent a pass across to Brad Norton, who fed it down the wind to Mangamaro, who hit an open Norris across the ice. Reynolds, who was caught behind in trying to follow the play, left the entire right hand side of the net wide open for a Norris slap shot.

"That was a pro-style pass and a pro style goal," coach Joe Mallen said. "[Norris] is starting to get back on his game like he was before he sat out and I'm looking forward to him playing a little better as we move into the playoffs."

The game remained 2-0 after one period of play in part to strong and inspired goaltending by senior Dave Kilduff, and Husky shooters hitting a trio of posts.

Massachusetts	2
Northeastern	2
NU wins shootout 2-0

"I had the angle on them," Kilduff said. "That's all they had to shoot at."

Northeastern was not the sole team victimized by the pipes though, as senior Jon Jacques beat Reynolds through the five-hole on a second period break away, but watched the puck slowly trickle to, and stop beside, the left post.

Northeastern cut the UMass lead in half at 12:02 as Mike Collett fed Dmitri Vasiliev for a power play goal.

The Huskies would knot the game

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

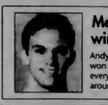
ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Senior Dave Kilduff started in goal for the Minutemen Saturday and made 30 saves, enabling UMass to tie Northeastern 2-2. NU won the shootout 2-0.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 88 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, March 5, 1996



Men's gym wins New Englands
Andy Fulmer and the men's gym team won New Englands taking first place in every area of competition, including all around (See Sports page 10).

The new and improved TOC
With a new bar and grill menu, the Top of the Campus is attracting even more patrons. See story page 3

It's time to start the music
The Muppets go sailing in their latest rendition of Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island (See Arts & Living, page 5.)

Extended Forecast
Believe it or not there will be more snow today. And the weather isn't getting any warmer either. Remember the warm weather from last week? Well forget about it. It's cold.

	today	day	day
HIGH:	35	30	30
LOW:	10	10	10

Bus stop is bombed in Israel, threats of a second

■ Hamas claims bombing; 18 reported dead, 107 hurt

By Dan Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — In a scene growing horribly familiar, an accelerating terror campaign turned a day of light-hearted Jewish celebration into a nightmare of blood and smoke when a suicide bomber struck Monday in the heart of Tel Aviv, killing at least 14 people.

The victims included children in costume and makeup for the holiday of Purim. At least 130 people were wounded in the attack, which left a jumble of shattered bodies and wrecked cars and paralyzed the peace effort.

A mounting toll of dead and wounded, the repeated scenes of carnage and the heart-wrenching despair of victims' families, fueled a deep upwelling of anger among Israelis. It was the fourth suicide bomb attack in nine days - the deadliest stretch of terror in Israel's history.

The death toll might have been much higher if the bomber, who was on foot, had managed to enter a crowded shopping center, authorities said. Israel radio said at least 14 people were killed, including the bomber.

The Israeli government decided in an emergency session to form a special anti-terrorism task force with sweeping powers. Prime Minister Shimon Peres suggested that Israel now reserved the right to strike anywhere, including PLO-ruled areas.

The task force would be "able to act in every place to strike against and punish" the suicide bombers, Peres said. "We will reach every corner where this terror is rooted."

Strikes in PLO-ruled areas would violate the Israel-PLO accords and badly discredit Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat among his people.

A furious, wildly militant mood swept over Tel Aviv, a city known for its generally moderate populace that supports peacemaking with Palestinians and Arabs.

While government ministers met at the heavily-guarded Defense Ministry complex a mile from the bombing site, crowds outside lit bonfires and shouted "We want war!" and "We want revenge!" Others shouted "Death to Arabs!" and one man held a sign calling for a "final solution" against them - paraphrasing the Nazi term for the World War II slaughter of millions of Jews. In a call to Israel Radio, the Muslim militant group Hamas claimed responsibility for Monday's bombing. Hamas has also claimed the previous three bombings, which killed 44 victims and three suicide bombers.

Faced with the possible collapse of his three-year peace gamble, Arafat said he was ready to cooperate fully with Israel in going after Palestinian militants. But he added that he hoped Israel would not act hastily and break off peace talks.

"I hope that we will not reward these terrorists," Arafat told reporters in Gaza City.

Later Monday, Palestinian security forces announced the arrest of the man they called the "mastermind" of three of the last four suicide bombings in Israel: Mohammed Abu Wardeh, 28, of the West Bank town of Ramallah.

Brig. Zakariya Baloushi, deputy chief of Palestinian intelligence, said Abu Wardeh apparently received instructions from abroad, and Israel TV said his handlers were based in Damascus. It was not clear whether Abu Wardeh would be handed over to Israel or face prosecution by Palestinian authorities.

Peres also said Israel planned to make more arrests overnight and would delay Israel's planned pullout from Hebron until the PLO removes calls for Israel's destruction from its charter. Late Monday, the army also ordered a closure on all Palestinian towns and villages in the West Bank and forbade Israelis from employing Palestinians.

Monday's blast went off just after 4 p.m. outside the Dizengoff Center, the largest shopping center in the Mediterranean metropolis that is the financial and cultural center of Israel.

Before setting off the bomb, the bomber had tried to enter the shopping center but appeared to draw the suspicions of policemen stationed at the entrance, according to witnesses.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Students, faculty and members of the community gathered to mourn the people who died in the bombings in Israel.

■ Students unite at vigil after tragedy

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

A remembrance candlelight vigil was held yesterday on the Student Union steps in memory of the 19 people killed in Israel Sunday by a Muslim suicide bomber.

"The vigil unites the campus in peace, regardless of whether you are Jewish or gentile," sophomore Jamie Resnick said. "There is no need for all of this violence."

"Personally I feel that it is important for all communities to come together in times of trouble," junior Phillip Copeland said. "Universally the world is in a time of pain, regardless of race or creed we should mourn each other's losses."

Over 40 students attended the vigil, holding candles and joining in songs of mourning.

Beth Seewald, the outreach coordinator at Hillel House, addressed the crowd.

"The bombing took place in Tel Aviv, on King George Street," she said. "We must pray that these moments end and keep in mind that these events cannot go unchecked."

After another song, Hillel House Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, spoke to the students.

"I know that all of our hearts are sick with worry. The bombing raises grief and anger, and leaves us wondering what could ever happen to bring peace," he said. "No matter what, this senseless destruction of human life must be stopped."

Perlmutter then ended the vigil with a moment of silence. All of the candles were placed in the center of the circle of students and left burning.

Before the crowd dispersed, Hillel resident Adam Buxbaum addressed the group of students.

"By participating in this vigil, we are showing the world that there are people who do care," he said.

Students stayed for several minutes after the conclusion of the vigil, hugging and consoling each other.

"It is important that we come together to share our grief, pain and shock. We need to let each other know that we are not alone," Perlmutter said.

"It is so unfortunate that at the beginning of the Purim that over 50 people have been killed in Israel," said Mark Assa, an Israeli citizen and vice president of Hillel House. "They will be remembered dearly.

"Terrorism will not be tolerated, lives should not have to be lost in the search for peace. Groups like Hamas need to be isolated and dealt with."

Buxbaum commented that the bombing angers, saddens and frustrates him.

"It is ridiculous that it takes 55 bodies for the government to do something," he said. "I have lived in Israel. I have been on the number five bus route. It is time for the government to take action in order to dissolve the issue."

"The terrorism cannot continued to go unchecked. The destruction must be stopped," Perlmutter added. "We must challenge the death and destruction."

While the vigil was held in response to the bombing on Sunday, it also addressed the bombing which occurred this morning in Israel.

Ginsberg showcased by DVP

Famous Beat poet reads his "Howl" last night at the FAC

By Marni E. Heffner
Collegian Staff

Allen Ginsberg is a man obsessed.

Obsessed by words, obsessed by lyrical sounds, obsessed with the American experience and obsessed by poetry. Ginsberg proved his obsession to a sold-out crowd at the Fine Arts Center last night.

Ginsberg, a famous poet from the alternative Beat Generation of the '50s and '60s, was brought to the University of Massachusetts by the Distinguished Visitors Program (DVP).

Before Ginsberg came on stage to read from his work, Lisa Levy, president of DVP, addressed the audience about the role of DVP as a registered student organization. In addition to introducing Ginsberg, Levy spoke with the crowd about the fact DVP has received "zero funding" for next year. Levy also said, "...without funding for next year, DVP will not be able to bring speakers ..."

Ginsberg walked onto the FAC's ocean of a stage, to a small island of repose. He sat down in front of a single microphone, a music stand, a black stool with a styrofoam cup of water and a small table covered in a tangerine orange tablecloth. Resting on the table was a lap-sized, fire-engine red accordion.

Walking onto the stage, Ginsberg exuded a quiet presence. Wearing a plain gray suit, blue shirt and blue and red striped tie, he bowed to the audience and sat down.

Ginsberg said, "I want to start the evening off with the right inspiration," and so he began by singing Blake's "The Tiger," a poem, routinely taught in elementary and high schools. Patiently, He explained how Blake had intended for the poem to be sung, it was written in trochaic measure — "The measure of the heartbeat," said Ginsberg.

Pumping his feet up and down, singing slightly off-key, Ginsberg plunged full-force into "The Tiger," singing with the passion of a poet obsessed with the words he is uttering.

Choosing to start with his latest work and move backwards, Ginsberg then launched into his first poem of the evening, "After the party," a discussion of the gluttony and waste of academe.

Perhaps as a way of connecting to his audience, Ginsberg chose to read poems that were oriented towards a younger crowd. Works such as "Like other guys," a piece using a Dadaist or the "cut-up" method, in which the subject changes from one line to the next, or samples from his "American Sentences," single sentence, 17 syllable poems, portrayed this effort to connect with the crowd.

Ginsberg, one of the few well-known, openly gay, American poets, also used his homosexuality as a subject matter in "Do you know what I'm saying?," a series of questions and responses with homoerotic overtones.

Rejecting what is expected by the status quo was a focus of the evening. Ginsberg read "Ballad of the skeletons," another call and response poem about the many different voices within the various political realms of the United States. Using his accordion again,

Turn to GINSBERG page 3

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Acclaimed poet Allen Ginsberg gave a moving performance at the Fine Arts Center last night.

Contract dispute leads to cop protest

By Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

The International Brotherhood of Police Officers Union, Unit 432-A and B, representing University of Massachusetts Police, is holding an informational picket tomorrow morning.

The union is protesting delayed contract disputes with the UMass administration. For approximately one-and-a-half hours, forty-five to 50 patrolmen and sergeants will picket Whitmore Administration Building starting at 9 a.m.

"We are simply putting out information that we are dissatisfied with the progress of our negotiating," said Patrolman Patrick Archbald, treasurer of the executive board for the union.

Safety for the University during the picketing will be enforced by on-duty police officers, Archbald said.

"During the picket, there will still be a full compliment of officers on the road," Archbald said. "This isn't an attempt to circumvent our jobs or to undermine public safety."

Administration is offering the union a two-and-a-half percent bonus upon receiving funding, a 2.5 percent retro-active increase from July 1, 1995 and a 3 percent base increase on July 1, 1996, said Paul Meade, employee/labor relation administrator.

The union is asking for a five percent wage increase each year in their three year proposal, retroactive July 1, said Patrolman Mike Billiel, president of the executive board. It also wants a three percent merit increase based on a pass or fail evaluation, Billiel said.

"They are not in a position to offer us anything right now because contract negotiations are happening on campus with other unions," Archbald said. "They can't offer us anything monetarily.

"It's been their stance, that they have to wait for other contracts to be signed before we can make progress in regard to negotiations."

"We can only offer the economic package offered previously," Meade said. "If you offer a higher amount for one union, then all the other unions can negotiate for more money."

The administration is delaying talks with the police union, Billiel claimed.

"Meade said we would meet in January. We never met and the earliest date he could set was on March 8. Meade said the meeting would be unproductive," Billiel said. "He thinks because the other unions haven't ratified their contracts then he wouldn't know the kind of pay contract to offer us."

"We don't expect a lot of progress, but we expect some," Archbald said. "We just want some progress."

The union is also asking for an upgrade from a grade 14 to a grade 15, comparative to the Environmental Health and Safety rating, Billiel said.

"It will give an increase of about $30 more a week," Billiel said.

If the contract impasse continues, officers will only work their normal 40 hour shifts, sacrificing community outreach programs, Billiel said.

"We will have to stop doing a lot of dorm talks, mounting units with horses for the kids and other community activities until something starts to happen," he said.

"We're not angry," Archbald said. "We are just frustrated and tired."

Noted civil rights activist to speak at UMass

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

White supremacy and hate groups in the United States today are two of the controversial topics on which Morris S. Dees Jr. will lecture at 7 p.m. tonight in the Fine Arts Center.

The focus of the lecture will be to address the seriousness of white supremist groups around the country that continue to spread messages of hate and seperatism.

Dees is a prominant contributer to the Civil Rights movement and an acomplished activist in the struggle for equality and justice in the contemporary American judicial system.

He is the co-founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center, formed in 1971. The Center is a non-profit organization that specializes in assisting people who have lawsuits invloving racially motivated crimes and civil rights violations.

Dees grabbed national attention in the early 80s after he won a $7 million dollar lawsuit against the Klu Klux Klan of Mobile, Alabama on behalf of the mother of a young black man who was lynched by the Klan in 1981.

White supremist groups like the Klu Klux Klan and the Neo-Nazis can still be seen and heard on televisions and radios across the country, telling everyone they come in contact with about their belief in the "superiority" of the white race.

Tonight, Morris Dees will not only expand on the background of such groups, but he will also speak on the notion of tolerance as a minority when dealing with groups of that nature.

Tonights lecture is free and open to the public, but tickets must be obtained in advance at the Fine Arts Center.

For Your Information

PIIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PII, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/d the Managing Editor by noon the previous

Tuesday, March 5

Meeting — There will be a Third Generation Group meeting and dinner for members of Holocaust families at 6 p.m. in the Valentine Hall dining room at Amherst College. For more information, call Lila Corwin at 542-8018.

Special Event — The Interfaith Pilgrimage for Peace and Life will present a slide show featuring international pictures and speaker Joe Roche at the main lecture hall in Franklin Patterson Hall at Hampshire College. For more information, contact Dan Castellano at 546-1479.

Music — "A Little Music With Billy Joel." An evening of questions and answers. Free-form lecture, 7 p.m. at Chapin Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College. Tickets at the Northampton Box Office and Amherst College Campus Center. Call 542-5773 for more information.

Lecture — Maria Banerjee, professor of Russian literature at Smith College, will lecture on "The Medusa Face: Tolstoy's 'Anna Karenina'" at 8 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith. The event is free.

Wednesday, March 6

Religious — Israeli dancing will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St.

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with Marian Marzynski's Shtetl — a portrayal of a small community in the midst of an indifferent or hostile majority, where difference breeds suspicion and conflict between Jews and Catholics. The film will be screened at 7 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, Room 231.

Meeting — The UMass HANDS sign language club will meet at 7 p.m. at Herter Hall, Room 217. For more information, stop by the HANDS office, Student Union Room 306 or call Shana at 253-0136 or the HANDS office at 545-1925.

Bi-Rap Group — The Bi-Rap Group will hold its weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in the LBGA office, Room 413B in the Student Union (right above the Munchie Store). Primary topic will be bisexuality and the press.

Meeting — Israel Programs Night. Learn about programs to work, study or visit in Israel. Rob Schulman, Activities Coordinator for the University Student Department of the World Zionist Organization will hold an informational meeting about ways to spend time in Israel. The meeting will be held in Campus Center, Room 904-08 at 7 p.m.

Thursday, March 7

Workshop — There will be a free text taking workshop offered by the Learning Resources Center from 4 to 5:30 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. To register, call 545-5334.

Concert — The battle for the best unsigned band will happen at the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. Watch five of the hottest regional bands compete for the for the top spot at "Unvailed, the Ultamite Band & Board Event" — where the best bands around the country battle it out in Vail, Colorado, March 29-31, while the best snowboarders thrash it out. The concert is free, and will feature special guest For Chameleon.

OutReach — the LBGA "coming out" discussion group will meet at 7 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). We will be discussing coming out to family members.

Let's Talk about Sex, Ba-By — the LBGA sex issues discussion group will meet at 8 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). Exact topic still to be announced.

Art Gallery hanging/ reception — The UMass Residential Arts Program and Wheeler Art Gallery (located in Central Residential Area, across from New Africa House) present an opportunity for students to hang their own art work in a show entitled "Virtual Web Site." Students with all levels of artistic experience with work in any medium are encouraged to hang their work in with the assistance of the residential arts staff. Staff members will be present for the hanging from 4-6 p.m. A reception for the public will take place at 6:30 p.m. The exhibit will run until March 12. For more information, call the gallery at 545-2804.

Correction

In yesterday's Collegian a photo with the story on the rally was identified a fraternity house.

Yesterday a story about the LSD case misconstrued lieutenant Grabec of the University Police Department as an undercover police officer. Grabec worked with undercover police officers to execute the search warrant.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

Campus Police Log

Larceny
March 1
A telephone was reported stolen from Arnold House.

Report of a credit card stolen form Gorman Residence Hall.

A telephone was reported stolen form a W.E.B. DuBois Library office.

March 2
An individual in Cance Residence Hall, reported his door kicked in and CD's stolen form his room.

Vandalism
March 1
A report of individuals smashing windows on vehicles on Parking Lot 11. No one was found.

Damage to a vending machine was reported in Van Meter Residence Hall.

Damage to three state vehicles was reported on Tillson Farm Road.

Racial graffiti and Nazi symbols were written on a Crabtree Residence Hall bulletin board and affixed to a door.

March 2
Housing was notified about damage to the 20th floor lounge and hallway of Kennedy Residence Hall.

Medical Emergency.
March 2
A check on the well-being of an individual in Van Meter Residence Hall who fell in a hallway. No transport was needed.

An individual in William D. Mullins Center with possible fractured wrist was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

March 3
An individual in James Residence Hall with a leg laceration was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual, passed out on a Fine Arts Center stairway, was taken to his residence hall.

Burglary/breaking & entering
March 2
Two vehicles were broken into in Parking Lot 13.

Traffic stop
March 1
Gabriel S. Estela, 18, of 336 Carver Rd., Plymouth was arrested for larceny over $250.

Scott K. Hughes, 18, of 32 Skylark Dr., Holtsville, NY, was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and for miscellaneous motor vehicle equipment violation.

Assault & battery
March 1
A large fight in progress in Pierpont Residence Hall was reported. One injured party was taken to Health Services. The incident in under investigation.

Annoying behavior
March 1
An individual in Van Meter Residence Hall reported she was grabbed by another individual. She elected not to pursue charges.

Report of an unauthorized entry into a Totman Building office during night time hours.

Skateboarders were in the Campus Center garage.

March 2
Individuals in the South Side Room refused to leave teh building.

Individuals in Mary Lyon Residence Hall were reported to be harassing residents.

An individual in Melville Residence Hall reported being threatened.

Assist citizen
March 1
Police were called for traffic control, to assist a rally, proceeding to North Pleasant Street.

Health/ safety hazard
March 1
A large tree branch came down across wires at Mt. Toby. Western Mass Electric was notified.

March 2
A fire technician was called to repair a detector in Van Meter Residence Hall. It was torn from the ceiling.

Intoxicated person
March 2
An individual in John Q. Adams Residence Hall was causing a disturbance in the lobby.

Assist other PDs
March 2
Police assisted Amherst Police searching for three individuals who had caused damage at an apartment complex on North Pleasant Street.

March 3
Police assisted Amherst Police with a motor vehicle stop on Massachusetts Avenue.

Police assisted Amherst Police with an investigation in Moore Residence Hall.

Police assisted Amherst Police with a disturbance at Sigma Alpha Mu.

Motor vehicle theft
March 2
Report of a vehicle stolen form Parking Lot 49 was filed.

Accident — property damage
March 3
A vehicle while backing on Tillson Farm Road, struck another vehicle.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™

50% Off!!

CLASSES START
Tuesday, March 5th
7:00 p.m.
Lord Jeffrey Inn/Amherst

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Shop Around & Compare! 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Act Now! Space is Limited!!

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
PRESENTS IN COLLABORATION WITH:
BLACK STUDENT UNION, HILLEL, OFFICE OF JEWISH AFFAIRS
MORRIS S. DEES JR.
WHO WILL LECTURE ON WHITE SUPREMACIST HATE GROUPS IN THE UNITED STATES

TODAY,
MARCH 5, 1996
7:00PM
FINE ARTS CENTER
UMASS AMHERST
TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE AT THE FINE ARTS CENTER.
FREE ADMISSION AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

This program has been made possible by the Financial Support of the following: Chancellor's Office, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Graduate Student Senate, Greek Affairs, Housing Services/Residential Life, Human Relations, Student Government Association, Women of Color Program.

Andi's Creations ALANA AFFAIRS 1996

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

RECENTLY, MORNINGSTAR CALLED US CHEAP.
IT'S NOT EVERY DAY YOU GET A COMPLIMENT LIKE THAT.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way more of your money goes where it should — towards building a comfortable future.

We make low expenses a high priority.

Because of our size and our exclusive focus on serving the needs of educational and research communities, TIAA-CREF's costs are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries.[1]

In fact, Morningstar, Inc. — one of the nation's leading sources of variable annuity and mutual fund information — says, "CREF's size...enables it to realize a remarkable economy of scale."[2] According to Morningstar's data, CREF's "minuscule" 0.33% average fund expense charge was less than half that charged by comparable funds.[3]

The TIAA Traditional Annuity also charges no fees aside from a very modest operating expense of 1/4 of 1% of annuity assets. Interest and dividends are reported after all operating costs have been deducted. Standard & Poor's calls TIAA's costs "exceptionally low."[4]

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. While we're committed to keeping our expenses down, we spare nothing in striving to provide top-quality investment choices, financial expertise, and personal service. Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

TIAA-CREF seeks performance, not profit.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more on retirement, not on their retirement company. If you'd like to see how our approach can help keep more of your money working for you, call us at 1 800 842-2776 (8 a.m. to 11 p.m. ET, weekdays). We'd consider it a compliment.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

1. Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analyses, 1995; Lipper Analytical Services Inc., Lipper Directors' Analytical Data, 1995 (Quarterly). 2. Source: Morningstar, Variable Annuities/Life 8/30/95. 3. Of the 2,578 variable annuity funds tracked by Morningstar, the average fund had annual expenses of 0.78% plus an insurance expense of 1.24%. Source: Morningstar, Inc., for periods ending December 31, 1995. 4. Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analyses, 1995.

TIAA-CREF expenses are subject to change and are not guaranteed for the future. CREF is a variable annuity and its returns are not guaranteed. The value of your investment can go up or down, no matter what expense levels are. CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, extension 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 11/95.

©1996 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

Class absence rules are flexible

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

Faculty and students need to know about University of Massachusetts policy concerning class absences, especially during the winter season, said Eileen Stewart, assistant dean of students.

Several categories of excused absences include religious observance, fulfillment of military service obligations, participation in University-sponsored events such as athletics and field trips, illness or medical treatment and other "extenuating non-academic reasons," according to Deputy Provost Norman D. Aitken and Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin.

Two essential rules apply to all excused absences, whether the student in excused through University policy or at the discretion of the instructor. Students must meet all class requirements, and instructors must offer reasonable assistance in making up missed work. For example, instructors may allow students to attend labs or discussion sessions which meet at other times, or provide makeup exams or labs when feasible, according to Aitken and Vanin.

Instructors may ask for advance notice of absenteeism due to religious observances within one week of enrolling in the course, Stewart said, summarizing University policy. According to Aitken and Vanin, instructors must accept religious absences after notification.

A calendar of major holidays is published in the Undergraduate Catalog, the faculty and staff telephone directory, the "Pre-Registration Guide" and the "Revised Schedule of Courses."

For absences due to athletic events, students should present instructors an official schedule from the athletic office as soon as possible, Stewart said. If there is a conflict with scheduled classes, instructors may verify required participation by calling the Athletic Department.

"Most teams practice at odd hours so there is usually less conflict," she said.

"I think it would be up to the individual instructor," Stewart said in regard to field trips and performances requiring a student to participate. Students should inform their instructors of conflicts, according to Aitken and Vanin.

Instructors may verify whether a student has been seen by University Health Services by calling a voice mail service there, according to University policy. By leaving the student's name and ID number and the date the student was absent, teachers will receive verification by phone, Stewart said.

Students are asked by University policy to notify instructors in advance if they miss a class because of illness, injury or medical treatment. Students may leave a message at the department office or on the instructor's voice mail to explain an absence a few hours before a class or exam, Stewart said.

THE BATTLE FOR THE BEST UNSIGNED BAND IN THE COUNTRY STARTS HERE.

FREE SHOW → STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
MARCH 7, 1996 @ 7:00 P.M.
HOSTED BY UPC 103.3 WUMB

W/ SPECIAL GUEST FOR CHAMELEON

Be in on the big search for the best unsigned band in the country.
Watch five of the hottest regional bands compete for the top spot at UnVailed™, the Ultimate Band & Board Event — where the best unsigned bands around the country battle it out in VAIL, Colorado, March 29-31, while the best snowboarders thrash it out. Top band wins a recording contract.

YOU CAN WIN! AN ALL-EXPENSE PAID TRIP TO VAIL, COLORADO
PORTABLE CD PLAYERS | COMPACT DISCS | $50 TRAVELERS CHECKS | MANGA ANIMATION VIDEOS

Cash MAGNAVOX eam Goody musicland Snapple

Revamped TOC woos crowds

By Kathryn Shepardson
Collegian Correspondent

The recently renovated TOC Bar & Grill, formerly the Top of the Campus (TOC) Lounge, celebrated its name change with a new pub-style menu.

Students now have another alternative to eating in the dining commons that is located on the 11th floor of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center. In an effort to increase business, the TOC Bar & Grill decided to bring back the menu after operating two years without it.

Bar Manager Rachel Castriotta explained said that the bar wanted to offer potential new and returning customers an additional incentive to visit.

"We have so much to offer up here... the bar is beautiful, we are located right on campus, and we have a great view," Castriotta said. "We really needed to utilize that, and in order to do so, we decided to bring back the menu."

During intersession, a full-time bar manager was hired for the new bar and grill while renovations were underway.

"We got a crew together and we went in there and cleaned everything we could possibly clean. There were days we had five painters in here working at once," Castriotta said. "The renovations are the result of a collaborative effort between staff and employees. I don't know whose more excited about this, me or [the staff]. They are proud again to say I waitress' or I bartend at the TOC."

Incorporating the menu has attracted a lot more customers and generated a positive response. Debbie Greenleaf, a junior Hotel Restaurant and Travel Administration (HRTA) major, sampled the mozzarella sticks during her break.

"The food is good and the service is quick," Greenleaf said. "I am a commuter and I enjoy coming here between my breaks. It is close to all of my classes, the view is beautiful and I can get a little peace here from my hectic day."

Bar Manager Rachel Castriotta explained said that the bar wanted to offer potential new and returning customers an additional incentive to visit.

Menu items include favorites such as burgers, cajun chicken sandwiches, soups and salads. There are a variety of appetizers including nachos, chicken wings and quesedillas, plus weekly specials.

"I see a much larger crowd here now because of the food," bouncer Matt Hansberry said. "I see a lot more parents and people who are staying in the [Campus Center] hotel up here. It's a much more relaxed atmosphere compared to going uptown and very convenient."

Beer drinkers now have the option of ordering micro- brewed beer since the bar has added five kinds of micro- brews to its menu.

"The micro-brews are a very popular item," Hansberry said. "I think it definitely helps to attract business up here."

Another new addition is the Off Campus Meal Plan (OCMP), now offered at the TOC Bar & Grill.

Arthur Monteiro, executive chef of the TOC restaurant, has been an employee for over 15 years. "We are catering to the students a lot more than we used to," Montiero said. "With the OCMP, students are now able to use their meal card to eat for lunch [at the restaurant] or dinner [at the bar & grill]."

In addition, the TOC Bar & Grill is a hot spot for UMass sports events.

"During UMass basketball we are packed, especially for home games. On game nights we put TVs in each one of the four rooms, plus we have two wide screen TVs," Castriotti said.

Every Thursday night UMass Hockey coach Joe Mallen broadcasts the "Coach Mallen Show" live on WHMP-FM from the TOC Bar & Grill. Last month, the TOC Bar & Grill received a surprise visit from sports announcer Dick Vitale and Temple coach John Chaney.

"We are trying to incorporate activities which appeal to all of our customers," Castriotti said.

Thursday nights attract many television viewers hooked on "Friends" and "Seinfeld." On Wednesday nights, the TOC Bar & Grill offers half-price appetizers from 4 to 6 p.m., accompanied by a rag-time jazz piano player.

The TOC Bar & Grill is open Mon.-Sat., 4 p.m.-12:30 a.m., and the TOC restaurant is open Mon.-Fri., 11:30 a.m.- 1:30 p.m..

LIZ BROWN

Students check the UMass hoop game at the T.O.C.

he launched into a version of "Amazing Grace" which uses rewritten lyrics. Ginsberg explained that his basis for the words was to explain how the homeless on the Battery in New York were treated as non-human beings.

One poem in this genre, which got the crowd cheering was an extensive piece, "Put down your cigarette pack," an anti- smoking piece, put to an aboriginal rhythm. Ginsberg said, "This is my response to the 'Just Say No' campaign." Notorious for his use and promotion of drugs in the '60s, the lyrical, chanting work quickly dismantled the structure the tobacco industry has in place. Upon finishing, an audience member shouted out to Ginsberg, "How's your spirit?"

Referring to the just-finished poem, Ginsberg responded, "My spirit is weak, but despite congestive heart failure, I can still sing don't smoke."

Ginsberg removed his jacket, to reveal his bright-red suspenders and continued with several short poems, such as "Maturity," more "American Sentences," and an ode to his anus, "Sphincter."

He then read more lyrical pieces, using his accordion on "Autumn leaves," and "Do the meditation rock," a poem exalting the benefits of meditation. Ginsberg is known for his knowledge and promotion of Eastern religions including Buddhism and Zen.

In a surprise move, Ginsberg announced he would read "Howl," his most famous piece, and one he has not read in public in several years. "Because you have all gathered here together in one group, en masse in this place, I think I will try to read 'Howl'," he said.

Greeted by cheers from the crowd, Ginsberg launched his epic-length poem, often called the defining poem of the Beat Generation. "Howl," looks at the disintegration of American society and the American dream, with an emphasis on the self as somehow responsible.

As the audience sat spellbound, Ginsberg recited with passion the "Moloch" section of his poem. Entranced by this poet in love with words, the audience sat silent as Ginsberg rocked with the words of his deepest poem, and the walls of the FAC echoed with the words of an obsessed man.

When he finished "Howl," Ginsberg was greeted with a standing ovation. He finished the evening wih another of his most famous poems, "Father death blues," about the death of his father in 1976. Using his accordion for the last time, Ginsberg's voice cracked as he sang the tearful goodbye to his father.

Another standing ovation from the crowd finished the evening, as Ginsberg rose from his chair, bowed again and slowly walked off stage.

Amherst Cinema

Lowest Popcorn, Soda and Candy Prices in the Valley!! Get a Small Popcorn, Small Soda and Small Candy Bar - All three for just $2.00!!
Free refills on all large and extra large sodes with UMass I.D. !!

Ticket Price for Students with ID always just $4.00 . . .

Located in Downtown Amherst - Across from the Jones Library

Call 253-5426 for Current Movie Listings & Times.

Now Playing . . .
Leaving Las Vegas
Show Times: Friday (3/1) & Saturday (3/2) 7pm & 9pm
Sunday (3/3) thru Thursday (3/7) 7:30pm

DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's largest College Daily • Founded 1890 • Since 1890

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Cassimy Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphreys brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Lisa M. Olivieri Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Ami Paradiso News Editor
Emily Reily Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist
Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chase Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Lee Werner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914, and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Food for thought

Dawn Jennings

As I walked down the chip aisle at Super Stop and Shop, I told myself I wouldn't buy them. It was ridiculous. It was only a commercial. However, Lays' million dollar campaign had worked. If Kathy Ireland and Naomi Campbell ate them, why couldn't I? Of course I'm talking about the new low-fat Lays potato chips. The commercials feature the various models either fishing or playing poker and engulfing these chips like there is no tomorrow.

Although the commercials are almost humorous, they bring up a much more serious issue. If I was to ask the question, "What have you eaten today?," how many people would know the answer? How many calories have you consumed? How many grams of fat? I'm sure a great majority of women and quite a few men know the answer to these questions. Although it isn't bad to know what your putting into your body, this curiosity can easily turn into an obsession.

According to the American Psychiatric Association, 15.4 percent of high school and college age females meet the criteria for an eating disorder. Other studies say these problems might be as prevalent as effecting one in five women of the same age group. That's a lot of people.

However, the problem is even bigger than that. Eating disorders can be thought of as a continuum. There are many, many people (especially college females) who wouldn't be diagnosed with an eating disorder, but definitely have an eating problem. I'm in a nutrition class this semester and we had to record our daily caloric intake.

Upon hearing that the average number females our age should consume is around 2200, most of the room was shocked. I bet the average number the women in my class ingested was barely more than half of that.

Females' obsession with their weight begins from the moment they are first socialized in today's society. We are shown numerous images of women who are beautiful and weigh almost nothing. These are the people we strive to look like.

Just think of movies such as "Cinderella" and "Pretty Woman." These females had nothing but beauty, but because of their looks, they could achieve pure happiness. One would wonder how well these same women could have fared had they not been gorgeous.

For many women, they spend their entire lives obsessing about the food they eat and feeling guilty every time they splurge and actually enjoy eating. How many times has a female friend, or possibly even yourself, tried to justify the reason they were eating so much? The only reason I'm eating this whole slice of pizza is because I haven't eaten all day. How many times have you just hated yourself because you consumed the whole piece of cheesecake?

Because women feel they are always consuming too much, many start to diet. According to a Nielsen study, 56 percent of women are at any one time dieting. 56 percent! That's more than half of all females. Although there are some people that need to lose weight because it is seriously affecting their health, this isn't the motive of most women. Only 24 percent of those dieting said they were doing so because of medical concerns. The others were trying to lose the weight for cosmetic reasons.

One might wonder why this compulsive dieting never stops. Once a woman has lost the pounds, how come she just doesn't continue along happily with her life? The reason is, most women never reach their ultimate goal because of the impossibly strict standards we are following. For the majority of females, we could always stand to lose another five, 10, 15 pounds — at least in our own minds.

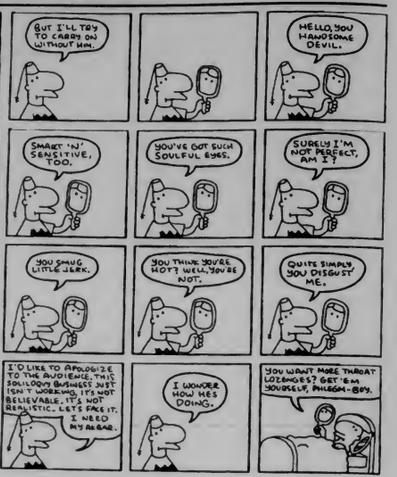
The ideals we wish to achieve are not realistic or even healthy ones. We can't all look like Elle McPherson, no matter how hard we try, or how much we deprive ourselves. With standards such as these it is no wonder these goals are rarely, if ever, achieved.

It is perfectly healthy to be aware of the food that you are putting into your mouth. Not paying attention to this at all is also detrimental to your health. It's important to limit those foods that are high in fat and those low in nutrients. However, food is not the enemy. Limiting your consumption of certain foods doesn't mean you should strictly forbid yourself of those calories you need to live.

Constricting your caloric intake too much is actually counter-productive because your body compensates by making your metabolism go down. In turn, it causes your body to require even less food and makes it even easier for you to gain weight. Also everyone splurges sometimes and that's OK. So instead of agonizing because you ordered D.P. Dough last night, go for a long walk the next day or go exercise at the gym. Trust me, you'll feel a lot better.

Dawn Jennings is Collegian staff member.

Crap on wheels



LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, BOYS AND GIRLS: AHEM. COULDN'T BE HERE TODAY. HE'S GOT ONE OF THOSE COLDS THAT'S GOING AROUND.
BUT I'LL TRY TO CARRY ON WITHOUT HIM.
HELLO, YOU HANDSOME DEVIL.
YOU'RE EVER-SO-DESIRABLE.
SMART 'N' SENSITIVE, TOO.
YOU'VE GOT SUCH SOULFUL EYES.
SURELY I'M NOT PERFECT, AM I?
WELL, IF THERE'S ONE TEENY WEENY LITTLE THING I'D CHANGE ABOUT YOU, IT'S YOUR SUDDEN VIOLENT MOOD CHANGES.
YOU SMUG LITTLE JERK.
YOU THINK YOU'RE HOT? WELL, YOU'RE NOT.
QUITE SIMPLY, YOU DISGUST ME.
SIGH.
I'D LIKE TO APOLOGIZE TO THE AUDIENCE. THIS SOLILOQUY BUSINESS JUST ISN'T WORKING. IT'S NOT BELIEVABLE. IT'S NOT REALISTIC. LET'S FACE IT, I NEED MY AH-BAR.
I WONDER HOW HE'S DOING.
YOU WANT MORE THROAT LOZENGES? GET 'EM YOURSELF, PHLEGM-BOY.

Tim White

Some people have their Groundhog Day, while others use the Farmer's Almanac. I have my own system for telling when Spring is around the corner. I have Sunroof Day. If you see me travelling down North Pleasant street with the sun coming down from the top, it's a good sign.

I had the opportunity to open it up the other day, and my whole persona changed. I was in such a good mood for the rest of the day. Then Mother Nature toyed with me and the next day there was ice on the ground. Witch.

Actually, anyone who is acquainted with me at all knows how much I love my car. It's not even a really good-looking car — I just have this attachment to it.

It's a 1989 Volkswagen Jetta and it currently has 263,846 miles on it. No, I am not kidding. The car starts up on a dime and it gets 49 miles to the gallon. OK, that's because it's a diesel, but that gives the car it's own kind of rhythm.

Chitty chitty bang bang. That's "ch" not "sh."

About one month before Christmas, I walked out of my apartment to find that some low-life had taken the Volkswagen symbol off the front of my car. My Irish temper took over from there and I threw quite the tantrum in the middle of the parking lot. I sounded like a sailor on leave with all the filth coming from my mouth.

That symbol theft thing seems to be a disease around this area. What do people do with them? Wear them? Use them as cookie cutters? It was close to Christmas, maybe someone was desperate for an ornament for ye old tannenbaum.

It was like a piece of my car's personality was taken away. So I did what any other red-blooded American would do, I approached another helpless Volkswagen in the parking lot, yielding a screwdriver, ready to do the same. But I couldn't get myself to do it.

Mainly because I was paranoid that someone was watching me with a video camera and a really good telephoto lens. But I didn't want to adapt some other Volkswagen's personality.

OK, so I need medication.

No worries though. Santa left me a brand new one under the Christmas tree.

A lot of people are missing their VW symbols around UMass — check out the Campus Center garage. If you are walking through the garage, you'll begin to think you are in the worst used car-lot in the nation.

I think it's a prerequisite for undergraduates to have the biggest hunk of crap on wheels. It's in the application for admission you know: "Was your car built before 1974? If so, are the doors all different colors?"

Some of the rich kids get their new Mustangs and Nissan Pathfinders, but the majority of the school is loaded with 1981 Cutlass Broughams.

Even the professors have crud mobiles. That's probably because Bulger isn't paying them enough.

The best part about this parade of demolition cars we call UMass is that at one time, these cars were brand-spanking new.

Somebody, about 20 years ago, was looking at the AMC Gremlin you see in upper Central Area, and decided to buy it.

"That there is one fine looking vehicle, but I don't like the red ... would you have it in a lime green by chance? Oh, and I'll take the 8-track option."

What cars are people going to make fun of 20 years from now? Some Collegian columnist is going to be writing about the Astro Van saying "someone actually bought that?"

I think once a year in the spring, the campus should have the "Biggest Hunk of Crap Car Contest." Students and faculty alike can come together and bring anything that runs to the football stadium E-lot and vote on which car sucks ass the most.

The panel of judges would vote on smell, noise, array of colors, distance-between-tailpipe-to-ground ratio, interior, rust spots, number of holes in the floor and of course, number of turn-overs before the vehicle actually starts up.

The winner would get a new car to ensure there would be a different winner every year.

Taking a look around though, I think there would be a few ties.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Riddle me this

Coming to the end of my last semester here at UMass and trying to enter the real world, I learned there are many questions that just don't seem to have any answer to them. Then I realized that we all face these things everyday and I wonder if any of us have the answers to these questions...

Why is there a eject button on the remote control to my VCR? — So I lie on my couch, push the button and the tape comes out to the door of the VCR — so what? Now if when I pushed the button the cassette pops out and a device attached to the VCR grabs the tape, inserts it into the proper cover and puts it back on the shelf where it belongs, then I'm a big fan.

Justin C. Smith

Why do people drink decaffeinated coffee? — There are two reasons that I drink coffee and haven't found anyone who can give me a different one. The first is to smack myself out of the unbearably grumpy mood in which I awaken. And the second is a perfect excuse to dump an excessive amount of sugar for the sweet taste. Are there really people in the world who drink it simply for the taste of it?

Women — Geraldo has been trying for eight years and has found as much information on the topic as he did material in Al Capone's vault. I have only 10 years of puberty and 80 lines to work with. Next Question.

Why do hotels not have a 13th floor? — Now really, I understand people who have triskaidekaphobia, (fear of the number 13) but don't the people who stay on the 14th floor realize that they are really on the 13th?

Why is there braille on the drive up ATM machine? — I know that there are some pretty bad drivers out there, but I really hope that the reason for it isn't the fact that they can't see.

Why is it that the school closing for the hearing impaired are announced over the radio? — With all the snow, there was an extensive list of schools that were cancelled this year. Those schools that are listed last could have gotten the news sooner, without listing those schools whose students can't hear the announcement in the first place.

Where does the monster that takes my socks in the dryer live? — I bought a package consisting of six pairs of white tube socks. I went to the Laundromat to wash these 12 socks and when all was said and dried, there were only eight.

I was so enraged, I climbed into the cavernous machine to find where it hid so I could get my socks back. If I reclaimed all the socks that I have lost, I wouldn't need to wash socks until I began collecting social security.

Why would a college student, or anyone for that matter, would drink non-alcoholic beer? — When it comes to beers, I'm a fan of Newcastle and Samuel Adams. The tastes of such rich beers are pleasing to me and many others' taste buds. O'Douls on the other hand is Budweiser with no buzz, so why have drink-flavored water without the side effects.

Why are there garbage cans at the movie theater? — How many times have you gone to the movies and actually taken your empty popcorn and soda containers to the rear of the theater and place them in the trash receptacle? I swear I thought that's what the floor was there for. I don't think I ever have thrown out my trash, except maybe to impress someone I was on a first date with.

Why do dieters insist on drinking Diet Coke? — How many times have you been in line at McDonald's when the woman who resembles Shamu orders a Super sized Double Quarter Pounder with Cheese meal with a large Diet Coke? Why do they do this haven't they figured out it's not working?

Why can women go into the men's bathroom, but not vice-versa? — Outside the WMUA offices there are two bathrooms with two different signs on them. The first says, "Men AND Women. We share." The second, however states, "Women Only." Now if everybody shares, doesn't that mean them too? The bathrooms are absolutely identical, so what's the big deal which one we use?

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Competitive edge

Mark McGrath

The front cover called out to me as if it knew who I was and what I wanted. In big, bold letters, it read, "How smart are you? Test your own IQ."

I eyed it suspiciously. The picture that went with the words was a brain on a scale. From its spot on the rack, that book threw a challenge my way and I accepted.

The IQ book flew from its shelf and into my hands. I quickly made my way to the cashier and dished out a relatively large amount of money. It was worth it though, for that book had all I ever wanted within its pages. It was a chance for me to see exactly how I measured up with humankind — what else could I ask for?

We all have the urge to compare ourselves with others, to see who exactly is better. Why is that? The answer is that we are competitive beings.

Competition. When it all comes down to it, competition is at the very essence of life. It has been around since our most primitive ancestors first graced the Earth and will remain till the end of time. It is a permanent fixture in the human social makeup.

Competition is a good thing. In the process of natural selection, it drives all genetic advancements. Competition brings out the best and worst in all of us. Without it, we couldn't have the society that we have today.

But like so many good things in life, too much competition can be a hindrance, and that is one of the primary problems in our life today. Because we are so caught up in competitions in which we are involved, we tend to forget that there are other aspects of life.

Just look at the day in the life of a typical college student. First thing in the morning, there is a competition to see who can get to the showers first, so that person will not have to wait. Next, it's off to classes, which are all contests in themselves, the winners taking home A's.

At the end of the day, the student might sit down to watch his or her school take on its arch rival in a game of basketball. There is literally no escape from the competitive cycle.

Competition is exciting, and it can be risky. That is where the pleasure lies. There's this thrill that comes with being better than others and a humiliation in being worse. Better yet, anyone can find a playing field which suits them best. Which brings me back to the book I bought a few weeks ago.

That book was tailor-made to my personality. In buying it, I was doing little more than insuring my own success. Of course I'm going to measure up well if I pick the area. For the very same reason you'll never see me trying to ring the strong-man bell at the carnival. Such displays, while they are competition, don't really tell you anything about the people involved.

How Smart Are You is a book. It is an inanimate object that thinks it can make judgements about people. What does it have the ability to do? It can measure how well a particular person is able to solve a narrow range of problems on any particular day. Oh yeah, It also has the ability to make certain people temporarily crazy. You know, the ones who buy the book.

It shows nothing about the thousands of other qualities that serve to make people great. It can't measure someone's integrity or common sense. You'll never see a book which sells itself by picturing a heart on a scale. Without other qualities, all the intelligence in the world is futile.

Everyone has a set of strong points which serve to make that individual great. Why then is it necessary to spend money on stupid books which by overemphasizing just one of these characteristics, think that they can cast a judgement on you?

If we were able to downplay our competitive nature, we'd be less apt to worry about little things like who's smarter than who. Life could be so much more enjoyable.

I remember the day when I first bought that book. I quickly got to work on the tests. How did I fare? I never found out. I decided that knowledge would do nothing to help me either way.

I was able to figure one thing out. The fact that I fell into the trap and bought that stupid book told me something about myself. They say that a fool and his money are easily parted, and that is result enough for me.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MR. WOLFE, I WONDER IF I COULD TALK TO YOU ABOUT THE UNUSUALLY HIGH NUMBER OF RACIST STAFFERS THE BUCHANAN CAMPAIGN SEEMS TO HAVE ATTRACTED...
NO, BECAUSE YOUR PREMISE IS LUDICROUS! WE DON'T HAVE ANY RACIST STAFFERS! THEY'RE ALL ON LEAVE, CLEARING THEIR NAMES!
WHY? BECAUSE PAT BUCHANAN DOESN'T HAVE A BIGOTED BONE IN HIS BODY! HE DESPISES INTOLERANCE IN ANY GUISE, AND WILL NOT TOLERATE IT IN HIS CAMPAIGN!
WHATT? YOU BUSY?
LATER, EARL, LATER!

Arts & Living

~ MOVIES ~

New Muppet movie no treasure

Kermit saves Piggy, but can't save Henson creation's latest

Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy fall in love in Muppet Treasure Island. COURTESY STEPHEN R. MORLEY

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

THE MUPPET TREASURE ISLAND
Directed by Brian Henson with Tim Curry, Kermit the Frog
Playing at the Hampshire Six

"Why do we always come here? I guess we'll never know. It's like a kind of torture to have to watch this show."

— Waldorf & Statler

And that pretty much summed up the entire feeling of the movie, turning what could have been a happy gander down memory lane into the road-trip from hell.

Based for the most part on Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, we begin our nightmare at the Admiral Benbow Inn where Jim Hawkins (Kevin Bishop) and cohorts Gonzo and Rizzo the Rat get a map from Billy Bones and the 411 on some sweet treats.

After escaping a band of rabble rousers, the hapless trio flee to Bristol to commission a ship from Squire Trelawney but alas! the good ship builder is out of town. Luckily, his half-wit son, played by Fozzie Bear, is ready to take up the task. How half-wit you ask? The bear talks to a man called Mr. Bimble, living inside his thumb. And it only gets worse.

Once on board the Hispaniola we encounter the crew led by a less-than-threatening Long John Silver (Tim Curry). Curry can't seem to decide whether he wants to be a crusty old pirate or the lead in Otello dropping "yars" and mateee" and then bursting into a song like a reject from the Sound of Music. Long John however went sans parrot as his pet of choice was a talking lobster named Polly.

The "good" guys are played by Kermit the Frog as Captain Smollett, Sam Eagle as Mr. Arrow and Dr. Bunsen Honeydew as Dr. Livesy and his lovely assistant Beaker. Kermit is a by-the-book captain, Sam is his masochistic first mate concerned with safety and Honeydew is just there.

Injected into the plot is Rizzo's venture as cruise director. That's right — while the entire movie is taking place we get to see a bunch of rats enjoy a tropical vacation. We see them water ski, scuba dive and mambo after dark to Dr. Teeth and the Electric Keys (who by the way can't decide if they're good or bad, but rather are just there to play gigs).

As the crew ventures towards the island, the crowd is treated to a few flashy song and dance numbers that leave you squirming in your seat. Listening to songs like "Shiver My Timbers" and "Sailing for Adventure" you long for something catchy like "Moving Right Along" or "Rainbow Connection." In fact the only amusing thing about "Cabin Fever" was the cross-dressing pirates in flamenco dancers' costumes.

Of course the crew finally reach the island, Long John takes over and it is up to Kermit to save the day, but not before being captured by a band of wild wart hogs led by Miss Piggy a.k.a. Boom Shakalaka a.k.a. Benjamina Gunn. She apparently was marooned by Captain Flint on the island after Kermit left her at the alter. "I got cold feet," he said by way of explanation. "You're a frog," she said, "You're suppose to have cold feet." Humor!

The two end up tied by their feet and dangling over a cliff where they commence singing as sappy love song "Love Led Us Here" while we see flashes of Long John and crew frolicking in slow-motion through Miss Piggy's hut where she had taken the treasure.

All ends well (and ends thankfully) as good triumphs over evil and all the Muppets join together to defeat Long John, then sing a big ending number in true Muppet fashion.

Unfortunately that is the only thing that seems to have remained consistent. It's sad that the Muppets have been reduced to such pale shadows of their former selves. In fact there was a lot of hope for them after Jim Henson died and they still managed to pull it off with A Muppet Christmas Carol. But after watching Muppet Treasure Island you'll definitely abandon ship. D

~ PREVIEWS & REVIEWS~

Vietnamese artist to open exhibit

A new exhibition will open at the Augusta Savage Gallery as part of their 25th Anniversary celebration. The exhibit by Vietnamese artist Vu Dân Tân is called "New Angles." The exhibit will run from Mar. 5 to Apr. 2. The opening reception will be held tonight from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

COURTESY AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
Vu Dan Tan's Untitled piece of art

Born and currently living in Vietnam, Vu Dân Tân's wonderful gift for honest expression has positioned him among the vanguard of contemporary painters. Using newspapers as his canvas, he boldly layers his paints and trans Chinese character symbols into intricate designs.

Contemporary Vietnamese artists such as Tân are exploring non-traditional forms and techniques to inject a new dynamism into composition. Tân's work moves, breathes, rises and soars into flight.

In 1982, Tân opened a private art atelier in Hanoi where he teaches aspiring artists. Along with his wife, Natasha, he also runs a unique art gallery which serves as venue for artists to meet and display their works. Tân's work has been shown in the former Soviet Union, France and across his native country. The exhibit at the Augusta Savage Gallery will be his first personal show in the United States.

This exhibit is free and open to the general public. Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House in the Central residential area at UMass. The gallery is wheelchair accessible with a ramp at the rear of the building. For more information, please call the gallery at (413) 545-5177.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Technical difficulties plague show

COURTESY JAMES LASS
Letters to Cleo brought their bubblegum pop to Pearl St.

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian staff

LETTERS TO CLEO
Pearl Street
Mar. 2

NORTHAMPTON — On Saturday night Letters to Cleo entertained a full house at Pearl Street, despite a few minor difficulties.

When they took the stage, they had problems with the drums. While waiting for the problem to be fixed, Kay Hanley, the leader singer, wished an audience member happy birthday, and then the band broke into "Mellie's Coming Over," a crowd favorite off Aurora Gory Alice. When the first tune ended, they immediately began "Fastway," the second track off Wholesale Meat and Fish.

After "Fastway" they stopped again because Stacy Jones was still having drum problems. Hanley used the time to interact with the audience. She made fun of a guy in the front row who was holding his head, asking him if they were giving him a headache.

When Jones finished an attempt to fix his drums, the band played the first of three new songs they debuted at the show. All three new

Turn to CLEO, page 6

If You Are Driving Around With A Dirty Car...CUT it Out!
Save $5.50
Reg. Price $4.50
Reg. Price $4.00
Reg. Price $1.50
Reg. Price $1.50
Reg. Price $1.50
Total Reg. Price $13.00
Discount Coupon $5.50
You Pay Only $7.50
Golden Nozzle Car Wash
Locations- F.L. Roberts
Amherst/Hadley 456 Russell next to BP
Chicopee 520 Montgomery St.
Easthampton 124 Northampton St
East Longmeadow 141 North St
Ludlow 425 Center St.
Springfield 1385 Boston Rd
Springfield 599 St. James St
Springfield 93 West Broad St
Westfield 90 South Maple St.
West SPFLD. 518 Memorial Ave
West SPFLD. 2685 Westfield St
West SPFLD. 928 Riverdale St.

WOW! FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Best Stand Best Burgers in the Valley
ROUTE 9 HADLEY, MA
PETE'S

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.

It's Hot! Hot! Hot!
It's a Mexican Fiesta!!!
Olé!
EVERY TUESDAY at THE PUB in AMHERST
We're taking 25% OFF All Mexican Dishes every Tuesday Night! It's gonna be Hot!
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET • DOWNTOWN AMHERST

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The COLLEGIAN is looking for candidates for Special Issues Coordinator. If you are organized, a good communicator, creative, and more...Come down and apply!
Special Issues Coordinator is great experience in advertising, business, and communications.
EXPERIENCE IS NECESSARY!
Build your resume @ the COLLEGIAN!
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst • 413- 545- 3500

COURTESY SUZANNE THOMPSON

No banjos Saturday night at Doc Hopper punked up Butterfield.

Butterfield hosts stellar night

Doc Hopper, Weston put on memorable punk rock show

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

DOC HOPPER, WESTON, DEADGUY
Butterfield Dorm
Mar. 2

Saturday's show was the kind that a couple of months from now you're going to say, "Remember how great that Butterfield show was." A combination of hard work by the shows promoters, great crowd reaction and participation and, of course, excellent performances by the bands resulted in one of the best shows of the semester. The only question on anyone's mind was who out of Doc Hopper, Weston, Deadguy and the Marshes put on the best set.

An electric current ran through the crowd and dark clouds began to congregate over Butterfield as Deadguy took the stage. Deadguy pack more anger, bile, spite and energy into every song than 100 Earth Crisis sound-a-likes could ever hope to. Deadguy played most of the songs off of their new album Fruition On A Co-Worker and it was clear that as active as this crowd was they could not keep up with the manic pace set by Deadguy. Judging by the looks on some of the kids faces it was obvious they were terrified by what they had just witnessed.

Weston was up next, and they were the band most of the people were there to see. After being pummeled by Deadguy it was clear that the crowd needed the feel good vibes of Weston. Not one person was left standing still or without a smile for the duration of Weston's set. They played all of the songs off of their first album, most of their singles and some new unreleased songs.

Doc Hopper came on next and instantly had the kids dancing. Combining the pop of Weston with a little bit of a harder edge they were the perfect band to culminate a showcase that had featured such different styles. They successfully mixed songs from both Aloha and Ask Your Mom giving their fans every song they could want. While they did not play the crowd-favorite cover of the Go-Go's "Head Over Heels" they played "Nervous Breakdown" by Black Flag with Tim from Deadguy singing. It was the perfect way to end one of the best punk shows of the year.

UMass music faculty to play concert

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Faculty members from the University of Massachusetts Department of Music will perform the second concert in the new UMass series tonight. The performance will take place in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

For this particular concert, the performers have chosen to focus on Ludwig van Beethoven (1770–1827). The famous composer wrote many of his finest works during the Romantic period and some of them, including the popular "Ode to Joy" were composed after Beethoven lost his hearing. The pieces to be featured in tonight's concert include "Folksongs of the British Isles" and "Trio in D Major, Op. 70 no. 1."

While Beethoven wrote over one hundred songs based on the folk cultures of the British Isles, Jon Humphrey has chosen four pieces from each of the regions that make up the United Kingdom. Ireland is represented with "The Pulse of an Irishman." Welsh tradition is captured in "The Fair Maids of Mona." The English piece is titled "The Miller of Dee" and the Scottish contribution is called "Sally in our Alley.

Beethoven's "Trio in D Major" is often called "Ghost," much to the bewilderment of audiences. One explanation refers to Beethoven's sketches for the Trio's slow movement which was prefaced by the composer with the words "Macbett" and "Ende." Beethoven was evidently thinking of using some of the musical material for a projected opera about Shakespeare's tragic play.

Also to be included in the program will be "Sextet in C major" by Ernest von Dohnanyi (1877–1960). The piece takes the listener to a different period in time with a different musical vocabulary. The work, composed in 1935, shows the influences of such composers as Brahms, Wagner and even introduces in its closing movement some elements of European jazz.

"The extraordinary thing about these concerts is that the audience has the opportunity to hear so many of our faculty members perform together," said Estela Olvesky, organizer of the series.

Faculty members participating in the concert include: Jon Humphrey, tenor; Veronica Macchia-Kadlubkiewicz, violin; Laura Klock, horn; Jennifer Langham, cello; Michelle LaCourse, viola; Estela Olevsky, piano; Dorothy Ornest, piano; Nadine Shank, piano; Michael Sussman, clarinet and Charles Treger, violin.

Tickets to the concert are $4 for students, elders and children and $8 for the general public. UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at Bowker on the evening of the concert. For more information or tickets, call the box office at 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

Rebel Assault II's action, adventure draw in player

The dark side of the Empire is once again threatening the the Rebel alliance with annihilation, and you are the only person who can stop them.

Rebel Assault II: The Hidden Empire by Vincent Lee is Lucas Arts Entertainment Company's newest contribution to the neo–Star Wars boom.

The game is independent of the epic trilogy, and follows a new plot line. The Empire has developed a new cloaked Tie- Fighter which can remain undetected by sensors. Darth Vader plans to use these new ships to exploit the weaknesses of the Rebel alliance.

Rebel Assault II attempts to completely immerse the game player in the sights and sounds of the Star Wars universe. By utilizing a combination of digital sounds, movie sequences, and computer generated graphics, the CD–ROM blurs the line that distinguishes cinema from video games.

The game features exquisite movie scenes between the stages of actual game play. Although most of these scenes are new and have been filmed with different actors, some scenes of Darth Vader have been taken directly from the movies and simply voiced over. However, James Earl Jones does not do the voice of Darth Vader in the game — the voice is performed by actor Andrew Nelson. The graphics, play control, and acting are far better than the original Rebel Assault.

It is essentially a point and shoot action adventure that holds the player with dazzling effects rather than varied game play. If a game player is looking for a more complex flight simulation game they might look to other Lucas Arts titles such as Tie–Fighter or X–Wing.

The game play varies. There is a flight simulation mode where the player controls an X–wing in battle. The player can fire at opposing ships, but a major drawback to this mode is that they cannot actually steer the ship. In ground combat the player comes face to face with storm troopers, the setback is that the players mobility is limited.

Ship flight presents the most difficult and intriguing aspect of the game. In flight mode the player steers the ship. Some examples of flight mode include navigating the Millennium Falcon through underground mines, steering stolen Tie fighters though narrow cannons and racing the speeder bikes through thick forest.

The graphics push the computer to the limits, and leave the player amazed. However, the game lacks control.

Rebel Assault II needs at least a 486 50 MHz PC, double speed CD–ROM drive, and at least eight megabytes of RAM. The game runs best if started with a boot disk, and an extra command line may have to be added to get the A and D drives in sink. The game can be found for in between $40 and $55. A–

Bryan C. Schwartzman is a Collegian staff member.

■ Cleo

continued from page 5

songs featured louder guitars that seemed to overshadow Hanley's vocals.

Still, problems continued to plague the show. Hanley's amp was not loud enough to hear her over the guitars. The problem was especially noticeable during the new songs. When they stopped the show a second time to fix the drums, the band attempted to keep the audience amused with a cover of a country song with Hanley attempting a southern accent.

After replacing the snare on Jones' drums, the band sailed through the rest of the show only stopping for one breathe before they began playing "Laudanum." Hanley's voice was clearly heard over the guitars because the song is significantly softer than their others.

The band intermingled songs from their two albums, creating great one–two punches. A combination that brought the crowd to their knees was that of "Awake" and "Here and Now." The final punch that knocked the crowd down was "Demon Rock."

When they left the stage for the first time, the crowd was crying for more. Less than five minutes past before they took the stage again. After playing "Pizza Cutter," they announced they would take requests. Most of the requests were off their newer album, Wholesale Meats and Fish. During the encore they played "Acid Jed" and "Little Rosa." The encore only lasted about 15 minutes.

Jack Drag, another Boston band, opened the show immediately at 7 p.m. They played for about 40 minutes. The crowd slowly got into their generic alternative sounds. They did not interact very often with the crowd, but they were a decent opener for Letters to Cleo.

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

UMass Theater Presents Nicky Silver's
Pterodactyls
The Comedy That Puts the Fun in Dysfunctional
Rand Theater, UMass, February 29-March 2 & March 5-9, 8 p.m. & March 2, 2 p.m. Tickets: $3.50, $6. Call 545-2511 Contains Mature Content

Because today is mystery meat day.

It's everywhere
you want to be.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995

■ Women's gym

continued from page 10

Lepper (9.775).

Lepper also won the beam event, as the freshman scored a 9.775.

Her teammate, Amy Roberts, mustered a 9.575 to take second place. Freshman Anita Sanyal was the top Minutewoman on the beam, scoring a 9.750 to take third place overall in the event.

Once again, the fact that UMass, whose scoring average is currently 190.844, is such a deep squad played a role in its second straight win, as Kuzara is quick to point out.

"Once again, we utilized every single person on our team today," he said. "It was close. But we knew that if we went out on the floor and just did the job then we would be okay. This was a big win, and it'll help us in our next two meets.

"Right now we have to work a bit on the beam and bars. We've done very well there but we need some people back. Also, Tara's had some uncharacteristic falls recently. So we need to get her back on track, but we know she'll be fine."

Kuzara feels confident going into Friday's meet against Bridgeport at home at 7 p.m., especially after the past couple of meets.

"These kids just don't quit," he said.

■ NHL

continued from page 10

in Scott Niedermayer, who'd have twice as many points if Lemaire would unleash him. Is the plan to let Housley roam free, eschewing defensive responsibilities as he's always done? That runs counter to everything Lemaire espouses, and while Housley may produce more goals, Lemaire's use of him could produce total team chaos.

So why did Calgary let go of one of its best?

Well, its chances of resigning him after the season were not good (he's a free agent to be), and though the Flames have been on fire since the All–Star break, they have a future to think about. Thanks to the special "Future Watch" section in the March 8 issue of The Hockey News (my Bible), which grades each team's organization, we find that Calgary gets a B+, the second–best mark (Buffalo), in large part because of its prospects on defense.

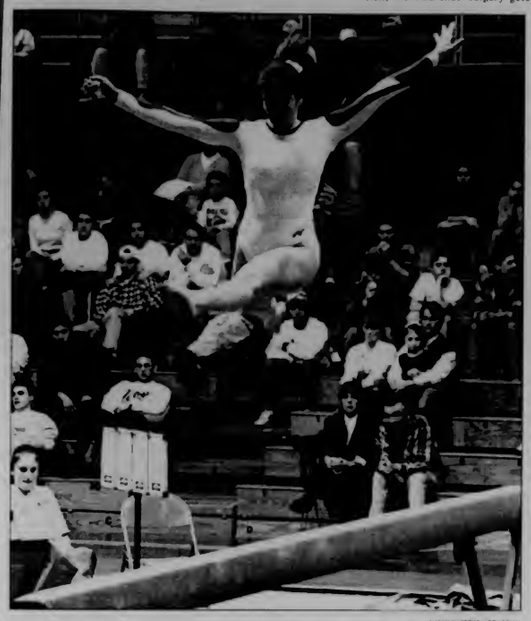
Is there another Housley there? Perhaps, but probably not. Yet there could be much greater rewards for Calgary if these players develop.

Witnessing player development is one of my favorite things in hockey. Some guys take a while to find their flow, but whenever they're ready, they get the chance. With such a strong corps of minor and junior leagues spanning the continent, there are more teenagers making the show than ever before.

A 25–year old goalie with a few years' experience may need a trade to get back to the NHL (Dominic Roussel), while a kid finds himself on Montreal's bench less than two months after winning a gold medal for his country at the World Junior Championships (Jose Theodore). The unpredictability forces you to keep on your toes. THN enables us to do that and peer into the future of a team like the Flames.

Its No. 2 blue–chipper is Denis Gauthier, just another doing his part to prove Francophones don't have to grow up to be goalies. A teammate of Theodore's at the WJC, the 6– foot–2, 195–pounder has a real mean streak, a smooth stride, and excellent skills. The Canadian team at the WJC was a team like the 1988–89 Flames, so much greater than the sum of its parts. Gauthier was one key cog, and along with Joel Bouchard (an AHL All–Star who had a cup of coffee in Calgary this year) and Boston University's Chris O'Sullivan, he'll ensure the Flames won't die on defense.

Ted Kottler is Collegian columnist.



LUANN IN BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics squad edged out New Hampshire 191.050 to 190.250.

■ Seniors

continued from page 10

Americans last year, each with a G.P.A. of 4.0.

In their four years here at UMass, both have prospered greatly from being athletes at the University. Both spoke of the team as a family, something that will always be a part of them.

"I am really going to miss the whole team atmosphere. There are so many guys that care about you," Fulmer said.

"I think that I am going to miss the guys and coaches. The overall team attitude of UMass, where everyone pulls together, inside and outside of the gym," Goldman said.

When reminiscing about their time here at UMass, they both coincidentally mentioned the same event as their most fond memory.

"When Syracuse came here last year, and we beat them," Fulmer said. "We were down by a point going into the last event. We hit on all of our routines, and nipped them in the end. You have to understand this was UMass, an unranked team, knocking off Syracuse. I'll never forget the looks on their faces as they left the gym."

"Without a doubt, that was incredible. I scored a 9.6 on the parallel bars at that meet. Just knowing that I had a part in such a huge win was extremely rewarding," Goldman said.

After their careers are over at UMass, both gymnasts have plans to keep the sport in their future. They are hoping to become United States Gymnastics Federation judges. This would give them the opportunity to preside over Olympic and NCAA events.

"No matter what, gymnastics will be a part of my life," Goldman said.

After helping UMass win their eighth straight New England Championship, their last regular season meet, they were both feeling sentimental.

"All I can say is that UMass gymnastics has been awesome. I really do not know what I would have done without it. It has given me the chance to travel, meet new people, and make some of the best friends that I will ever have," Fulmer said. "I would not have traded it for anything."

Although they are leaving the University soon, they leave behind a great legacy. They both played a significant part in turning the gymnastics program at UMass around.

When speaking to the younger gymnasts of the team, the effect that these two seniors have had on them becomes evident. Every freshmen recalled an instance where one of these gymnasts helped them out.

"I have learned a tremendous amount from Steve and Andy," freshman Phil Lieberman said.

Goldman and Fulmer are two gymnasts who will always be remembered for their roles in UMass' rise towards the top of the collegiate gymnastic world.

■ Fans

continued from page 10

opposing goalie. After the home team scores, its fans point at the guilty goalie chanting "Steve, steve, steve."

For two seasons when goalies came to UMass, they got a break from the abuse. Not this year. It started meekly, with just Lestuk, his friends and a few other scattered fans trying to make their voices carry. It has caught on though. Every time the Minutemen score at home this season, the crowd rides the goalie with the familiar derision.

And nowhere is it louder than in section T, where Lestuk still leads the cheers.

Mallen has begged for fans to get involved, and this season they have heeded his call.

"They've been a lot more vocal," said alternate captain Mike Evans. "They've been pretty supportive and they're getting more so."

The size of the UMass home crowds are deceiving. The attendance regularly lands in the 3000–4000 range leaving a lot of empty seats, but if you took those fans and moved them into just about any other Hockey East arena, the buildings would be over flowing.

While Saturday's final regular season game against Northeastern didn't bring out the most fans ever for a UMass game, it did draw the most intelligent and enthusiastic of the bunch.

In addition to the "Mallen Center" banner, two kids with a sign with the phrase "Sal Man–Goal–naro" made their way around the building.

At Boston University, if the officials make a questionable call against the Terriers, the fans at Walter Brown Arena blast the officials loudly. Consequently officials think twice before making a call at BU.

When Dennis Wright was whistled for a hitting from behind infraction midway through the third period Saturday, the UMass fans came to life.

"A rope, a tree, hang the referee!" they began, followed by "I'm blind, I'm deaf, I wanna be a ref."

When those got old, the fans attacked HF official Steve McBride with: "McBride sucks, McBride sucks!" over and over again.

What has really ignited the fans however are shootouts. With the entire crowd on its feet urging them on, the Minutemen are 4–2 in shootouts.

"It's great to be skating down the ice and hearing the people cheering like that," Manganaro said. "It took us some time to get some experience to realize what we had to do to win in this league and it has taken them [the fans] some time to learn what hockey is, but they're doing that and it's going to come a long way in the future."

BU is usually one of the toughest places for an opposing team to play, but with the majority of its fan base coming from the student body, the Terriers will be lacking support this weekend with a lot of their fans on spring break.

The BU ticket office reports that there are still a lot of tickets left for this weekend's playoff series with the Minutemen. Mallen is urging UMass fans to head to Boston to back his squad in the postseason.

"It's a great atmosphere to watch a game, in terms of hoopla and noise," Mallen said. "That's the place where the fans are the rowdiest. To have our support there would be a great boost."

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's
Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen

Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered seal!! Hay,Hay!.. The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!* the ¡%$@#$*! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam

Perfectly Natural
LOSE WEIGHT BY SPRING BREAK! 5% off any bottle or program
Ready to put on that bathing suit?
We have every confidence that we carry the best weight loss programs available!
Herbal Health & Fitness Products
321 Main St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)253-7716 • Closed Wed
SAFE, EASY, effective, all natural herbal combos STANDARDIZED

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC. IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Any Two Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax
Spring Specials Save in Twos 256-6100
Two Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax
Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones
CANTONE'S PIZZA 256-6100 45 RPM 481 West Street Amherst, MA
FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm - 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa
Any Two Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax
No Coupons Needed With These Specials 256-6100
Any Two Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

Your Liberal Arts Education Makes You The Ideal Candidate For Rutgers' MBA Program In Professional Accounting
- Earn an MBA degree from one of the country's leading universities
- A 14-month, full-time program makes you eligible to take the CPA exam
- Applicants with no undergraduate business background are welcome
- Take advantage of internships, and employment opportunities with top firms

A Message From Our Director
Don't let anyone tell you that accounting is 'boring,' or that it's not the right profession for you. In today's world, computers are doing all the 'boring' tasks accountants used to do. In fact, accounting is rapidly changing into a very exciting profession, with a wealth of new job opportunities.
Your background in liberal arts, coupled with the Rutgers MBA in Professional Accounting, will set you up in a new and rewarding career. Do call us today!
MBA Program in Professional Accounting
Dr. Ephraim F. Sudit, Director
Rutgers University
Graduate School of Management
University Heights, 180 University Avenue
Newark, New Jersey 07102-1895
For Further Information Call Toll Free 1-800-841-1912
E-mail: sudit@andromeda.rutgers.edu
Fax: 1-201-648-1424
THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY RUTGERS
Visit us on the internet at: http://www.rutgers.edu/accounting/raw/ru_pa/main.htm

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNIVERSITY PRODUCTIONS & CONCERTS – UPC Coffeehouse sign up at the Coffeehouse Meeting tonight at 8:00 in the Walnut Room. EVERYONE IS WELCOME! Come get involved.

CAMPUS COMICS & CARDS
Now mail order system! Order any comics & cards @ reduced prices. 50% off Magic singles. $3 for posters. Star Wars Blue $95. Starters $3. Boosters $2.50. Pick up forms @ the CC Concourse every Friday 11-1 or call Chris & Geoff @ 6-4809.

ATTENTION ALL MAJORS! Climb aboard with a career you'll love. Thursday March 7 @ 3:30-5:30 in CC A. Career opportunities, internships and co-ops available with over 85 of the hospitality industry's leading companies! Non-hotel undergrads and grads welcome!

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
For a good time – SEE us on the web at [illegible] We are the UMass edu-site on umass.edu! Check out our new hotel [illegible] Bartend with University Bartending 50% off! All you need to know to Bartend. Wearing Distance to campus 1-800-81-6849

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available immediately PUFFTON VILLAGE 1 bedroom apartment. Transfer lease for low low $433 per month. Compare with $505 per month. Call 549-5241

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Tercel 87 5000 miles manual 5-speed radials $1150 or B O
87 Lynx 4-door $1200 323-4161

EMPLOYMENT

University Productions & Concerts is now hiring for all positions. Pick up and application in the UPC office in the Student Union room 408 or call 5-2882 for information. Applications are due by March 15.

Photographer Wanted. Need photographer for wedding June 29, 1996, portfolio required 2 yrs experience 802-295-7911

FILL YOUR RESUME FILL YOUR WALLET University Directories, the nation's largest publisher of campus telephone directories is hiring students to sell advertising for the UMass telephone directory. The summer internship begins with expense paid, week long training on the UNC-CH campus. Gain experience in advertising sales. Average earnings are $3800-5750. College credit may be available. Travel opportunities exist. INTERVIEW DATE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13. CALL KATIE STROUPE @ 1-800-743-5556 to schedule an interview time.

Free T-Shirt + $$1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00 VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65. Qualified callers receive Free T-Shirts.

Seeking warm caring people for co-ed children's summer camp in upstate NY. Swimming, water & land sports, ABC, horses, dance, mountain biking, archery, computers, drama. Have kitchen & maintenance. Competitive salary. 1-800-782-5318

EMPLOYMENT

Piano Player Wanted for Wednesday evenings. Bring tape to Angela in Rm 820 Campus Center.

Framingham Brother-Sister camps in Massachusetts counselor positions for talented and energetic students as program specialists in all team sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball. 30 Tennis openings. Also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Pioneering, over night camping, ropes and rock climbing, weights, fitness and cycling, other openings include performing arts, fine arts, figure skating, newspaper, photography, yearbook, radio station, cooking, sewing and rocketry, all waterfront pool activities (swimming, diving, sailing, wind surfing, canoeing, kayaking) Top salaries, room board and travel. June 17th-August 17th. Inquire: Mah Kee Nac (Boys) 1-800-753-9118 Qanbee (Girls) 1-800-392-3757

FOR SALE

35 gallon fish tank call 549-4529

Powerbook 165 10MB RAM 160MB hard drive system 7.1 internal modem call Fred at 532-1158

SailearBoard No equipment $120 EMail EWOLFRAM @VIRA.ECS.UMASS.EDU or call 253-0254

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans script into text. 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot). Bubble jet printer. $1,400. 546-4236.

Planning a trip? $400 Airline voucher for sale. American Airlines $375 or B/o Kristi 549-7474

HOUSE FOR RENT

Houses for Rent - Cape Cod group summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. 508-477-6000

LOST

Keychain on 2/14/96 on Campus Center. Has tropical picture and says Bahamas in pictera. Please return to or call the Collegian at 5-2500. 113 Campus Center Basement. Please. I'm desperate!

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist. Vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1016 or Jason 367-0156

MISCELLANEOUS

A Glorious Apostle St. Jude Thadeous. True relative of Jesus and Mary. Pray for me. Most Sacred Heart of Jesus come to my aid that I may praise the mercies of God. M.M.

PERSONALS

Nicole! Happy Birthday! Welcome to the rest of your life. No more secrets for both of us. I'm glad we're friends! Enjoy your 21st, Leah. Love always, Jeff

ROOM FOR RENT

Montague House 3 rooms for rent 325 each 367-8608 John Lakeside

Large Room, private bath, walk-in closet. Mill Valley, bushire $300 Lori 256-0877

Room for rent — One bedroom available for 3—1-96. Ideal for one or two persons. On two bus routes, also a close walk to campus. Call Colleen or Angela @ 549-5265.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent Belchertown. Beautiful house for info. Call Jaime 323-7560

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

RESUME WRITING. Professional, individualized, personalized to your needs. Josh 546-4982

TRAVEL

Spring Break Condos!
Marco Island Florida
Pool parties, boats
$69/pp per week
717-472-1414

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $129
Ocean Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1-800-234-7007

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington #209! UMass ski club. 545-3432

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters door to door affordable, advanced reservation. 253-1350

WANTED

Buying STAR WARS, Transformers, GI Joe and Hotwheels! Will before 1988. Call 413-562-9613

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.
All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Sparky's Safety Spot
PROTECT YOUR HOME FROM WILDFIRE
Create a safety zone around your home by clearing flammable vegetation.
Keep your roof clear of accumulated leaves and needles.
Discuss community fire safety with your neighbors
NFPA
National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

Guess what Johnny's bringing for Show and Tell today.
Every day, thousands of kids bring guns to school. Find out how to help get guns out of the hands of children. Call 1-800-WE-PREVENT
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam
Not one more lost life. Not one more grieving family. Not one more.
CRIME

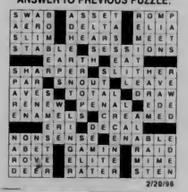
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

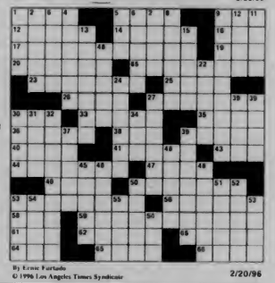
Edited by Trudie Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Wild West's Wyatt
5 Seasoning
9 "— goes there?"
12 Shade providers
14 Tangle
16 Fashion line
17 Home
19 Stat for Maddux
20 Swift's style
21 Lift
23 Side dishes, the French way
25 Wash 100
26 Speak using hands
27 Loud-voiced one
30 DeLuise
33 Succinct
35 New Rochelle school
36 Fixes the text
38 Aviation prefix
39 Overall fabric
40 Wriggling
41 Silly ones
43 French connections
44 Make ready
47 Naples native, for short
49 Mended by a cobbler
50 Doing well
53 Alien
56 Do an usher's job
58 Sugar Ray stat
59 Foundation
61 Knockout number
62 Join
63 Smattering
64 Compass dir.
65 Superlative endings
66 Exigency

DOWN
1 English letters
2 Vicinities
3 "Giant" ranch
4 Pauline's "adventures"
5 Draft org.
6 Feeds the kitty
7 Wilde's "The Ballad of — Reading —"
8 Tubb of country music
9 Sharpener
10 Decorated one
11 Bridge expert Sharif
13 Some are dire
15 Embankment
18 Have second thoughts
22 "Tomorrow" singer
24 Infuriate
27 Clear day rain
28 Step — hurry
29 St. Louis team
30 Prolouna
31 Baltic feeder
32 Landmark
34 Bishopric
37 Sleno's sipups
39 "Momme —"
42 Ringo
45 Tokias
46 Made over
48 Simon's "— Yonkers"
50 " . . ready —!"
51 Sierra —
52 "Tootsie" star
53 Mel and Ed
54 Maur music makers
55 Miscalculates
57 — off: annoyed
60 Overhead trains

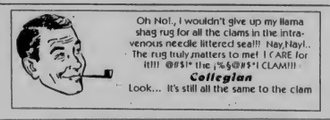
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





2/20/96

By Krone Fortado
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate



Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay, Nay!.. The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!* the ¡%$@#$! CLAM!!!!

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) — Diplomacy serves you well in business and personal matters. Do not expect too much from others and you will be pleasantly surprised. Research provides information that will save you money.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — You can expect to make significant progress with a business project now. Useful agreements are finalized. Everything should go according to plan.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — Someone influential takes notice when you put forth greater effort. Higher-ups want to turn on the green light for a new project. Keep your credit good. Repay debts and favors as soon as possible.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Your creative vision is powerful today. A positive attitude will encourage someone close to your heart. Look for a transformation in a close personal relationship.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Look beyond immediate problems. The financial outlook is bright. A long-distance call announces a new opportunity. A special relationship intensifies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Communications are in the spotlight. Something you see on TV gives you an employment idea. Attending seminars or night school could increase your earning potential!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The emphasis today is on money, payments and collections. If your social life seems dull, reach out to new people. Joining a charitable group puts you in touch with like-minded individuals. Extend an invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — A career choice you make now could lead to a big change in lifestyle. Family members look to you for leadership. Do not let them down. Household projects proceed smoothly. The love temperature soars.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Make a special effort to accommodate people who work behind the scenes. Cultivate the good will of someone who could play a big role in your career. So-called "bargains" may be anything but.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Focus on work assignments that provide an outlet for your creativity. Artistic endeavors enjoy particularly beneficial influences. Friends prove sympathetic and helpful. Repay favors as fast as you can. Romance deepens when you make concessions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — Teamwork pays huge dividends now. Gather tax materials for your accountant. Keep receipts in a safe place. Your intuition regarding a person or problem is right on target. Romantic partner appreciates your direct approach.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — An opportunity to make long-range financial plans will arise. A mutual investment could pay poor dividends. Look elsewhere. Health and fitness should be a priority. Provide teens with a shoulder to lean on.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Jim's Journal By Jim

Ruth wants to start exercising.
She's joining a health club to do weights.
She also wants to start jogging.
"You could use it too," she said.

Dilbert By Scott Lee

I HAVE TO TURN THIS FIFTY-PAGE PROPOSAL INTO A ONE-PARAGRAPH EXECUTIVE SUMMARY FOR OUR CEO. IT'S IMPOSSIBLE.
SIMPLE.
HOW ABOUT "GIVE US THREE MILLION DOLLARS SO WE CAN BUY COOL TECHNOLOGY, PUMP UP OUR RESUMÉS AND ESCAPE THIS FESTERING BOIL. YOU CALL A COMPANY"?
I FEEL OBLIGATED TO SAY SOMETHING ABOUT OUR CUSTOMERS.
HOW ABOUT "I'M GLAD I'M NOT ONE OF THEM"

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

MY ROOMIE OWN, MOM- A BIT SMALLISH
YOU'LL GET USED TO IT, DEAR. WHAT'S YOUR ROOMIE LIKE?
CAGE? SHE'S, UH...
ALIVE, AND TOTHER TERRIBLE, TERRIFYING, WORSE THAN THE LOCKET THING EVER.
SHE'S A WEIRDO, A NUT. SHE'S AN ABSOLUTE HORROR. SHE'S A TOTAL PSYCHOTIC AND SHE'S PROBABLY MURDER ME IN MY SLEEP MOM
JOHANN?
SHE'S OKAY, I GUESS.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

I SURE AM HUNGRY...
DID SOMEONE SAY...HUNGRY?
WH- WHO ARE YOU?
ALLOW ME TO DEMONSTRATE... I AM FOOD BOY, AND I CAN HELP YOU... HERE, HAVE A JUICY CHEESEBURGER POOF!
THANKS - BUT WHAT IF I DID BEING A VEGETARIAN?
IMPOSSIBLE... I'LL EATEM THEM ALL

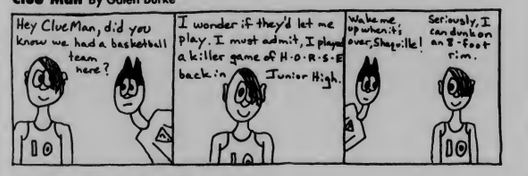
Hannahthority By Mo

Awhile ago, my cousin Molly (Maureen, Leah and Maureen went to brunch
When we were done eating, I suddenly said to Leah and Maureen "you can leave."
My friend Rob wasn't there, but this is what he looks like.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

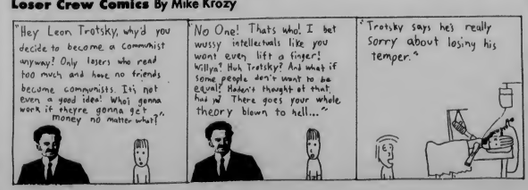
MOVE IT BRAND IT POTATOES JON@ART 96
BOMBADIER BRAND POTATO JON@ART 96
Touch ONLY Lightly BRAND YOU'LL SEE POTATOES JON@ART

Clue Man By Galen Burke



Hey CloveMan, did you know we had a basketball team here?
I wonder if they'd let me play. I must admit, I played a killer game of H-O-R-S-E back in Junior High.
Wake me up when it's over, Shapeville!
Seriously, I can dunk on an 8-foot rim.

Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy



Hey Leon Trotsky, why'd you decide to become a communist anyway? Only losers who read too much and have no friends become communists. It's not even a good idea! What gonna work if there gonna get money no matter what?
No One! That's who! I bet wussy intellectuals like you wont even lift a finger! Willya? Huh Trotsky? And what if some people don't want to be equal? Makes thought of that, huh w There goes your whole theory blown to hell...
Trotsky says he's really sorry about losing his temper.

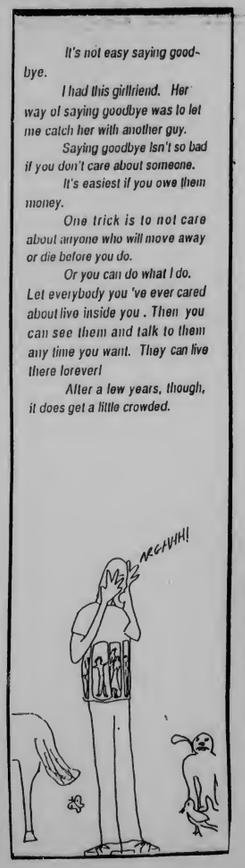
OLYMPIUS By Konrad Kubaska

TOWARDS OF YEARS HAVE GONE BY AND THE AGE OF GODS AND HEROES HAVE LONG BEEN FORGOTTEN, BUT ONLY TO BE REMEMBERED AS MYTH AND LEGEND!
...BUT THERE'S ONE MYTH THAT ANCIENT HEROES HAVE FORGOTTEN TO MENTION!
THE GODS KNEW THEY WOULD BE GONE AS TIME PASSED AND ALL AGREED TO CREATE ANOTHER GOD, A GOD WHO WOULD BE THE PERSONIFICATION OF NATURE, LIFE, EARTH AND THE UNIVERSE
AND SO, BORN OF THEIR BLOOD AND WHEN CHAOS AND DISORDER BEGAN TO REIGN, HE WOULD AWAKEN FROM HIS SLUMBER
IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN! WE HAVE TO RISE UP! ...UP!!!

OLYMPIUS By Konrad Kubaska

Close to Home By John McPherson

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom



It's not easy saying goodbye.
I had this girlfriend. Her way of saying goodbye was to let me catch her with another guy.
Saying goodbye isn't so bad if you don't care about someone.
It's easiest if you owe them money.
One trick is to not care about anyone who will move away or die before you do.
Or you can do what I do. Let everybody you've ever cared about live inside you. Then you can see them and talk to them any time you want. They can live there forever!
After a few years, though, it does get a little crowded.
NEVER!!!

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt "Newcastle" Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Chris "Dockstreet" Conner
Photo Technician ..... Ryan "Mad Dog" Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... Jeff "420 dank" Hodge
Production ..... Candice "Mudslide" Flemming
Rob "Pass the 'Schlager" Snow

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos Ziti/Italian Sausage Sauce Vegetable Taco	Steak and Salad Night

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll Hungarian Noodle Bake Tacos	Steak and Salad Night

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll Grilled Chicken Sandwich Tacos Stone Willy's Pizza Summit Subs	Steak and Salad Night

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos Ziti/Italian Sausage Sauce Vegetable Taco	Steak and Salad Night

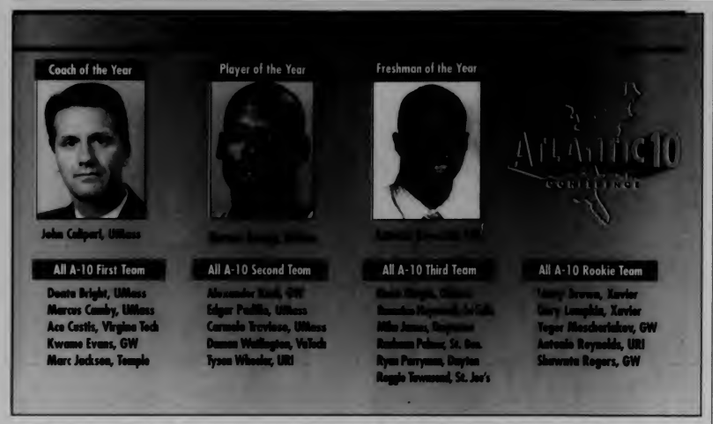
"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Quote of the Day

"Drive home safely.

–Penn St. fans jeering Michigan players following the Wolverines 5 a.m. car wreck."

Sports



All five UM starters claim All–Conference honors

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Just as it dominated its 1995–96 schedule, the Massachusetts men's basketball team dominated the Atlantic 10 honors yesterday after all five starters were named to All–Conference teams.

To highlight the list, Marcus Camby and John Calipari took home Player of the Year and Coach of the Year honors, respectively.

Camby and Donta Bright were named to the A–10's All–Conference first team while the Minutemen's guard tandem of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso were both named to the A–10's All–Conference second team.

Rounding out the UMass honorees was senior Dana Dingle earning a spot on the A–10 All–Conference third team. With the placement of all five starters on the All–Conference team, UMass becomes the first team in A–10 history to have all five starters honored.

Camby was the odds–on–favorite to win Player of the Year honors and his award gives UMass the last two Player of the Year winners as Lou Roe earned the award a year ago. The 6–foot–11 center is averaging an A–10 best 21.4 points and 3.9 blocks per game. The junior captured an A–10 record six Player of the Week honors this season and is also the odds– on–favorite to earn National Player of the Year honors.

Calipari collected Coach of the Year honors for the third time in the last four years after leading the Minutemen to a 28–1 record and the UMass' fifth–straight A–10 regular season title. The Minutmen's nine–week run as the No. 1 team in the country also set an A–10 record. Calipari's record in his eight years at UMass stands at 186–70 (.727).

Rhode Island's Antonio Reynolds, who Calipari called a "warrior, a UMass player" captured Rookie of the Year honors for his outstanding freshman campaign in which he averaged 12.1 points and a rookie–best 8.5 rebounds per game. The 6–foot–6 forward posted a league season–high of 19 rebounds against Dayton on Jan. 14.

Joining Camby and Bright on the first team were Virginia Tech's Ace Custis, George Washington's Kwame Evans and Temple's Marc Jackson.

The second team consisted of GW's Alexander Koul, VaTech's Damon Watlington, URI's Tyson Wheeler and UMass' Travieso and Padilla.

Along with Dingle, La Salle's Romaine Haywood, Duquesne's Mike James, St. Bonaventure's Rashaan Palmer, Dayton's Ryan Perryman and St. Joseph's Reggie Townsend were all named to the third team.

Women's gym beats UNH, Laing leads squad to victory

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Don't let the record fool you.

After its 191.050–190.250 victory over New Hampshire Sunday afternoon, a quick glance at the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team's stat sheet shows the Minutewomen have a record of 4–4, suggesting mediocrity.

But, as anyone knowledgeable about the sport will note, wins and losses in collegiate gymnastics mean almost nothing in the regular season.

The fact that the Minutewomen, ranked 16th in the nation, have faced the No 1, 3 and 7 teams in the country helps to explain their .500 record.

Instead, success is measured by how high a team is scoring in its meets, and UMass did just that against UNH.

And, thanks in part to its floor routine, the Minutewomen escaped with a record–breaking win to boot.

Mediocre? The victory marks the first for UMass in the last four meetings with the Wildcats, and first ever for coach David Kuzara. What's more, UNH was just coming off its best meet of the year, scoring 191.350 to beat the region's No. 1 ranked team, Penn State.

"After a while you start to wonder if certain teams just have your number," Kuzara said. "So this win was really nice. I think we had been within a point the last two or three times. So to earn a victory today is a great thing even if it was going to come down to the last routine again."

Which it did.

Trailing UNH going into the final event, the floor exercise, UMass needed to come up big while the Wildcats were to compete on the balance beam, a strong routine for them. The Minutewomen did in fact rise to the occasion, to say the least, as they broke the all–time UMass record in the event, scoring a 48.575.

Junior Lianne Laing put forth a near flawless performance, registering a 9.875, good for first in the meet.

Understandably, UMass swept this event, as junior Tara Swartz and freshman Denise Johnson both nailed 9.800's in their routines.

As for the all–around, the only two winners were from the home team, as Laing (38.500) and Swartz (38.100) took those honors.

These two athletes have been among the most consistent Minutewomen this season.

The vault was also won by Laing, who scored a 9.775, while second and third place went to Iana Reardon (9.650) and Stacey Evans (9.625) of UNH.

"I'm thrilled," Laing said. "We've really been sticking together as a team, which is so important. And it's especially nice to see that everyone is supporting each other, and encouraging them to do well.

"Personally, I thought I did well. I'm glad my teammates have been supporting me. I really wanted to hit everything so we didn't have many mistakes today."

The one–two punch of Swartz and Johnson took the uneven bars, as Swartz tallied a 9.925 and the talented rookie a 9.800. Third place belonged to Wildcat Cara

Turn to WOMEN'S GYM, page 7

RYAN S. TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

The No. 9 Massachusetts men's gymnastics team took first place in New Englands by a comfortable 12–point margin.

Men's gym rocks New Enlgand's

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team was clearly the team to beat at this weekend's New England Championships, as the Minutemen captured all six individual events, including the all around, on the way to their eighth straight championship.

Massachusetts blew away the competition, finishing ahead of the second place team by over 12 points. Senior co– captain Steve Goldman, led the way for UMass, capturing first place finishes on the still rings and parallel bars with scores of 9.450.

Junior Gabe Columbus won the floor exercise with a score of 9.700. Columbus was also the meets' top all–around finisher with a score of 53.800.

Another strong performance was tallied by junior Ruslan Shupak, who took first place on the vault with a score of 9.550. Shupak also turned in solid routines on the parallel bars, and floor exercises.

Outstanding performances were turned in by some of the team's underclassmen. Freshmen Brad LeClair and Phil Lieberman both had first place finishes. LeClair finished in first place on the pommel horse with a 9.400, and Lieberman won the high bar with a score of 9.450.

"It feels really good to hit on your routine, and be there for the team," Lieberman said.

This season, UMass coach Roy Johnson brought in a large recruiting class and it seems to be paying off. Most of the freshmen, especially LeClair and Lieberman are making huge contributions to the team. Mike Comeau is another young gymnast, who is improving significantly at every meet. This high number of placing freshmen have made the Minutemen tough to compete with.

The next step for the Minutemen is the ECAC Championships on Sat., March 9 held in nearby Springfield.

Not only is this meet the conference championship, but it will also effect the team's post–season hopes. In order to qualify for the NCAA championships, UMass must finish within the top six teams overall in the national rankings. Prior to the New Englands, the team was ranked ninth in the country.

Currently, a team score of 224 would be good enough to achieve a NCAA berth as Massachusetts had a team score of 221 going into the week. The score of 219 at the New Englands was a little off the pace, making a strong performance at the ECAC's a must.

"We need to get a score of around 223, when we go down to the ECAC's. I believe that it is something that we are definitely capable of," Johnson said.

This season has been a satisfying one for the gymnastics team. It has maintained a top 12 ranking throughout the year, and have beaten many high caliber teams in the nation. However, the ultimate goal is to qualify for the NCAA Championships, something that appears to be well within its reach. One more strong performance would put the Minutemen right in a position to qualify.

"It is a definite possibility. If we go down, and the team pulls together like we know we can, we will get the score we need for the NCAA's," Goldman said.

Gretzky turns Blue, Fuhr still in the net

Ted Kottler on the NHL

The deal is done. He will still wear No. 99, but never again on the Left Coast or in Canada. Wayne Gretzky is a St. Louis Blue, and a lot of other teams are green with envy.

Not that they should be. Without letting my dislike of Blues' coach Mike Keenan interfere, I say this one's far less of a boon to St. Louis than Keenan thinks. Yay, he'll form a nice 1–2 attack with Brett Hull, but isn't that the thinking Montreal coach Jacques Demers employed in acquiring Pierre Turgeon to go with Vincent Damphousse and Mark Recchi? Where's Demers now, Keenan, and where did Montreal go with them? Not the playoffs.

They'll make it this time, with plenty of credit due to those three, but plenty more in order for the surprising offensive forces on the Canadiens roster.

That's part of Keenan's problem; he's always so sure of what everyone's capable of that he refuses to give anyone unestablished a chance. Except, of course, Chris Pronger, who's done nothing to make Keenan look good for losing Brendan Shanahan.

But enough about Keenan: Gretzky's the story. In just his second game with the Blues (they could also be called the Reds, there's so much of that color in their new uniforms) he got a don't–come–around–here–no–more elbow to the head from former Edmonton teammate Kelly Buchberger (nice guy, Kelly) that clouds his immediate future. Too bad, since the Blues are about to begin a three game home stand. Fans will file into the Kiel Center and keel over at the site of their team, boring as ever.

One more thing on St. Louis: part of the reason goalie Grant Fuhr has played almost every minute this season is the Blues don't have anyone else. That should be obvious to anyone who knows Keenan, who's quicker to give the hook than any NHL coach. Fuhr has done reasonably well, but there are a lot of other goalies who have done better this year and aren't getting Fuhr's fanfare because they also have competent backups.

Lost in the shuffle of the Gretzky trade was another blockbuster that saw Phil Housley move from Calgary to New Jersey for Jocelyn Lemieux, Tommy Albelin and Cale Hulse.

Last week I wrote that the Flames are well on their way to a playoff berth, and Housley had a lot to do with it. It's still understandable why Calgary dealt him (more on that later), but it's puzzling how he ended up in East Rutherford.

The Devils are one of the league's most offensively conservative teams. They take no chances with the puck. Once they score (never a guarantee), they trap on every shift instead of nine–tenths of them.

Housley's position is listed as defense, but his real worth is in the other team's zone. A sensational skater with Hall of Fame passing skills and a fine shot (he's third behind Ray Bourque and Gary Suter for goals by a defenseman in 1995–96), Housley should do wonders for New Jersey's middling offense.

If Jacques Lemaire lets him. He's already got a player of Housley's mold with better defensive ability

Turn to NHL, page 7

UM hockey fans, smarter, louder

Matt Vautour

The banner that hung in the Southwest corner of the William D. Mullins read "Welcome to the Mullen Center."

The sign itself wasn't particularly big, and its message wasn't even that clever, but the fact that it existed sent a message about UMass hockey fans.

When the Mullins Center was still in the planning stages, the designers had hockey in mind, but with sweeping success of the men's basketball team, in the eyes of fans, the still fledgling hockey program was the building's "other" resident. The Mullins could be... well... "The Calipari Center."

While hockey isn't on the threshold of overtaking hoop's popularity in the Pioneer Valley, the fan base is increasing gradually. What has increased at a rapid rate is the fans' understanding of the sport and how to be a true hockey fan.

When Marco Polo traveled from Europe to the Far East, he brought back things that changed Western Civilization forever. When Mark Lestuk traveled on the road with the UMass hockey team, he came back and changed the way Mullins fans cheer at hockey games.

Lestuk, a sophomore from New Jersey is a perfect example of a blossoming hockey fan. While the Garden State doesn't exactly harvest hockey fans, at least not of the collegiate variety, Lestuk came to the Happy Valley and began following Joe Mullen's squad.

He enjoyed UMass hockey so much, that he took to the road. Watching what the more entrenched fans did, he brought back their traditions to UMass.

One constant in college hockey cheering is jeering the

Turn to FANS, page 7

Men's gym seniors key to success

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

The men's gymnastics team has come a long way in four years. Seniors Steve Goldman and Andy Fulmer have had as much to do with the team's recent success. Currently, the team is ranked ninth in the nation, and is vying for a berth in the NCAA championships something that, three years ago, no one would have dreamed of.

"When I was a freshman, the team's ability level was not that high. We certainly were not ranked like this. However, the overall team attitude was real positive, and we always did the best we could," Goldman said. "I never would have thought that we would have come this far, in such a short time."

Both gymnasts have been consistent performers who display the intensity and drive that the is needed from older team members.

"Steve is an extremely hard worker. It just seems that he has more energy than anyone," junior Gabe Columbus said. "It does not matter, if it is at practice, or during a meet. He is always giving his all."

In order for any team to be successful, it must have veteran leadership at the top, which is something Fulmer will long be remembered for.

"Andy kind of acted as an assistant coach. He would go up to individuals having trouble, and really help them set things straight," Columbus said.

Goldman and Fulmer have more to offer than just solid gymnastic credentials. Both were academic All

Turn to SENIORS, page7

Let's get ready to rumble!
The St. Bonaventure Bonnies will play the Dayton Flyers in a first–round Atlantic 10 Tournament match–up. The winner will take on UMass (See Sports, page 10).

New phone system makes tax filing easy
This year, Telefile, a new system that allows people to file their taxes over the phone, will be available to many Mass. residents (See story, page 3).

101 things to do with mosh
IMAGO makes creative use of masks, theater and comedy in their upcoming performances (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
The icky weather will continue as rain, sleet and snow retains its grasp over the Valley. Temperatures will remain around freezing with little relief in sight. To put it bluntly — it ain't getting any warmer.
Today: HIGH: 30 LOW: 10
Tonight: HIGH: 30 LOW: 10
Tomorrow: HIGH: 30 LOW: 10

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 89 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1942 Wednesday, March 6, 1996

Morris speaks about hate in U.S.

SHANE KEENAN / COLLEGIAN

Morris S. Dees Jr. spoke on civil rights and white supremacy issues, last night in the Fine Arts Center.

By Humphrey brown III & Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

A slight murmur from the crowd of 200 could be heard last night at the Fine Arts Center as Attorney Morris Dees stepped up to the podium to begin his lecture on white supremacy and hate groups in America.

"He's white," were the words whispered by those who didn't realize that the prominent and successful attorney speaking against the prejudices that are set upon people of color was white himself.

Yet, despite the fact that Morris Dees was indeed white, his message of understanding and tolerance crossed all racial boundaries.

The night began with a panel of speakers from various ethnic organizations on campus, congratulating one another on their joint efforts in making the event possible.

Nelson Acosta, of the ALANA Affairs Department, commented on how the collaboration between the Black Student Union, the Office of Jewish Affairs and HILEL was worth taking notice, especially in light of the rocky relationships these groups have shared in the past.

"This program was made possible by three groups who may have different ideas and may see the world differently, but we do know that we have a lot of common ground that we can work on," said Acosta.

After a few minutes of pre–lecture speaking, Dees was finally introduced and began speaking.

"America's changed drastically," said Dees in one of his first opening statements, referring to the conditions of how minorities and whites are living today as opposed to the way things were in earlier times.

"It's changed to the point that African–Americans, young people, white young people and just people of all colors don't even think much about the problems of the past," said Dees, "but they also face the deeply divided country, today."

Dees placed focus on the fact that no matter how much things have changed in the last 30 years or so, the basic and fundamental racist tendencies that plagued America in the years of the Civil Rights Movement and before, still play a major role in contemporary American society.

"You wonder, after 30 something years since the Civil Rights Movement, why are we dealing with these issues," said Dees, "Whose America is it? And what is America all about?"

He also emphasized that although the beliefs of the Klu Klux Klan and other white supremist groups aren't nearly as influential as they once were, such groups still pose a threat to the welfare of blacks and other minorities.

Through stories and personal experiences Dees painted a picture of the kind of hostility and violent actions that are associated with many white supremist groups.

He mentioned the 1981 Klu Klux Klan lynching of 19–year–old Michael Donald and the $7 million law suit that Dees filed in collaboration with Donald's mother, against the Klan, marking the first time that anyone filed suit against the entire Klan organization.

Dees recounted the poignant encounter between Donald's mother and James Tyger Knowles (one of the Klansmen responsible for the lynching) and the understanding and love exhibited by Donald's mother when Knowles asked her for forgiveness.

"He [Knowles] looked over to Mrs. Donald and said, 'Mrs. Donald, I hope you can find it in you're heart to forgive me for what I did to Michael.'" said Dees as he told the story to those in attendance. "And this old lady leaned back in her chair in front of that jury, looked him dead in the eyes and said, 'Son, I've already forgiven you.'"

Dees also mentioned several other accounts in which the acts of murder and violence committed against blacks and other minority groups were perpetrated by groups proclaiming white supremacy.

In all the stories, Dees tried convey a message of awareness, love and understanding, similar to that of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Dees ended his lecture with a nod to Dr. King and his belief in a unified country where whites and minorities come together to live in peace and unity.

Peres calls for forces to combat terrorism after suicide bombing

By Don Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Violating his own Mideast peace plan even as he tries to save it, Prime Minister Shimon Peres has authorized security forces to carry the war on terrorism into Palestinian-ruled cities and towns.

But after a suicide bombing in Tel Aviv brought the nine-day death toll in the worst-ever terror campaign against Israel to 57, anguished Israelis today increasingly questioned the very premise of peace with the Palestinians.

With elections less than three months away, the repeated horror of bodies blown apart on Israel's streets could spell the end for Peres and his vision of a "new Middle East" where Arabs and Jews live in prosperous harmony.

Monday's blast killed 13 people — about half of them children — as well as the bomber, and wounded 130, turning the bustling street outside Tel Aviv's largest shopping center into a jumble of broken bodies and wrecked cars.

The attacker apparently tried to enter the mall, which was packed with Israelis celebrating the Jewish holiday of Purim.

Drawing suspicions of police at the entrance, he retreated to a nearby row of cash machines and detonated the dynamite strapped to his body.

The blast hurled a woman's limbless body across the street, and killed a young girl while she clung to her mother's hand, said Eli Shutansy, who had been drinking coffee at a cafe nearby.

When the massive cloud of smoke drifted away, an empty baby carriage stood amid the rubble.

Political leaders of Hamas, the militant group responsible for the four suicide bombings, today took the unprecedented step of publicly urging their fighters to stop the attacks. But asked if the Hamas military wing would obey, Hamas leader Mahmoud Zahhar said only, "We are hoping so."

Further away, four Israeli soldiers died Monday when they stepped on a mine in south Lebanon, where Israel maintains an occupied buffer zone against guerrilla raids.

Monday's bombing in Tel Aviv, only a day after another suicide bomber blew apart a bus in Jerusalem, killing 18 and the attacker, forced Israel to reassess its policy of reacting to attacks in a manner primarily defensive.

Meeting at the Defense Ministry a mile from the bomb site, the Cabinet created an anti-terrorism task force with sweeping powers. Peres said. While the Cabinet met, crowds outside lit bonfires and shouted "We want war!" and "We want revenge!"

In an wildly militant eruption for peace-minded Tel Aviv, others shouted "Death to Arabs!" and one man held a sign calling for a "final solution" — paraphrasing the Nazi term for the Jewish Holocaust.

Peres said the task force will "act in every place to strike against and punish" the suicide bombers.

"We will reach every corner where this terror is rooted," he said.

Strikes in Palestinian-rule areas would violate the Israel-Palestinian peace accords, however, and badly discredit Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat among his people.

But in another move with dire consequences for the Palestinians' fledgling economy, Israel's army issued an order forbidding the West Bank's 1.2 million residents to leave their towns and villages — most formally autonomous — "until further notice."

The army also said Israeli citizens are forbidden to drive Palestinians from the West Bank into Israel, and Jewish settlers in the West Bank are forbidden to employ Palestinian workers.

Israel Radio suggested Israel might also expel Hamas leaders, although a similar move brought an international outcry in 1992.

A shaken Arafat said he was ready to cooperate fully with Israel in going after Palestinian militants.

He said he hoped Israel wouldn't be hasty and break off peace talks and thus "reward these terrorists."

Brig. Zakariya Baloushi, deputy chief of Palestinian intelligence, said Palestinian security forces have arrested the mastermind of three of the last four suicide bombings, identified as Mohammed Abu Wardeh, 28, of the West Bank town of Ramallah.

But Arafat's moves may be too little, and too late. Monday's bombing came four months to the day since the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin by a Jewish right-wing extremist, which plunged Israel into gloom but also created unprecedented public support for the peace process.

That has been turned on its head by the succession of bombings. Peres' lead in the polls has been wiped out and the right-wing opposition, whose leaders seek to salvage what they can of Israel's control in the West Bank and Gaza despite the establishment of Palestinian autonomy, appears headed for victory.

UVC holds televised talk; discussion focuses on racism

By Cristina Basto
Collegian Correspondent

The Union Video Center TV 19 (UVC) held a televised discussion with Morris Dees Jr., Director of the Southern Poverty Law Center, before his lecture at the Fine Arts Center on White Supremacist hate groups in the United States.

With him were Dr. Barbara Love and Dr. Maurianne Adams, teachers from the School of Education and Social Justice Program at the University of Massachusetts.

Among the participants, were representatives of the Black Student Union, The Office of ALANA Affairs, Hillel and The Office of Jewish Affairs.

The discussion was focused on how to combat racism and supremacist hate groups in the U.S. and how, according to Dees, it is important to close the racial gap. Dees said that we should, "begin to see each other as persons and not as blacks, Jewish, Latinos, etc."

In order to achieve this goal, Love pointed out the importance of open lines of dialogue among the different minority groups. She said that identifying common needs and goals as well as differences is an important step to work together.

Love said that it is essential to recognize that each racial group has had its own experience and history.

She said, "we need to learn from the other's experience and understand how, the way I see the world is different from the way you see it".

Dr. Adams talked about the situation of the Jewish community and its interaction with other minorities to achieve unity and cooperation.

She pointed out the conflictive identity as Jewish– Americans and at the same time as white–Americans. She said that each one is a consequence of a different process and should be understood separately.

Adams also talked about the parallel history of racism and oppression that the Jewish community can share with blacks and other minorities, but she pointed out the many ways in which it differs.

It is important to "acknowledge the ways that they are different and construct a dialogue that goes one, by one, by one," said Adams.

Responding to a question from the audience about the ways to combat subtle racism, Dees talked about how his organization tries to educate and make people aware towards this issue. He pointed out how institutionalized racism generates a subtle racism that affects minorities' opportunities of advancement in society.

Responding to a question about the difficulty of maintaining and enforcing equality as well as keeping an individual identity at the same time, Love made an comment on the need of equity rather than equality. Love clarified, that equity means removing the institutional barriers

Turn to DEBATE, page 3

HRTA to sponsor annual career day in CCA

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Hotel, Restaurant, and Travel Administration (HRTA) Department will be sponsoring the 22nd annual Career Day tomorrow in the Campus Center Auditorium from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"We feel that Career Day is a great opportunity for students of all levels," said junior Kristen Sykes, the assistant marketing chair of Career Day. "Not only can seniors find employment, but other students can network and find internships and co–ops."

Over 70 hospitality companies will be present at Career Day, including such companies as Walt Disney, the Marriot, Holiday Inn, Foxwoods and Crown Plaza resorts.

"Companies have been very happy with the treatment which they have received at our Career Days, which has expanded our interest and range of businesses," Sykes said.

The HRTA is one of very few recruiting departments at the University which allows companies to come to the campus in search of future employees.

"Career Day is a great chance for students to get their foot in the door," said junior Katrina Kreismanis, assistant regional committee chair for Career Day. "Students can get their name out and gain further knowledge of companies."

The HRTA stresses that Career Day is for students of all majors and departments.

"It is very important for all students to come; the companies are interested in students of all majors," Kreismanis said.

Companies will be offering internships, co–ops and permanent positions to all students. Private interviewing facilities will be available for student candidates. Also, a new coordinated resume service and job–posting service will be available for the convenience of both the students and businesses.

SHANE KEENAN / COLLEGIAN

Kristin Sykes, pictured far left, and Katrina Kreismanis, both junior HRTA majors, talk with Todd Sibley, a senior BDIC major, about the benefits of attending the 22nd annual Career Day which will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium tomorrow.

"I will be attending Career Day, hopefully, in order to get a job, a good job," said HRTA major Emily Megan. "Career day is a great way for us to meet an expansive number of companies all in one day."

For Your Information

PIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, March 6

Religious — Israeli dancing will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 North Pleasant St.

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with Marian Marzynski's Shteil — a portrayal of a small community in the midst of an indifferent or hostile majority, where difference breeds suspicion and conflict between Jews and Catholics. The film will be screened at 7 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, Rm. 231.

Meeting — The UMass HANDS sign language club will meet at 7 p.m. at Herter Hall, Rm. 217. For more information, stop by the HANDS office, Student Union Room 306 or call Shana at 253-0136 or the HANDS office at 545-1925.

Bi-Rap Group — The Bi Rap Group will hold its weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in the LBGA office, Rm. 413B in the Student Union (right above the Munchie Store). Primary topic will be bisexuality and the press.

Meeting — Israel Programs Night. Learn about programs to work, study or visit in Israel. Rob Schulman, Activities Coordinator for the University Student Department of the World Zionist Organization will hold an informational meeting about ways to spend time in Israel. The meeting will be held in Campus Center, Rm. 904-08 at 7 p.m.

Thursday, March 7

Lecture — The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series presents Professor John Edgar Wideman's lecture, "Cattle Killing: Reading from Work in Progress," at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge. The event is free to the public.

Workshop — There will be a free test taking workshop offered by the Learning Resources Center from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. To register, call 545-5334.

Concert — The battle for the best unsigned band will happen at the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. Watch five of the hottest regional bands compete for the for the top spot at "Unwailed, the Ultamite Band & Board Event" — where the best bands around the country battle it out in Vail, Colorado, March 29–31, while the best snowboarders thrash it out. The concert is free, and will feature special guest For Chameleon.

OutReach — the LBGA "coming out" discussion group will meet at 7 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). We will be discussing coming out to family members.

Let's Talk about Sex, Ba–By — the LBGA sex issues discussion group will meet at 8 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). Exact topic still to be announced.

Art Gallery hanging/ reception — The UMass Residential Arts Program and Wheeler Art Gallery (located in Central Residential Area, across from New Africa House) present an opportunity for students to hang their own art work in a show entitled "Virtual Web Site." Students with all levels of artistic experience with work in any medium are encouraged to hang their work in with the assistance of the residential arts staff. Staff members will be present for the hanging from 4 p.m. – 6 p.m. A reception for the public will take place at 6:30 p.m. The exhibit will run until March 12. For more information, call the gallery at 545-2804.

Meeting — There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting to make a banner for whales at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. For more information, call Nina Ferrante at 546–0358.

Friday, March 8

Panel discussion — The Women of Color Program is proud to host an International Women's Day Breakfast, with a panel discussion entitled "Women's Health Issues: Locally, Nationally and Internationally" from 9 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. at the Bangs Community Center, Boltwood Walk, Amherst. The keynote speaker will be Ms. Laura Ramos, a specialist in the field of sexually transmitted disease and HIV/AIDS prevention. Please join us in exploring, discussing and sharing your ideas around the this topic. Breakfast included.

Discussion — Community action forum. Join several of our most engaging students, faulty and staff for an important discussion. The topic: "Men are the predominant perpetrators of sexual violence on campus. What campus resources are directed towards men in addressing this important issue and are they adequate?" The discussion will take place in Campus Center, Rm 805/809 from 3–5 p.m.

Lecture — "Who's Laughing Now?: Women, Humor and Making Trouble," by Professor Enzheng Tong, Wesleyan University. Lecture illustrated with slides. Takes place at Machmer Hall, Room E–14 from 4:30 p.m. – 6:30 p.m.

Film — Celebrating International Women's Day, A Profile of Silvia Baraldini will be shown and two speakers will talk about Silvia Baraldini and lead a discussion. The event is free, and will take place at Seelye Hall, Smith College at 7 p.m.

Special event — International Women's Day Celebration presents — Yagottawanna and How to Make an American Quilt. Yagottawanna is three talented women who sing, write and perform songs of all varieties. Movie follows performance. The event is free, and takes place at the Bluewall, in the Campus Center, at 8 p.m.

Notices

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbalah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7 p.m. – 8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586–5812 or 549–2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on–site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545–2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585–0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5 p.m. – 6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545– 4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253– 0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546–2363 or 546– 5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Correction

In yesterday's article about the vigil for the bombing in Israel, a speaker was misidentified. The speaker was Elana Silverman.In yesterday's story on Allen Ginsberg, the introducer of the event was misidentified as Lisa Levy. The introducer was Katie LeBesco.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

Campus Police Log

Motor vehicle theft

March 3

A vehicle, reportedly stolen from Parking Lot 11, was recovered by the Holyoke Police Department.

Vandalism

March 2

There was graffiti written on an elevator panel in McNamara Residence Hall.

There was damage to a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

A window on a tow truck on Southwest Circle was reportedly smashed.

March 3

Tires were reportedly smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

March 4

A window was smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

A vehicle in Parking Lot 47 had a smashed window.

Burglary/ breaking & entering

March 2

Two vehicles were broken into in Parking Lot 11.

March 3

Another vehicle was broken into in Parking Lot 11.

March 4

A vehicle in Parking Lot 13 was broken into and the radar detector was stolen.

Medical emergency

March 2

An individual with a shoulder injury was transported from Cashin Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

March 3

A diabetic individual was taken from Franklin Dining Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual, who was having a problem with medication, was taken from Emerson Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

March 4

An individual in Herter Hall, having an adverse reaction to medication, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual in Cance Residence Hall with back problems was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

March 5

An individual with an irregular heartbeat in John Q. Adams Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Accident

March 3

One vehicle backed into another vehicle on Tillson Farm Road.

There was a three vehicle accident on Commonwealth Avenue, caused by icy road conditions. The owners exchanged paperwork.

There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive.

After another two vehicle accident on Commonwealth Avenue, Kevin Walters, of Rolling Green, Amherst, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital, complaining of neck pain.

A vehicle in Parking Lot 22 was damaged.

March 4

A report was filed on an accident which occurred on March 2.

Fire alarm

March 3

There was a toaster fire in a room in Pierpont Residence Hall.

March 4

Smoke caused by a microwave in the kitchen of Health Services activated an alarm.

Assist agency

March 4

UMass police helped control traffic on Massachusetts Avenue during plowing.

UMass police helped Amherst police with a motor vehicle stop on Massachusetts Avenue.

Disorderly conduct

March 4

An individual cut off another vehicle in the Campus Center garage and proceeded to threatened the other vehicle operator.

Larceny

March 4

An individual in Brown Residence Hall reported her wallet stolen.

An individual in Boyden Gymnasium reported her wallet stolen.

An individual in Washington Residence Hall reported he did not receive checks mailed to him. The checks had been used to purchase merchandise.

Traffic Stop

March 4

Derek S. Brady, 21, of 62 Wareham St., Carver, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a revoked license. He was also charged with speedy, operating after revocation of a registration plate and the impeded operation of a motor vehicle.

Assault & battery

March 5

Amherst Police reported their officer was at Cooley Dickinson Hospital with a victim who was assaulted at a bus stop on North Pleasant Street. The situation is under investigation.

Amherst Cinema

Lowest Popcorn, Soda and Candy Prices in the Valley!! Got a Small Popcorn, Small Soda and Small Candy Bar - All three for just $2.00!!
Free refills on all large and extra large sodas with UMass I.D. !!

Ticket Price for Students with ID always just $4.00 . . .

Located in Downtown Amherst - Across from the Jones Library

Call 253-5426 for Current Movie Listings & Times.

Now Playing . . .
Leaving Las Vegas
Show Times: Friday (3/1) & Saturday (3/2) 7pm & 9pm
Sunday (3/3) thru Thursday (3/7) 7:30pm

Magic Lantern
40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
1996 Amateur Night Season
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM
featuring . . . TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place & runner-up prizes
Kick off bash tonight, 8:00 PM
Booking Private Parties now
Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275
Free Admission With This Ad
ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rte. 9 South to Rte. 181 West to Rte. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right
BOSTON RD. • Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

Attention
Skiers and Boarders:
Stratton®
New England's Largest Single Mountain
THIS SUNDAY, MARCH 10th
LEAVE:
7:00 a.m. - Southwest Horseshoe
7:15 a.m. - Worcester D.C.
TRIP INCLUDES:
All day Lift Ticket on 90 trails
2,000+ foot vertical rise
Round Trip Coach Bus
$35
a non-profit RSO UMASS SKI CLUB 545-3437
430 Student Union (Above People's Market)

PVTA funded by several sources

UM undergrads pay $17 per student per year for bus system

RYAN PIZZI / COLLEGIAN

UMass students pay 10 percent of the cost to keep the PVTA on the road and running.

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Correspondent

Undergraduate students at UMass pay the most out of the five colleges for the use of the PVTA system. However, despite popular beliefs to the contrary, their contribution amounts to only about 10 percent of the total cost.

"UMass undergraduates pays $17 per student per year. It comes to about $285,000 a year, about 10 percent of total cost," said Al Byam, manager of transit services.

Christine McDonald, a UMass student who rides the bus at least once a day, said, "We have such a big campus and there's so much other stuff around, so the buses are really helpful. Seventeen dollars a year is not bad."

"Seventeen bucks a year is pretty cool even if you don't use it, but I would like to think that the non-UMass people who ride the bus would have to pay a little too," said Nicole DeCarlo, also a student at UMass who uses the bus several times a day.

According to Byam, a major chunk of the funding comes from state and federal transportation grants, and about 1.9 million is subsidized through the PVTA.

The Town of Amherst also contributes some funding. According to Nancy Maglione, director of administrations and finance for Amherst, the town finances approximately 13 percent.

Maglione said that is because it is essentially not the town's system, and almost all routes are near UMass and the five college areas. "The town's part is very small," Maglione said.

Byam mentioned that several surrounding towns, such as Sunderland and Belchertown, do not contribute any money for the use of the buses.

"It's good in a way because it would be a huge hassle if you had to show ID or run a card through in order to get on the bus," said Jeff Enochs, a student at UMass. "There are so many people riding the bus that it would take forever just to get on."

Mike Hass, from the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), said there is also money coming in from several other areas towards the PVTA system.

Besides state and federal funding, "The parking garage kicks in [and] the graduate students kick in about a quarter of what the undergrads pay," Hass said. "The other colleges also pay. There are also other revenue sources like chartering services."

Phone system makes tax filing easy

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian staff

It is almost time to file tax returns, but tax payers no longer have to worry about filling out long forms of paper.

Last year the Massachusetts Department of Revenue began Telefile, a phone filing system. Telefile is replacing the old ABC tax forms this year.

The system is easier and faster than the ABC form, said Mitchell Adams, state revenue commissioner. Filing by phone takes less than 10 minutes, and returns come in the mail in about four days. Telefile only requires tax payers to fill out two pages before making the phone call, and is available any time of the day.

The other alternative is to complete the Massachusetts Resident Income Tax Form 1, which is over 35 pages long.

"Half of Massachusetts tax payers are eligible for the system," Adams said. "We expect about 400,000 people will use the method."

As of yesterday at 2:30 p.m., about 270,692 people had already filed. About a million tax payers are eligible to use the system this year.

In addition to using a phone system, tax payers may use their computers with a modem. Adams said the computer saves tax payers even more time than the phone system.

"This system is as secure as it gets," Adams said. "It can't be hacked."

The system has numerous firewalls to prevent a hacker from breaking into the system. The computer connected to the phone system is independent of the Department of Revenue's main computer systems to prevent hackers.

Adams said, "Our system is more secure than the mail."

The number of fraudulent claims has also declined. The computer cross references past information to prevent false claims, said Adams.

Telefile has cut costs and increased productivity at the Department of Revenue, which now employs only 1,530 people. In 1991, before Telefile, the department employed 2,118.

Supreme Court rules high school AIDS presentation not offensive

By Richard Caroli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court rejected an appeal Monday from two former Massachusetts high school students and their parents who found a school assembly program on sex and AIDS offensive.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that said the 90-minute program did not violate religious freedom or parents' right to rear their children as they see fit.

The court's action, taken without comment, ended the two families' federal court attempt to collect $3.5 million from

Chelmsford, Mass., school officials and Suzi Landolphi, owner of the Hot, Sexy and Safer production company.

A state court lawsuit still is pending.

Landolphi, then based in the Boston area, was a guest speaker at Chelmsford High School in the spring of 1992. Her presentation combined coarse humor, audience participation and explicit references to warn students about the danger of contracting AIDS through sexual intercourse.

Jason Mesti and Shannon Silva, then both 15 years old, were in the assembly audience.

Lawyers for the two students and their parents said the performance contained "simulations and explicit references to masturbation, ejaculation, breast size, penis size, sexual intercourse, nudity, urination, oral-genital contact, erections, sodomy and testicles, the homosexual lifestyle and premarital heterosexual conduct by minors."

In answering the lawsuit, Hot, Sexy and Safer said Landolphi had made more than 5,000 such presentations and never had been sued.

The production company since has been relocated in Santa Monica, Calif.

Springfield, Mass., lawyer John Roberts, who had filed the high court appeal for the two families, reacted to Monday's action with a warning for parents.

They "will have to keep in close contact with teachers and school officials to be sure they know what's going on both in classroom curricula and special assemblies," he said.

School officials in Chelmsford acknowledged that a policy of notifying parents and allowing them to remove their children from such programs had not been followed before Landolphi's appearance.

A federal judge threw out the lawsuit, and the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the dismissal.

The appeals court acknowledged that parents do have considerable freedom to direct the upbringing of their children, but added, "We do not think ... this freedom encompasses a fundamental constitutional right to dictate the curriculum at the public school to which they have chosen to send their children."

New & expectant fathers recieve support from center

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

New and expectant fathers are offered individual counseling and support group classes through the Mens' Resource Center at Franklin Medical Center in Greenfield.

"The class offers men a relaxed environment in which they can learn more about and talk about their role as fathers," said Co-Director of the Fatherhood Project Rob Okun.

The class offers a combination of practical advice and personal support through a combination of teaching, one–on– one exercises and group discussions, according to Okun. With women working outside the home, men look to develop their nurturing skills in parenting, he said.

Participants include expectant, new and more experienced fathers — offering a diverse range of information and ideas that can be explored, according to Okun.

The diverse range of fathers who typically attend the individual counseling and support group classes include divorced, gay and step–fathers, said Okun. He is currently working on the development of a program for teen fathers.

"Just as expectant mothers and new mothers have a lot of questions as they prepare to care for a baby, expectant and new fathers have a lot on their minds they want to know about, too," Okun said.

"Often in society, fathers are overlooked in the parenting role," said Elizabeth Gilbert, developer of a parenting workshop for men called "Fatherhood in the '90s." According to Gilbert,, "The definition of families [is] really changing."

The program "provides specific services for men" such as expressing emotions, and sharing their feels about feeling isolated since society assumes moms do all the parenting, said Okun. Women will also benefit from this program if men play a larger part in the role of parenting, he added.

As women prepare mentally and physiologically for a baby, the man also prepares himself with his new role, said Okun. Men express both inner joys and excitement, he said. If men get involved in their parenting role early on, they feel a sense of self confidence. Otherwise, explained Okun, one person might get into the role of doing most of the parenting.

According to Okun, although a man does not carry the baby, he is half of the parenting team. Parenting classes for men allow fathers to come together to discuss their changing role from good provider and chief disciplinarian to a parenting role, said Gilbert.

Men participating in the program share feelings of envy toward their female partners who get a lot of attention during and after pregnancy, as well financial concerns about raising a baby, worries about a declining relationship with their partners, and concerns about sex life, said Okun.

After the program, men seem more capable of dealing with not only their own feelings of being left out, but also with dealing with infant care and the woman's mood swings, Okun said.

Men leave the program with more information on parenting than their own fathers, according to Okun.

The program not only champions men developing a nurturing ability but also women striving for financial independence, he said.

"As more and more fathers try to balance career, school and parenting, having the resources at the Fatherhood Project hopefully makes being a father in the 1990s a little bit easier," Okun said.

Throughout its operation for 14 years, the Mens' Resource Center has also helped men with issues of masculinity, sexism and personal growth.

All men interested in fathering may attend A Day For Fathers on June 8 at the Prindle Pond Conference Center in Sturbridge.

"More and more colleges are bringing the issues of work and family into the limelight since employees, students and faculty are dealing with it, whether they have kids or are caring for a sick spouse," said Gilbert.

SHANE BEEHAN / COLLEGIAN

Seeing the sights

A bird's eye view of a once again snow covered campus and Pioneer Valley, seen from the Baker dormitory, proves that March really does indeed come in like a lion.

■ debate

continued from page 1

that prevent equal participation in society.

Love said that, "what we are aiming for is creating a society where everybody has the chance to participate on the basis of its individual wishes, desires and so on."

Love said that equality supposes that we should have the same because we are the same rather than considering the individual characteristics.

Another concern was the lack of multicultural leaders that represent the goals of all the oppressed as opposed to the many different leaders that advocate for the interest of their own group. To the difficulty that this represents, Dees pointed out that each one of us is a leader.

He said that, "we can be part of the solution as much as we can be part of the problem."

The panelists agreed that the need of an individual commitment to end racism and discrimination, could be the only possible solution.

This event and the lecture following it, was sponsored by The ALANA Lecture Series, Black Student Union, Hillel, and the Office of Jewish Affairs.

ELECTION '96

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not respond

Do you favor "truth in sentencing" for violent criminals so they serve full sentences with no chance of parole?

"The current policy of 'truth in sentencing' is a good policy because it is wrong for violent criminals to get out on parole before they complete their prison sentence. The sentence given to a rapist or murderer should be the sentence they serve. Serious criminals should know that they will be held responsible for the crimes they commit."

Bill Clinton

Lamar Alexander
"Yes, but I think longer prison sentences should be set by the nation's governors and state legislators. Congress has no business trying to run state prisons."

Pat Buchanan
"Yes"

Bob Dole
"Yes"

Richard Lugar
"Yes"

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni F. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kuhn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey Brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard, IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Oliver-Gay Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradysz News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reis Photography Editor Marty Pappo Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas E. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, making it the second-oldest publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Goodnight, America

I walk down the long, gray hallway, my mind floating somewhere out in space, capturing the rhythms of the music on my headphones. Out the window at the end of the hall, the snow glares brightly under the outdoor safety lights.

I turn to the right and put my key in the door. Resisting me slightly, it finally gives and lets me into my dorm room, a cinder block box painted a refreshing shade of industrial beige.

Without thinking, my hand reaches out and hits the light switch. A faint glow emanates from the little globe up in the ceiling.

I drop my bag, coat and walkman on the bed and toss my hat and gloves on the shelf in the closet. Stepping past the mirror, I take a look at myself.

Wendy Darling

The light above is too weak to show the real red of my hair, but strong enough to show the bags under my eyes. I am exhausted.

The light on my phone is blinking. This comes as no surprise since my friends and I are obsessed with voice mail. Walk in the room, check for the red light, that's the program.

I press the pre-programmed 6-2000 button and punch in my password with a speed that astounds me. Two messages. I go through them mechanically, forwarding one, replying to another, pressing 3 to hear the message I just sent.

Still on the phone, I bend over and connect my cable to the TAU, the University's version of a modem. I stretch out my arm and press the power button on my computer. Slowly it whirs to life, clocking the megabytes and booting up to the familiar Windows screen.

I check my roommate's clock over on the window sill. I check my watch. I check the little Timex travel clock I keep on my nightstand. It's later than I thought. Maybe I won't get seven hours sleep.

The computer is ready. I press the button on my monitor and slowly icons appear before my eyes. The glare is too much for me in the semi-darkness.

I get up and push in the plug for the Christmas lights. My roommate's baby, this lovely ring of lights circling all around the room.

Finally, sitting down in the chair, I reach out and turn on the standing halogen lamp. Not too bright tonight, but enough to kill the glare of the screen.

My finger falls on the button on the mouse and clicks on Trumpet Winsock. Time to go on line. The last time I checked it was four hours ago. Somebody could have contacted me since then. Or maybe I should go and check Notes or the newsgroups or look at some pages on the World Wide Web.

But not before the connection comes through. This takes a few seconds, so I reach down and turn on my stereo. The soundtrack to The Piano is in the tape player, so I leave it there. I have listened to this too many times this week, but it will do. The music rises up around me as my screen tells me, "CONNECT 9600."

Click to minimize, click on Eudora, enter password, press OK, and there are some messages for me. Press OK, maximize message list, click on first one. Read it, click to reply, block delete, type a reply, click to close document. Read the next one, erase it. Junk mail. Close the list of messages, click to exit.

I am tempted to check Notes and do all those other things, but I am so tired.

Maybe I should have gone to bed earlier. As it is, I've been home a half an hour and still haven't touched the bed. It's almost 2 a.m. What was I thinking?

I look around me. The globe glowing in the ceiling. The phone blinking with another message. The twinkling Christmas lights. The halogen lamp. All three clocks. The tape player moving the cassette forward. The obnoxious color monitor and the accompanying hum of the computer fan.

What's going on? Do I exist solely to operate bunch of heartless machines? Walk in the door and plug yourself in — it's the American way and, by the way, the way of the future. Oh, joy, oh, rapture, I can't wait.

I listen to my breathing, the gentle sound of my heart. Outside my window, the moons hands in the winter sky. My bones grind into the hard wooden chair. As usual, my nose is running.

I exit from my programs as soon as I can and switch the computer off. I get a tissue and blow my nose. I change my clothes. I check the latest message on my phone and shut off my stereo. I turn off the halogen lamp and cut the juice to the globe in the ceiling.

I slip under the covers and grab hold of the travel alarm clock. I move the switch to the "alarm on" position. The time is 2:00 a.m. Goodnight America.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

Israelis faced with dilemma

The dilemma that is posed to the Israeli leadership and its people is how much abuse can the State of Israel accept before the current peace process with the Palestinians is questioned? As the labor parts under Shimon Peres has revealed, they are willing to accept quite a lot without considering taking action in the form of deterring the concurrent peace agreements.

In light of the recent terrorist attacks, I feel that the people of Israel are no longer willing to be led in the dark in search of a utopian light that does not exist. It is time that the Israelis challenge their leadership and consider an alternative government, namely the right wing Likud parts on their May 29 election.

Last week the world was appalled when two fatal bombings shook the foundations of the State of Israel, and claimed the lives of 26, leaving over 70 wounded. This past weekend another bombing tore apart yet another bus in central Jerusalem taking 19 more lives. And finally, on Monday afternoon the latest outrage occurred when a bomb devastated downtown Tel Aviv leaving as of yet an unspecified amount of civilians dead and wounded. The victims of these horrific acts were not military personnel, but rather innocent civilians, perhaps going to work in the morning, or spending time with friends.

Guy Chayoun

Their execution was not a strategic step by the radical Hamas faction of the Palestinians, but rather an act of senseless violence. There can be no justification for the murder of these innocent victims, and these acts were proclaimed to be a declaration of war on the State of Israel by the Hamas, according to Peres. The attacks are reportedly in retaliation for the execution of Yahya Ayyash, better known as the Engineer. Hamas assumes that Ayyash's death was performed at the hands of the Israelis, yet this was not proven, and many other groups had interests in the cessation of his bomb fabrications, namely the Palestinians security forces. The bottom line is that the suicide bombings of the Hamas faction were uncalled for means of aggression, and can not lightly be dismissed in light of the Oslo peace accords.

How many of Israel's sons and daughters need to die in order for the leadership to say "enough is enough"? The death toll in the last 10 days alone is a stupendous 55 (at least). Fifty five families are grieving the needless deaths of their loved ones. There are 55 funerals that are taking place, and 55 mothers spilling tears over the senseless murder of their children. I think that Israel needs to adopt a more circumspect policy, rather than continue with the peace process in the predetermined time table.

I believe that the peace process is the necessary step for the Israeli leadership in the future in order to achieve a comprehensive peace with all of Israel's neighboring countries. But, the degree of the peace process and the withdrawal of Israeli troops needs to be commensurate with the actions taken on behalf of the Palestinian people.

As directed under the Oslo agreement, the Palestinians maintain a security force under the direction of the Palestinian autonomous powers. This force is supposed to protect their own people, while also protecting the infiltration of Israel by extremist groups from within their own. In short, the Palestinian security forces should have preemptively prevented these recent bombings in the past week, and suppressed the radical surge of extremist groups that is ultimately detrimental to the overall achievement of peace.

I believe that the State of Israel is currently unable to depend on this security force for the safety of the Israeli people. The Israelis need to revert to a more aggressive measure of security that will protect the citizens of Israel, and the interests of the Oslo agreement.

The Israeli leadership should consider a tentative postponement of the current peace agreements contingent upon the achievement of a more reliable means of security for the State of Israel. Too many of Israel's sons and daughters have been killed to ignore the signs, and blindly progress in the direction of achieving peace at all costs. The Likud party may be the answer that the distressed people of Israel are looking for. I am confident that peace will be achieved, but favorably later than sooner may be Israel's best interest.

Guy Chayoun is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

EXCUSE ME, BUT WAS THAT STAFFER, WEARING A HOOD?
WHAT, HE'S NOT ENTITLED TO PRIVACY? IS THAT WHAT YOU'RE SAY-ING, MR. REDBURN?
LET ME TELL YOU WHAT THAT HOOD'S ABOUT, OKAY? IT'S ABOUT THINGS GETTING SO BAD IN THIS COUNTRY THAT A WHITE ANGLO MALE IS AFRAID TO SHOW HIS FACE!
AND THAT'S WHY WE NEED PATT! WHO ELSE REACHES OUT TO THE VICTIMS OF AFFIRMA-TIVE ACTION? WHERE ELSE IS THE YOUNG, CONCERNED SKINHEAD SUPPOSED TO GO?
I GUESS I NEVER THOUGHT ABOUT IT BEFORE...
WHY AM I NOT SURPRISED, ABE? IT'S ABE, ISN'T IT?

Not quite Theo

I winced at having to hear the words leave yet another naif's lips: "Conner, your hair doesn't move," she said as she ran her fingers through my coif.

C. Taylor Conner

White people, I thought to myself, Can't live with 'em, can't make 'em your slaves because of that damn amendment.

My normal response would have been to make some crack about the lack of diversity in her dust-speck hometown, but I refrained this time, legitimately frustrated. Almost as frustrated as I was when I tried in vain to explain the intent of the "Jigaboo/Wannabe" musical sequence in School Daze.

Maybe it was pointless. This girl and others like her had grown up in the types of uni-color areas where if one member of a four-unit black family left the town limits, the black population dropped off by 25 percent.

True, I have lived in a Philadelphia suburb for the past 10 years. Yet it doesn't suffer from the terminal racial blandness that seems to permeate many other suburbs, whether they be in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts or elsewhere. What an epic shock it was to arrive at UMass, only to find some kids who had never even met a black person before — it's not their fault necessarily, but I've known supermarket milk contents less homogenized than these poor sips.

I am in no way saying their lack of exposure makes them bad people, aside from the occasional boundary over-stepper who decides a good ole' racial quip is in order. These days I do have a response to the ever-popular offensive joke lead-in line, "Do ya mind if I tell a black joke?"

"Sure. Mind if I serve ya a knuckle sandwich with a side order of kick-in-the-crotch?"

Fortunately, most acquaintances of mine are just annoyingly curious and harmless in their provincial mindsets. That's okay. Many don't know any better because they have never been in a situation where they have had to know any better. I can work with that.

These people are not stupid by any means. Rather their cognitive intelligence and social intuitiveness are not only found on separate pages — we're talking different libraries here. Anyone who says environment does not play a monster role in racial sensitivity needs to give me the name of their dealer immediately. I want some of that medicine.

By my definition, environment encompasses everything from your home to your homework, all of it coming down to what you're taught. For instance, were your parents to tell you from Day one that sex for any other purpose than reproduction is a mortal sin, then Evan Young would be probably be equivalent of the anti-Christ in your book by now. (If you didn't read his Valentine's Day column, swing by the Collegian office for a copy... with protection, please.)

Such is the milder case with many white New England- bred students with whom I've come in contact. It's not as if the '60s generation parents turned Za'Bo, went against their former ideals and expressly told their kids to fear blacks. And it's not as though the children of more conservative parents are destined to evolve into racists by virtue of views their homes may harbor — adolescent rebellion can squash that to a degree.

My take is that in most reasonably well-educated households the kids are brought up to believe that all races are equal. It's poor interaction opportunities that really do them in. There's a big problem when a white youth's closest black peer is a two-dimensional image named "Theo Huxtable" (who, by the way, I am thinking about auditioning for in the "Malcolm Jamal-Warner Story" should my hair get any more Huxtablian), and their parents were chummy with his dad — that is, in the pre-Cliff "I Spy" years.

Also, tokens just aren't going to cut the Grey Poupon. A single token may take you from one T stop to the end of line, a journey over which you might see a lot. But as most riders know, you still have to get out and walk a little ways to get to your actual destination.

Thus in certain cases, with white students emerging from fairly intelligent households into the (don't like me) multicultural world of higher academics, I would say that racism is not the proper charge with which to charge these individuals. It's just pure 99 and 44/100 environmental waste, the kind EHS is impossibly ill-equipped to deal with. But maybe we as tolerant civilized black scholars are.

And, oh yeah, brothers and sisters, don't think you're off the hook — this trend goes both ways. The phrase "corny white people" has crossed my ears a few times over the years, but that topic is ammo for another column at another school.

Perhaps one with a seven percent white population.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Pike responds to protest

To the editor:

We are writing in response to the article printed in the Collegian on Thursday, February 29, ("5 College rally set to protest alleged frat rape"). First of all, to set the record straight, fraternities do not condone rape in any way or form. We believe that rape is a horrible, degrading crime and we support the principle of the march that took place on Friday, March 1. We are, however, angered by the way our system was the specific target of the protest. Many of the opinions stated in the article are not only untrue, but blatantly discriminatory against our organization. It was stated that the rally was meant to bring attention to the link between fraternities and sexual violence and that fraternities have a reputation of harassing and degrading women.

Perhaps this reputation holds true in the world of movies and television, but on this campus it is simply not true. This is a clear cut case of one incident forming the stereotype for an entire group. If anyone can not see how definitive of discrimination this is, they are just as intolerant and ignorant as any anti-Semite or sexist. And we might add that it has not even been proven at this time that it was a member of a fraternity who committed this crime. The article also stated that women who have been assaulted are afraid of coming forward because of the power held within the Greek system.

The truth is that we as a group are one of the most struggling organizations at this university. We only represent a small percentage of the students on this campus. We are a minority just like any other. Once again, although we support the principles behind the protest, we believe that it is ridiculous that our group is being singled out. We hope this campus is not developing a reputation of harassing and discriminating against fraternities. Individuals rape, not fraternities.

The Brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Bob.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Bob Dunn.

Multicultural Affairs

Wednesday, March 6, 1996

Students call for enhancement of W.E.B. Du Bois Library

The W.E.B. Du Bois library was finally dedicated this spring. The naming symbolizes a break with past practices and attitudes on issues of multiculturalism. The University of Massachusetts has accepted the challenge of becoming one of the most progressive institutions of higher education in the United States.

Sunanda Ghosh
Christine Soh
Ibrahim Ali

This commitment entails increasing the number of students, faculty and staff of color at the University of Massachusetts. As ALANA students, we demand that this university make a commitment to increase ALANA representation and not continue to allow them to fall through the cracks of this University, as the unfulfilled 1992 ALANA agreements do.

Moreover, such a commitment must involve a reinvigorated and progressive curriculum that reflects the histories and achievements of those traditionally under- represented in the Eurocentric curriculum, as well as perspectives and ideologies usually censored by the average curriculum.

We want an institution which promotes genuine academic freedom and dissent, one in which students can learn from scholars who have been ostracized from other academic circles around the country.

Only in such an institution could students learn from the likes of W.E.B. Du Bois, Herbert Aptheker, Shirley Graham Du Bois, Malcolm X, Franz Fanon, Walter Rodney, C.L.R. James and Angela Davis.

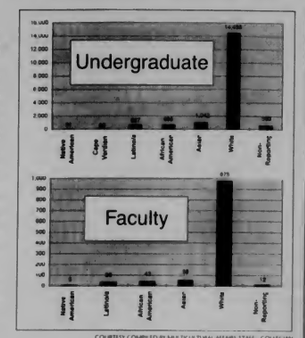
We insist that the UMass administration take all necessary steps to ensure that the papers of Herbert Aptheker, Shirley Graham Du Bois and Malcolm X be housed in the W.E.B. Du Bois library, where they belong.

Herbert Aptheker is an eminent historian, long–term anti– racist activist, friend and colleague of W.E.B. Du Bois and editor of over 40 volumnes of Du Bois' works. Shirley Graham Du Bois was a well known journalist and writer, activist and professor in the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of Afro– American Studies. Malcolm X, who needs no introduction, is tied to UMass by the fact that his wife, Dr. Betty Shabazz, is an alumnus of our University.

It would be the honor for the University community to house the magnificent writings of these extraordinary leaders in the W.E.B. Du Bois library. With the acquisition of these papers our University can become a major research center for the study of African–American history and intellectual history in general.

These collections will attract students and scholars from all over the world and enhance the reputation and academic atmosphere of our campus. This is a call for all students to take action.

Sunanda Ghosh, Christine Soh and Ibrahim Ali are UMass students.



COURTESY COMPILED BY MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS STAFF - COLLEGIAN

SIMONE BERNAN / COLLEGIAN

Student passes by the plaque honoring W.E.B. Du Bois. The University recently celebrated the dedication of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

In defense of justice; traditions of Jewish Anti-Zionism

It has become fashionable, including on this campus, to equate criticisms of Israel and Zionist political thought with anti–Semitism. Those who would challenge colonialism and apartheid in Palestine are cynically and systematically accused of being motivated by anti–Jewish prejudice.

The main point, however, is not to refute criticisms of Israel or to convince the general public of their incorrectness. The fundamental goal of equating anti– Zionism with anti–Semitism is to ensure that Jewish people, especially young Jewish students on campus, feel that they have no choice but to defend Zionism, that an attack on colonialism in Palestine is an attack on their identity.

What this outrageous equation seeks to hide, and campus entities such as Hillel and the Office of Jewish Affairs never teach their students, is that anti–Zionism and opposition to colonialism and racism in Palestine is a proud and noble Jewish tradition. And it is precisely these threads, anti– colonialism and anti–racism, that bind the different strands of Jewish anti–Zionist thought together into a coherent, principled, compelling whole.

There is nothing anti–Semitic or self–hating about standing for human rights against colonialism, for human dignity against racism and for human equality against apartheid as the many powerful Jewish critics of Zionism have done. They stand as a testament to independence of thought, moral and political courage, and human dignity.

From the earliest days of the movement, opposition to Zionism has been a vibrant and powerful element of Jewish thought and discourse. In 1917, when the British government adopted the Balfour Declaration pledging imperial support for Zionist colonialism in Palestine, opposition within the cabinet was led by its only Jewish member, Edwin S. Montagu.

Montagu attacked the motivations behind the declaration, stating, "I wish to place on record my view that the policy of His Majesty's Government is anti–Semitic in result and will prove a rallying ground for anti–Semites in every country in the world."

But Montagu was also concerned with the question of Palestinian rights, even at this early stage.

Hussein Ibish

With great prescience, Montagu stated that it was "inconceivable" that "Mr. Balfour should be authorized to say that Palestine was to be reconstituted as the 'national home of the Jewish people.' I do not know what this involves, but I assume that it means that Mohammedans and Christians are to make way for the Jews, and that the Jews should be put in positions of preference ..."

Anticipating the enduring problems of apartheid and racism in Israel, Montagu wrote that "a religious test of citizenship seems to me to be only admitted by those who take a bigoted and narrow view of one particular epoch of the history of Palestine, and claim for the Jews a position to which they are not entitled."

"Zionism," he wrote, "has always seemed to me to be a mischievous political creed."

Across the Atlantic in the United States, Jewish anti– Zionism was also standing in opposition to the colonial project in Palestine. A group of 31 prominent Jewish leaders led by Rep. Julius Kahn made an urgent appeal to the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 in profound opposition to Zionism, declaring, "We do not wish to see Palestine, either now or at any time in future, organized as a Jewish state."

"It is true," they pointed out, "that Palestine is the national home of the Jewish people and of no other people. It is not correct to call its non–Jewish inhabitants 'Arabs,' or say that they have left no image of their spirit and made no histoire except in the great Mosque.

"To subject the Jews to the possible recurrence of such bitter and sanguinary conflicts which would be inevitable," they continued, "would be a crime against the triumphs of their whole past history and against the lofty and world– embracing visions of their great prophets and leaders." This foresighted, principled document was signed by such outstanding Jewish American leaders as Ambassador Henry Morgenthau, New York Attorney General Simon W. Rosendale, Mayor L. H. Kampner, E. M. Baker, Jesse I. Straus of Macy's, New York Times publisher Adolph S. Ochs, Judge Mc C. Sloss and Professors Edwin R. Seligman and Morris Jastrow, as well as Rep. Julius Kahn.

Henry Morgentau spent much of his life campaigning against Zionism, and summed up his objections in his autobiography.

"Zionism is the most stupendous fallacy in Jewish history. It is wrong in principle, and impossible of realization; it is unsound in its economics, fantastical in its politics, and sterile in its spiritual ideals. I speak as a Jew."

Professor Morris Cohen also stood opposed to the Zionist agenda, calling instead for "a non–sectarian state that allows equal rights to all Jews, Christians, Mohammedans and atheists alike." In his book, The Faith of a Liberal, Cohen explains,

"Zionists fundamentally accept the racial ideology of the anti–Semites, but draw different conclusions. Instead of the Teutons, it is the Jew that is the purer or superior race. All sorts of virtues, idealism, etc., are the characteristic qualities of its spirit."

Rabbi Moshe Menuhin, father of virtuoso Yehudi Menuhin and author of The Decadence of Judaism in Our Time, was another early and fearless campaigner against the Zionists who, he wrote, "only use and abuse their religion to promote Jewish nationalism, the new religion of so many subverted and brainwashed Jewish people."

The great physicist, Albert Einstein, in spite of sympathy of some cultural aspects of the movement, was strongly opposed to Zionism's principle aim of establishing a Jewish state in Palestine. In 1946 he stated unequivocally, "the State idea is not according to my heart. I do not understand why it is needed. It is connected to narrow–mindedness and economic obstacles. I believe that it is bad. I have always been against it." He refused the offer of Israel's presidency.

In his 1950 memoirs, Out of My Later Years, Einstein elaborated, "Apart from the practical considerations, my awareness of the essential nature of Judaism resists the idea of a Jewish state with borders, an army, and a measure of temporal power, no matter how modest. I am afraid of the inner damage Judaism will sustain."

But, like others opposed to the creation of the Jewish State in Palestine and unlike the Zionists, Einstein considered the rights of Palestinians a serious issue. Einstein tells of a conversation in which he asked Zionist leader and first Israeli President Chaim Weitzman, "What can the Arabs if Palestine were given to the Jews?" Weitzman scoffed, "What Arabs? They are hardly of any consequence."

The famous Socialist writer Isaac Duetscher also concluded that Zionism and Israel were insupportable. Reviewing the situation in the Middle East following the 1967 war, Duetscher wrote that "The pros and cons were clear; there was no question of any mixture of rights and wrongs on either side. The Israelis put themselves totally in the wrong, morally and politically."

As with most anti–Zionists, Duetscher demonstrated as sensitivity to the question of colonialism and racism, explaining that "The nationalism of the people in semi– colonial or colonial countries, fighting for their independence, must not be put on the same moral–political level as the nationalism of conquerors or oppressors. The former has its historic justification and progressive aspect which the latter has not. Clearly, Arab nationalism, unlike the Israeli, still belongs to the former category."

A number of prominent Israelis have also adopted an anti– Zionist perspective, and called for the replacement of the Zionist apartheid state of Israel with a democratic nation in Palestine dedicated all its people.

Israel Shahak, a survivor of the Bergen–Belsen concentration camp, regularly condemns Zionism as incompatible with democracy and human rights, stating "I oppose the whole idea of the Jewish state as unjust." In describing Israeli apartheid, Shahak thunders "This Is Nazification of Jewish society ... If one can learn anything from the Nazi experience, it is that one should be against Nazism. And I am against Nazism, whether German, Jewish, or Arab." Other Israelis such as Maxim Ghilan, Avika Orr, and Felicia Langer have taken a similar view of Zionism.

Dr. Uri Davis' work has been invaluable in explicating the mechanics of Israeli apartheid, in books such as Israel: an Apartheid State, and The Jewish National Fund, coauthored with Walter Lehn. Davis has written that his work is dedicated to "the dismantlement of Israel as a Jewish state and its replacement with a democratic Palestine." In his introduction to Israel an Apartheid State, Davis wrote, "this work is intended to contribute to the development in the West of an anti–Zionist moral understanding, political framework and climate of opinion."

Since the founding of the Israeli state, an number of well known Jewish Americans have also found themselves unable to become or remain Zionists. Noam Chomsky, who lived briefly in Israel as a youth, has contributed a series of strong critiques of Zionism and Israel, particularly The Fateful Triangle. Hannah Arendt condemned Zionism as wrong for categorizing people "not in terms of political organizations, but in terms of biological superhuman personalities."

The dean of American journalism, I. F. Stone, also came to see the dangers of Zionism, writing that, "Israel is creating a kind of moral schizophrenia in world Jewry. In the outside world, the welfare of Jewry depends on the maintenance of secular, non–racial, pluralistic societies. In Israel, Jewry finds itself defending a society in which mixed marriages cannot be legalized, in which non–Jews have a lesser status than Jews, and in which the ideal is racist and exclusionist."

Two Jewish Americans have stood out as leaders of the campaign for Palestinian human and national rights and against Zionism — Rabbi Elmer Berger and Dr. Alfred Lilienthal. Rabbi Berger, the founder of the American Council for Judaism, also founded the anti–Zionist group American Jewish Alternatives to Zionism. His Memoirs of an Anti–Zionist Jew and other works advance a sophisticated critique of Zionism on the grounds of its injustice. Lilienthal dedicated his life to the anti–Zionist cause, outgarred by the abuse of Palestinians it has entailed. His many books explaining his objections include Israel's Flag is not Mine, What Price Israel, and The Zionist Connection II.

A younger generation of Jewish scholars in the United States has also taken up the cause of justice and human rights in Palestine and espoused anti–Zionist positions.

As Cheryl Rubenberg has eloquently explained in the preface to her fine book, Israel and the American National Interest, the conflict over the Palestine–Israel conflict and not see the Palestinians, both Muslim and Christian, as fully human and with the same inherent dignity as Jews. I cannot condone the domination, displacement, dispossession and subordination of one people by another. I cannot accept the notion of racial, ethnic, or religious superiority."

Lemni Brenner has demonstrated the same commitment to human dignity in the study of Israel and Zionism in his works such as The Iron Wall and his brilliant Zionism in the Age of Dictators, which chronicles the attempts by some Zionists, including future prime minister Yitzhak Shamir, to make common cause with Nazi Germany. Norman Finkelstein's recently published Image and Reality of the Israel–Palestine Conflict provides another excellent critique of Zionist philosophy and Israeli propaganda.

The anti–colonial critique of Zionism has also been advanced by African–Jewish scholar, "Falasha," and Afro– centrist Yosef A. A. ben–Jochannan in his book, We the Black Jews. Ben–Jochannan writes that "I have made a change from my Judaeo–African Zionist stand to a strict Pan–Africanist stand, thus dropping every aspect of my former tie with worldwide 'Zionism.' The reason for this was, and still is, very obvious. The two positions are inconsistent and incompatible with each other. Falashas feel no loyalty to this form of 'White/Semitic 'Zionism' that ignored them/us for generations until it needed our bodies to use against the 'Palestinian Arabs'."

Jewish anti–Zionism and defense of Palestinian human rights has also always been present here at UMass, and in the pages of the Collegian itself. A friend of mine, Nathan Krystall, left UMass for Israel four years ago, only to have his deepest suspicions about the nature of the Israeli state confirmed (see Open Letter below).

Former Collegian Editorial Editor Jeremy P. Levinson in 1990 wrote, in the pages of this very newspaper, a most eloquent and heartfelt Jewish critique of Zionism.

"Zionism is the most dangerous threat to the Jewish people," he wrote. "It has divided our community and deprived us of the right to think and feel.

"I cannot pick up a newspaper or discuss politics without having my Jewish heritage held to my throat," he complained.

But, as Levinson points out, "many Jews stand in defense of their history and people by standing with the Palestinian struggle for freedom. As Jews, students of thousands of years of persecution, we will fight injustice wherever it may be found." Palestine will be free," Levinson affirms. "The question is not 'will freedom come?' Rather the question is 'will we stand for or against it?' Where will we be when it comes?"

"My Judaism fights against all oppression and brutality, not against history. As a Jew and a hater of all injustice, I will stand with the people of Palestine. In doing so and in the face of great adversity, I defend my own people."

Again, there is nothing anti–Semitic or self–hating about opposing Israeli colonialism and apartheid. Many of these principled Jewish anti–Zionists have exposed the fallacy of equating criticisms of colonialism and apartheid in Palestine as "anti–Semitic." For example, Benjamin Beit–Hallahmi, in his masterpiece Original Sins, a book which is almost certainly the best single simple introduction to the problem of Zionism, Israel and Palestine, points out that, "tying opposition to Israel or to Zionism to anti–Semitism has become a great excuse and a favorite rhetorical device for the defenders of Zionism. Everybody speaking out against Israel or Zionism is labeled anti–Semitic, and thus all criticism is effectively silenced or blocked."

Israel Shahak points out that to atone for the persecution of the Jews ... the crude accusation of 'anti–Semitism' (or in the case of Jews, 'self–hate') against anyone who protests at the discrimination against Palestinians ... comes with greater hostility and force from non–Jewish 'friends of the Jews' than from Jews." This has also been seen here at UMass.

However, support of Palestinian human rights and the struggle against colonialism, racism and apartheid in Palestine, by principled anti–Zionist Jews and non–Jews, will never be stilled by such sleazy underhand slander.

As Isaac Duetscher so powerfully explained, "Still, we must exercise our judgement and must not allow it to be clouded by emotions and memories, however deep or haunting. We should not allow even invocations of Auschwitz to blackmail us into supporting the wrong cause. I am speaking as a Marxist of Jewish origin, whose next–of– kin perished in Auschwitz and whose relatives live in Israel."

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian columnist.

OPEN LETTER TO YITZHAK RABIN

This letter, written by University of Massachusetts, Amherst alumnus and former Collegian staff member Nathan Krystall, was sent to Yitzhak Rabin a few days before Mr. Krystall received a 14 day prison term for refusal of army duty.

Feb. 1, 1995

To the Prime Minister and Minister of Defense Yitzhak Rabin,

Despite my declaration to the Israel Defense Forces (IDF), both written and verbal, that I will not serve in the army, I am still expected to report for 120 days of service on Feb. 5. I request that you cancel the order for my enlistment due to the reasons of conscientious objection, some of which I briefly describe below.

I arrived in this country almost three years ago. Over two years ago I decided, for various reasons, to take advantage of my privileged status as a Jew and, via the Law of Return, become an Israeli citizen. I knew that I would possibly be ordered to serve in the IDF, and at the time believed that service inside the "green line" would not run totally counter to my principles. Soon afterward I changed my mind.

First and foremost, I now totally oppose the existence of Israel as a Jewish state, which is maintained due to the establishment of any kind of democratic state. After living in this country, it is clear to me that the preservation of Israel as a Jewish state will always mean upholding the rights of Jews at the expense of Palestinians. As such dominance can only be achieved and maintained by the use of force, the IDF — like its predecessor, the Haganah — is a central instrument of this violent rule.

In the short time that I have been here I have witnessed how the IDF, upon the orders of the government and its commanding officers (which ultimately emanate from the same place, namely yourself, being both the prime minister and minister of defense), will stop at nothing to silence any voice that cries out against this oppression, and smash any action aimed at guaranteeing the full rights of Palestinians. This I have witnessed every single day, through accounts relayed via the media, stories told to me personally, and with my own eyes.

The continuing, and even increasing, expropriation of Palestinian land, settlement expansion and road building in the West Bank, particularly in the greater Jerusalem area, along with the IDF and settler presence in the Gaza Strip, West Bank (including East Jerusalem), the Golan Heights, and southern Lebanon, only reinforces my resolve to refuse Army service.

It is the IDF that guards the work crews who uproot trees and tear through hills to build Jewish–only settlements, and now the Jewish–only bypass roads.

It is the Israeli army that protects settlers while they rampage against Palestinian residents; that enabled the massacre, one year ago, of 29 worshippers in the Ibrahimi mosque by Baruch Goldstein and his accomplices, and that, over the subsequent month, carried out an additional massacre of 40 more Palestinians; that now supervises religious persecution through the division of the Ibrahimi mosque; that routinely assassinates Palestinian political activists and stands guard over thousands more in Israeli prisons; that bombs to death hundreds of Lebanese citizens every year and afterwards claims that they were "terrorists;" that prevents Palestinians from drilling wells required to meet their minimal level of water use; and that blocks Palestinians from reaching Jerusalem — the geographic, economic, cultural and religious center of Palestinian life.

And finally, it is the Israeli military that, by en mass expulsion and deportation, has created millions of Palestinian refugees and keeps them refugees by refusing to allow them to return to their homes, on both sides of the "green line."

The IDF solidifies the class stratification of Israeli society based on race and religion. A quick perusal of the Holy Warned advertisements in the newspaper reveals that a very large percentage of biases demand army service as a condition of employment. This immediately excludes the vast majority of Palestinians who constitute 20 percent of Israeli citizenry, severely hindering their chances of economic upward mobility. Plus, it is common knowledge that within the army itself the most undesirable jobs are reserved for certain vectors of society, for example Ethiopian immigrants.

If there existed here a popular army that protected equally the lives and rights of everyone, regardless of religion, race, sex, or class, I would gladly enlist and serve. However, for the above reasons and more, I am unwilling to serve in the IDF even for one day.

Nathan Krystall, Jerusalem

Arts & Living

Original mask theater incorporates mime style

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow night, the nationally acclaimed dance company, IMAGO, The Theatre Mask Ensemble, will take the stage at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. The program, sponsored by the Residential Arts, begins at 8 p.m.

The company, though based in the United States, is trained in French mime style, dance, movement theater and mask styles. It specializes in "original mask theater." This unusual and imaginative event features a group of multi-talented performers proving that a mask is not just a covering for the face.

Artistic directors and founding members, Jerry Mouawad and Carol Uselman, have a combined background in the Lecoq method of mime, contemporary dance, movement theater and traditional mask styles. In a collective and creative enterprise, they design and construct their own masks and costumes, write the shows and direct the productions. Working together since 1978, they have created an inventive kind of theatre where the term "mask" is redefined.

The key to the performance lies in that entire bodies may disappear to become familiar, or not-so-familiar, fanciful characters. Some forms are recognizable, some are entirely new IMAGO creations. What you expect is not necessarily what you want as up may be down, arms may be legs and coming just might be going.

IMAGO has received rave reviews for its imaginative and creative performances. Praised by press and public during annual tours around the United States, IMAGO is known as one of the country's most original and entertaining theatrical groups.

COURTESY IMAGO

The dance company, IMAGO, will perform tomorrow night at the Fine Arts Center.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer said, "If there is something that can be done with a mask that these performers fail to do, it's hardly worth considering." The San Antonio Light calls IMAGO "visually beautiful as well as intelligent."

They have been awarded the "highest ranking honor" of the Dance Film Association of New York, acclaimed by National Young Audiences for their theater programs. Just recently, they were awarded the Prestigious National Endowment for the Arts Theater Grants.

The show begins at 8 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Tickets are $5 for Five College Students and $10 general public. For more information and tickets, please call the box office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Keitel stars in film based on epic odyssey

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

ULYSSES' GAZE
Directed by Theo Angelopoulos with Harvey Keitel, Maia Morgenstern
Special Presentation at Pleasant St. Theater
Mar. 4

NORTHAMPTON — A sold-out crowd gathered Monday night at the Pleasant St. Theater to see Theo Angelopoulos' masterpiece, Ulysses' Gaze.

As part of the Third Annual Multicultural Film Festival, Theo Angelopoulos was supposed to present his film, but due to health problems he was not able to attend.

Ulysses' Gaze, winner of the last year's Grand Prix award at the prestigious Cannes Film Festival, is the 10th film created in the remarkable career of Angelopoulos.

Relatively unknown to most of the United States, Angelopoulos is considered to be amongst the best directors of all-time. With numerous international awards, he has been compared to the likes of Jean-Luc Godard and Michelangelo Antonioni.

His deep insight into humanity, through breathtaking visuals (provided by longtime cinematographer, Yorgos Arvanitis), flows through the entire field of emotions. His films are particularly un-American — his shots are long and perfectly choreographed, relying more on camera work than editing.

Ulysses' Gaze remains true to his style. Harvey Keitel plays a Greek-American director who sets on an odyssey to find three undeveloped reels of film by the early Greek filmmakers, the Manakias' brothers. Keitel works as Homer's mythic Odysseus—embarking on a voyage that begins with a physical battle of travel and ends with a soul searching discovery.

Keitel is great as the unnamed protagonist. Searching for the lost Manakias' films becomes his ultimate destiny. His travels take him from the Balkan Islands of Greece to Albania, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Romania, Serbia and finally to the rubbled remains of Sarejevo in Bosnia. Believing that the reels are to be found somewhere in Sarejevo, he puts his life on the line by searching the war-zone republic.

Through his travels we see the beautiful landscapes he encounters. Angelopoulos allows the audience to revel in the scenery by avoiding haste with editing. Some shots last almost 10 minutes, which would no doubt seem uncomfortable to American audiences used to the rapid eye-blasting editing of MTV and commercial television.

Ulysses' Gaze, although clocking in a little long at nearly three hours, is a triumph of humanity and filmmaking. Angelopoulos realizes that there needs to be a change in modern cinema. A-

Guitarist to play mix of styles in free concert at UMass

By Kenneth Breese
Collegian Correspondent

There may be no such thing as a free lunch, but for kcal fans of guitar music, Kevin Collins will be offering his talents in a free performance tomorrow at the Bezanson Recital Hall. The performance will take place at 8:15 p.m. and is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts' Performing Arts Division. The program will be a boon to those music lovers out there still scrimping together their pennies for the upcoming Spring Break.

Collins will perform guitar classics in a wide array of styles and arrangement. The author of Beginning Classical Guitar, will present a survey of solo literature ranging from Villa-Lobos preludes, Brower etudes, studies of Fernando Sor and even some pieces written for the Renaissance lute.

Collins, a University faculty member, has a rich background in guitar. Prior to coming to Amherst, Collins spent nine summers at the Aspen Music School, where he worked closely with famed guitar master, Oscar Ghiglia. Collins honed his skills as a performer in New York for six years, primarily performing at The Rainbow Room and Windows on the World. Collins is a graduate of the UMass and the Hartt School of Music.

Most of Collins' performance will include a mix of styles, and will a lot of interaction with the audience. His work has been characterized not only as "warm and entertaining" by John Conaday of the New York Times, but also as "brilliant" by Akira Endo, conductor of the Austin Symphony. Hopefully, the turn-out at Bezanson will reflect the brilliance of this talented musician.

The concert is free and open to the public. Bezanson Hall is located in the Fine Arts Center. For more information, please contact PAD at 545-0519.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE

Kevin Collins will perform a survey of solo music for the guitar tonight

Pianist amazes with Bach rendition

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

IGNAT SOLZHENITSYN
Bowker Auditorium
Mar. 3

Astounding and amazing are among the words that could be used to describe Ignat Solzhenitsyn's performance Sunday night. The 23-year-old pianist wowed the audience with his rendition of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Goldberg Variations." The piece, which was written for the harpsichord in 1741-42, features an aria and 30 variations upon the theme.

The aria began softly and sweetly. Solzhenitsyn's touch was gentle as he played what appeared to be an uncomplicated melody. The first theme was a brisker, stucco arrangement which featured the typical "detached" notes characteristic of Bach's work.

The variations of the theme followed tended to range from delicate to forceful, spanning all tempo ranges from the main theme, reducing the accompaniment to just that — accompaniment.

The 30 variations and aria were all played from memory. Despite the fact that the pianist played for over an hour without interruption, his fingers and memory never faulted. There were moments when his eyes were closed and his fingers just flew over the keyboard, confident of striking the right keys.

Solzhenitsyn showed tremendous dexterity. There were moments when his hands were practically on top of each other, with one hand straddling the other and fingers spanning one octaves or more. He also crossed-over with his hands: his right hand often playing the bass clef while his left deftly moved along the treble clef.

Because the piece was originally written for the harpsichord, there were few dynamics, but he managed to vary the intensity, mood and feeling of each section.

The "Goldberg Variations" were composed during the Baroque period and showed the hallmark of that era, including a fast tempo, many notes played on top of each other and grace notes. Solzhenitsyn performed all these and more with perfection, playing Bach as Bach is supposed to be played.

The UMASS Daily Collegian
A wealth of information at your finger tips everyday.

INSTITUTE FOR STUDY ABROAD
BUTLER UNIVERSITY
UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES IN GREAT BRITAIN
AUSTRALIA
IRELAND
NEW ZEALAND
Fully integrated study at British, Irish, New Zealand and Australian universities
FALL OR SPRING SEMESTER • FULL YEAR
INSTEP • SUMMER PROGRAM • INTERNSHIPS
Study Abroad Information Session
Representative: Tom Roberts
Date: Thursday, March 7
Location: 9:00 - 12:00
At Table on Concourse
For further information please contact Your Study Abroad Office on campus or the Institute for Study Abroad, Butler University, 4602 Sunset Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46208. Tel 317/940-9336 or 800/858-9299 Fax 317/940-9704

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e) J-1 Waivers
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
Relative Petitions
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1163 Main Street - 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103, 781-6370
13 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060, 584-3232
Specializing in IMMIGRATION LAW for over 10 years.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Thursday Night Jams
CLOVIS POINT & SYNAESTHESIA
Free Admission
Thursday March 7th
9:30pm-1:00am
At The Hatch
Coffee house, ice cream shop and pizza place open til 12:30
This performance is made possible by:
DAILY COLLEGIAN Classifieds
SEF, a grant from the Cultural Enrichment Fund, Food Services, and a grant from Greek Affairs.

Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland
Ireland Today
In Mexico
Spanish Language and Culture
On Nantucket Island
Playwriting and Performance
Along the New England Coastline
Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island
Marine Biology
For information about these programs—and over four hundred courses available this summer—contact
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

HOW DO YOU MAKE A BAR FLY?
Buzz!
With HALF-PRICE APPETIZERS & NACHOS
EVERY DAY at THE PUB in AMHERST from 3-5pm and 7-9pm only in the bar and lounge!
15 E. PLEASANT STREET • DOWNTOWN AMHERST

Getting High on Getting Thin:
The First of Two Workshops on Eating and Body Issues
My Best Friend, My Worst Enemy
Myths and facts about eating disorders, food and weight.
Date: Thursday, March 7, 1996
Time: 3:30 pm to 5:00 pm
Place: Campus Center, Rm 811-15
Drop-in workshops are sponsored by University Health Services. Free and open to UMass students.
CONFIDENTIALITY ASSURED
For more info, call 549-2671 ext. 233 or 545-2337

~ SPORTS ~

■ hockey

continued from page 10

ative playmaking, and exceptional passing can find the microscopic seems in the trap that many team fail to discover.

The Eagles were struggling at 7-12-3 before the line was put together for the Jan. 19 game against UMass. The Eagles smoked the Minutemen 8-2 that night and haven't looked back, posting a 9-3 mark since, pulling themselves up from the dregs of the league to just one point shy of fourth place.

It will take a special team to knock out PC. BC is it.

• The All-Hockey East teams were announced late yesterday afternoon by the league office and it contained few surprises.

BU forward Jay Pandolfo was named the league's Player of the Year, while Reasoner took home the Rookie of the Year honor in a run-away. Reasoner won the league's Rookie of the Week award a record nine times this season.

Crowder was named Coach of the Year, and deservedly so, after taking slumping Lowell on a meteoric rise to the top of the standings, including a stunning sweep of BU.

Pandolfo was joined on the All-Hockey East team, at forward, by teammate Chris Drury, Maine's Tim Lovell, UNH's Mark Mowers, Hymovitz and UMass-Lowell's Christian Sbrocca.

A solid defensive corps is highlighted by Northeastern star Dan McGillis and also includes Maine's Jeff Tory, UNH's Todd Hall and BU's Jon Coleman. Hall also won the Len Ceglarski Award annually given to the league's Most Sportsmanlike Player.

The goaltenders were Dennis and Maine's Blair Allison

Reasoner was joined on the All-Rookie team at forward by UNH's Derek Bekar and Maine's Steve Kariya. Coupled with brother Paul, the Kariya's are the league's first siblings to each make the team.

The defensemen were Main's Brett Clark and Merrimack's Martin Scoville, and BU's Michel Larocque was the goalie.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

Hill's 27 ignites Pistons over Raptors while Clippers topple suprised Knicks

TORONTO (AP) — Grant Hill scored 27 of his 31 points in the second half and grabbed 15 rebounds Tuesday night in the Detroit Pistons' fourth straight win, 105-84 over the Toronto Raptors.

The Pistons, playing their seventh road game in the last eight, and fourth game in the last five days, looked sluggish in the first half. They shot just 26 percent from the field to trail 42-31 at halftime. The 31 points was their second- lowest one-half total this season.

However, led Hill, Detroit turned it on with a 74-point second half to blow out the Raptors.

Included in the onslaught was a 19-0 fourth quarter run capped by Hill's field goal.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Clippers started their five-game road trip with a rare win over New York, using an 18-2 run early in the fourth quarter. The Clippers beat the Knicks for the first time in more than three years and for only the third time in their last 20 meetings. It was the sixth loss in the last seven games for the Knicks, who were outscored 33-20 in the fourth quarter.

Brian Williams led Los Angeles with 25 points and Patrick Ewing had 24.

MIAMI (AP) — Tim Hardaway had 19 points, 10 assists, six rebounds and six steals despite sitting out the fourth quarter.

The defeat eclipsed the Timberwolves' worst loss, a 114- 75 defeat in Indiana on April 16, 1995. It was the second largest margin of victory in Heat history.

Walt Williams paced the Heat, who never trailed, with 20 points. Spud Webb's 16 points topped the Timberwolves, who scored just two points more than their franchise record low.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The SuperSonics stretched their team-record winning streak to 14 games as Detlef Schrempf scored 14 points in the two extra periods.

Cleveland seemed to have the game in hand when Dan Majerle sank a 3-pointer for a 94-92 lead with 1.4 seconds left in the first overtime.

But after a Seattle timeout, Cleveland's Chris Mills was whistled for a foul as he reached around Schrempf to knock away the inbounds pass from halfcourt. With the crowd of 17,260 screaming at him and the officials, Schrempf made both foul shots with eight-tenths of a second left, forcing a second OT.

Seattle took the lead for good at 100-99 on Schrempf's driving scoop shot with 1:38 to play in the second overtime. Mills then missed two free throws, and Schrempf followed with a 3-pointer that made it 103-99 with 50 seconds left.

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan searched Milwaukee for 21 first-quarter points, finishing with 33, and Luc Longley blocked a career-high seven shots.

The Bulls are 29-0 at the United Center and have won 36 straight regular-season games at home, dating back to last season.

■ baseball

continued from page10

Angeles), hurts the infield. Tom Gordon fled to the Red Sox for offensive support (and tons of money), but the Royals grabbed young hurler Jason Jacome. Wally Joyner went to the Padres. Rebuilding year for K.C.

5. Milwaukee Brewers: The Brewers have their work cut out for them. The pitching staff is a work in progress and the offense has very little power. Half the team is Australian, maybe they should try rugby or football.

West

1. California Angels: This team, under the direction of Marcel Lacheman could be one of the best teams in baseball this season. They have the best outfield in the A.L. with power galore in Tim Salmon and Jim Edmonds, and Rookie of the Year Garrett Anderson is a budding five-tool star. Lacheman also employs a solid pitching staff with Mark Langston, Chuck Finley and Jim Abbott.

2. Seattle Mariners: They made the playoffs last season without a healthy Ken Griffey, Jr. for the better part of the campaign. Paul Sorrento has taken Tino Martinez's place at first and Andy Benes is the number one in St Louis. But, the Kid is back, and the Mariners offense will thrive.

3. Texas Rangers: Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez are the leaders of this young team. Dean Palmer should be back, and young shortstop Benji Gil has a year of the big leagues under his belt. The loss of Kenny Rogers and Otis Nixon will hurt, but Phil Regan will keep the Rangers competitive.

4. Oakland Athletics: No Tony LaRussa. No chance. The A's are in trouble out west. They don't have too much in the farm system, and the big league squad has been depleted to a bunch of utility players. LaRussa would have gotten the most out of them, but...

* * *

A.L. Division Champs:
East – Boston
Central – Cleveland
West – California
Wild Card – Baltimore

A.L. Pennant- Boston
Most Valuable Player: Roberto Alomar, Baltimore
Cy Young: Jack McDowell, Cleveland
Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian staff member.

Longley also had 14 points and seven rebounds for Chicago, now 53-6. Glenn Robinson led the Bucks with 22 points and Vin Baker added 21.

Dennis Rodman was ejected with 6:42 remaining in the third quarter after he was called for a flagrant foul against Milwaukee's Sherman Douglas. Both he and Bulls coach Phil Jackson complained vigorously.

DALLAS (AP) — George McCloud, Jim Jackson and Jason Kidd led a long-range barrage as the Mavericks broke their league record for 3-point attempts and matched their league mark for successful 3-pointers.

Dallas went 18-for-49 from 3-point range, led McCloud's 30 points and 7-for-20 from beyond the 3-point line Jackson added 28 points, including four 3-pointers, and Kidd contributed 26 points, nine assists and four 3-pointers.

The Mavericks set the previous 3-point records with 18 conversions and 44 attempts on March 1 at Denver.

Shawn Bradley exploited the Mavericks' undersized inside players for a career-high 32 points.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Anfernee Hardaway had 27 points and 10 assists as Orlando reached the 500 mark on the road for the first time in two months.

Nick Anderson had 28 points and Dennis Scott fueled a 22-6 run that bridged the end of the first quarter with no score at the second, sending the Hornets to their most lopsided loss of the season.

■ dance

continued from page 10

With the victory, the Privateers (21-8) earned an automatic bid to the NCAA postseason tournament.

Arkansas-Little Rock (23-6) rallied late and led by three points with 3:04 to play on a Joe Stephens basket underneath. James Douglas cut it to 56-55 on a shot from under the basket.

Derek Fisher, who led the Trojans with 17 points, had chances to score on drives into the lane on two trips down the floor, but his first attempt was blocked and the second shot, from four feet, fell short.

New Orleans got the ball following a timeout with 25 seconds to play. James Douglas went up for a layup, but his shot was blocked and the ball bounced off the Trojans' Rod Smith and out of bounds with :04 remaining.

After the teams traded timeouts, Garris got the ball just left of the free throw line and drove the middle for the winning basket. Lewis Sims led UNO with 17 and Douglas added 10.

Penn 65, Princeton 49

Donald Moxley scored 16 points and Ira Bowman added 14 as Penn defeated Princeton 65-49 in the final Ivy League regular season game, enabling the Quakers to tie the Tigers for first place.

The two teams will meet Saturday night at Lehigh, with the winner gaining a berth in the NCAA tournament.

Northern Illinois 84, Detroit 65

Mike Hartke had the best game of his career in Northern Illinois' biggest game in five years. Hartke scored a career-high 17 points Tuesday night in an 84-65 victory over Detroit that gave the Huskies the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament title. Northern Illinois (20-9) has reached the 20-win mark for only the third time in school history. More importantly, it is back in the NCAA tournament for the first time in five years.

Northern Illinois has made two other NCAA tournament appearances, losing in the first round in 1982 and 1991.

The root of all that is bad in the world of sports

Matt Vautour

I hate...

• Kentucky basketball.

In the past few weeks more people have gushed about how great Kentucky is. While granted the team is immensely talented, its inside game is average at best.

If I am Rick Pitino, I am scared silly of running into a team like Memphis, Cincinnati or Wake Forest in the tournament because let's face it Mark "My game is equivalent to the" Pope is not that good.

"Well Kentucky has been beating people by such huge margins..." the idiots wearing the new Converse/Kentucky denim colored outfits will say.

Yeah the Wildcats have rolled over a lousy SEC Conference schedule and some pretty weenie non-conference opponents (Morehead State).

The weak schedule preparation coupled with no big real men leave the Wildcats ripe for an upset.

• People who talk about UConn's great depth.

The big reason that so many hoop yahoos say that UConn would beat UMass is because of the superb depth that the Huskies have.

Shut up.

How the hell can a team that boasts Rudy Johnson and Kirk King as starters have any depth. If the bench is so good, start somebody else.

I'll take an early upset for $400 Alex.

• Steve Kasper.

Can the Bruins executives get a clue please and fire the Butch Hobson of hockey?

With Pat Burns ousted from Toronto, the B's should pluck the ex-cop from the unemployment line and end one of the most embarrassing eras in Boston history.

While they're at it, the B's might as well trade Bill Ranford as the playoffs become less and less likely.

The veteran netminder hasn't provided enough of a boost and the Bruins could still get some prospects from a playoff contender in need of a net-minder.

• The NHL's new matinee jerseys.

Remember when the NHL used to still have a feeling of class around it. Nothing epitomizes the bogus new trends more than the Anaheim Mighty Ducks' extra sweater.

I have this fantasy that an earthquake will hit selected spots across the country sucking the courts of the Houston Rockets and Charlotte Hornets into the ground. By some minor miracle I hope that the Mighty Ducks' jerseys happen to be on one of those floors.

• The fact that the Atlantic 12 is still called the A-10. If the brilliant folks could switch the logo for the conference why not change the name so it's mathematically correct.

• Alexander Koul's here. Somebody should tell him that he looks like an idiot.

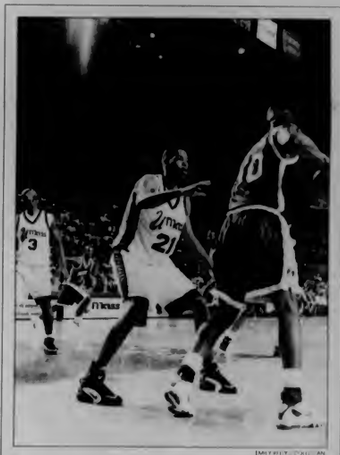
Staying with oafy and unattractive, how much ugly is in the middle of the court when Carolina and Duke square off. UNC's Serge Zwikker and Duke's Greg Newton join Koul, Beau Zach Smith (Louisville) and Chris Snowden (SW Louisiana) on the NCAA All-ugly team.

• Dumb executives...

Why did the Giants draft Tyrone Wheatley as highly as they did, if they're still going to shell out $16 million bucks to re-sign Rodney Hampton?

• The Yankees, the Cowboys, Boston College, the New York Rangers, and UConn.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist



"Just try to get around me..."

Marcus Camby, an All-Atlantic 10 first team member, will put defensive pressure on opponents in this weekend's A-10 Tournament.

30% Student Discount Mon., Tues. and Wed. at EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
586-6843

JUNGLE RED SALON
(413) 549-1840
• Perms
• Colors
• Nails
Special Haircut Day
Lower Level, Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant / Amherst, MA 01002

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
We Are Now On OCMP!
10% DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The COLLEGIAN is looking for candidates for Special Issues Coordinator. If you are organized, a good communicator, creative, and more...Come down and apply!
Special Issues Coordinator offers great experience in advertising, business, and communications.
GET YOUR EXPERIENCE HERE!
Build your resume @ the COLLEGIAN!
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst • 413-545-3500

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $293
PARIS $179 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $254 $483
Roundtrip
TOKYO $762
Subsidized flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs-Immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. INT'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

Steve Maddens.
(Get'em while they last)
ZUM
Downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CAMPUS COMICS & CARDS
Now mail order system! Order any comics & cards @ reduced prices. 50% off Magic singles. $3 for posters. Star Wars Box $95. Starters $3. Boosters $1.50. Pick up forms @ the CC Concourse every Friday or call Chris & Geoff @ 6-5287.

ATTENTION ALL MAJORS! Limited global Fortune 1000 Career Opportunities! Internships and co-ops available with over 85% of the hospitality industry's leading companies! Non-hotel, undergrads and grads welcome!

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
For a good time — SIFI is on the web at [illegible] Or e-mail us at [illegible] Why not [illegible]

LEARN TO BARTEND
Bartend with University Bartending 50% off! All you need to know to bartend. Evening Distance to campus. [illegible]

Chabad Student Coalition presents an evening with Myron Friedman on the topic of "Reclaiming intimacy and sex variety in our personal relationships". Thurs March 7, 7:30pm. Free Admission. SBA 120. Dessert Reception following the lecture. 7:30pm at Chabad House 30 N. Hadley Rd. adjacent to Southwest Residential area.

New mail order system! Order any comics & cards @ reduced prices. 50% off magic singles. $3 for posters. Star Wars Box $95. starters $3. Boosters $1.50. Pick up forms @ the CC Concourse every Friday or call Chris and Geoff @ 6-5287.

Joseph Fountain for Student Trustee. Joseph Fountain will work for: More call boxes and better escort services.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"Overwhelming child care for undergrads with children." Reform for legal services, funding for RSO s and election laws. I promise to work hard and be a strong advocate for student rights and financial aid.
Joseph Fountain

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available immediately PUFFTON VILLAGE single bedroom apartment. Transfer or lease for low $433 per month. Compare with $505 per month. Call 549-5341.

Moving off Campus? Spacious 2 bedroom apartment. Heat hot water gas included on bus route 5 minutes to campus. Call 549-6729.

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Tercel 117000 miles manual 5-speed reliable $1750 or B O.

For Spring Break Toyota 1986 Starion wagon snow tires only $900. Needs to go fast. 584-8273.

87 Acura Integra A/C new clutch manual $7500 B/O 549-4042.

EMPLOYMENT

Photographer Wanted Need photographer for wedding June 29 1996 portfolio required 2 yrs experience 802-295-7911.

FILL YOUR RESUME - FILL YOUR WALLET. University Directories, the nation s largest publisher of campus telephone directories, is hiring students to sell advertising for the UMass telephone directory. The summer internship begins with expense-paid, week long training on the UNCH campus. Gain experience in advertising, sales. Average earnings are $3800 - $5700. College credit may be available. Travel opportunities exist. INTERVIEW DATE: WEDNESDAY MARCH 13. CALL KARA STRUPP @ 1-800-743-5556 to schedule an interview time.

Seeking warm caring people for co-ed children's summer camp in upstate NY. Swimming, water & land sports. A&C, horses, dance, mountain biking, riflery, archery, computers, drama. Have a kitchen & maintenance. Competitive salary. 1-800-782-5769.

Premiere Brother Sister camps in Massachusetts counselor positions for talented and energetic students as program specialists in all team sports, especially Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball. 30 forms openings. Also Golf, Archery, Riflery. Pioneering, overnight camping trips and rock climbing, weights, fitness and cycling other openings include performing arts, fine arts, figure skating, newspaper, photography, yearbook, radio station, cooking, sewing and rocketry; all waterfront pool activities, swimming, sailing, sailing, wind surfing, canoeing, kayaking). Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 17th-August 17th. Inquire: Mah Kee Nac (Boys) 1-800-753-9118 Danbee (Girls) 1-800-392-3752.

Professional male escort service Available for all functions. "A last minute call that will last all night." 256-8828.

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach contraception workshops at University Health Services. Call for more information 549-2671 ext 181.

Tired of being broke ... PT $700 to $4000 a week FT $800 $1000 a week to start. Immediately call 800 691 7989.

&Cruise Ships Hiring! Students needed! $$$+Free Travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii). Seasonal/Permanent. No Experience Necessary. Job (919) 929-4398 x1040.

FOR SALE

35 gallon fish tank call 549-4529.

Pawarbook 165 10MB RAM 160MB hard drive system 7.1 internal modem call Fred at 532-1158.

Sailsurfboard No equipment $170 M e l EVENT.FRAM@UMIX.CS.UMASS.EDU or call 253-0754.

Planning a trip? $400 Airline voucher for sale. American Airlines $375 or b/o. Kristi 549-7474.

Wordprocessor-one unit, printer, monitor, keyboard, call 259-1660.

Brother wordprocessor w/spread sheet, business letter, and thesaurus software. Originally bought @ $300 and valued @ $400. resale price $125 or best offer. call 549-3774 for more information!

Airline Ticket for sale Miami Spring Break B/O call Jen 549-6589.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Houses for Rent - Cape Cod group summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. 508-477-8000.

LOST

Keychain on 2/14/96 on Campus Center. Has tropical picture and says Bahamas in picture. Please return to or call the Collegian at 5-3500. 113 Campus Center Basement. Please, I'm desperate!

Lost Zodiac divewatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Eric at 665-3883.

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist. Vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1016 or Jason 367-0158.

MISCELLANEOUS

Women do you worry to much about how you look? Free six week body image Art Therapy. Group now forming. Call today 585-0809.

Clarity Press, INC. Introducing new perspectives on minority and human rights issues. Catalogue/orders: http://www.bookmasters.com/clarity

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington #7291 UMass ski club 545-3431.

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters. Door-to-door, affordable, advanced reservations. 253-1750.

Europa $169 Caribbean/ Mexico $189 R/T. Be a little flexible and save $$$. We'll help you beat the airline prices. Destinations worldwide. Airhitch 800-326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com

Spring Break Panama City $119. Best hotels and prices. Call Heidi 256-0478.

WANTED

$100 Buying STAR WARS, Transformers, GI Joe and most other toys before 1988. Call 413 562-0413.

PERSONALS

Congratulations to the new pledge class re: Kerry, Erica, Julie, Maureen, Karen, Hillary, Christy, Aimee, Michele, Mara, Jill, Alison, Sherrie, Rikki, Elinor, Danielle, and Suzanne. Get psyched for a great semester. The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau.

David, You are my best friend in the world. I will love you forever and a day. Love always, Karen.

ROOM FOR RENT

Montague House 3 rooms for rent 325 each 367-9608 John Lakeside.

Large Room, private bath, walk in closet Mill Valley, building $300 Lori 256-0877.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring support assistance. 549-1906.

Wordprocessing service for thesis, articles and papers. Written or recorded transcription. Fax transmission available. (413)243-8080.

TRAVEL

Spring Break Condo!
Marco Island Florida
Pool parties, boats
$850 per week
212 472-1414

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $129
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1-800-234-7007

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington #7291 UMass ski club 545-3431.

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters. Door-to-door, affordable, advanced reservations. 253-1750.

Europa $169 Caribbean/ Mexico $189 R/T. Be a little flexible and save $$$. We'll help you beat the airline prices. Destinations worldwide. Airhitch 800-326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com

Spring Break Panama City $119. Best hotels and prices. Call Heidi 256-0478.

Classifieds They Work !!!

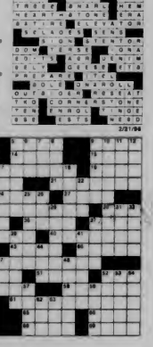
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 — Hari
5 Send packing
9 "Hear ad —"
13 Saudi
14 Jewelry designer Peretti
15 Clothes dryer
16 TV attachments
19 Waffle ingredients
20 Most despicable
21 Imparts knowledge
23 Pub order
24 Where governess arrived
27 Hooking tool
28 Having a short scent detector
30 "Exodus" hero
32 Ruby Dee a sepoula
36 Sudan
37 Poems of dedication
38 Army rank
40 Roosevelt's gift to Americans
42 Show the way
43 State of mind
45 Mix up
46 — Hausa Lane District mountain pass
47 Ranch workers
49 Shade of tan
51 Start of something big?
52 "— rose — rose"
55 Keyes and Wood
58 Andes climbers
60 Martha of the movies
61 Sporty shirt
64 Neighborhood
65 Indian noblewoman
66 Offer a challenge
67 Main
68 Big bash
69 Winter white

DOWN
1 "The —Cosins Story"
2 Thin as —
3 Sat aside
4 Singer Lane
5 Tommy of TV's "Jake"
6 Dean of comedy
7 "Born in the —"
8 Dessert tray item
9 Namesakes of a Baldwin
10 Overly studious
11 "Bus Stop" author
12 Joan —
17 Publishing company
18 In the extreme
22 Help out
25 Sweet — Dawn
26 Gershwin tune
28 Bovine bellow
29 Like a certain poet's garb
29 Fountain treat
31 Genuine
32 Capri for one
33 Gaze intently
34 Gets the point
35 Dice throw
37 Tacos percentages
39 Quarrels
41 Wash rag
43 Donald Duck
44 Expressions of understanding
47 Dried leaf
48 "Little — Kerry"
50 Sport shoe feature
52 "You Know What —"
53 Before now
54 Lopsided
55 Memorable periods
56 Offer
57 Ocean waves
59 Between rts and buts
62 Charlotte of TV
63 Explosive

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



Daily Collegian...

we're up really, really, really late putting together New England's largest college daily.

ENJOY!

positive ID not required!

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Amherst, Massachusetts 01003

Signature

FIELD SPRING '96

VALID SPRING 1996 UNDERGRADUATE

SCHMOE, JOSEPH A. 012345678 911

Don't forget to check the weather!

GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY.
WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY !

Collegian Graphics

Where it pays to play!

Located somewhere deep in the Campus Center basement.
WARNING: may not be suitable for young children.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — You have many good ideas. One of them may even resolve an ongoing disagreement. Putting your talents on the line will pay off handsomely. Higher-ups applaud your efforts.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — The whirlwind pace at work continues. Others get tired just watching you. Do your homework and a job interview will go splendidly. A member of the opposite sex makes an offer. Ask pertinent questions.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — Certain financial restrictions will be relaxed soon. Welcome a unique opportunity to expand your role in place of employment. A member of the opposite sex may have designs on your heart. Play it cool.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Teamwork plays important dividends now. Concentrate on top priority work, postponing tasks that can wait. Rely on your research to provide valuable answers.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Good news arrives from someone living overseas. The ability to speak a second language will help you clinch a lucrative deal. Romance makes your heart sing. Go for it! This evening, show your feelings openly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Joint assets suddenly increase. Trying to maintain a hectic social schedule could stretch you too thin. Take steps to streamline your social calender.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — Someone may act touchy. Postpone passing judgement until you know the circumstances. Working alone can be highly profitable but will require self-discipline.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Business demands could impinge in your home life. Your mate expects more from you, and with good reason. A minor mix-up requires immediate attention. Be patient with someone who has suffered a disappointment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Domestic issues could call for a family conference. Set reasonable ground rules for children and enforce them consistently. A secret romance could land you in hot water. Exercise self- discipline. Protect your privacy and reputation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Wind up a business deal that has become long and drawn out. A friend is helpful in solving a personal problem. Check today's mail; recently received information could have been misleading. Romance looks somewhat unsettled.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — Be candid with your co-workers. You need their input. Give loved ones a treat tonight. Steer clear of controversial subjects, especially at meal time. A teen-ager is in need of an encouraging word. Be there.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Do not make problems for yourself. Consult experts, not friends. Let your partner take care of joint interests. It is your turn to sit back and observe. The evening hours prove ideal for romance.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

COULD YOU DO A DEMO OF THE NEW PRODUCT FOR OUR VP NEXT WEEK?
WELL... THAT WOULD DELAY THE SHIP DATE, LOWER MORALE AND CREATE AN UNENDING DEMAND FOR MORE UNPRODUCTIVE DEMOS...
LOGICALLY, SINCE YOUR OBJECTIVE IS TO SHOW THAT WE'RE DOING VALUABLE WORK...
AND WE'LL NEED A BANNER THAT SAYS "QUALITY."

Hidding Hannah By Mo

One time, Leah, Tim, Owen, Eric, Maureen and I were walking up the hill together.
We got to the top and ate at the bottom near Franklin, and I ran underneath it.
"You can hide under it," I said.

Kippli By Barry Deutsch

SO, ROBIN, WHERE YOUR FRESHMEN TREATING YOU?
FINE. ONE GIRL CONVINCED HER ROOMMATE THAT SHE WAS DEAD.
YES! BUT OTHERWISE IT'S JUST BEEN THE USUAL. LEMME GET THE DOOR.
KNOCK KNOCK
EXCUSE ME, BUT MY ROOMMATE WAS TURNED OF INTO A FROG. COULD YOU TALK TO HIM?
WHAT'S UP? ANYTHING INTERESTING?
NOPE.
BOY, ARE YOU JADED!

Leeid By Roger & Salem Salloom

I was at the check out counter at the supermarket yesterday. There was a guy who looked exactly like me. I was afraid to talk to him because I realized he might be me. I turned away for a minute and he vanished.

I couldn't believe there was another me.

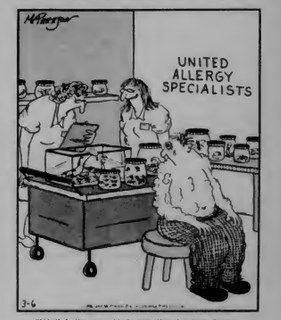
I thought I was special. My parents lied. Now, finally,.... I know.

I wonder if they lied about anything else....or..... even exaggerated? I'll bet there's a couple of other things.

I knew I resented them for a reason.

I'm not going shopping anymore.

Close to Home By John McPherson



"Well, let's see. He's positive for hay fever, negative for mildew, positive for poison ivy, positive for bee stings, positive for poison sumac. Let's see how he does with the fire ants."

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

HAROLD WILL BE OKAY ONCE THE POLICE REALIZE HE WASN'T RESPONSIBLE FOR WHAT HE DID!
AS FOR ME, THERE'S STILL A STORY TO BE GOTTEN!
THE POLICE HEARD YOU CONFESS TO ALTERING DR. TURNER'S FORMULA!
I-I MEANT NO HARM!

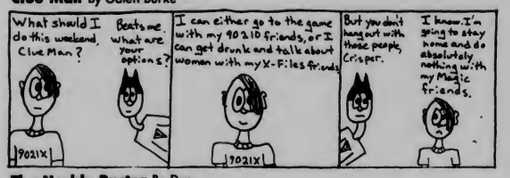
Jim's Journal By Jim

It snowed last night, the light fluffy kind.
This morning everything was quiet.
But I could hear my footsteps.
Every time I took a step, it sounded like a wet balloon.

Alien Crackbunnies By Darb

Hey Beck, do you ever wonder about why we're here, the meaning of life, the universe, stuff like that?
Actually, I already know all the answers, unfortunately for you I'm part of an intergalactic conspiracy that's not supposed to let you find them out.
you could've just said no.
Who do you think I am? Nancy Reagan?

Clue Man By Galen Burke



What should I do this weekend, Clue Man?
Beats me, what are your options?
I can either go to the game with my 90210 friends, or I can get drunk and talk about woman with my X-Files friends.
But you don't hang out with those people, Crisper.
I know. I'm going to stay home and do absolutely nothing with my Magic friends.
90210
90210

The Nuckle Buster By Dug

The other day my girlfriend and I were out hiking.
I had to go so I peed my name in the snow.
I thought it was neat and I was so cool...
Until Caroline died it too!
Yes, that's so ornate!
Hee Hee Hee

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Bastards By Matt & Greg

Olympius By Konrad Kubaska

CAMDEN, MICHIGAN
THIS IS WHERE ANYTHING IF THE FIRST SNOW BEGINS.
SHERIFF DARLEY, THERE HAVE BEEN MORE REPORTS OF THESE SKATING...
POLICE LINE
SIXTEEN DEERS IN A 15 MILE RADIUS.
INNAGODDAVIDA
POTATOS

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Tara MK Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Shane Keenan
Production Supervisor ..... Marc Dionne
Production ..... Brian D. Inocencio
Leon Latino

Today's D.C. Menu
Berkshire

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken, Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce, Ratatouille
DINNER: Pork Chops, Tempeh Stir Fry, Pastabilities, American Chop Suey

Franklin

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken, Hot Corned Beef, Ravioli/Tomato Sauce
DINNER: Pork Chops, Turkey Divan, Vegetarian Egg Roll, Qtr.Lb.Burger, Qtr.Lb.Swiss Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll, Chicken Cutlet, Grilled Cheese, Stone Willy's Pizza, Summit Subs
DINNER: Pork Chops, Turkey Divan, Stone Willy's Pizza, Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken, Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce, Ratatouille
DINNER: Pork Chops, Tempeh Stir Fry, Pastabilities, American Chop Suey

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Quote of the Day

"Upon us all, a little rain must fall.

–Led Zeppelin"

sports notice

Entries are being accepted for intramural spring sports. Entries for softball, co-rec soccer and volleyball are due Mar. 11. There will be a softball and co-rec soccer captains' meeting Mar. 25 & 26 at 6 p.m. and a volleyball captains' meeting Mar. 27 at 7 p.m. Call 215 Boyden at 5-0022 for information

Sports

sports notice

Referees are needed for intramural softball, co-rec soccer and volleyball. There will be clinics for softball and soccer Mar. 11 & 12 at 6 p.m. and Mar. 25 & 26 at 7 p.m. There will be a clinic for volleyball Mar. 27 at 7 p.m. Referees must attend at least one clinic. The positions are paid. Call 215 Boyden at 5-0022 for information.

Ticket to the Big Dance on teams' minds at A–10s

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

National consensus predicts four teams from the Atlantic 10, Massachusetts, Virginia Tech, George Washington and Temple, are locks to make the NCAA field of 64. With at least two other schools looking for post-season bids, this year's A-10 tourney looks to be one of the most interesting in recent history.

While Wednesday's first round games may be just enough to wet college basketball junkies' pallet, Thursday's probable games make for most interesting match-ups.

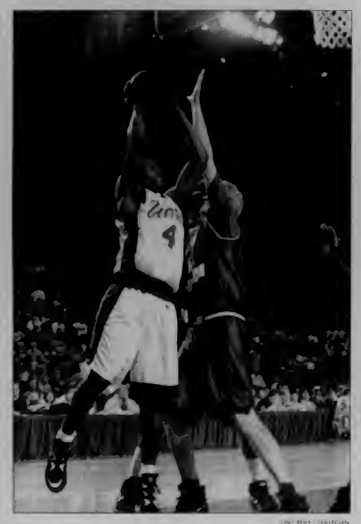
GW, the No. 2 seed in the West, will face either St. Joseph's or LaSalle in the quarterfinals. The Colonials dropped only three games in conference all season, but lost to both the Hawks and the Explorers once. St. Joe's, a team's whose bubble has all but burst, has taken Massachusetts to overtime twice this season, but its biggest loss might be the snowed-up game with Arizona.

Last season Mike Jarvis' troops knocked off Massachusetts twice, but that wasn't enough for an at-large bid as two losses to St. Joe's and one to St. Bonaventure to close the season left them out in the cold.

This year, GW (20-6) looks to have a secure hold on an invitation, but another first round loss in the conference tourney could place the Colonials back on the bubble. On the other hand if they were to get out of the quarterfinals, their bracket pits them up against UMass (28-1, with that one loss being to the Colonials).

In their last 70 games, the Minutemen have lost only eight times, against GW they are 0-4. Earlier this season it was sophomore and second All A-10 team selection Alexander Koul down low who scored 18 points to help ruin UMass' hopes of an undefeated season, 86-76 at the William D. Mullins Center. His physical presence down low hindered Marcus Camby's post play and set the tone early with a game opening block on the Atlantic 10 player of the year.

Temple, the other two seed will likely break down the Xavier/Fordham winner with its match-up zone. That win will give the Owls their 18th win but more importantly they will qualify for the semifinals of the A-10s and lock up a spot in the Big Dance. That semifinal battle will most likely be with top seed out of the West, Virginia Tech, but don't be surprised if its not.



DAN REILY / COLLEGIAN

Donta Bright, a member of the All-Atlantic 10 first team, will be a driving force behind UMass, as the Minutemen try for their fifth straight A-10 title.

Temple just whipped Virginia Tech 57-41 in the final week of the regular season and the Hokies have never quite been the same team since their emotionally draining loss to UMass in mid- February. Even before the clash with the then top-seeded Minutemen, No. 15 Tech went to over time with another A-10 team with a long shot at the NCAAs, Rhode Island.

Al Skinner has put together a tough non-conference schedule and been in almost every game this year. Had their 2-1 performance in the Rainbow Classic been later in the season, more people would give the Rams consideration.

With the addition of five new teams to the Atlantic 10, the Conference tournament has adopted some new wrinkles as well. All games will be played at the Philadelphia Civic Center, including the final which previously was held at the home of the highest remaining seed.

Hockey East primed for playoffs

After a four-and-a-half month regular season that ranks amongst the longest in all of college athletics, March Madness has finally arrived on the college hockey world as conference tournament play is underway.

Upsets have been plentiful out west where, in the opening round of the WCHA playoffs this past weekend, the No. 6, 7 and 8 teams all stunned higher seeds on the road.

Denver, which advanced in the NCAAs last year by schmucking New Hampshire 10-2 in the opening round, lost a best-of-three at home to lowly St. Cloud State. The proud Wisconsin Badgers salvaged a dismal season, and possibly coach Jeff Sauer's job, by sweeping North Dakota, suffocating Teeder Wynne, the second leading scorer in the nation; and a scrappy Michigan Tech team disposed of Minnesota-Duluth.

After seeing DU and charismatic netminder Sinuhe Wallinheimo toppled, underdogs around the country have taken notice as all four major conferences head to their respective post-season tourneys.

This is the case in Hockey East, where the Minutemen of Massachusetts will look to shock the world in a best-of-three series at No. 2 Boston University's Walter Brown Arena, generally one of the fiercest environments in the nation.

UMass might catch a break, with the BU students on break and a non-marquee name in town, for less than a sell-out is expected.

While the fans might not be a problem for the Minutemen, that doesn't mean that the Terriers won't be. More on this series will appear in this space all week long.

• Second seeded UMass-Lowell will entertain Northeastern starting tomorrow night at Tully Forum.

This series might be very ugly on the surface, with Lowell losing just once (at BU) since Jan. 12 and the Huskies entering as winners of just one of their last eight. Northeastern has been rather lethargic since the traumatic second period of the Beanpot final, where BU torched the Huskies for six goals on 11-shots in ten minutes.

The good news for the Huntington Hounds is that they have played the River Hawks solidly this season, downing Lowell 6-4 at Tully Forum on Jan. 5, and playing a pair of close 2-1 and 4-2 games during a home-and-home series.

Coach Bruce Crowder's teams have always given incredible playoff performances, and this year's tremendously overachieving bunch should continue that trend. In each of the past three seasons Crowder, in his fourth year at the helm of the River Hawks, took his team to the Hockey East semis at the Boston Garden.

Leigh Torbin on College Hockey

For one of the hottest teams in the country, a trip to the FleetCenter and the NCAAs is imminent.

• Some team was going to have to travel to lovely Orono, Maine, and New Hampshire, being the closest of the nine Hockey East schools, is as good a choice as any.

Much like with a bottle of Goldschläger, I would be afraid, very afraid of tangling with the Black Bears in the Hockey East playoffs, this year more than ever. With the team banned from NCAA competition by the University for violating scores of rules, the Hockey East playoffs will close the season for No. 10 Maine.

Eight of the last nine years Maine has been in the NCAAs, reaching five Final Fours and taking the 1993 Championship. This team is not going to bow out quietly, concentrating a full month's worth of energy on the league tourney.

Pity the Wildcats who must face this juggernaut as it fires on all cylinders on its home ice, where it lost just twice this year. Interim coach Greg Cronin's club has never lost to its northern New England rival in the playoffs, and things probably will not change this year.

• The most intriguing match-up of the tournament has fourth seeded Providence hosting fifth seeded Boston College at Schneider Arena.

The Friars practice the most conservative, defensive style of play in Hockey East. Their neutral zone trap and New Jersey Devils style system made them contenders from the get-go, but failed them occasionally as the season wore on.

After playing many 4-2 and 3-1 games early in the season, PC has given up more goals in recent games, something which does not bode well for this team. While the team has exceptional goaltending in Dan Dennis, stand-out defensemen and strong defensive forwards, the offense lacks as falling behind cripples Providence.

If any team has the ingenuity and discipline to consistently crack the trap it is Jerry York's Eagles. The team's top line of David Hymovitz, Marty Reasoner and Don Chase meshes tremendously and their cre-

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Men's track star Toye has become one of area's best

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Before the indoor track season started, Massachusetts coach Ken O'Brien eluded to the strengths of his team as being depth in the throwing and jumping events and some strong sprinters. Little did he know that he had one of the best young runners in New England.

Tom Toye, in his first season, has established himself as O'Brien's strongest and most consistent sprinter, while last year's freshman standout Scott Price struggled through the 95-96 season hampered by a nagging hamstring injury.

"This is something I've been working for the past two years," Toye said. "Everything came together for me this season."

"[Tom] loves the sport. I think he knows his role really well," Price said. "He didn't come in [with the attitude] 'I'm a freshman and I'm awesome.' He came in and did what he had to do."

Toye did what he had to do alright, establishing himself already as one of the school's all time leading indoor sprinters. At the Valentine Invitational in Boston on Feb. 10, Toye set a new U Mass indoor record in the 200m sprint, finishing in the top ten with a run of 22.12 seconds.

Toye had also placed himself in the record books with a time of 49.22 seconds on his second place effort in the 400m at the Atlantic 10 meet. He did that only to smash the time and set his second school record of the season, with a 48.23 at the ICAA Championship meet in Boston, surpassing the 400m indoor mark set by Rick Cady in 1981.

"I still don't consider myself a 400m runner yet," Toye said.

Toye is continually regarded by his coaches and teammates as a hard worker and team leader. But his best asset to the team may be the competitive spirit that he brings to every practice.

"I don't look at him as competition. I look at him as a teammate," Price said. "I want him to get better, and I want him to make me better. We'll do everything we can to push each other to get better."

How much better can Toye get? The sky seems to be the limit for the youngster from Scarborough, Maine. All four years that he ran track for Scarborough High he was a member of the All-State team. He holds three Maine state records (55m, 100m, 300 yards) and 19 school records including two relay team marks.

"I think I have room for improvement," Toye said. "I've got goals both short term and long term.

"I'm not saying I want to get this one or that one," he continued, "but, I think there are some [records] in my future."

More invitations to big dance

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — In big games, Bryce Drew is known to slip into a groove.

Drew, who didn't miss a shot in the second half, did just that Tuesday night as he led Valparaiso to an 75-52 victory over Western Illinois in the Mid-Continent Conference championship game. The victory gave the Crusaders (21-10) an automatic berth in the NCAA Tournament — their first in the school's history.

Drew scored 23 points and was named Most Valuable Player. "Bryce just took over in the second half," said Valparaiso coach Homer Drew, who also happens to be his father. "He got into that zone."

Drew was a perfect 6-of-6 from the field in the second half, including five 3-pointers. In the first half, he scored four points on 2 of 5 shooting.

Drew ignited the Crusaders on an 27-6 run with one of his 3-pointers. He ended up scoring 13 during the run, which gave Valparaiso a 66-41 lead with a little over three minutes left. "That was a huge shot," the sophomore said. "I looked up and saw Western Illinois was closing in, so I knew we needed a big play."

It's the second straight year that Valparaiso has beaten Western Illinois in the tournament championship. The conference didn't have an automatic berth to the tournament last year and the Crusaders didn't get an NCAA or NIT invitation.

Last year Drew scored 25 points to lead Valparaiso to an 88-85 victory in triple overtime.

"Bryce Drew is a great player and great players step up in big games," said Western Illinois coach Jim Kerwin said. "He stepped up and hit some really big threes. That's exactly what he did to us last year."

Valparaiso's coach also credited his interior defense for shutting down Western Illinois' all-tournament selections Clint Ford and George Mibsap, who had 8 and 6 points, respectively. Western Illinois, which never led in the contest, got as close at 39-35 with 13:46 left to play. But that's when Drew took over with his 3-point shooting.

"We made a run at them and felt pretty good," Kerwin said. "But we just couldn't get over the hump."

Kerwin also noted that his Leathernecks committed 20 turnovers. Valparaiso's other all-tournament team selection, Chris Ensminger, had 13 points, while Jamie Sykes chipped in 10. The Leathernecks had just one player in double figure: Jasen Heine with 10.

Central Connecticut State Garrett Petteway was also named to the all-tournament team.

New Orleans 57, Ark.-Little Rock 56

Tyrone Garris drove the lane and connected on a scoop shot as time expired Tuesday night to boost New Orleans over Arkansas-Little Rock 57-56 in the Sun Belt Conference tournament championship game.

Turn to DANCE, page 7

As Opening Day nears, Boston & Cleveland lead AL hopefuls

Baseball is just now in full swing, and every Joe and his brother already knows who's going to win the World Series, and when the Red Sox are going to be out of the playoff picture. Well, I don't have a brother named Joe, but I'll take a crack at the American League.

East –

1. Boston Red Sox: The Sox are loaded with offense having one of the best one-two punches in the league in Mo Vaughn and Jose Canseco. Dan Duquette has also assembled one of the deepest pitching staffs in the junior circuit with Roger Clemens healthy and Aaron Sele well on his way back. The only real weakness for Boston will be the defense. Canseco in right, 'nuff said.

2. Baltimore Orioles: If there is an infield in the American League that rivals Boston's, you'll find it in Camden Yards. On top of Cal Ripken, Roberto Alomar and Rafael Palmeiro, the O's have tremendous speed in the outfield and are one of the best defensive teams in the majors. Mike Mussina and Randy Myers are two of the best pitchers in baseball and Armando Benitez is a strong prospect; beyond that, the hurlers are very questionable.

FRED HURLBRINK JR. on Baseball

3. New York Yankees: How much are the Bombers going to miss Don Mattingly? Wade Boggs has six or seven extra errors coming to him without Mattingly's mitt. The strong starting rotation should make up for the lack of consistent defense though. As long as Tim Raines can keep the dope out of his (and Dwight Gooden's) pockets, New York should be competitive.

4. Toronto Blue Jays: The Jays will still be bad, but they're on the track back to respectability. They have loads of young talent in outfielder Shawn Green, slugger Carlos Delgado and slick infielder Alex Gonzalez. Joe Carter is still hanging around and will contribute, as will veteran speedster Otis Nixon (replacing Devon White) and curveballer Erik Hanson.

5. Detroit Tigers: Chad Curtis and Travis Fryman are two very talented players stuck on a team going nowhere. They have no pitching. They play bad defense. They have Cecil Fielder. Career back-up catcher Mark Parent was the biggest off-season pick-up for the Tigers.

Central–

1. Cleveland Indians: The defending American League champions may be better this year than they were last year. Paul Sorrento is gone, and youngster Herb Perry is poised to be a steady major league first-sacker. The major addition to the Tribe is middle-finger wielding Jack McDowell. Black Jack will pitch the Indians back to the AL championship series.

2. Chicago White Sox: Tony Phillips retired and the White Sox' hopes went down the tubes. He's back and so are the hopes for a playoff berth for Chicago. Frank Thomas is one of the best hitters of his time, and the pitching staff will rebound from a dismal 1995 campaign.

3. Minnesota Twins: Tom Kelly is slowly putting together a competitive ball club in the Homer Dome. Kirby Puckett is still the emotional leader of the squad, while Paul Molitor has come home to contribute. A young pitching staff and the acquisition of Roberto Kelly are keys to the Twins' success.

4. Kansas City Royals: The loss of the G-men, Gary Gaetti (to St. Louis) and Greg Gagne (to Los

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

Tourney Time

Marcus Camby and the Minutemen play their first postseason game tonight against St. Bonaventure in the A-10 Tournament in Philadelphia (See Sports, page 16).

Trustees disagree

The student trustee from UMass-Boston criticized Amherst's student trustee for his vote on a proposal about tuition cuts (See story, page 3).

"We have a very special show tonight"

Conan O'Brien, the host of "Late Night with Conan O'Brien," talks to the Collegian about life after midnight (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Three Day Forecast

The weather remains cold, cloudy and snowy today and tomorrow. It should clear up this weekend, however, though temperatures will continue to drop.

	Today	Friday	Saturday
	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 25 LOW: 15

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 90 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, March 7, 1996

Alexander, Lugar drop out; support Dole

By Cal Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lamar Alexander and Sen. Dick Lugar, two also-rans in the Republican presidential race, bowed to the inevitable yesterday and folded their campaigns. On the way out, both endorsed Sen. Bob Dole.

The former Tennessee governor went first, telling a news conference in Nashville that he has ended his candidacy. He congratulated the front-runner Dole and offered him his support. Lugar of Indiana made his announcement in a Senate hearing room, his family surrounding him.

"The apparent nominee is a man for whom I have great admiration, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, and I look forward to his nomination," Lugar said, adding that he and his wife, Charlene, planned to vote for Dole in Indiana and will "ask our friends to do the same."

Alexander said he went across America asking if Dole was the man Republicans want to oppose President Clinton. "What I discovered is the answer of most Republicans is yes," he said.

He was warmly cheered by a roomful of Tennesseans.

Dole "has character, he has dignity," Alexander said. "We gave it our best shot."

Asked if he would accept the vice presidential place on the Republican ticket, Alexander said, "I wouldn't be a very good second fiddle."

If anyone asked him, he said, he'd present a list of five people who would be better qualified for the second place. He didn't name them — and his answer did not close the door on the vice presidency.

Alexander and Lugar, both winless, were considered spoilers just last week by jittery Republicans rooting for Dole and aghast at the populist conservative uprising Pat Buchanan was suddenly bringing to the race.

But Dole steam-rolled the competition in eight primaries Tuesday night.

Alexander, former federal education secretary, had been emboldened by a third-place finish in New Hampshire but found little to sustain him after that.

Even before it was formally announced, Lugar's decision brought dismay to former associates.

"It breaks my heart," said Robert D. Beckmann Jr., Lugar's press secretary when he was mayor of Indianapolis.

"He didn't fail the American people, the American people failed him," said William Hudnut, who succeeded Lugar as mayor.

He amassed only 10 delegates before Tuesday. Lugar never cracked the top four before the so-called Junior Tuesday series of contests, often getting only a few percentage points of the vote. His best showing Tuesday was a fourth in Vermont, where he got 14 percent of the vote.

Alexander's departure will remove from the GOP campaign an ardent advocate of transferring federal powers to the states, more ardent even than Dole, who waves a copy of the Tenth Amendment, emphasizing state rights, wherever he goes.

Palestinian cops join Israel to try to salvage peace

By G.G. LaBella
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — With Israel in control of the West Bank, Palestinian police joined yesterday in the crackdown on Muslim militants whose deadly bombings are tearing apart the Israel-PLO peace.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's forces on yesterday raided the Gaza Strip's Islamic University — a hotbed of support for the militant Hamas group. The night before, they joined Israel in an arrest sweep in the West Bank for the first time.

Palestinian police sources said more than 400 have been arrested in Gaza and the West Bank in the last 10 days, including four activists on Israel's wanted lists. Tuesday night's joint sweep netted relatives of a suicide bomber behind one of four explosions since Feb. 25 that killed 57 people and the bombers.

Arafat also approved a life sentence with hard labor Wednesday for the man accused of recruiting three of the four bombers. Mohammed Abu Wardeh was not in court Tuesday night when he was convicted and sentenced by a Palestinian tribunal.

After the bombings, Israel clamped a curfew on refugee camps and hinted it may deport Hamas activists — a tactic not used in more than three years.

The Israeli army's return to areas that had been formally taken over by Palestinian police brought a flurry of activity from PLO officials seeking to join Israel's war on Hamas.

"We are in a state of war with terrorism and terrorists," said Attorney General Khaled Kidra. "The entire world is fighting terrorism, and we are part of the world. We are not standing by and watching."

Such statements are part of Arafat's campaign to calm Israelis who are seriously questioning whether the Mideast peace process was a mistake. Arafat has conducted arrest sweeps after previous Hamas attacks. In most cases, suspects were quickly released — much to Israel's displeasure.

Arafat appeared to be going further this time, although it was too early to know if he would — or could — destroy Hamas.

Palestinian police said citizens who harbor activists wanted by police or who hide weapons and explosives in their homes will be punished.

In the raid on Gaza's Islamic University, Palestinian police broke down doors, seized student records and took control of the school's mosque. Police had taken over 15 Hamas-supported mosques a day earlier, forcing imams, or preachers, to declare loyalty to Arafat's Palestinian Authority.

Twenty RSOs unite to free SATF fees

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Twenty Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) gathered yesterday in the Cape Cod Lounge from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in order to inform students about their organizations and unite behind the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) relief coalition.

"It is very important for the RSOs to come together in one united effort," Student Government Association President Christine Lopes said. "Students are working together; I feel that apathy on the campus is a myth."

The RSO fair was sponsored by the Free Our Fee Coalition which is a collaboration of students from RSOs and student businesses.

Junior Mike Hass, student coordinator of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) is a member of the Free Our Fee Coalition and helped organize the fair.

"The purpose of the fair is to show the campus what the RSOs do for students. It is truly a celebration of student organizations doing activities for ourselves."

Hass added that the RSOs promote non-alcoholic activities and life skills, such as leadership, management and interpersonal communication.

The Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) was one of the organizations attending the fair.

Sophomore MASSPIRG coordinator Amy Bartlett gave an additional reason for their involvement in the RSO fair.

"We are here to show our support for SATF relief," said Bartlett.

Turn to RSO, page 3

DAN REILY / COLLEGIAN

Interested students turned out for the RSO fair held yesterday afternoon in the Cape Cod Lounge. Many RSOs were represented, including the hang gliding club, where Mike Faverman, a Psychology senior, spoke to Rosy Bak, a sophomore Art major and member of the club.

SGA announces success with Food Services reform

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Representing a major step forward in the reform of Food Services, Sen. Bill Ramsey and Sen. Rob McDonald announced Wednesday night at the Student Government Association Senate meeting that the administration has begun to implement several student backed proposals which would enhance the accessibility and quality of food served on campus.

In a meeting last Thursday with Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services, and Richard Rossi, director of Food Services, Ramsey and McDonald presented a number of Senate-passed motions which would change everything from the hours Dining Commons operate to the food on their menu.

"The meeting was very productive," said Ramsey. "We appreciated the fact that they were receptive to the legislation passed."

According to Rossi, all Dining Commons will remain open continuously from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., beginning in the fall. An additional motion was passed by the SGA two weeks ago demanding that hours be extended to 8 p.m., but Rossi was unable to make any promises regarding the issue, citing labor problems.

In addition, Rossi said that Food Services is considering providing breakfast at the Franklin Dining Common continental style for any student — free of charge. However, Ramsey added that this proposal was far from settled.

The motion passed by SGA last week that would allow for sophomores to opt out of the meal plan was redirected by Rossi to the University Board of Trustees, who have jurisdiction over such a mandate, according to Ramsey.

Food Services will also bring back pizza as a nightly dinner option for students in the Southwest Residential Area and may implement it campus-wide in the fall, said Ramsey.

According to Ramsey, the two senators used the meeting to point out administrative errors within Food Services to Rossi. Students were incorrectly being charged a $50 processing fee for withdrawing from the meal plan during the add-drop period.

McDonald passed a motion through the Senate which would grant students penalized by this blunder a refund.

"We resolved ambiguities and misconceptions about the refund policy," said McDonald, who convinced Rossi to return the money to students.

To address concerns about the freshness and handling procedures of food served on campus, Ramsey and McDonald will be given a complete tour of Food Services facilities.

Putting next week's SGA elections for president and trustee into doubt, Attorney General Jason Fields said the election committee consisting of several senators was unconstitutional as the senate was hearing a motion to provide funds to committee staff members.

According to the SGA constitution, SGA officials are restricted from participating in the election committee, which is responsible for

Turn to FOOD SERVICES, page 3

Officials look at rape awareness

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

After the large outpouring of support from University of Massachusetts and Five College students demonstrated at the rape awareness march last Friday, UMass administrators have begun to look at ways to deal with problems of violence against women.

Assistant Dean of Students Eileen Stewart said she feels "sexual assault happens all too often."

In reference to the alleged rape at Pike, she said she was glad it was reported, because "if it was not reported then the parties involved could not be prosecuted," Stewart said.

When asked what she thought should be done at UMass to diminish occurrences of rape and assault, Stewart replied with a four part answer. We need "to educate men, make sure that people who commit crimes are prosecuted, work with women to make sure they avoid dangerous situations, and support women who have been victimized."

Things could be done to make women feel safer on campus, she said. Stewart elaborated on situations women should not put themselves in.

"Women should not be without transportation or with people they do not know," Stewart said. "They should not be with people who are excessively drinking or drugging, and they should not drink to the point where they seem vulnerable."

"Women should not be with people who are excessively drinking or drugging, and they should not drink to the point where they seem vulnerable."
— Eileen Stewart, Assistant Dean of Students

"It is very difficult for people to distinguish between social situations and dangerous situations," she said. "We need to focus more on why is it that men rape."

When asked the question of what measures or requirements the University should implement regarding assault and harassment of women, Stewart replied "a lot of people are aware of date rape and that rape is a crime."

"This campus takes rape and sexual assault extremely seriously," Chancellor David K. Scott wrote in a letter. "We are almost unique in our ongoing effort to collect accurate statistics about the number and kind of sexual assaults that happen to our students.

"The Student Government Association, Public Safety, and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs are co-sponsoring a campus wide effort on safety.

"Its goals will be to increase crime prevention, reduce fear of crime and to encourage everyone to take advantage of the support and education services we already provide through Everywomen's Center, the Dean of Students Office, Residential Education, Health Education, Public Safety, Greek Affairs and other departments and programs," wrote Scott.

Michael Wiseman, the director of Greek Affairs said "sororities and fraternities have to examine what they have been doing in the past. They are trying to implement a plan where the entire Greek system works together to abide by University and national guidelines.

"Most nationals [Greek chapters] view sexual assault and rape as very serious and would consider revoking the membership," Wiseman said. "If someone has committed an extreme violation most nationals would like to see some swift action."

A University task force is reviewing the fraternity system to find ways to handle social issues like violence, according to UMass spokeswoman Karin Sherbin in The Daily Hampshire Gazette.

Deadly germ availability raises concerns

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Outrage over reports that deadly germs such the one that causes bubonic plague can be bought by mail collided with congressional concern yesterday that too much regulation would hinder research.

"We're talking about a terrorist age... where people don't value human life anymore," said Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is considering legislation that would impose criminal penalties and more regulation on the transfer of disease-causing microorganisms.

"This is something we really need to jump on," Hatch said. But after listening to representatives of laboratories that regularly handle such pathogens caution that too much regulation could disrupt physicians' diagnostic abilities nationwide, Hatch took a different tack.

"We don't want to mess up your important work," he said. "We want to move in an intelligent way... make sure we don't make matters worse."

The legislation is being proposed by Democratic Reps. Joseph Kennedy and Edward Markey of Massachusetts and Republican Rep. John Kasich of Ohio. Kennedy said the legislation adding criminal penalties likely would be added to the antiterrorism bill due on the House floor for debate next week.

"The bill responds to several recent incidents in Ohio, Minnesota and Mississippi where fringe groups were able to acquire dangerous viruses, pathogens and toxins but, fortunately, were stopped before a domestic terrorism incident occurred," Kennedy told the senators.

Concerned about the possibility that legislation and normal procedures might take too long, Hatch and three other committee members urged President Clinton in a letter late yesterday to take quick action.

The letter asked Clinton to "direct the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to implement on a priority basis emergency procedures which will protect the American people against the threat of dangerous, diverted pathogenic material." The letter was also signed by Sens. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) and Herb Kohl (D-Wis.)

In Ohio, self-proclaimed white supremacist Larry Wayne Harris, 43, was accused of illegally obtaining bubonic plague bacteria through the mail. He pleaded guilty to one count of wire fraud in November.

Bubonic plague killed one-fourth of Europe's population in the 1300s, but it can be treated with antibiotics today.

American Type Culture Collection, a laboratory in Rockville, Md., outside Washington, said it sent Harris the bacteria because lab officials thought he was certified to handle it. But they became suspicious and contacted authorities who seized the freeze-dried bacteria before it could be reconstituted. The lab has distributed 59 samples of that substance in the last six years, lab official Kaye Sloan Breen said later.

Harris originally faced additional wire and mail fraud counts, but Hatch noted other criminal charges were not possible.

"Even these charges would not have been possible if the purchaser had not sent a false statement on the letterhead of a nonexistent laboratory stating that the laboratory assumed responsibility for the shipment as the seller had required," Hatch said.

The proposed legislation would impose mandatory penalties against anyone who knowingly develops, transfers or possesses or tries to acquire under false pretenses any biological agent, toxin or delivery system for use as a weapon. It also would impose such penalties against anyone knowingly trying or conspiring or threatening to use such systems as a weapon, and would make threatening to use a biological weapon to kill or injure someone a criminal offense.

"Law enforcement is almost nonexistent" in the distribution of pathogens, said Mark Richard, deputy assistant attorney general for the Justice Department's criminal division. Currently, the system relies on suppliers to ascertain if recipients are legitimate, he said.

For Your Information

PIYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, March 7

Lecture — The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series presents Professor John Edgar Wideman's lecture, "Cattle Killing: Reading from Work in Progress," at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge. The event is free to the public.

Workshop — There will be a free test taking workshop offered by the Learning Resources Center from 4 to 5:30 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. To register, call 545–5334.

Concert — The battle for the best unsigned band will happen at the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. Watch five of the hottest regional bands compete for the for the top spot at "Unvailed, the Ultimate Band & Board Event" — where the best bands around the country battle it out in Vail, Colorado, March 29–31, while the best snowboarders thrash it out. The concert is free, and will feature special guest For Chameleon.

Meeting — "OutReach," the LBGA "coming out" discussion group, will meet at 7 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). We will be discussing coming out to family members.

Meeting — The LBGA sex issues discussion group, "Let's Talk about Sex, Ba–By," will meet at 8 p.m. in the LBGA office (413B Student Union). Exact topic still to be announced.

Art — The UMass Residential Arts Program and Wheeler Art Gallery (located in Central Residential Area, across from New Africa House) present an opportunity for students to hang their own art work in a show entitled "Virtual Web Site." Students with all levels of artistic experience with work in any medium are encouraged to hang their work in with the assistance of the residential arts staff. Staff members will be present for the hanging from 4–6 p.m. A reception for the public will take place at 6:30 p.m. The exhibit will run until March 12. For more information, call the gallery at 545–2804.

Meeting — There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting to make a banner for whales at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. For more information, call Nina Ferrante at 546–0358.

Party — Hillel will be having a free party in the basement of Greenough Residence Hall at 8 p.m. For more information, call Ben at 546–0380.

Friday, March 8

Panel discussion — The Women of Color Program is proud to host an International Women's Day Breakfast, with a panel discussion entitled "Women's Health Issues: Locally, Nationally and Internationally" from 9 - 11:30 a.m. at the Bangs Community Center, Boltwood Walk, Amherst. The keynote speaker will be Ms. Laura Ramos, a specialist in the field of sexually transmitted disease and HIV/AIDS prevention. Please join us in exploring, discussing and sharing your ideas around the this topic. Breakfast included.

Discussion — Community action forum. Join several of our most engaging students, faulty and staff for an important discussion. The topic: "Men are the predominant perpetrators of sexual violence on campus. What campus resources are directed towards men in addressing this important issue and are they adequate?" The discussion will take place in Campus Center, Room 805/809 from 3–5 p.m.

Religious — The Campus Crusade for Christ will have its weekly meeting, "Breakout," at 7 p.m. The room number will be posted on the sign at the Campus Center Concourse. This week's topic is the importance of prayer. For more information, call Pete at 549–4843.

Saturday, March 9

Celebration — The Amherst Family Center invites families from Amherst and surrounding communities to join its members at Winterfest. Winterfest is a family celebration of international entertainment and food tasting. Admission is free. The Amherst Family Center is located at Parish Hall in the North Congregational Church in North Amherst. For more information, call 549–4969.

Benefit — The Ninth Annual Benefit Boogie, featuring live music by Quenzal, will take place from 8 to 11:30 p.m. at the Hotel Northampton. Proceeds from the event support the Northampton Survival Center. Advance tickets for the event are $8, and are available at Beyond Words Bookshop, Chameleons and the Survival Center. Tickets at the door are $10, and patron tickets are available for $15. There will also be raffle tickets available at local businesses from now until intermission time of the event.

Notices

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

STALLED CONTRACT TALKS SINCE FEBRUARY 1995
Shooting at U Mass Injures 2
Three alleged Springfield gang members arraigne for weekend shooting

EMILY RILEY / COLLEGIAN

Forward March!

Many policeman turned out in the wintery weather to march past Whitmore Administration Building and across campus to protest contract negotiations.

Correction

The headline to a letter to the editor in yesterday's Collegian misidentified the authors of the letter. The letter was written by the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa, not Pi Kappa Alpha (Pike).

The Collegian regrets the error.

Should the trade embargo on Cuba be lifted and, if not, under what conditions should that occur?

ELECTION '96

Bill Clinton

"The trade embargo is the best leverage the United States has to promote democratic change in Cuba. It denies the Castro regime the benefits that U.S. trade, investment and tourism would provide. The embargo must continue until the Cuban government takes real steps toward recognizing fundamental freedoms and respecting human rights for its citizens."

Pat Buchanan

"A trade embargo should be maintained until Fidel Castro is out of power. He is the problem."

Bob Dole

"No."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not responded.

In Honor of International Women's Day
Campus Activities at the University of Massachusetts,
the UMass Women's Studies Program, and the Stonewall Center present:

A CAPPELLA SINGING SENSATIONS
YAGOTTAWANNA

BLUEWALL CAFE
March 8, 1996
8pm, FREE

A movie portrait of our time:
"How To Make An American Quilt" will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 & 10pm.

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

Since 1865
Hamm's
BEER

UMass Fans . . .
Bring The Bear Into Play!

Hamm's
BEER

Trustees argue over tuition cut

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Student Trustee John Okray from the University of Massachusetts at Boston criticized Amherst campus trustee Dan Rivera Tuesday for not supporting his motion to lower tuition throughout the system by 5 percent.

The motion was presented last Thursday at a meeting of the Student Advisory Council, a consortium of student trustees and presidents representing schools state–wide. They have no direct control over University policy, but make recommendations regarding tuition and fee levels to the Higher Education Coordinating Committee (HECC).

Okray's motion was to advise HECC to not accept any proposal from the UMass Trustees which does not include a reduced tuition level.

Okray said he was disappointed with Rivera for failing to support the motion, emphasizing that students on his campus were in dire need of a tuition reduction.

"That's distressing in itself, that some student trustees will not support" the tuition cut when it comes before the Board of Trustees in their April meeting, said Okray.

Okray cited HECC's recommendatio of a 5 percent cut in University tuition as further justification for his motion.

HECC has the power to reject proposed tuition levels. They can not, however, unilaterally set tuition for UMass and must retain the support of the Board before any settlement can be reached.

Rivera said Okray's motion was token at best, in that it did not include any stipulations preventing administrations from raising fees by 5 percent to off–set the loss in resources resulting from a tuition cut.

"[The Student Government Association] supports a 5 percent roll–back in tuition, but we know that's an empty statement because they can raise fees," Rivera said.

SGA President Christine Lopes, who abstained on the vote for the motion, pointed out that HECC could not prevent administrations from manipulating the costs of student fees to compensate for lost revenue.

Rivera said he has spoken to administration officials representing the five campuses who stated they would raise fees by the exact amount which tuition was cut if no additional funds were provided.

While Okray's motion is attractive to students on the surface, Rivera said it actually works against the interests of those seeking increased financial support from the state.

"Our power lies in being able to go to Boston and advocate for something we want, collectively," Rivera said.

Okray's motion, which according to Rivera also did not have the support of the student trustees from Dartmouth, Worcester and Lowell, "is frustrating the process."

Rivera said his efforts on behalf of students will be focused on "getting more money from the state."

■ RSO

continued from page 1

"We understand the importance of student involvement in organizations and outside of the classroom. I think that I have learned more in my co-curricular activities than in my classes."

Junior Jamison Roof, a co–manager at Campus Design and Copy (CD&C) agreed with Bartlett.

"We hope that the fair will increase interest among students in SATF relief. CD&C solely exists to serve students and RSOs; that is why it is so important for student money to go back to the students," Roof said.

Some organizations were in attendance in order to inform students of their existence such as the UMass Ballroom Dance Club and POWER, a women's collective.

"Most people don't know about the existence of RSOs because they are not very vocal or active," said sophomore Matt Tracey. "This fair simply gives them a chance to sell themselves; I love UMass."

Nam Mokwunye, the assistant director of the Craft Center felt that the RSO fair was more concerned with bringing unity and support among the RSOs.

"It is important for RSOs to get together and see what they are all doing. I see the idea that we must support each other, which is underlined in the theme of the Free Our Fee Campaign," said Mokwunye.

Some of the other organizations in attendance were TIX Unlimited, the UMass Fire and First Aid Unit, Non–academic Computing, the Cannabis Reform Coalition, the Hang Gliding Club, Casa Dominicana, Something Every Friday, Student Legal Services, the Ski Club and the Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP).

"The RSOs are the greatest student resources which are run by and paid for by students," said sophomore Chris Gasbarro from the Outing Club. "We learn great life skills and make life–long friendships."

He added, "[The Outing Club] offers diversity to students. We offer availability to students to go outdoors in cost– effective programs."

Senior Dan Castellano, the speaker of the SGA said, "It is important to convey the need for student groups. Also, we need to stress the importance of SATF relief to the students before we begin negotiating with the administration so we can attain 100 percent student support. This is stepping stone in order to get the entire campus involved."

Another stepping stone involved with campus support for SATF relief is an RSO shut down which has been organized by the Free Our Fee Coalition in collaboration with SCERA.

"Tomorrow, all of the RSOs and student businesses will have black paper on their doors and many will even be shut down completely," said SCERA member Jen Corbett. "We need people to make sacrifices to show students and the administration what it would be like if all the activities were shut down, which would be a possibility if we do not receive SATF relief."

Hass added, "The RSOs only receive $117 thousand out of the $435 million University budget. With more money the RSOs will be able to reach out to more students and truly improve the quality of student life here at UMass."

Hass also announced there will be a rally sponsored by the Free Our Fee coalition next Wednesday at noon at the Student Union steps. All students who wish to be further informed about SATF relief or who want to support the movement are encouraged to attend.

■ Food Services

continued from page 1

coordinated polling areas and tabulating the votes.

Fields' announcement brought the Senate into a ad hoc emergency session, which resulted in the SGA by-laws being suspended in order to accommodate Senators on the election committee.

According to SGA Speaker Dan Castellano, there was a concern amongst Senators that the body lacked the time to establish a independent elections committee.

"Clearly, we wanted a completely impartial committee filled with people throughout the University," said Castellano. However, he cited the fact that Area Governments, who are responsible for appointing students to the committee, failed to due so by a established deadline, forcing the Senate to improvise and create their own committee.

"We're in an emergency situation right now," said Castellano.

Vice–Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson must approve any SGA move to suspend their constitutional by–laws. If such approval is not granted, according to Castellano, elections may have to be postponed.

In other matters, the Senate unanimously passed a motion urging Chancellor David K. Scott to re–establish his "open office hours," making his time available to any person within the university community on a limited basis each week.

The motion, sponsored by Ramsey and Sen. Sean Loughran, was directed at the Chancellor to remind him of the importance of his availability, citing the fact that he maintained "office hours" up until a year and a half ago.

"We deserve the right to access to administrators on this campus," said Ramsey. "We're the ones who pay to be here."

Both sponsoring senators said they were denied access to the Chancellor until a time several months in the future when they independently attempted to make a appointment to speak with him.

"I think we should give a message [to the Chancellor] to listen to students," said Loughran.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Eating Disorder Programs
Spring 1996
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY
WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY!
Collegian Graphics
Where it pays to play!

THE BATTLE FOR THE BEST UNSIGNED BAND
IN THE COUNTRY STARTS HERE.

FREE SHOW → STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
MARCH 7, 1996 @ 7:00 P.M.
HOSTED BY UPC TODAY 93 WHMP

W/ SPECIAL GUEST FOR CHAMELEON

MAGNAVOX PRESENTS
UNVAILED
THE ULTIMATE BAND & BOARD EVENT

Be in on the big search for the best unsigned band in the country.
Watch five of the hottest regional bands compete for the top spot at UnVailed™, the Ultimate Band & Board Event — where the best unsigned bands around the country battle it out in VAIL, Colorado, March 29-31, while the best snowboarders thrash it out. Top band wins a recording contract.

YOU CAN WIN! AN ALL-EXPENSE PAID TRIP TO VAIL, COLORADO
PORTABLE CD PLAYERS · COMPACT DISCS · $50 TRAVELERS CHECKS · MANGA ANIMATION VIDEOS

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Specials . . .		For the Connoisseur . . .
New Miller Beer	$6.99 12-pack cans	Canadian Brewing Company (Beaver Tail Ale, Black & Tan)	$4.99/six
Bud Dry	$9.99 case bottles	Sea Dog (Blonde, Brown, I.P.A.)	$5.49/six
Rolling Rock	12-pack bottles $6.99	Harpoon I.P.A.	$8.99 12-pack bottles
Boone's Wines	5 for $9.99	Tanqueray Vodka 750 ml.	$12.99
Captain Morgan	$8.99 750ml	Jim Beam 750 ml.	$8.99
Cuervo Gold	$10.99 750ml	Half Keg Special Sam Adams Ale	$75.00

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Oliveri Geo Lesbian Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Wenner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradyna News Editor Maureen Marcewski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reily Photography Editor Marty Peppas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Carlson Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

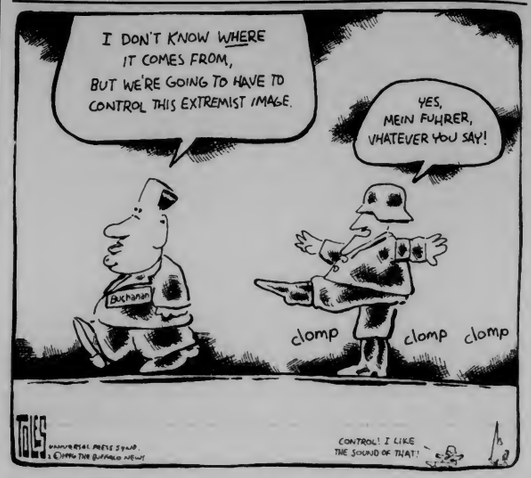
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial



I DON'T KNOW WHERE IT COMES FROM, BUT WE'RE GOING TO HAVE TO CONTROL THIS EXTREMIST IMAGE.
YES, MEIN FUHRER, WHATEVER YOU SAY!
clomp clomp clomp
TOLES
CONTROL! I LIKE THE SOUND OF THAT!

Till what do I what?

All I did was ask what the wedding vows were.

I was curious about what is exactly said by a couple being married. My sister's getting hitched in the summer and was wondering what she was going to say to her husband-to-be. All I did was ask those around me what was said on the special day.

That's when the confusion set in. Excuses for not knowing them were spewed from married, non-married, divorced, non-divorced and wanna-be divorced people's mouths. Everyone tended to be nosy or defensive, asking me if I was planning on getting married anytime soon.

Some people, though, made a solid effort. The first line was a consensus, as people remembered the one with the nanies. But then shouts came from all corners of the room as to what came up next.

"To have and to hold..." shouted one beaut.

"For richer or for poorer..." yelled out another.

"Bryce, what, are you getting married or something?" asked many a funny man.

"Sickness and in health, and something something," one chimed in.

So as I combined my television-based knowledge of the wedding vows with those that the others knew, my result didn't really flow.

"... to have and to hold, in good times and bad times from this day forward, for better or for worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or for poorer 'till death do us part." That came out sounding like a painful All-4-One song.

So, I called my mother. I don't know why I called my mother, since the last time she recited wedding vows Lyndon B. Johnson was in the Oval Office. Maybe I figured that when she was filling out her divorce papers five years back, she muttered divorce vows to herself in defiance. Divorce vows, of course, would be line-for-line the same as wedding vows, except said in an angrily sarcastic way as she signs the break-off papers.

Anyway, she gave me a bunch of lines as well. She asked the rest of the people in the office she works at, but they hadn't a clue. If you listened closely, you could hear one of her co-workers reciting the cub scout oath.

To find out, my mother had some advice for me.

"I'll call the library, they can tell you the exact order," my mother said. Isn't that refreshing?

After continuing to ask others what they thought the vows were (in other words, another 14 "Bryce, what, are you getting married or something"s), my mother called back. With the help of a book and a librarian, she had one for me. "There was a hundred of them, but this was the one which seemed similar to the one I gave," my mother explained. "I, Andrew Bryce, take..."

My mother giggled as she attempted to make her office laugh by using my girlfriend and I as an example.

Oh, Mom, you're so silly.

"...to be your lawfully wedded wife. To have and to hold, from this day forward. For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do us part..." We all know the rest, since we saw those two get married on "General Hospital" last decade.

I don't want to get too deep about the whole marriage thing, but think about wedding vows for a second. It's an oath. You are agreeing to abide by a set of rules with the person you love. It's a contractual agreement between you and your loved one. It's almost like procedure. It's traditionally done, though everyone knows there are ways to get out of contracts.

I mean, divorce is so common in my family, I think all of my family members who skipped out at the end of their wedding ceremonies. Or they ran off the altar to the bathroom just as the priest recited the "'till death do us part" bit, and came back in time to kiss their new spouse.

Well, to make a short story long, the search for wedding vows took a lot of time. Is it wrong that people could not recite their wedding vows? Nah. The words aren't as important as the true feelings. You know what I mean?

What was my point of writing about wedding vows? I don't exactly know. And no, I don't plan on marrying quite yet.

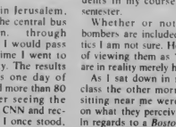
Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Honor their memories

Something was in the mini-pocket on the right side of the front of the jeans I wore yesterday.

This is a column that I did not want to write. The subject is not how I remember last semester, when I was abroad.

However, due to the recent widely-publicized atrocities, messages I have received from friends still abroad, and subtle reminders I find here in Amherst, the topic can hardly be ignored by one with an interest in the region. Also, once one visits and further develops ties to the country in point, one experiences difficulty disregarding or overlooking what is happening.



A folded bus ticket, which I had probably bought in either Jerusalem or Tel Aviv, was in my pocket.

I studied in Israel for six months, from the end of July 1995 to the end of January 1996. Within this time period there was one widely publicized terrorist act originating from external forces: a bus in Jerusalem was blown up on Aug. 21 1995, killing four and injuring dozens.

Although the perpetrators of the terrorist acts should be identified, I will refrain from printing their name, because lending them this type of credence and publicity is exactly the ends that they desire. Plus, it is obvious who they are.

I consider myself fortunate to have been in Israel when only one terrorist act occurred. Following that incident, there was a six-month moratorium on severe bombings until late February of this year.

Also, I vividly remember being at the precise locations that are now destroyed as a result of the bombings. Likewise, this also makes me fortunate, but it leaves me feeling strangely hollow.

Exactly one month after the date that I flew back to the States from Israel, there were two separate bombs detonated by fundamentalists. One was in Ashkelon, a city near the shore on the southern coast of Israel.

The second was in Jerusalem, near the central bus station, through which I would pass each time I went to the city. The results of this one day of carnage: 27 killed and more than 80 injured. I remember seeing the bird's-eye footage on CNN and recognizing sites where I once stood, which were covered with wreckage.

That was Feb. 25. One week later, this past Sunday, March 3, another bus was blown up in Jerusalem, killing 18 and wounding 10. That, too, was near the bus station, and again I recognized the locale.

"I heard the explosion," reads a recent e-mail message a friend of mine sent me from Tel Aviv University. The explosion in point refers to the bombing at the city's most cosmopolitan shopping center, this past Monday.

Children, who were gathered at the Dizengoff Mall, were the target. However, the bomber, who wanted to destroy himself inside, never entered because of the increased security.

I remember the times I spent at this mall. Also, press reports have described the destruction at the shopping center, including the bank machines which have now become charred metal coils. I know exactly which bank machines they are describing because I remember using them.

The death toll from that incident was about 13. The total amount of deaths from this nine-day span is almost 60. That figure equals about half the number of the total students in my courses this current semester.

Whether or not the suicide bombers are included in the statistics I am not sure. However, in lieu of viewing them as "martyrs" they are in reality merely human fuses.

As I sat down in my journalism class the other morning, students sitting near me were commenting on what they perceived as "funny," in regards to a Boston Globe headline they viewed. That day, and also the day before, the lead stories and headlines were about the bombings, and I was trying to figure out what was funny.

Once one goes to the country, the realization of not to joke about the bombings hits hard. Thus, when people removed from the country are viewed deriving jollies about the terrorism, or any destructive event, it is only natural to frown on them.

This has happened. People have joked to me about the bombings, and view with utter surprise my not responding with laughter.

Each time I set foot on a crowded bus here in Amherst, I find myself wondering what would happen if similar atrocities were to occur.

How many would extract humor from bloodshed?

Henry Brier is a Collegian columnist.

A Thoreau Look at Agriculture

In 1849, Henry David Thoreau took a philosophical tone about the landscape changes he and his brother encountered in "A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers." Scattered among the pages are references to nature's enduring features of vigor and perseverance despite what industry and agriculture had done.

Although Thoreau found industry's imprint on the landscape unwelcome, he was no more heartened by what New England farmers had done. "Yankee farmers had already played havoc with the land, tromped all over it, fenced it where they pleased, planted orchards and market gardens, and ruined a once fertile New England soil. Their pockets interfered with their better judgment, causing them to treat the land insolently."

According to Thoreau, the commercial economy had made matters worse for farmers as it urged them on a reckless tear through the land in a desperate attempt to seize whatever economic opportunity the market offered. He consoled himself with thoughts of pre-industrial life in which farmers worked the land to satisfy only themselves and not the demands of the market.

Thoreau sought a world long gone in 1849, and nearly invisible in the 20th century. Market forces have, without a doubt, altered the way in which farmers perceive their land. However, we cannot return to Thoreau's day, and in all fairness, it should be noted that not all farmers are hell-bent on destroying the land just to make a buck. Indeed, many farmers have integrated the two concepts of environmentalism and economics, and see conservation as a fundamental element to their continued success as stewards of the land. These conceptual intricacies often get lost in the farm bill fight over preserving soil versus saving tax dollars.

For example, Minnesota farmer Dave Serfling grows corn and soybeans on his 350-acre lot in a way that demonstrates environmental responsibility. He uses few chemicals, rotates crops, and hopes to leave his soil as healthy as he found it. But as Congress undertakes the first major overhaul of farm policy in over 45 years, Serfling worries his attempts at ecological balance could be threatened. Although the House and Senate agree on the basics of agricultural reform — lower subsidies and less regulation — the seven-year House "Freedom to Farm" bill would scale back many programs that encourage conservation of fields and wetlands.

The debate over the role of conservation in the farm bill is, once again, pitting cost-cutters and deregulation advocates against environmentalists. Furthermore, for the Republicans, it represents an important test on their stance on environmental issues. Will concepts such as smaller government and fiscal responsibility take precedence over concerns like soil erosion and clean water? As Serfling notes, "If they don't fix the conservation problem, we could be locked into these mistakes for seven years."

The current House bill would eliminate a program known as "Integrated Farm Management," that allows farmers to set aside as much as 40 percent of their land every year for crops like alfalfa that restore nutrients to the soil and combat insects and disease. Serfling explains that, under the bill, he would have to plant 85 percent of his fields with a high- value crop like corn in order to receive his full federal payment — a ratio that would be more taxing on his soil. As farm payments decline, small farms such as his could be forced to work the land harder in order to compete with less-conscientious farmers. Thus, the bill uses market forces to perpetuate environmental degradation.

However, the worst aspect of the House bill is a measure that would scale back the $1.9 billion Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), which pays farmers to set aside highly erodible cropland for at least 10 years. The total enrollment of 36 million acres makes the CRP the largest government program affecting management of private land. The House bill would cut total acreage to 34.6 million, allow no new enrollments, and would allow the Secretary of Agriculture to determine, on a case-by-case basis, whether farmers should be penalized for violating their contracts — a rule that could essentially make conservation voluntary.

The bill's author, Republican Rep. Pat Roberts of Kansas, argues that as government payments to farmers are scaled back, farmers must be given more freedom from conservation standards. Farmers are the best stewards of the land, he argues, and giving them more control will improve conditions more so than any federal guideline.

Present-day Thoreau enthusiasts disagree. Even if the market helps decipher those resources that are privately owned and exploited, it will not deliver a cleaner environment. In fact, the market, left to its own devices, will frequently aggravate environmental harm. This being the case, why would we expect any more from farmers who are driven by the same market economy?

In estimating the costs and benefits of protection programs, it is necessary to define the perspective from which they are being assessed. The frame of reference for a given policy may be as broad as society or as narrowly defined as the effect on a single individual. Those in government cannot ignore the sustained cry of the people, particularly when the players involved have a vested interest in conservation programs. This country's strength has its roots in the soil. If farmers are the best stewards of the land, then only they know what is best for the nation as a whole.

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Pass the buck—would ya?

One would think after paying exorbitant rents for the past two years, my parents could catch a break lodging somewhere for my graduation. No such luck. Seems most of the fine hotel/motel establishments in the area insist on charging double during that illustrious graduation weekend, much to the chagrin of many parents who travel far to see this long-awaited event.

I figured I'd jumped all the hurdles by calling close to a year in advance to book something. It's not my fault there are five colleges in the area that graduate nearly simultaneously. Aside from all of that I figured I should take stock of my situation.

I never complained that much when my roommate and I were told we had to pay $550 a month to live in a two room box uptown. It didn't bother me that much when, after a week in my first apartment I awoke to "stop, freeze, put the gun down." I thought I'd moved away from the city, but hey, I adjusted. I was more than accommodating to the shoddy rental agreements I've endured.

What really gets my proverbial goat though, is the fact that I've poured more money into this and surrounding communities over the course of my college career and what's my thanks — a three night minimum stay at a dumpy hotel 30 minutes from here. Thank you very much for nothing.

I thought it might be nice for my parents to experience the tastes and sights of Amherst as I have, maybe drop a couple bucks in one of those nice restaurants I could never afford to eat at. I changed my tune though when my parents returned with the lodging estimates — I won't let my parentals spend any more money than I or they already have.

Don't get me wrong, I've enjoyed this community thus far, I'm just outraged that the majority of its financial support can't catch a break. I don't expect preferential treatment, really, just a fair shake. I definitely didn't expect one woman to read me two different estimates over the phone after she realized it was graduation weekend. The second estimate suddenly inflated by over $100. I guess price gauging comes in all shapes and forms.

Say what you will about the rowdiness and undue aggravation UMass students may cause the town of Amherst, we still give tremendous financial support to the community. Without presuming too much, half of the delivery places in town could not survive without our maxed credit cards. I've got the poor credit rating to show for it. Would it be so wrong to welcome the parents of the students (some of whom support these eating habits) with open arms?

Well, I've made up my mind. I told my parents to leave grossly early in the morning to catch a glimpse of their daughter picking up the diploma they'd hoped I would four years ago. In fact, I told everyone who wants to come up to arrive and depart that one day. I won't let anyone I'm close to be suckered by an area I've lost any potential of getting a car loan to. Bitter much?

My parents want to take me out to dinner — a celebration of sorts. I think I'll go home to Boston to dine.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

YOU SEE, MR. REDSTEIN, WHAT YOU PEOPLE IN THE LIBERAL MEDIA HAVE MISSED IS THE INCLUSIVENESS OF THIS CAMPAIGN.
PAT BUCHANAN IS THE ONLY MAJOR CANDIDATE TO REACH OUT TO THE FORGOTTEN SKINHEAD, TO THE FORGOTTEN BIGOT, TO THE FORGOTTEN JEW-BAITER!
PAT CONNECTS WITH THESE FOLKS. HE KNOWS HOW THEY THINK. HE SPEAKS THEIR LANGUAGE!
WHAT LANGUAGE IS THAT?
CODE. HE'S FLUENT.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Thursday, March 7, 1996
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 90

O'Brien hits prime-time on Web

If Nielsen ratings for television shows were based on the number of web pages a program had, then "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" might possibly be the most popular show in America.

LATE NIGHT WITH CONAN AND MERV
at (http://styx.ios.com/%7Edamone/gconan.html).

This page is simple. It has no fancy background, no java scripting and only one image on the entire page.

What it has is a lot of information about Conan. Practically every nuance of the show is discussed on this page, as well as details of his life. The author of the page even made an Andy Richter sub-page.

If you are viewing the web with lynx, and like Conan check this place out. Even if you are using an advanced browser such as Netscape 2.0, a hard core Conan fan would not want to pass up this resource.

JOE'S LNWCOB PAGE
at (http://joeshaw.blacksburg.va.us/%7Ejoeshaw/conan).

Joe's page, like Merv's, is pretty basic. Although it is shorter, it still packs a wallop.

It includes a cool little cartoon of Conan, and a slew of sound bites from the show including Conan's patented growl. There are links to other pages too.

ANDY RICHTER'S VIRTUAL COUCH
at (http://members.gnn.com/kerickson/andy.htm).

I could not stop laughing at this page. Other staff members were staring at me as I nearly fell out of my chair while looking at this.

Turn to ONLINE, page 9

Up All Night With Late Night's Latest Edition

Conan O'Brien gives the inside scoop on his career, his show and his favorite beer

The first thing Conan O'Brien asks me on the phone, at 9 p.m. last Thursday night is "have you been drinking, or are you OK?"

Even when he's the one being interviewed, you can't stop O'Brien from being the interviewer — and you certainly can't stop him from being the comedian.

A comedian with a predilection for beer.

"Tell everybody that I was loaded out of my mind when you talked to me," O'Brien instructs. "Just say, 'I think at one point, I'm not sure, he may have passed out.' It will help the image, man."

The quick and witty 6-foot-4 host of NBC's "Late Night" with the big, floppy carrot-top does not seem the least bit drunk, as he dishes out joke after joke to precede stories about how he got this gig, and what he hopes to do with it.

O'Brien, 32, began his career writing for "Not Necessarily the News," "The Simpsons" and "Saturday Night Live." His stepping stone was editing the Harvard Lampoon for two years and performing at hot spots around Harvard.

"I've always had mixed feelings about going to Harvard, because I've always felt like it would give people the wrong idea about me," O'Brien admits. "I think people have preconceived ideas about Harvard. When I first got the job, before I went on the air, and the press was trying to figure out who I am, I think everyone thought, 'Oh, I guess he'll be like a Dick Cavett kind of guy, and he'll puff on a pipe and have patches on his elbows and make witty jokes about Sophocles or something."

"My rule is: if it's funny, it's funny. Cartoons make me laugh, the Three Stooges make me laugh. I think there's intelligence in anything that makes you laugh," O'Brien said.

Growing up in Brookline (which seems to be the hotbed of producing comedians, such as Jay Leno, Steven Wright and Lenny Clarke) played a major role in creating O'Brien's sense of humor.

"Oh, man. I think there is something about New England that forces you to have a sense of humor," O'Brien said. "I grew up in Boston, went to school in Boston, and then moved to Los Angeles for a couple of years. When I used to drive past UCLA, I realized if I grew up here, I'd be a completely different person. I think I'd be really 'OK' about everything."

"There's something about the fact that it was raining a lot, it was cold and the soil was rocky and food doesn't grow there very easily... all those years of sitting in the bleachers at Fenway Park, you kind of need to develop a sense of humor, or you die," O'Brien said of his roots.

O'Brien says he'd love to bring the show to Boston sometime, whether for a week, or just one show. Cost seems to be a roadblock, however — as he is reminded each time he brings it up to the network.

"I'm hoping that within the next six months we can figure out a way to get over there and do it when all of the college kids are still in town. Maybe give them free beer and start a riot — that's what we really want to do," O'Brien said.

There's that beer thing again.

Since O'Brien filled the late night void David Letterman left as he switched over to CBS in April of 1993, his show has seen a dramatic rise in popularity, particularly with college students. And it's not just because we're still up that late at night. O'Brien tends to have more guests that appeal to younger viewers, and being young himself, takes more risks with his comedy bits.

"We probably got our warmest reception from people in their late teens and early twenties when we first came on, because I felt like we were trying just a lot of weird stuff. They're more accepting, probably, of change and newer things," O'Brien stated.

"It's the college students and stuff who write away for tickets and everything," O'Brien said. "A lot of nights I go out there and it really looks like an SAT preparation course. I feel like telling everybody, 'Remember, don't guess — statistically, it's not a good idea.'"

Even though O'Brien's show has been embraced by the Baby Boomer generation and received praise from Entertainment Weekly, Rolling Stone, The Washington Post and The New York Times, he won't soon forget who got him started.

"You always remember who was your friend first," O'Brien said.

Surprisingly enough, "Late Night" is coming out closer to what O'Brien envisioned, if not better.

Something O'Brien never planned?

"I never thought I'd actually wet myself on camera, you know. It's something I've never ever done before, but now we've taken care of that — a rubberized unitard," O'Brien jokes.

"I'm more shocked by how many of the ideas actually kind of stuck with the show than how many of them went by the wayside, because a lot of the stuff we tried the first week is still a big part of the show — you know, whether it's the lips on Clinton... or the 'Actual Items' we do where we make up things. You know, we say, 'we found these clippings, and they're funny because they're real' — but they're all made up.

"We've had 'If They Made It' and things like that which came a little later... but a lot of the outright silliness of the show and its identity remains the same."

Turn to CONAN O'BRIEN, page 8

Layout & Design by James P. Gurley & Tara Mk Connelly

Billy Joel gets up close, personal

Famous musician opens up to crowd at Mt. Holyoke College

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Billy Joel answered questions at Mt. Holyoke College on Tuesday.

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

BILLY JOEL
Chapin Auditorium
March 5

SOUTH HADLEY— On Tuesday night, Billy Joel did what we wish more legendary musicians would do — stand before a small crowd in an intimate setting and talk with the audience, rather than at it.

In an evening properly dubbed "Question and Answer Session with a Little Music," singer/songwriter Billy Joel appeared before 1,200 people in Mt. Holyoke College's Chapin Auditorium — a quaint little hall that served as an appropriate atmosphere for getting up-close and personal with the musician.

Standing before one of three microphones on stage, with a grand piano and a synthesizer behind him, Joel told the audience he was open for pretty much all types of questions. In a humorous attitude which prevailed that evening, Joel joked, "just don't ask me to listen to your tape," to all the fledgling musicians in the crowd.

Joel said the reason he wanted to do this "master class"- type Q&A is because when he was growing up, he always wished he could ask the Beatles (one source of his inspiration) questions about starting out in the music business.

"You may think of this as being 'Billy Joel Unplugged' — which I've been asked to do — but see, to me, I thought that was sort of redundant, because I'm a piano player, so I'm already unplugged," Joel told the audience. "The only way I could get any more unplugged would be to take a laxative."

This is just a sampling of the sort of comedy that was generously interjected into all of Joel's comments.

"Let's not make this a big piano bar — you know with 'play this, play this, play this' — or else I'm gonna start taking tips," Joel jokingly warned.

He wasn't exactly kidding with that statement, though. Despite the fact that the small crowd had the previous opportunity to ask Joel questions (mikes were passed to people he selected), the crowd was also hanging on to every note he casually played — and he didn't play much. It almost felt like a tease when Joel would start "Goodnight Saigon" or "New York State of Mind" to answer an audience member's question, then stop in the middle of the song.

The first song (out of only four) which Joel played in its entirety was "Downeaster Alexa." Joel wrote the song for the bay fishermen near his home in East Long Island who were losing their jobs because of competition from sport fisherman. He intended it to be sort of a folk song, not one with a forced moral or message.

A major source of influence in Joel's life which he discussed openly is his daughter, Alexa. It was for her that he wrote a lullaby, and the song "Temptation" — which many people think was written about a grown woman. Before performing the song, Joel explained how much he, as a professional musician, can learn by watching his young daughter in all of her musical innocence.

"A child can make you feel like God," Joel said. "And I like that God feeling."

One audience member asked Joel, knowing he receives endless requests for his most popular songs, if there was one song that he would never have to play again, what would it be? Joel responded by playing the opening verse of "Uptown Girl," to which the audience roared with laughter.

"It has nothing to do with the subject matter," Joel said with a sly grin. "It's because of the high key it's in. [being a sort of a tribute to Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons]... all right [the subject matter] has a little bit to do with it," Joel finally admitted, with regards to his ex-wife, model Christie Brinkley.

After the obligatory question and request for "Piano Man," Joel began to discuss his method of creating a song, delaying the performance of the song until the end of the night. Joel's cardinal rule is to write the music first, then the lyrics. The ironic thing about "Piano Man," (which Joel wrote while he was hiding out from bad record contractors in L.A., doing piano bar gigs) is that he said that it's his greatest "hit" song, yet not very innovative musically. The lyrics, which are sort of limerick-inspired, are what made it so popular, he said.

Another well-known hit which he didn't expect to be so successful is his ballad, "Just the Way You Are." Joel couldn't explain why certain songs get to be hits, but he admitted he didn't really like the song. The only reason he put "Just the Way You Are" on the album is because Linda Ronstandt said she absolutely loved it. Once again, Joel broke hopeful hearts when he stopped playing the song after the first verse.

Although his beard may be a little greyer and his belly a little chubbier, Joel was still looking stylish in his black blazer, black shirt and blue jeans. It was a dual-generational turnout, with both longtime fans from Joel's age group and college students who have inherited a love of his music over the years.

In fact, Joel said he is always impressed with college audiences, because they know the older, lesser-known songs. He said this in reference to a question about his inspiration for "Captain Jack." Joel, who played a bit of the song, said that Captain Jack, a metaphor for heroin, came to him as he watched drug deals from his cottage window, wondering why people get hooked on hard drugs.

In an interesting twist, Joel honored a request from the Mt. Holyoke Choir, letting them perform "And So It Goes" on the stage, as he watched from the front row. An aspiring singer/songwriter sitting in the back of the auditorium asked Joel how he should get started, and Joel had him take the stage and play an original song.

The most refreshing aspect of the evening was that Joel did not preach, nor lecture. He simply joked around with his fans, answering their questions, tossing some back out to the crowd, for nearly three hours. He also described his current work, composing classical music, and sampled a bit, per request from the crowd.

When asked what his favorite song was, Joel exclaimed "that's like asking a Mom or Dad who your favorite kid is! I can't choose." He did admit his most recent favorite song is "Famous Last Words," which is about middle age.

When the anticipation became unbearable, Joel finally strapped on his harmonica and sat behind the piano for his classic concert-ender, "Piano Man." His voice may be a little deeper and raspy with age (as he readily admitted), but after so much teasing throughout the night, hearing him belt out "Piano Man" live is still

Turn to JOEL, page 9

It's time to donate blood again.
+
American Red Cross
1-800-GIVE-LIFE

Jason Leigh exceptional in Georgia

By Jennifer Howell
Collegian Correspondent

GEORGIA
Directed by Ulu Grosbard
with Jennifer Jason Leigh, Mare Winningham
Playing at Pleasant St. Theatre

Original, brash, loud but lovable, Jennifer Jason Leigh's Sadie Flood explodes off the screen in the realistic, thoughtful Georgia — a movie which explores the relationship between two singing sisters, Sadie and Georgia Flood.

Though the title suggests a movie about Mare Winningham's Georgia, the movie actually centers on Leigh's Sadie. The two sisters are singers of very different types. Georgia is a famous, flawless folk singer, with a well- balanced life and ownership of the charming country home she grew up in. Sadie is an unsuccessful, embarrassingly flawed night-club singer, struggling with an alcohol and drug habit, who gets married as easily and casually as she applies her 10 layers of black eyeliner in the morning.

Georgia is not a movie concerned much with plot, but rather with the relationship between these two polar opposites. Through car rides, kitchen conversations and guest appearances on each others' stages, they work out their frustrations with each other, though, as in real life, there is never much of a resolution.

One of Georgia's strong points was that it felt so much like real life, rather than the melodramatic film some actors might have turned it into. All the performances were terrific and believable. The music sequences were also very well done, and felt like actual performances and concerts rather than stagey Hollywood versions of the same.

The main feature of this movie, however, was Leigh's stunning, absolutely compelling portrayal of Sadie. It was difficult to look at anyone else when Sadie was on the screen. At one point in the movie, Georgia tells Sadie she's always seen her as gobbling people up, as gobbling life up. As Sadie gobbles up life, Leigh gobbles up the screen. It's hard to understand why the Oscar voters didn't give her a nomination as they did her co-star Winningham for best supporting actress.

As the movie comes to its conclusion, director Grosbard shows both sisters performing a Stephen Foster song about "hard times." Georgia's version is clear as a bell, sung out to a vast audience. Sadie's version is wailing and tortured, sung to a bar audience which barely acknowledges she's there.

What Georgia has said about her sister is true: "You don't sing Sadie; you can't sing." Of the two renditions of the Foster song, however, Sadie's wins a movie audience over with the pure heartache and longing Leigh has given her character in this excellent film. A

UMass orchestra highlights new composition tonight

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University Orchestra will present a special treat tonight in Bowker Auditorium. Under the direction of Springfield Symphony Music Director Mark Russell Smith, the orchestra will perform "Island Prelude for Oboe and String Orchestra." The piece is composed by Joan Tower, the 1996 Five College Composer-in-Residence.

The oboe soloist will be University of Massachusetts Department of Music & Dance Professor Fredric Cohen. Cohen is also principal oboist with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Tower describes the music as an island — "remote, lush, tropical with stretches of white beach interspersed with thick green jungle. Above is a large, powerful and brightly colored bird which soars and glides, spirals up and plummets with folded wings as it dominates but lives in complete harmony with its island home."

The fast outer sections of "Island Prelude" are somewhat reminiscent of Caribbean drum music. The central section, which attempts to depict an underwater swimmer gradually rising to the water's surface, has a slowly-moving ascending motive that becomes most luminous as it rises.

Tower is one of the most dynamic composers in contemporary music. Some of the most prestigious orchestras from New York to Los Angeles and London to Tokyo have performed her works. She has been the subject of a number of television documentaries. Currently, Tower is a professor of music at Bard College.

Smith has crafted a program to include pieces from three periods. The Contemporary period is represented by Tower's "Prelude." Haydn's "Symphony No. 70" is from the Classical era and Rachmaninoff's "Symphony #2" is a perfect example of the Romantic period.

Ernest May, chairman of the department of music & dance said, "this is a major concert. The University's commitment to excellence will be beautifully demonstrated by the expertise of our musicians throughout this challenging musical program."

The concert begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 for students, elders and children and $6 for general public. UMass students admitted free with valid ID. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office (545-2511) or at Bowker Auditorium on the night of the concert. For more information, please call the box office or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Student Affairs Special Services and Undergraduate Registrar

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR SENIORS COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM LISTINGS

The listing of seniors in the Undergraduate Commencement Program book represents an unofficial listing of degree candidates based on information provided by the Registrar's office.

To ensure that the list is as accurate as possible, your eligibility and major must be on record with the Undergraduate Registrar not later than Friday, March 22. Because of printing deadlines, changes made after that date are unlikely to be included in the Program. However, if you are otherwise eligible to graduate, graduation status is not affected by the absence of a listing.

If there was an error in the recent mailing from the Registrar's Office concerning your diploma name and/or graduation date, and you have not corrected it, please immediately see a member of the "Senior Staff", Undergraduate Registrar, 207 Whitmore.

If you did not receive the mailing and are expecting to have all degree requirements completed by the May graduation date, or by September 1, please also contact the "Senior Staff".

If you did not receive the Undergraduate Commencement information brochure mailed in February, copies are available at the Visitors Center.

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

BASS ALE 24-12 oz. Bott. $21.99 + Dep.
HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + Dep.
RED HOOK WINTER 24-12 oz. Bott. $19.69 +Dep
RED DOG 24-16 oz. Bott. $13.99 + Dep.
ICEHOUSE 24-16 oz. Bott. $13.99 + Dep.
BEERBALLS! BUD, BUD LT., & KILLIANS $22.99 +dep
BUSCH & LT. 30 Pks. Cans $11.99 + Dep.
GENESSE ICE 30 Pk. Cans $9.49 + Dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bor Bott. $9.99 + Dep.
M.G.D. & Lt. 24-12 oz Bor Bott. $9.99 + Dep.
LIONS HEAD PILSNER 24-12 oz. Bott. $8.99 + Dep.
SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.49 1.75L
CANADIAN CLUB Canadian Whiskey $15.99 1.75L
SEAGRAMS V.O. Canadian Whiskey $15.99 1.75L
ABSOLUT VODKA $19.99 1.75L
CAPT. MORGAN Spiced Rum $15.49 1.75L
TODAY ONLY! Thurs. 3/7/96 FREE BEER Samples 4-6 pm We Deliver!
J. LOHR Riverstone Chard. $7.99 750 ml
J. LOHR Seven Oaks Cab. $7.99 750 ml
TORRES Sangre de Torro $5.49 750 ml
CAVIT Cab. Chard., Merlot $7.99 1.5L
CLOS DU VAL Chard. $7.99 750 ml
KEGS!!! BUD, RED DOG, LITE, LITE ICE, M.G.D., LOWENBRAU, MILLER, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT. MICHELOB BOCK, M.G.D. LT., BUD ICE, ICEHOUSE $39.99 + DEP.
KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD LT. $38.99 +DEP
SALE THRU 3-13-96

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

Emily Dickinson biography answers questions on role of women

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Spring break is coming up and if you don't have plans to fly out to Florida or some other hot, steamy tropical paradise, you can always catch up with a good book or two to pass the time away.

The "Recluse of Amherst" is the subject of a new biography. In it, author Beth Maclay Doriani answers the question of how women, historically excluded from the role of preacher because of their gender, gain authority to assume a prophetic voice and what rhetorical strategies can empower the woman who would claim the role of prophet in Emily Dickinson, Daughter of Prophecy (University of Massachusetts Press).

Doriani looks at the ways Emily Dickinson addressed those questions in the context of patriarchal nineteenth-century New England. She explores the central strategies Dickinson used and how the poet was able to develop a singular voice that not only indicts, but also sings, consoles and wonders.

If it's the irreverently funny and hip you're looking for, E. Jean Carroll fits the bill exactly. The host of the first ever interactive advice show, "Ask E. Jean," and the wildly popular advice columnist from ELLE magazine, has collected the best of her advice in A Dog In Heat Is A Hot Dog And Other Rules To Live By (Pocket Books).

The book combines everything you ever wanted to know about everything but were afraid to ask anyone else. E. Jean's answers are a joy to read. Her advice covering everything from roommates to extra-marital flirtations is at once candid and caring.

Bill Bradley, a respected Democratic senator from New Jersey, recounts his memoirs in Time Present, Time Past (Knopf). In a style characterized as personal and expansive, he describes the classic American journey.

He speaks with affection about his small-town Missouri upbringing and how it shaped his values. He highlights his student days at Princeton as a three-time All-American athlete, his pride at winning an Olympic gold medal and his honor at being selected as a Rhodes Scholar.

Bradley writes about his "fascination with our history as a nation and his views on the great divides of race and economic status." The memoir reflects Bradley's desire to move beyond the vagueness of politics to clear assessments of our national situation and what needs to be done. More than that, it is a book about life, filled with humor, moral lessons and empathy for the human condition.

Anthony Walton presents a different kind of an American journey, from the African-American perspective in Mississippi (Knopf).

Walton writes that as you're looking at the map of Mississippi you will see "place-names like McComb, Poplarvill and Natchez, Philadelphia, Clarksdale and Vicksburg, each name searing a scream in the minds and memories of people like me, black Americans. Mississippi can be thought of as one of the most prominent scars on the map of this country... I intend to explore that scar."

Caryl Phillips remarks that Mississippi is "essential reading for anyone who wishes to understand the troubled soul of the South. Mississippi casts great shafts of light on a state whose history is dark and misunderstood."

They shelled it out for your orthodontist bills.
Coughed it up for your car insurance.
And forked it over for that fish tank accident.
Yet they still insist you call collect.
Touched by their undying love, you spare them further expense.
You dial 1 800 CALL ATT.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.*
And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.

AT&T
Your True Choice

* Per interstate calls. Promotions excluded. 1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of AT&T.
© 1996 AT&T

Amherst Sunshine Car Wash
Automatic Wash/Wax Open Daily
Self-Service Bays Open 24 Hours
Engine De-Grit and VACUUM CLEANERS BILL CHANGERS
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East) Amherst

Steve Maddens.
(Get'em while they last)

ZIEL
Downtown Amherst

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $293
PARIS $179 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $254 $483
Roundtrip
TOKYO $762
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, March 15
for events after April 3
Grants for
Visual Art & Design
Literature, Theater, Performance Art
Film & Video
Music
Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance, & information
The UMass Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck Hall
545-0202

■ Conan O'Brien

continued from page 5

O'Brien said. "And then there's like a ton of things that aren't there anymore, because they seemed like a great idea in concept — we used to do all this weird kind of 'mind-fuck' stuff, where one week I kept teasing that this author was going go be on. I kept saying and we also have author so-and-so, who's written a book on economics,' and Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday I teased him, said he was coming on the show, watch for him — and every night I'd say we didn't have time for him. Then Friday we finally bring him out, and he comes out and he's really mad — it was an actor. It was something that worked in concept, but you realize if you screw with the audience that much, they're not going to trust you."

Some of the actual guests O'Brien has interviewed that rank amongst his favorites are Scott Thompson, from "Kids in the Hall," and Norm MacDonald from "Saturday Night Live."

"It's really funny when Larry King comes on the show, because he's kind of like my uncle," O'Brien said.

O'Brien doesn't like to tell about any of his horrible interviews, because he then he feels like he's blaming them.

"But my interview with Charles Manson went nowhere. There wasn't one laugh in there the whole night," he added.

One person O'Brien said he always wanted to interview is Richard Nixon. "... but then he died. Actually, I kept saying it for six more months, that people got creeped out by it. I used to think he would be the best guy to interview because he's seen it all, and he's been a public figure for like five decades or something, but also he was this great comic figure."

On an almost-serious note, O'Brien adds that he would love to interview Johnny Carson, because he's the "prototype, the face on Mt. Rushmore" for what he's doing. Woody Allen also makes O'Brien's list of dream interviews.

As far as the future is concerned, O'Brien's only ambitions are about the show.

"I don't look at the show as a stepping stone, like this will get me my own rock CD or this will get my career as an Italian film star off the ground," O'Brien claims. "It's like, OK what's the next thing? I mean, can we somehow get hold of a nuclear submarine and start an international incident?"

As far as O'Brien's personal life, his hobbies include movies, driving and especially playing guitar.

"Oh man, I'm a Dungeons and Dragons nerd!" O'Brien exclaimed jokingly. "I love playing the guitar. I have guitars everywhere, and I'm always walking around with a guitar."

In fact, the night before, O'Brien had stayed up until 2 a.m. teaching himself a song the band had played on the show. He was probably having a beer, too.

So what is Conan O'Brien's favorite beer?

"Well, I do like Samuel Adams — a lot, and there was this one beer I had that was really good, it's called Harpoon. Do you know Harpoon? Harpoon's pretty good. Yeah, Sam Adams is really good. I always ask for it, and if they don't have it, I say, 'screw you' and leave with my huge entourage. I wish I had an entourage."

Laura Stock is a Collegian staff member

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Thursday Night Jams
CLOVIS POINT & SYNAESTHESIA
Free Admission — Thursday March 7th 9:30pm-1:00am — At The Patch
Coffee house, ice cream shop and pizza place open till 12:30
This performance is made possible by:
DAILY COLLEGIAN Classifieds
SEF, a grant from the Cultural Enrichment Fund, Food Services, and a grant from Greek Affairs.

Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay,Nay! The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$%* the %$@#$%* CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in So. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
505 West Street, South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook & The Boulders

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

DANCE PARTY 18+
TUESDAY Starting March 11th
METRO
Second Street
THURSDAY MAR 7 HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Downstairs 8:30 pm FROM GOOD HOMES
FRI MAR 8 6:30 PM THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
RETRO NIGHT
EVE'S PLUM GIGOLO AUNTS
SAT MAR 9 6:30 PM SEVEN MARY THREE Poe
CLUB NIGHT
Downstairs 8:30 pm THE UPPER CRUST
TUE MAR 12 7:30 PM LADYSMITH BLACK MAMBAZO
WEDNESDAY MAR 13 GAY NIGHT
THURSDAY MAR 14 HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
Downstairs 8:30 pm THE VERVE PIPE
FRIDAY MAR 15 RETRO NIGHT
Downstairs 7:30 pm THE SCOFFLAWS
SATURDAY MAR 16 CLUB NIGHT
Downstairs 8:30 pm THE BIG BAD BOLLOCKS
SUN MAR 17 8:00 PM FRANK BLACK
3/21 PRO-PAIN/CRISIS
3/22 KNUCKLE SANDWICH
3/23 THE OCTOBERPROJECT/ Coco Blue
3/29 THE MACHINE 18+
3/29 JOHN VALBY "Mr. Dirty"18+
3/30 THE RADIO KINGS
3/31 SAN BLACK CHURCH/ TREEVZO
4/2 SHOOTYZ GROOVE/
DOG EAT DOG
4/4 POI DOG POWDERING 18+
4/5 SPRING HEELED JACK
4/7 BROTHER CANE 18+
4/9 THE SUBGUIDES
4/13 IAN MOORE
Tickets on sale at stores available at Northampton Box office 586 8686, 1-800-THE TICK. Streetwriters: For The Record in Amherst, Tower Records in Northampton. The University of Connecticut Co-op, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-584-7331

Chabad Student Coalition Presents
An evening with Rabbi
Manis Friedman
Bob Dylan's Rabbi, television show host, father of 14 and author of "Doesn't Anyone Blush Anymore"
"Reclaiming Intimacy and Sexuality in our Personal Relationships"
Anyone who is either married or thinking of getting married should do well to read his book
- Bob Dylan
He is someone that will be worth listening to.
- Prof. Julius Lester, University of Massachusetts
Friedman's show Torah Fortnight brings ethical thinking to cable markets across the U.S.
- Rolling Stone
THURSDAY MARCH 7, 7:00 - 9:00 ... ADMISSION
SBA 120 (SCHOOL OF BUSS. ADM. - ADJACENT TO FINE ARTS CENTER)
INFORMA... RECEPTION,
... OF AMHERST
... ADJACENT TO
... (AL AREA)
SGA, G... Stud... by:
...ice of Jewish Affairs

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivilling staties! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

Sparky's Safety Spot
SECURITY BARS ON WINDOWS CAN TRAP YOU IN A FIRE
Use bars which have a quick release mechanism that can be used in the event of a fire.
NFPA National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

Welcome Home
to the ANNUAL THREE COUNTY HOME & BETTER LIVING '96 SHOW
MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst
MARCH 9 & 10
Saturday 10am - 9pm Sunday 10am - 5:30pm
CALL 1-800-237-6024 FOR MORE INFO
ACRES OF FREE PARKING!
Adults $4.50 Seniors $2.50
Children under 12 FREE with adult
Five College Students and Faculty $2.50
REGISTER TO WIN! A VACATION GETAWAY! AND OTHER GREAT PRIZES!
NARI

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20 Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
Soups • Entrees • Appetizers
Regular Lunch and Dinner Menus Always Available • Full Liquor License
10% off PICK UP/TAKE OUT ORDERS
Cannot Combine With Other Offers • 1 Coupon Per Person
"Between The Traditions To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery Fee/Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

"I'm too sexy for my shadow...

...now that I'm in the Collegian"

■ Joel

continued from page 6

breathtaking. The whole audience was mesmerized as he sang, and gave him an ecstatic standing ovation when he finished.

Even though the Piano Man himself tried to ignore the fact that we were all in the mood for a melody, with this performance, he certainly got us feeling alright.

■ Online

continued from page 5

The page is full of fun factoids about Andy Richter, Conan's sidekick. The best part of the page are the images of Andy from sketches. I highly recommend this award winning page. I bookmarked this one.

NBC LATE NIGHT: LATE NIGHT WITH CONAN O'BRIEN
at (http://www.nbc.com/entertainment/shows/conan/index.html).

My final stop on my tour of Conan pages was NBC's own Conan O'Brien page.

The premise of this page is to simply promote the show. The page includes basic factoids about the program, and biographies of the hosts Conan, Andy and Max Weinberg — the band leader. There is nothing fancy about this page, and probably is not worth bookmarking.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts
But you don't know what it does
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Jeremy or Laura
They give you an assignment
You take it and write
You're happy
It's a lot like Nike - you just have to do it

~ MUSIC ~

Britain's latest pop sensation tops the hit charts

Pulp could be new Oasis; Diamond, Ween mix on soundtrack

PULP
Different Class
Island Records

Stand aside Oasis and Blur, Pulp — Britain's latest pop sensation — has finally arrived. The album bombed straight in at the No. 1 spot when it was released in the UK last November, the group was later labelled Band Of The Year by BBC Radio 1 and the top-selling music magazine Melody Maker.

Pulp have been on the fringes of the British indie scene for over a decade. They only breached the mainstream after filling in for The Stone Roses at the 1995 Glastonbury Festival — and they haven't looked back since.

Songs such as "Common People" have smashed the current duopoly enjoyed by Oasis and Blur. Other catchy numbers on the album include "Disco 2000," a hip speculation of the year 2000, and "Sorted For E's & Wizz," a darker track of drugs and sub-culture. Then there's "I Spy," the so-called anthem-for-the-disenfranchised.

Jarvis Cocker, Pulp's lead singer, said he first realized he was famous while "on holiday in the South of England." He recounted that "these big blokes would lumber up to me and I'd think, 'Oh shit, I'm in for a right bloody hammering here for looking like a weirdo,' then they'd shake my hand and say, 'Like your song, mate.'"

This album represents cutting-edge alternative sound — its quintessential BritPop at its best. A (Matt Sinclair)

JACKSON BROWNE
Looking East
Elektra

Looking East follows a string of failed attempts by Browne to kick-start his career. Unfortunately, his new album is simply not strong enough to re-establish his rock veteran status.

England's newest pop sensation, Pulp
COURTESY EMI/VIRGIN

Trax On Trax Off

The album leads off with the title track, a solid rocker reminiscent of classic John Hiatt. Following this promising start, however, one is forced to skip past every other song of drab meanderings to get to the meat. Half of the album's 10 tracks are somewhere between weak fillers and promising beginnings. Too often the songs contain insightful lyrics accompanied by flimsy and unimaginative song structures.

Exceptional songs like "Some Bridges" and "I'm the Cat" are classic blends of the Eagles, James Taylor and the more contemporary Bruce Hornsby. These hybrids of style offer tuneful melodies and thoughtful lyrics that are lacking throughout the album.

Browne's tendency to turn his slower songs into politically correct sermons effectively suck the life blood from this album. Looking East abandons the in-your-face attitude and recklessness of rock 'n' roll that have helped establish Browne as a rock mainstay for over 20 years. Although writers like Springsteen, Dylan and Young have succeeded in writing poignant social commentaries while still sustaining the angst and energy from their early work, Browne's attempts are simply cautious and cliche.

"Info Wars," which begins with eight common slogans from TV and radio, is contrived and strained. Browne comes off sounding like a self-righteous preacher catering to the politically correct sector of his adult audience.

"Baby How Long" is a weak composition despite tasteful slide-guitar curtesy of Ry Cooder and backing vocals by Bonnie Raitt. Raitt's vocals are buried in the mix and muddled by another backing vocalist, rendering her entire appearance superfluous.

Songs like "If Is One" and "Nino" offer pleasant melodies which implement reggae and Latin rhythms respectively, however they do not mesh well with the rest of the subdued album.

Unfortunately, most of the mid-tempo songs on this middle of the road offering lack a definite direction. After "running on empty' for so long, Browne needs to refill before Looking East. B- (Michael McCloskey)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Beautiful Girls Soundtrack
Elektra

If you've ever seen the movie you'd definitely understand why this soundtrack compliments it perfectly. Each and every track is about love — love lost, love found and love confused with just about every other emotion.

It opens with "That's How Strong My Love Is," sung by Roland Gift of the Fine Young Cannibals. Gift's voice is unique and heartfelt in this plea for understanding. The Afghan Whigs contribute two tracks. "Be For Real" and a funky cover of Barry White's "Can't Get Enough of Your Love Baby." The latter sounds cool, but it isn't Barry and it wasn't meant to be something you can rock out to.

Ween's "I'll Miss You" has Gene and Dean crooning along in typical geek fashion. This is highlighted by "Could It Be I'm Falling In Love," a 1970's hit by the Spinners and Kiss' tale of woe and lament with, "Beth."

Two personal favorites of the album were Chris Isaak's "Graduation Day," and an oldie but goodie by Neil Diamond — "Sweet Caroline." Although a bit high on the sap scale, this album is something you'd put on to contemplate the dismal state of your personal life or just for a mellow trip down memory lane. B+ (Tara MK Connelly)

Jackson Browne
COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

KARP
Suplex
K Records

In the Rock and Roll world where loud is good, Karp is the best. More fun than Unwound, more punch than The Melvins, Karp occupies a strange musical terrain where pop songs struggle to break through an incredible wall of distortion, feedback and thundering, relentless, maddening volume.

Suplex loses some of the crunch of its predecessor, Mustaches Wild, but makes up for it both in songwriting and in sheer sonic force. The album's centerpiece, the nine and a half minute "Lorch-Miller," is a perfect example of Karp's twisted musical funhouse. Feedback winds its way around the pounding, thick molasses riff like a screeching siren — the extended intro of military style drums and unrelenting feedback eventually winds itself in a massive chunk of sheetrock pop. Screaming vocals, ear obliterating bass — Karp pounds every song into your head like they were stomping on your face, and having a whole lot of fun doing it. Surprisingly, it's fun for you, too — go buy Suplex and let Karp chisel its way right into your skull. A (Bradley Skaught)

THE MARSHES
The Marshes
Sike Records

If you mixed the melodic pop punk sound that Jawbreaker exhibited on their first record with Fugazi's rawness you would end up with a mixture of a band called The Marshes.

On this seven song EP, they managed to capture the same raw energy that they give off so well at there live shows.

Opening the EP is "I Am Providence" which demonstrates Emil Busi's in your face lyrical and vocal style. Throughout the EP, Busi gets across his emotion without having to resort to wordy lyrics.

On "Cave," the album's most melodic tune, Busi sings "I've tried my best but failed your test that never ends and always suspends" over chunky guitar riffs. While the EP sounds a bit low budget, it gives it a raw feel that couldn't be duplicated in an expensive studio.

Although the disc is short, it's affective and is a promising showcase of what this band has to offer. After a few listens, you'll be singing the angst ridden lyrics which litter this EP throughout. A (Jason Flax)

Change Lanes NEW ROUTE OPENED 10 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS 30 No Limits TO ONE WAY 20 CONSULT MAPS

The University Career Center . . . Your Vehicle For Traveling the Career Highway

On Campus Recruiting
A Smart Stop on the Road to Career Success!

Companies With Interview Space Available Include:

CHUBB Group of Insurance Companies, Deloitte & Touche, Sprint, All America Financial, John Hancock, Sentry Insurance, LSI Logic, Seachange Technology, Alternatives Unlimited

Companies New to On Campus Recruiting:

Raytheon, Blue Stone, inc., MBNA

Pick up your copy of 1st Place! the Electronic Resume Referral Software Package! It's the key for opening the doors to hundreds of job opportunities.

For Further Information call the University Career Center at 545-6261 or 545-6263!

Any Two Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax
Spring Specials Save in Twos 256-6100
Two Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax
Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones
CANTONE'S PIZZA 256-6100 45 RPM 481 West Street Amherst, MA
FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm - 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa
Any Two Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax
No Coupons Needed With These Specials 256-6100
Any Two Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.
Thank You For Your Patronage
Shop Scott's & Save!!
Check The Rest Shop The Best!
Quantity Discounts
Rolling Rock & Rock Light 12 Pack Bottles $6.99 +dep
Dozens Of In Store Specials!
We've Got The Competition Beat!!!
MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Buffets University Drive Alumni Dedham SCOTTS Victory Market Natick

Back again...

They Might Be Giants return to the Valley this Friday night at 6:30 p.m. at Pearl Street. Led by John Linnell and John Flansburg, they have recorded five albums and just keep getting better.

~ TELEVISION~

Mission: Impossible finds new home on FX

The Mission: Impossible movie starring Tom Cruise won't be coming out until Memorial Day weekend, but for those of you who just can't wait for the edge-of-your-seat adventure and intrigue flick, the original television series has found itself a home on the FX network. Airing every night, the intrepid undercover agents, led by Peter Graves, take on dictators, drug cartels, dictators and other nasty elements of the Cold War era.

The cast boasts names like Martin Landau, who won a Golden Globe for his role in Ed Wood last year. Cast regulars Barbara Bain, Greg Morris and Peter Lupus round out the original IMF team. Other notable guest stars who have tackled the impossible include "Star Trekkers" William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy.

"Mission: Impossible" earns its kudos for cunning, drama and cleverness. It's kind of cool the way the team members are just so smart and all the bad guys are so stupid. The beads of perspiration that break out on various members of the IMF team's foreheads, little karate chops and the sideways glances that are immediately understood are always good for a few laughs.

Tube Notes by Seema Gangatirkar

And of course, the neat twists and turns of the plot always make the show a delight. While the technology is a little jaded (the original series was filmed in the late sixties while a next generation popped up in the eighties for a bit) it's always interesting to watch, just to see how the IMF team wiggles out of each precarious situation.

Last week, figure skaters from around the world gathered to pay tribute to Sergei Grinkov, the skater who died suddenly from a heart attack last November on a CBS special presentation.

Kristi Yamaguichi, Paul Wylie, Scott Hamilton, Victor Petrenko, Oksana Baiul, Brian Boitano and Katerina Witt were among those who performed. The tribute also marked the return of Grinkov's widow and skating partner, Ekaterina Gordeeva, to the ice in a beautiful and poignant routine.

Coverage also included an emotional interview with Gordeeva in which she pleaded with viewers to let the "people you love know you love them everyday." Other skaters, including Kurt Browning, Boitano, Hamilton and Rosalyn Sumners, shared their memories of Grinkov. CBS interspersed clips of Gordeeva & Grinkov's memorable performances, along with photographs, into the 2 hour show.

Gordeeva & Grinkov won two Olympic gold medals, the first in 1988 and the second in 1994. Married since 1991, they had settled into the life of professional skaters and performed with the Discover card Stars on Ice tour until Grinkov's death of a heart attack at the age of 28.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

Doty speaks on AIDS; reads from Heaven's Coast

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The outbreak of AIDS during the 1980's has spawned a new type of literature, the memoir. Many writers have eloquently told their stories of having the disease or loving someone who was afflicted. Novelists and poets have been a strong voice and given hope to all who have been affected by this deadly virus.

This new genre of writing is exemplified by acclaimed poet and author Mark Doty, who will be speaking and reading from his new novel this evening in the Campus Center.

Heaven's Coast is Doty's memoir commemorating the death of his lover Wally Roberts. Roberts died of AIDS in 1993. This enchanting novel recounts their relationship, how AIDS affected their lives, and the death of Roberts. Doty tells this story with all the passion and details for which his poems are famous.

Doty draws from many different resources to capture the essence of his grief in Heaven's Coast. He follows the lives of his friends, looks at other writers in his genre, and studies all the aspects of his own grief, producing a novel that is both heartbreaking, yet hopeful.

Famous for his previous collections of poetry, Atlantis and My Alexandria, Doty has won many awards, including the National Book Critics Circle Award and the Los Angeles Times Book Prize. He has also received fellowships from the Guggenheim and Whiting foundations and the National Endowment of the Arts.

Doty's work has appeared in various publications including The New Yorker Poetry, The Paris Review and The Yale Review. He is also a contributor to two anthologies, The Best American Poetry 1994 and Poets for Life: Seventy- six Poets Respond to AIDS. He has taught at universities including Columbia, Brandeis and Sarah Lawrence.

A Tennessee native, Doty spent his childhood in various southern cities. He received his Bachelor's degree from Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa and received his Masters of Fine Arts from Goddard College. After meeting Roberts, Doty worked at various jobs in Boston, and then taught in Vermont. He currently lives in Provincetown.

Doty will speaking today at noon in Campus Center room 803, and then reading from his novel at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 904-908 this evening. Both events are free.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

Set March Madness in Motion!
The NCAA Tournament
PEP RALLY
Monday, March 11
@ 7:30 pm
Curry Hicks Cage
Special appearance by Coach Calipari and the Men's Basketball Team
Cheer on the Minutemen as they take us down
The Road to the Final Four!
Featuring performances by:
The UMass Cheerleaders
The Dance Team
The Doo Wop Shop
Recognition will also be given to other winter sports teams.
sponsored by
UMASS STARS
(STudent Alumni Relations Society)
For more info. on STARS, contact Alumni Relations at 545-2317

SAVE SOME DOSEY-DOUGH, Pardner!
What's Your Beef? (Chicken, maybe?)
EVERY THURSDAY at THE PUB in AMHERST
Whatcha' waitin' fer! Hopalong over to The Pub on East Pleasant Street 'cause there's a Wild West Fest every Thursday night. Round up your gang and save big! We'll take 2% Off your bill on Burgers & Chicken Sandwiches...Yee Hah!

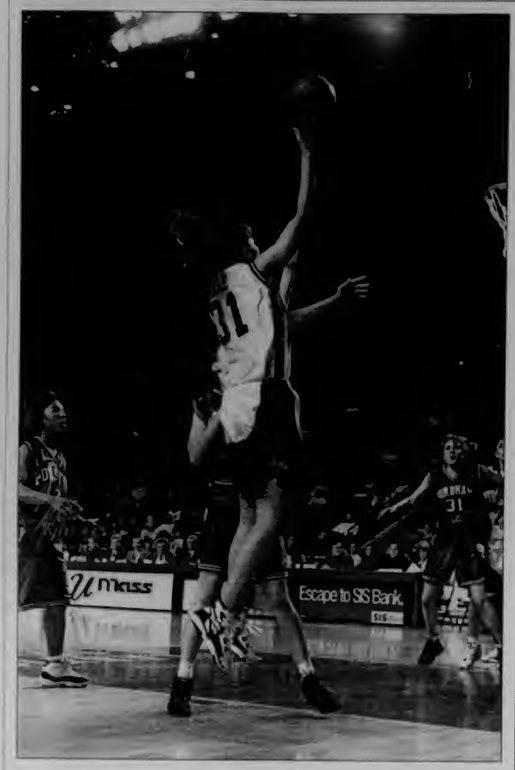
Olympic & World Figure Skating Champions
KRISTI YAMAGUCHI
SCOTT HAMILTON
KATARINA WITT
PAUL WYLIE
KURT BROWNING
AND
BECHKE & PETROV
ROSALYNN SUMNERS
RAHKAMO & KOKKO
HOUGH & LADRET
DISCOVER STARS ON ICE
DIRECTED AND CO-PRODUCED BY SANDRA BEZIC
FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1996 • 7:30 PM

MARCH INTO THE MADNESS
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
NEW MILLER BEER $13.99 + DEP
GUINNESS STOUT $6.49 + DEP
WACHUSETT $4.49 + DEP
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $11.79 + DEP
SHARP'S $10.99 + DEP
½ KEGS $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
CARMEN VINEYARDS $4.99
INGLENOOK 8.49
NEW C.K. MONDAVI $8.99
SUTTER HOME 3.99
DIVA 2 for $10.00
DEWARS SCOTCH 1.75L $25.99
GORDON'S VODKA 1.75L $11.49
EMMETS IRISH CREAM 750ML $8.49
JIM BEAM 1.75L $13.49
BUSHMILL'S IRISH WHISKEY 750ML $14.49
TANQUERAY GIN 750ML $11.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/7/96 THRU WEDS. 3/13/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

If You Are Driving Around With A Dirty Car...CUT it Out!
Save $5.50
Express Wash Reg. Price $8.50
Blue Coral Polish Reg. Price $4.00
Undercarriage Wash Reg. Price $1.50
Rust Inhibitor Reg. Price $1.50
Spot Free Finish Reg. Price $1.50
Total Reg. Price $13.00
Discount Coupon $5.50
You Pay Only $7.50
Golden Nozzle Car Wash
Not valid with any other coupons.
Locations- F.L. Roberts
Amherst/Hadley 456 Russell next to BP
Chicopee 520 Montgomery St.
Easthampton 124 Northampton St
East Longmeadow 141 North St
Ludlow 425 Center St
Springfield 1385 Boston Rd
Springfield 599 St. James St
Springfield 93 West Broad St
Westfield 90 South Maple St.
West SPFLD. 518 Memorial Ave
West SPFLD. 2665 Westfield St
West SPFLD. 928 Riverdale St

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law and more...
Call 545-1995 for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

ROCK BOTTOM
You're failing Physics. Your girlfriend dumped you. Your self-esteem is way low. So you call Grandma for some sympathy. She tells you to "Stop whining and get a backbone." Ouch, talk about tough love.
1-800-COLLECT®
Save The Peo You Call Up To 44%.



EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Waiting Game

Melissa Currie and the Minutewomen wait to hear if they will be going to the postseason after placing second in the A-10 Tournament.

New Big East teams change tourney

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The expansion of the Big East to 13 schools meant a lot of changes, especially in the league's postseason tournament.

The first change was obvious — today's quintuple-header that got postseason play started for all in the conference but the top three seeds.

The second wasn't as plain as a full marquee outside Madison Square Garden, but any team that didn't get a bye has to win four games in as many days to take home the championship trophy. "It will be real hard to win four games. It really takes it toll," Boston College coach Jim O'Brien said. "That's why, I think, in addition to the three teams that have byes being the three best teams, they have a tremendous advantage in playing three games to win it all, while the others have to win four games." The top three seeds — No. 4 Connecticut, No. 6 Georgetown and No. 9 Villanova — received byes into today's quarterfinals. Yesterday's schedule had No. 12 Syracuse vs. Notre Dame; Boston College vs. Pittsburgh; Providence vs. St. John's; Miami vs. Rutgers; and West Virginia vs. Seton Hall.

Syracuse (22-7) is clearly the best of the teams that have to win four games.

"For us, it would be very taxing because we play seven guys," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "It will be very difficult to do that, and we are probably the least prepared in the Big East to do that. We hope we get that opportunity, but it would be very difficult."

Providence coach Pete Gillen won't even allow himself to think about the effort of four victories in as many days. "We're not even considering four wins, just one, then survive," he said. "Winning four is incomprehensible right now for us. We'll try to win the first and hopefully survive until [tonight.] Winning like that really drains you and knocks you out, but we hope we have that situation."

Most people expect the three bye teams and Syracuse to reach tomorrow's semifinals. There is one exception among the league's coaches to that way of thinking.

"I believe the tournament is in for some surprises," Miami coach Leonard Hamilton said. "The top three have dominated, but I've watched films and there were a lot of games where those teams were in dogfights with three, four minutes to go and now we're on a neutral court. You'll see a lot of interesting things happen. The teams near the bottom have improved all during the season and I wouldn't be surprised to see an upset."

The highest seeded of the new teams was No. 8 West Virginia (12-14) with Rutgers 10th and Notre Dame 13th.

"We're anxious to see what it's like," Rutgers coach Bob Wenzel said of the tournament. "All I've heard about the Big East is how exciting it is. We've played some pretty good basketball against some pretty good teams the last month and a half. We have to make sure we focus on the game and not the entire atmosphere of the tournament."

Villanova gets star guard Kerry Kittles back after he served a three-game suspension for unauthorized use of a university telephone credit card. The Wildcats (24-5) beat Boston College in between losses to Connecticut and Georgetown while Kittles was out. "I felt we had a tough week playing three games without Kerry," Villanova coach Steve Lappas said. "Winning at Boston College was a great win. I'm looking forward to getting the team back and doing what we have to do in the Big East tournament."

Red Sox destroy Baltimore in preseason

Red Sox 12, Orioles 0

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Nomar Garciaparra homered and singled yesterday to keep his batting average perfect and lead the Boston Red Sox to a 12-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Scheduled Baltimore starter Mike Mussina was scratched with a strained abdominal muscle. Jim Haynes started in his place and gave up three runs and six hits in two innings.

Jamie Moyer, formerly with the Orioles, pitched four innings for Boston, allowing one hit and striking out one. Aaron Sele followed with two innings of two-hit ball, striking out two.

Garciaparra, trying to make room for himself in a crowded infield, is 5-for-5 for the spring with two homers and a slugging percentage of 1.800. John Valentin, the AL's top-hitting shortstop with 27 homers last year, doubled twice.

Dwayne Hosey had two doubles and three RBIs, and Milt Cuyler homered during a five-run sixth.

It was the second consecutive double-digit output for Boston, which beat the Chicago White Sox 12-1 Tuesday night.

Rangers 10, Twins 1

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — LaTroy Hawkins was pounded for three runs and five hits in 1 1-3 innings as the Texas Rangers beat Minnesota 10-1 and sent the Twins to their fourth straight loss.

"I took him out because I was afraid someone was going to get hurt," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "They hit some of the hardest shots when he was in there. I know this may sound funny, but it's true. I didn't want to get anybody hurt."

Minnesota starter Jose Parra gave up three runs in the first, including a two-run double to Mickey Tettleton. Parra wound up allowing five runs and six hits in three innings.

Bobby Witt got the win, allowing one runs and three hits in four innings.

Damon Buford drove in three runs for Texas, and Darryl Hamilton and Benji Gil went 2-for-2.

Minnesota managed only five singles. Paul Molitor hit an RBI single in the fourth.

Royals 8, Mets 4

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — Tom Browning didn't allow an earned run in three innings, and the Kansas City Royals got their fourth victory in five games by beating the New York Mets 8-4 yesterday. Darren Burton hit a two-run homer for the Royals, and Joe Randa, Patrick Lennon and Keith Lockhart hit solo shots.

Three of the homers came off Mets starter Robert Person, who pitched two innings in his first appearance of the spring. Browning allowed five hits and an unearned run.

Kansas City had 14 hits and built an 8-2 lead before Alex Ochoa's two-run homer in the seventh.

Edgardo Alfonzo went 3-for-4 for New York to raise his spring training average to .500 (7-for-14).

Cardinals 4, Blue Jays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) - Ray Lankford stopped an 0-for-9 slide with a two-run double in a four-run first inning yesterday, and the St. Louis Cardinals went on to beat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-2.

Cardinals starter Alan Benes allowed one run and three hits in four innings.

"He was a complete pitcher out there," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said. "He threw his fastball to different areas of the plate, got his breaking ball over, worked at a great pace." Benes' brother Andy, signed as a free agent during the off-season, is scheduled to make his Cardinals debut today against Cincinnati.

Brian Jordan and Royce Clayton opened the first with opposite-field singles off Erik Hanson and scored on Lankford's double. Lankford took third on a passed ball as Ron Gant walked. John Mabry hit a run-scoring single and Pat Borders added an RBI groundout.

Shawn Green tripled leading off the third and scored on John Olerud's sacrifice fly. Tom Evans homered in the ninth, ending a streak of 14 consecutive scoreless innings by St. Louis relievers.

Yankees 7, White Sox 6

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — David Cone was tagged for five runs and six hits in three innings yesterday but the New York Yankees hung on to beat the Chicago White Sox 7-6.

Cone struck out three but struggled with his slider and sinking fastball.

"I'm encouraged how I felt physically, but I'm little discouraged with the lack of sharpness," Cone said. "I wasn't able to hit my spots. I guess that's to be expected."

Tony Phillips hit a two-run single in the second, and Jimmy Hurst hit a long two-run homer in the third.

"When I did get ahead, I didn't have any good finishing pitches," Cone said. "I didn't have that real nasty slider, so that resulted in two-strike hits. It shows I still have a lot work to do."

Gerald Williams homered in the eighth off Roberto Hernandez, breaking a 6-6 tie. Bernie Williams, Tino Martinez and Ruben Sierra drove in two runs each.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Miller Lite" $14.99 30
Miller Genuine Draft & Draft Lite
$9.99 cse 12oz bots
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Sam Adams- All Flavors including the "New Pilsner"!
Harpoon- Ale, Pilsner, Alt, & THE I.P.A. !
Black Dog- Ale, Pale Ale, & "Delicious" Raspberry Wheat!
Catamount- All Flavors including "Spring Bock"!
Brooklyn- "Full Body Lager" & the "Famous" Brown Ale !
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Hornsby's Cider $4.99 6 pak
Captain Morgan $15.49 1.75 liter
Golden Anniversary $7.49 cse 12oz
John Jameson $13.99 750 ml (thru St. Paddy's Day)
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru Thur. Mar.8-14/Seperate Ticks
Daily 7pm | Daily 9:15
ONE OF THE BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR
ONE OF THE MOST STUNNING SCREEN IMAGES EVER!
SHANGHAI TRIAD
"SIMPLY ONE OF THE YEAR'S FINEST FILMS."
SUSAN SARANDON SEAN PENN
A FILM BY TIM ROBBINS
DEAD MAN WALKING
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Getting High on Getting Thin:
The First of Two Workshops on Eating and Body Issues
My Best Friend, My Worst Enemy
Myths and facts about eating disorders, food and weight.
Date; Thursday, March 7, 1996
Time; 3:30 pm to 5:00 pm
Place; Campus Center, Rm 811-15
Drop-in workshops are sponsored by University Health Services. Free and open to UMass students.
CONFIDENTIALITY ASSURED
For more info, call 549-2671 ext. 233 or 545-2337

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Perfectly Natural
LOSE WEIGHT BY SPRING BREAK!
5% off any bottle or program
Ready to put on that bathing suit?
We have every confidence that we carry the best weight loss programs available!
Herbal Health & Fitness Products
321 Main St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)253-7716 • Closed Wed
SAFE, EASY, effective, all natural herbal combos STANDARDIZED

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits and knowledgeable, professional service
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA
586-5302

■ college hoops

continued from page 16

California and Washington at selection time?

Does the College of Charleston, which finished the regular season with a 24-3 record, get in? The Cougars haven't been in Division I long enough to be eligible for their conference tournament, so they can't get the automatic bid.

As NCAA seeds are secured and berths clinched, bubbles are bumped and burst. One thing, however, is certain, Arkansas State deserves a bid just so we can hear broadcasters say the coach's name — Dickey Nutt.

• Argue all you want about Massachusetts-Temple, Louisville-Kentucky, Michigan-Michigan State, or UCLA-USC. But when it comes to college basketball rivalries, Duke-UNC blows 'em all away.

Where else but Durham do the destination boards of buses read, "Go to Hell, Carolina!"

• And speaking of taunting the opposition, Penn State fans jeered Michigan players when the Nittany Lions handed the Wolverines a 67-57 loss at the Bryce Center. Relentless calls of "drive home safely!" were yelled in reference to an early morning car accident Michigan players were involved in.

• Also in the show of support department, Connecticut fans greeted Villanova with chants of "1-800" after Kerry Kittles was suspended from the Wildcats because of the use of a phone card.

Kittles used the number of a phone credit card given to him to call a reporter from the Great Alaska Shootout. He returned the card, but kept a copy of the number for personal use, and racked up over $3,100 in bills.

Apparently none of the calls were to the NCAA for a copy of the latest rulebook.

• Billy Packer spoke with civil rights leader Jesse Jackson this week regarding his comments about Georgetown guard Allen Iverson. On a broadcast last weekend, Packer called Iverson, "a tough monkey."

Packer apologized for the comment, and spoke to Jackson about it. Packer said he might have been naive to call Iverson that.

"In my mind, it was an endearing comment. He [Jackson] brought it to my attention that some people don't think so."

Jackson said that naive was a good way to term Packer's behavior.

Hmmm... I wonder what Iverson might call Packer if the tables were turned

• After a drought of 83 years, the Southeastern Conference has a triple-double in the record books. In fact, there are two of them.

Roy Rogers, a 6-foot-9 senior center from Alabama and an All-SEC first team member, posted two triple-doubles in just over a week. First against Georgia, he recorded 15 points, 12 rebounds, and a SEC record 14 blocks. Eight days later he had 27 points, 10 rebounds, and 10 blocks against Louisiana State.

• Player of the Year honors were awarded in four conferences this week. In addition to the Atlantic 10 naming Marcus Camby, the SEC named Tony Delk of Kentucky, the Big East picked Ray Allen of Connecticut, and the WAC award went to Utah's Keith Van Horn.

• It seems to be national "Let's Get Arrested Week" for college hoop recruits. On March 5, Melvin Whitaker, a University of Virginia recruit, was arrested at a pickup basketball game at a university recreation center. Whitaker allegedly assaulted a Virginia football player during the game.

Maurice Anderson, a 6-foot-4 260 pound freshman defensive lineman was treated at the University hospital for facial lacerations and he was then released.

Police have reported that a weapon was used, but would give no further details.

Whitaker signed with UVA last year, but did not meet the freshman eligibility standards. He enrolled at Hargrave Military Academy and scored the necessary test scores. He applied to enter UVA for the spring, but was denied and must wait until at least next fall.

Arizona State's Tommie Prince, Rico Harris, and George Gervin were arrested last Thursday on several charges, including alleged sexual and physical assault on a female student and another woman a day earlier.

Prince, a 6-foot-5 guard from Compton, Calif., was arrested on charges of suspicion of sexual assault, aggravated assault, kidnapping, unlawful imprisonment, and threatening and intimidating.

Gervin, a 6-foot-2 guard from San Antonio, was charged with suspicion of sexual assault, kidnapping, and unlawful imprisonment.

Harris, a 6-foot-8 forward from Los Angeles, was arrested for suspicion of assault, unlawful imprisonment, and threatening and intimidating.

COURTESY OF UK MEDIA RELATIONS

Kentucky's Tony Delk was awarded SEC player of the year as he leads his team to the NCAA's.

Boston College drops Pitt; 'Cuse downs Notre Dame

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

Boston College 70, Pitt 66

NEW YORK — Antonio Granger's 3-pointer with 1:17 to play, his only points of the game, gave Boston College the lead for good and the Eagles beat Pittsburgh 70-66 yesterday in the opening round of the Big East tournament.

The Panthers fought back from a 61-49 deficit with nine minutes to play and led 66-65 when Granger hit his bomb from the left corner. Pitt turned the ball over on its next possession and Boston College's Danya Abrams missed a desperation 3-pointer with 23 seconds to play as the shot clock ran out.

But Pittsburgh's Jerry McCullough missed a reverse layup with seven seconds to play and Abrams iced it with two free throws with 3.5 seconds to play.

The fifth-seeded Eagles (18-9) advanced to today's quarterfinals and will play fourth-seeded and 13th-ranked Syracuse, which beat Notre Dame 76-55 in the opening round.

The Panthers (10-17), who closed the season losing nine of 10, made an impressive comeback after trailing by as many as 14 points in the second half.

A 16-2 run turned the 61-49 deficit into a 65-63 lead with 1:55 to play. Jason Maile scored 10 points in the run, including the last seven, and it was his 3-pointer that gave the Panthers their first lead since there were seven minutes left in the first half. During the run, the Eagles managed only two free throws, missing seven shots and committing four turnovers.

Keenan Jourdon led Boston College, which had lost three of its last four games, with a career-high 19 points, but he did not score over the game's final 16:51. Abrams had 18 points and 11 rebounds, while Sconnie Penn added 15 points.

Maile finished with a season-high 23 points for the 12th-seeded Panthers and Vonteego Cummings added 10.

Syracuse 76, Notre Dame 55

NEW YORK — John Wallace didn't feel well during the first half. He should bottle whatever he took at halftime.

The senior forward for No. 13 Syracuse finished with 32 points, one off his career-high, as the Orangemen rode his strong second half to a 76-55 victory over the Fighting Irish on yesterday in the opening round of the Big East tournament.

Syracuse (23-7) withstood a second-half run by Notre Dame then pulled away to advance to today's quarterfinals against Boston College, which beat Pittsburgh 70-66 in the opening round. "We don't make any game look easy," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "We've won 23 games and we're not far from 16."

The difference in No. 23 was Wallace, who had 20 points in the second half, and struggled to a 9-for-25 effort from the field. "I felt a little sick in the first half but I had to play my way through it," said Wallace, who had 11 rebounds.

Wallace, who came in averaging 22 points, broke the 30-point mark for the fourth time this season, with his high 33 against West Virginia.

"In the second half they went right to John Wallace," Notre Dame coach John MacLeod said. "We just turned it over too many times and didn't capitalize on any opportunities we may have gotten."

The teams met in the final regular-season game, a 71-67 home victory for Syracuse in which Wallace had 15 points, and it looked to be another close one when the Fighting Irish (9-18) used a 9-0 run to pull within 54-49 with 7:07 left. They were still within 58-53 with 4:52 to play when Wallace started the closing 18-2 run with two free throws with 4:34 remaining.

Lazarus Sims hit a 3-pointer with 2:57 left to make it 63-53 and the Orangemen made eight straight free throws before Sims closed it with another 3-pointer and a dunk in the final 12 seconds. "When it gets down like that in the second half you get a little nervous," Boeheim said. "We went to John and he got the job done. We went to John down the stretch and he made the plays. The first round is tough to get through and we're happy to get through this one."

The Orangemen have lost in the quarterfinals the last two seasons.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

solid basketball. This team is gearing up to make an impressive run in the post season. Even if this is not the case, I still love seeing that one of a kind, ear to ear grin on Magic's face each game.

• Another team turning it up lately is the Phoenix Suns. The Suns now have Charles Barkley, Danny Manning and Kevin Johnson healthy. As of late, Phoenix looks like the team of 1993, who blew through the Western Conference on the way to the NBA finals. Any team west of the Sixers, who has a somewhat healthy Charles Barkley, must be considered to be a contender.

• How about the run and gun Dallas Mavericks? When Mavericks coach Dick Motta proclaimed that his team would loosen it up a bit, no one could have dreamed of this. On Tuesday night, the Mavs tossed up 49 three point attempts — 49! That is almost 10 times as many as their opponents, the Nets took. The Mavs did hit 18 of them, to register a new season high, but still... I guess Motta, must be trying to get the most out of sharpshooters Jim Jackson, Jason Kidd and George McCloud. Although it is extremely entertaining, there must be a better way.

• There is a race developing in the Midwest division. Utah leads the Spurs by half a game. Trailing the Spurs are the defending champion Rockets. The scary thing is that all three of these teams are on hot streaks. It will be real interesting to see how this battle turns out.

• Minnesota Rookie Kevin Garnett is playing some ball as of late. It seems that the youngster has found a little bit of rhythm in his game. Garnett has been logging some serious minutes in Minnesota, since earning a starting job. He has done well, averaging double figures in points over his last four games. Could it be possible that the T-Wolves actually made the intelligent move, by drafting this 6'11" phenom?

• I wonder if the Boston Celtics can do any worse than they are right now. They have dropped seven of their last 10, and are playing like they are trying to lose. Nothing against superstars like Dino Radja, or Rick Fox, but this team really lacks every-thing. The Celts are 23 and a half games out, have lost more games at home than they have won, and have got to be thinking about that draft pick. At least they are not the worst team in the division — they can still look down on the Sixers.

• Sixers coach John Lucas must be having fits. This team is lost. They have 11 wins. That is four less than the expansion Toronto Raptors. They have dropped 12 of their last 15, and are dead last in the conference. You must feel horrible for Jerry Stackhouse. Poor Stack is putting up decent numbers on a team that can't seem to tie their shoe laces right.

• The Detroit Pistons must be feeling pretty good. They are playing sound basketball and making moves in the Central division. Detroit has a solid core of talented players. To go along with Grant Hill, there is Terry Mills, Lindsey Hunter and Byron Houston. Along with these young-sters are cagey veterans Joe Dumars and Otis Thorpe. You've got to believe that coach Doug Collins, will make this team a winner in the very near future.

• In the beginning of the season, two of my friends found themselves arguing to death over, of all topics, the Washington Bullets. To settle their argument, they decided to place a wager on whether the Bullets would make it to the postseason. Things are looking sketchy for them, but don't worry, there are plenty of games left. Besides, you gotta love any team that has big Gheorge in the middle.

Jason Rubin is a Collegian staff member

Collegian Graphics At 4 a.m.
We're still warming up...
...Sleep has no meaning

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879
25 North Pleasant St.
(above McDonald's)
Apartment Rentals
CONGRATULATIONS!
Job Well Done

$200.00 REWARD
Looking for the driver and vehicle that fled the scene of an auto accident on Sunday evening, 3/3/96, Rt.9 in Hadley near the intersection by McDonald's Restaurant at approximately 7:15 P.M. Best description available- a station wagon, dark in color, with wood or wood-like siding and should have substantial damage. A $200.00 cash reward is being offered to anyone who can tell us who owns this vehicle and where it can be located.
NO OTHER QUESTIONS ASKED!
Please call Cindy 1-413-788-7795 (springfield)evenings and weekends 1-413-583-6628 (Ludlow) days

Hull Trading Company
Assistant Floor Trader -Chicago
Expanding, highly successful, leading-edge international options, futures and equities market making firm seeks candidates interested in career opportunities with advancement and excellent earning potential.
Successful candidates will possess a solid background in finance, economics and/or mathematics coupled with a strong work ethic and the desire to learn in a fast paced environment. A comprehensive training program is provided.
For an on campus interview on March 27th, send your resume to:
Hull Trading Company, L.L.C.
311 South Wacker Drive Ste. 1400
Chicago, IL 60606
Equal Opportunity Employer

Thursday Night is Party Night at Mike's
This Thursday Nite
Sambuca Nite• Buca Shots $2
Drink of the Week:
Grape Crush
Mike's Big One 22oz Bud Lite or Natural Lite

Minuteman Volkswagon
Ask For First Time College Program!
Patricia Dolan
Sales Representative
TEL. 617-275-8000
39 North Road
Bedford, Mass. 01730

JUNGLE RED SALON
(413) 549-1840
• Perms
• Colors
• Nails
Special Haircut Day
Lower Level, Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant / Amherst, MA 01002

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

...MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees ... and is acceptance of the classified.
...MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials ... The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations per... Please the full name may be used.
...are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
...phone numbers are allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers ...
...Personals containing or derogatory nature are not acceptable. ...productive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals ...used for the purpose of harassment.
...cannot be used in personals.
...personals section is for personals only. The personals section may ... all items: seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
...must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of ... on file, as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students ... a valid driver's license and the license number must be ... the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresen... ...be penalties under the law.
...reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does ... Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the ...commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment For Rent
- Auto For Sale
- Employment
- Entertainment
- For Sale
- Found (2 days Free)
- Happy Birthday
- Houses For Rent
- Instruction
- Lost
- Musicians
- Miscellaneous
- Motorcycles
- Personals
- Room For Rent
- Room Wanted
- Roommate Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Transportation
- Wanted to Rent
- Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CAMPUS COMICS & CARDS
...
...WITHIN 1/2 MILE OF ALL MAJORS
...
...SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Kai Ch... ...Sunday thru Thursday. ... every Friday and Saturday ... 549-1074.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available immediately PUFFTON VIL... ...single bedroom apartments ... in order for low low $433 per ... Compare with $565 per month ... 549-1041.

Moving off Campus? Spacious 2 bed... ...apartment. Heat, hot water gas... ...ded on bus route 5 minutes to cam... ...call 549-6179.

AUTO FOR SALE

For Spring Break Toyota 1980 Station ... ...blue Runs only $900. Needs to ... road 4U!!!

87 Acura Integra All new clutch, man... ...$5800/BO 584-6042

EMPLOYMENT

Photographer Wanted. Need photogra... ...for wedding, June 29. ...ew portfolio ... experience 800-396-1911

FILL YOUR RESUME ...YOUR WAL... ...directories the nation's ... campus telephone ... enticing students to spri... ...Mass telephone ... ...internship begins ... ...call write, calling on ... ...experience in ... ...sales. Average earnings are ... ...major credit may be avail... ...opportunities exist. INTER... ...USA! MARCH 13 ... ...2 1 800 743 5516 ... ...extensive time.

Seeking warm caring people for 6 ad... ...camp on upstate NY ... some A and sports. ABC, hors... ...instruction in riflery, archery, ... have a keen & mature ... ...salary. 1-800-782-5319

EMPLOYMENT

Professional male escort service ... Available for all functions. "A call minute ... call that will last all night." 256-8828.

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach contraception workshops at University Health Services. Call for more informa... tion 549-3671 ext 187.

$Cruise Ships Hiring! Students need ed! $$$+Free Travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii). Seasonal/Permanent. No Exper. Necessary. Call 919-929-4398 c1060

Make $5/hr4 this summer d. Work out west. Interviews Friday 3/18. 12-4pm Room 803 Campus Center.

FOR SALE

35 gallon fish tank call 549-4529.

Powerbook 165 10MB RAM 160MB hard drive system 7.1 internal modem call fred at 532 1158.

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans. script into text. 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot) Bubble jet printer. $2,000 540 4236.

1986 Chevy Nova Toyota. Power steering, brakes, cruise control, a/c, good condition. $2100 or BO 549-7998.

Brother wordprocessor w/clip-lead sheet business letter and thesaurus soft ware. Originally bought @ $300 and valued @ $400. resale price $125 or best offer. call 549-3774 for more information!

Airline Ticket for sale Miami Spring Break $0/can see 549-6989.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Houses for Rent Cape Cod group summer rentals. Waterfront houses Falmouth area. 508 477 6000.

LOST

Lost Zodiac drivewatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Inc at 665-3061.

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with lobe! interest seeks bassist. Vocals a plus. Call Andy 548-1016 or Jason 367-0156.

MISCELLANEOUS

Women do you worry so much about how you look? Free six week body image Art Therapy Group now forming. Call today 585-0809.

Clarity Press, INC. Introducing new perspectives on minority and human rights issues. Catalogue/orders http://www.brooklinkstars.com/clarity.

PERSONALS

Congratulations to the new pledge class re: Kerry, Erica, Julie, Maureen, Karen, Hillary, Christy, Aimee, Michele, Mara, Jill, Alison, Sharine, Rikki, Eileen, Danielle, and Suzanne. Get psyched for a great semester. The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau.

David, You are my best friend in the world. I will love you forever and a day. Love always, Karen.

Alicia Welcome to Sigma Kappa! In Sigma Love your big sister Beth.

Boring Summer Job? Make $2100/month. Travel. Build resume. Interviews Friday 3/18. 12-4pm. Room 803 Campus Center.

ROOM FOR RENT

Montague House 3 rooms for rent 325 each 367-9408 John Lakeside.

Large Room, private bath, walk in closet Mt Valley, Sublet $300 Lm 796-0817

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906.

TRAVEL

Spring Break Condo! Marco Island Florida. Pool, games, boats. $576/per week. 212-472-1414.

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $129
Cancun Jamaica Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1-800-234-7007

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington $709! UMass ski club 545-3431.

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters door to door affordable advanced reservation 253-1760.

Spring Break
Panama City $459
Daytona Beach $319
Best hotels and prices
Call Heidi 796-6160

Work out west Make $514/week Southwestern. Interviews Friday 3/18. 12-4pm Room 803 Campus Center.

WANTED

Buying STAR WARS, Transformers, GI Joe and most other toys before 1986. Call 413-562-0413.

Spring Break Daytona Beach
March 15-24
7 Nights at a Beachfront Hotel
$89.00
$219.00 Bus & Hotel
To book, call
Breakaway Tours
1-800-465-4257
SPACE IS LIMITED

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

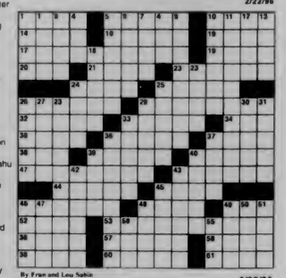
ACROSS
1 Exceptional
5 Dear pursuer
10 Harte of the West
14 Bullets
15 Worth having
16 One of Jacob's wives
17 Couch potatoes watch these
19 Pelion's crusher
20 "Forever" promise
21 — de-sac
22 Baby's home companion
24 Type type Abbr.
25 Clara or Rosa
26 Anise-flavored veggie
29 Prepares for a second attack
32 "— You Kind of Glad We Did"?
33 Dancer Jeanmaire
34 Snitch
35 Rookery communications
36 Tight spots
37 Bigfoot's winter protection?
38 Mind-reading abbr.
39 Sweetshop orders
40 Feather
41 Ahab's knots
43 "Sitting —"
44 Cheerful
45 Tenor
46 Kind of computer
48 Texas town on the Brazos
49 Part of an Oahu welcome
52 Harry of "The Third Man"
53 Everybody needs this
56 Hamlet's word of woe
57 MacMillan ballet
58 Feed the kitty
59 "Empty —"
60 January, in Barcelona
61 Writing assignment, at times

DOWN
1 Shankar
2 Battery —
3 Give a new look
4 Windsock dir.
5 Broker's fund
6 Ill ever
7 Ice cream portions
8 Flagon filler
9 E-mail communications
10 Bombed
11 Saucy place?
12 Facility
13 "— she blows!"
18 Two barbershop quartets
23 Ahem!
24 Holiday spots
25 Transmits
26 Looks at
27 Do the board
28 Boxed gift for dad
29 They're due every month
30 Horse of a different color
31 Lonely puppy
33 Miami Heat coach Pat
36 Super Bowl happening
37 Lend an ear
39 Actor O'Shea
40 Pre-publication reading
42 Treat badly
43 Quaker State mountains
45 City bigwig
46 Dershowitz at the bar
47 Cleo's waterway
48 Diminish
49 Carson's successor
50 Villa d'—
51 Bit of gossip
54 Rather
55 Palaver

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

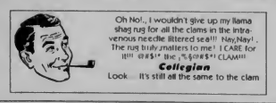
M	A	T	A		R	O	U	T			A	P	I	N
A	R	A	B	E	L	S	A			L	I	N	E
R	A	B	B	I	T	E	A	R	S		E	G	G	S
V	I	L	E	S	T			T	E	A	C	H	E	S
A	L	E		S	I	A	M		V	I	S	E
		P	U	G	N	O	S	E	D		A	R	I
O	S	S	I	E		D	O	U	R		O	D	E	S
G	E	N	E	R	A	L		N	E	W	D	E	A	L
L	E	A	D		M	O	O	D		A	D	D	L	E
E	S	S		C	O	W	N	A	M	O	U	S
		E	C	R	U		S	E	D		I	S	A
E	V	E	L	Y	N	S			L	L	A	M	A	S
R	A	Y	E		T	U	R	T	L	E	N	E	C	K
A	R	E	A			R	A	N	I		D	A	R	E
S	Y	S	T			F	E	T	E		B	O	W

2/22/96



By Fran and Lou Sabin
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/22/96



Oh No!... I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Hey,Hey!... The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$%* the %,$@#$%! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's Largest College Daily.

When our job is done, your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Date: Taken By:

Headline:

X Words: = X rate = Payment

Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuing victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the initiative in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound; take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I went over to Dan's place today.
He showed me an astronomy book his parents got him for his birthday.
"I love astronomy," he said.
He started showing me star charts and stuff, and it got kind of boring.

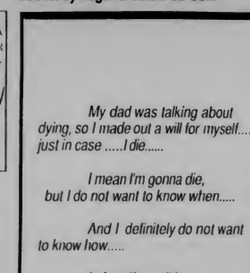
Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

SO LET ME GET THIS STRAIGHT. YOU CAN JUST MAGICALLY CREATE FOOD AT WILL?
THAT'S RIGHT, SPORTO
AND I COULD EASILY WHIP UP SOME BRILLIANT CULINARY DELIGHT RIGHT NOW FOR YOU...
BUT I DON'T THINK THAT WOULD DO ANY GOOD FOR AS A WISE MAN ONCE SAID, WHEN A MAN IS STARVING, YOU DON'T GIVE HIM A FISH, YOU TEACH HIM TO BE A FISHERMAN
WAIT, YOU'RE GONNA TEACH YOU TO BE A FISHERMAN...WHERE'S YOU LISTENING?

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

YOUR ROOMMATE'S TURNED YOU INTO A FROG! DUH?
WELL, HE HAD THIS PEAKED LIZARDS HAT ON, AND I SAID IT LOOKED SILLY...
AH
YEAH, I'LL THE NEXT TIME YOU SEE A SILLY HAT, MAYBE YOU SHOULDN'T SAY
YES, THANK YOU, I'D HAD THAT EXACT THOUGHT SEVERAL TIMES TODAY

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

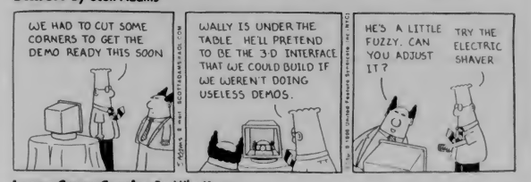


My dad was talking about dying, so I made out a will for myself.... just in case .....I die.....
I mean I'm gonna die, but I do not want to know when.....
And I definitely do not want to know how.....
In fact, if possible,..... I don't even want to be there when it happens.....
Maybe I could get someone to die on my behalf, you know, instead of me.
I'd offer them money.
I'll ask Norm, ... he's done some pretty big favors for me in the past....

Close to Home By John McPherson

Having lost their list of who each wedding gift was from, newlyweds Todd and Lori Dreimer enlisted the help of a psychic.

Dilbert By Scott Adams



WE HAD TO CUT SOME CORNERS TO GET THE DEMO READY THIS SOON
WALLY IS UNDER THE TABLE. HE'LL PRETEND TO BE THE 3-D INTERFACE THAT WE COULD BUILD IF WE WEREN'T DOING USELESS DEMOS.
HE'S A LITTLE FUZZY. CAN YOU ADJUST IT?
TRY THE ELECTRIC SHAVER

Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy

"Hey Steve, you wanna play Magic: The Gathering!™ with me?"
"No Bob, only geeks play that. Why don't you find another loser to play with?"
"I super-strike your gnomes with my astral dagger that's been soaked in the blood of the demon Vulgoth!"

NoBrainer By Sean Cahoon

HOW THE HELL DID I GET HERE? AND WHY DOES MY HEAD HURT? I REMEMBER... OUCH!... I REMEM— OH YEAH... I WAS ...TAKING A SHORT-CUT TO WORK...
THEN BAM!
...AND EVERYTHING WENT DARK

WHEN I CAME TO, MY WALLET AND HALF MY BRAIN WERE GONE.
THEY MUST'VE TAKEN THE MEMORY PART BECAUSE I REALLY DON'T REMEMBER MUCH ELSE. AIN'T EVEN SURE THIS IS MY BEER. COULD'A BEEN WORSE— AT LEAST THEY DIDN'T TOUCH MY BLAPPER CONTROL.
DAMN.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOUR RACISM TURNED AN INNOCENT MAN INTO A MONSTER!
I WAS ONLY TRYING TO PROVE A POINT!
YOU SUCCEEDED! YOU PROVED THE HARM THAT BIGOTRY CAN CAUSE!
I'VE GOT TO HURRY BEFORE THE POLICE TAKE HIM AWAY!

The Nuckle Buster By Dug

My friend Pete's girlfriend loved him so much that she had pictures of him all over the wall.
Eventually they broke up, but she didn't take them down...
I will remove dead (out of style) Pete! I will! Yes!
Instead, she simply poked tacks into his face to cover him up.
Such a sweet girl.

Puddington Bear By Sean, Mike, & Ilya

I'M STARTING TO WONDER IF IT WAS A GOOD IDEA TO MOVE INTO THE LOUNGE
I INSTALL SURE WERE GOT LOTS OF SPACE, AND OUR ROOMS ARE NOW STRICTLY FOR "LADIES NIGHT" & DANCING!
EXCUSE ME.
AND THAT CASKET/ TWINTIE BATHROOM IDEA IS GETTIN' WORSE EVERY DAY.
SAY, SOMEBODY SURE HAS 20/20 HINDSIGHT.

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Today's Michaels

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Mike MacLean
Photo Technician.....Emily "Michael" Reily
Production Supervisor....Tony "Michael" Morse
Production.....Mike Troupe
Kevin M.Farrar, Michael Krozy

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Pizza
Rotini
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Vegetable Stew
Pastabilities

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Cheese Pizza
Falafel Sandwich

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Beef Bourguinon
Bean Cassarole
Grilled Ham & Cheese

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Cheese Pizza
Stone Willy's
Summit Subs

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Beef Bourguinon
Stone Willy's
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Rotini
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Vegetable Stew
Pastabilities

Quote of the Day

"Why are there no "B" batteries?

–Steven Wright

Sports

UM starts postseason with twice-beaten Bonnies

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — Bring on the Bonnies.

UMass will play the first game of the Atlantic 10 Tournament against St. Bonaventure University at noon today. The Bonnies defeated the Flyers of Dayton University yesterday in opening round action of the tournament, 72-60.

Rashaan Palmer was the high man for the Bonnies leading the way with 18 points. Shandue McNeil chipped into the cause with 15 points and six boards. The Flyers shot a pathetic 30 percent from the field in the first half and they found themselves trailing 33-22 at halftime. The Bonnies shot 52 percent from the field at the half and 44 percent for the game.

"We stepped up and hit our shots today," said St. Bonaventure head coach Jim Baron. "Hitting our shot really allowed us to take some chances defensively. We did a good job on defense and had fun playing defense and getting turnovers."

The Bonnies forced Dayton to 14 turnovers which they turned into 20 points for themselves. Dayton never led in this contest as St. Bonaventure controlled the game from start to finish. The Dayton defeat marked the first A-10 Tournament win for the Bonnies since 1985 and gave them revenge on a 66-57 loss to the Flyers earlier this year.

"I definitely think they came out with intensity and played physically," said Dayton head coach Oliver Purnell. "They let the calls go and we didn't adjust."

St. Bonaventure will take to the court tomorrow against UMass in a matchup that Baron acknowledges will be a tough one.

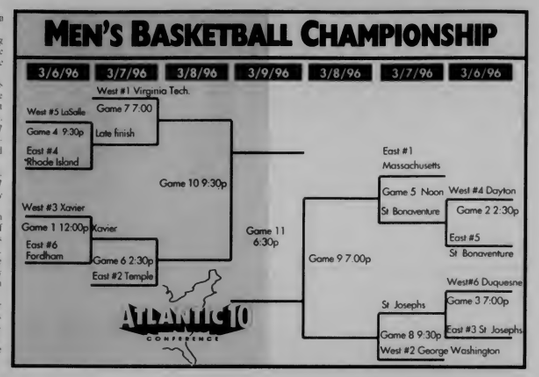
"Everybody knows how good that team is we're playing tomorrow," said Baron. "It's a big game for us and we have to get ready. If we execute our game plan, we'll be alright."

UMass has faced the Bonnies twice this year in games they have won handily. However, their first meeting of the season in Olean, N.Y., the Minutemen played without Marcus Camby who collapsed in pregame warmups. Massachusetts went on to win by 13 (63-52) behind 17 points and seven boards by Dana Dingle and strong performances by Donta Bright (15 points, eight boards) and Tyrone Weeks (13 points, 12 rebounds) off the bench.

Camby would return in his first game back, ironically, against the Bonnies. UMass beat St. Bonaventure 72-47 behind 19 points, seven boards and nine blocks by Camby.

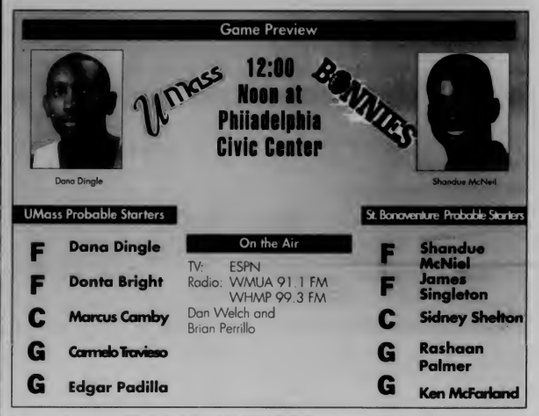
The Minutemen are in second place in the A-10 in holding opponent's point totals down with an average of 61 ppg, and on shooting percentage with opponents shooting 38 percent against the Minutemen. St. Bonaventure is last in the A-10 in field goal percentage with 36 percent, something they must improve on if they want a shot at beating the Atlantic 10 regular season champs.

"We've overcome a lot of adversity this year, losing four starters and having a lot of injuries," said Baron. "This year, one of our goals was to win a conference tournament game. We have to spring board off this game. UMass is a great team, one of the best to ever come through the A-10."



DAN/BEVO / COLLEGIAN

Donta Bright and the Massachusetts men's basketball team take on St. Bonaventure in the Atlantic 10 Tournament in Philadelphia tonight.



UMass hockey doesn't fear tough foe

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

He reached into his bag and took out a stone which he slung at Goliath. It hit him on the forehead and broke his skull and Goliath fell face downward on the ground. And so without a sword, David defeated and killed Goliath with a sling and a stone.

1 Samuel 17

The Massachusetts hockey team will reach into its pouch hoping to find some stones this weekend as the eighth seeded Minutemen will take on the Philistines... er... top seeded Boston University Terriers.

While it won't exactly take an act of God for UMass to upset the Terriers, the Minutemen face a giant task when they face BU for a best of three series at Walter Brown Arena.

Don't tell that to the Minutemen though. Despite the fact that the last time UMass beat the Terriers was Jan. 16 1920, coach Joe Mallen's squad is confident heading into the battle.

"We've tried to build a program that when we go into anybody's rink, we have a chance to win," Mallen said. "I wanted to set it up so we could play hard and not fear anyone."

Senior forward Sal Manganaro pointed to BU's recent struggles against Merrimack as an inspiration.

"If Merrimack can jump up on BU 5-0, there's no way that we can't go down there and get a good start and hopefully upset them."

In the team's three meetings this season, BU swept the Minutemen by a 15-5 goal margin, but the Feb. 9 game was a lot closer with BU only winning 4-1, causing coach Jack Parker to praise his opponents.

"UMass played very well, much better than the last two meetings," Parker said. "It was even more noticeable because we played better in that game too.

Manganaro said that the team doesn't expect its season to end this weekend at all.

"The guys are going into the weekend expecting to play next weekend," he said. "As far as who we're playing? We might as well play the best team first, you're going to have to play them eventually. It would be good to get them out of the way real quick."

So is the time right for an upset? Sophomore goaltender Brian Regan has a simple formula.

"If you ask me, every time is the right time for an upset," he said. "When you're not the No. 1 team, every time is the right time for an upset."

The games will be played Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. and Sunday if necessary.

COURTESY OF BU MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Grier and the always tough Boston University Terriers will look to down UMass in the opening round of HE Tournament action.

First tourney lambs head for slaughter; recruits begin 'National Arrest Week'

The dance cards are starting to fill, and the tickets are being punched.

Ladies and gentlemen, start your brackets...

Casey Kane on College Basketball

It's Championship Week, and some of the smaller conferences already have their lambs lined up for the slaughter.

Already, there are 12 teams which received automatic bids ready to play in March Madness.

Probable No. 16 seeds are Austin Peay out of the Ohio Valley, Canisius from the Metro Atlantic, the Trans America's Central Florida, and, I'm guessing, the Catamounts of Western Carolina out of the Southern Conference.

Purdue has clinched the Big 10's automatic berth and UCLA is in like Flynn out of the Pac 10.

Now with teams like Wisconsin-Green Bay, Miami of Ohio, and Davidson losing in their respective conference finales, what's the selection committee to do?

Will the group call a team like Davidson, which finished the regular season with a 25-4 record, to come dancing? Or will that honor be bestowed upon a lower ranking major team?

And so the debate continues. Which is more tournament worthy — a minor team from a major conference or a major team from a minor conference?

With an 85-66 win over UCLA Feb. 25, Duke probably sealed its fate and secured a berth in the tournament. But if the ACC's fourth team can trample the Pac-10's best team, where does that leave middle of the Pacers

Turn to COLLEGE HOOPS, page 13

NBA teams are streaking through season

The 1996 NBA season has been the season of streaks. Three NBA records have fallen, and two teams are currently perfect at home. As a matter of fact, we could be watching the best team ever. Who said that the overall level of play in the NBA is on the decline?

• Can anyone beat the Chicago Bulls? It doesn't look like it, after they tallied their 56th consecutive home victory on Tuesday night. They are just two short of the NBA record, and appear to be unstoppable.

Jason Rubin on the NBA

• Not to be outdone by the Bulls, the Magic are perfect at home as well. They have manhandled opponents in the O'Rena, on the way to their 30-0 mark. They are one of the few teams that can actually play with the "invincibulls." In fact, they are one of the elite that have handed Chicago a loss this season. Deep down, something makes you think that Shaq is looking forward to eating up Chicago's big-man duo of Luc Longley and Bill Wennington in the playoffs, just like he did last year.

• Speaking of streaks, the Seattle Supersonics have one of their own brewing. The Sonics have a franchise record 14 wins in a row. The trio of Sean Kemp, Gary Payton and Detlef Schrempf seem to have this team pointed in the right direction. However, the question is the same as ever. Can this team produce come playoff time? Everyone must remember the great chokes of the past two years. How can anyone forget Dikembe Mutombo lying on the floor, clutching a basketball, after his pathetically overmatched Denver Nuggets had just knocked off the mighty Sonics?

• Meanwhile, what is going on in New York? The Knicks are playing some of the worst basketball that the Garden has seen since the days of Stu Jackson. One bright spot has been the play of Hubert Davis. After years of being the understudy to John Starks, Hubie is getting some playing time. He has responded, averaging close to 20 points a game. It's too bad that Davis is being wasted on one of the most uninspired teams in the league. Maybe, just maybe, management will buy some winners in the off-season, to give Patrick & Co. one last run.

• I am quickly becoming a huge Lakers fan. Any Laker game that I have seen has been a treat. With the return of Magic Johnson, the Lakers are looking tough. It seems like a bulked-up Magic has been a huge influence on young guns Nick Van Exel and Eddie Jones. The Lakers have won eight of their last 10, and are playing extremely

Turn to NBA, page 13

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 91 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, March 8, 1996

From way downtown... Bang!
Carmelo Travieso scored 21 points, including three three-pointers, to lead the Minutemen over St. Bonnie's yesterday (See Sports, page 10).

Celebrating women's lives
Check out the premiere Women's Issues page of the spring semester as International Working Women's Day is explored (See Women's Issues, page 5).

Whole lotta Love
Philadelphia's original hip-hop blues master, G. Love will play tonight (sans the Special Sauce) at Pearl St. Check out the preview (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Weekend Forecast
Snow, snow and more snow is coming our way. Expect the snow to continue, ending around 2 p.m. and starting again later this afternoon. Tomorrow should be sunny, with a high near 35

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 25 LOW: 10	HIGH: 30 LOW: 10	HIGH: 35 LOW: 5

Bay State snow record on edge of being broken

By Michael Tighe
Associated Press

BOSTON — Bay Staters like records. They cheered when Roger Clemens struck out 20 in one game. They loved it when Drew Bledsoe completed 45 passes in one game.

But they don't appreciate the record about to be set by Mother Nature: most snow in one winter. Massachusetts is at T-minus 100 inches and counting.

"This is insane," said Kayla Kazahn Zulk, a Newton school teacher, as she huddled inside the doorway of a Dedham restaurant. "Who wants more snow?"

Not many people, especially those whose flights were canceled from Logan International Airport. The airport closed for 90 minutes Thursday afternoon and reopened at about 4:25 p.m. with plenty of delays and cancellations.

Forecasters said up to a foot of wet snow would blanket the Boston area by Friday morning with as much as 15 inches on the ground further north and west.

The storm, which capped a week of lousy weather, was expected to break the single-season snowfall record in Boston. This winter, 89.9 inches of snow had fallen at Logan by Thursday morning. The record of 98.3 inches was set in 1993-1994. Records have been kept since 1871.

"What we've had the last couple of days is the appetizers before the main course," Paul Hend, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Taunton, said Thursday. "She's gonna come a snowin' and a blowin' in tonight — a real nor'easter." The natural thought is to head to warmer climes: spring training, the sandy shores. But what about those warm-weather people who headed up here?

Tom Lundberg, 25, of Gainesville, Fla., was visiting family in North Reading and spending time in Boston.

"It seems beautiful from the window inside but when you get outside, it's really more of a hassle than it's worth," he said. "I don't know what I'm going to do locked inside for 18 hours. I'm used to going to the beach."

The Berkshires in western Massachusetts could have another two feet by Friday morning, according to the National Weather Service. Meteorologists at Westover Air Reserve Base in Chicopee said that would help break the 48-year-old record of 90.4 inches. Meteorologist George Bulgarelli of The Berkshire Eagle said the Pittsfield area had 122.8 inches this winter as of Thursday. The record was set 25 years ago with 129.4 inches.

Chris Gulczynski, an Airborne Express worker, was making deliveries in downtown Springfield in driving snow. The storm was adding another 90 minutes to his six-hour route.

"Definitely sick of it," he said. "Other drivers on the road don't know how to drive in it; go too fast, have no courtesy." Julie Hill, a Westfield College student, stood waiting at a Springfield bus stop under her umbrella, her spirit sapped. "I'm sick of it — too much of it. I usually don't mind it, but this is too much," she said.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas canceled a trip to New England School of Law because his plane could not leave Washington, D.C.

The snow threw a wrench into school schedules. Delays and cancellations were reported by everyone from the Bay State School of Appliances to the Boston Computer Society to North Andover High School.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority reported no delays on the subways, commuter rails, commuter boat or buses. Extra trains were added to the Braintree line because of traffic congestion on the Southeast Expressway, MBTA spokesman Sean Cuny said.

Snow emergencies were declared around the state, from Gloucester to Boston to New Bedford.

"We overspent our snow budget but in a public safety issue the budget doesn't make a difference," Boston Mayor Tom Menino said. Suffolk Downs canceled Friday's races for the 20th time this winter.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Snow accumulation is expected to reach 8 to 14 inches today as snow continues to fall, which caused the University to shut down at 3:30 p.m. yesterday.

Student votes could affect town elections

By Anastasia Kudrez
Collegian Staff

If students at the University of Massachusetts decided to vote in local politics, Amherst could become an extension of the campus, according to an Amherst selectman.

Hill Boss, a selectman since 1994, said that students have enormous potential to change the direction of town politics.

"Most students say, what the hell, I can't make changes anyway," he said. "What students don't realize is that they hold a loaded gun to the town. They could have anything they wanted if they registered and voted."

According to Boss, 3,000 Amherst townspeople voted in the last election. If the 24,000 students at UMass voted, they could elect selectmen for five or six precincts. Despite the potential power of a student electorate, Boss said he is not worried about students exerting political clout in town government.

"If a candidate relies on the University for his votes, he's a joke," he said.

Boss attributed the political apathy of the younger generation to their generally apolitical interests.

"The character of this particular generation is interested in different things," he said. "They are so involved in personal affairs that they don't have time to reach out."

Boss said another reason for student's political apathy is television.

"Young people don't have to dig for anything anymore, because everything they want is in front of them," he said. "And they're lucky if it's accurate."

One town affair students did get involved in was the debate over shutting down Antonio's. According to Boss, people in town want to shut it down because of the crowd problem. Students protested, defending the popular student hang-out.

"The thing with Antonio's is, it's not the pizza, it's a cult meeting place now," he said. "Kids go to meet there, but most don't even want to get pizza."

Boss said for the most part, students are oblivious to politics, and lack conviction necessary for effective activism. He proudly told how the story of his daughter's arrest.

"She climbed the fence around a nuclear power facility in a protest," he said. "What would kids get arrested for today?"

Boss described himself as a long time "political junkie." He was an activist in the left-wing Progressive Reform Movement of the 1960s. In retrospect, he believes that despite the movement's good intentions, many reforms made were detrimental to good government.

"I haven't become much more conservative, but much more rational since the 1960s," he said.

In the 1970s he ran for the New York State Senate—twice.

"I didn't win, but I did respectably for a Democrat running in a heavily Republican district," he said.

Boss moved to Amherst in 1984 and has participated in local politics since 1988. After 35 years of teaching high school students about United States government, he enjoys putting theory into practice.

"One of the beauties of the job is that I get to see what's bull and what really works," he said.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Mourning for money
Yesterday, as a show of support for SATF (Student Activity Trust Fund) Relief, the Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) shut down operations for one day.

Dole wins N.Y.; says the focus is on Bill Clinton

By John King
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bob Dole coasted to victory Tuesday in the New York primary, padding his overwhelming lead in the Republican presidential race in the first test of the slimmed down, three-man GOP field. Steve Forbes and Pat Buchanan trailed at a distance but vowed to fight on.

Speaking by satellite to a New York victory rally, Dole cast his big win as an "overwhelming statement of Republican unity" and said it was time for Republicans to put the internal party fight aside "to defeat Bill Clinton and return conservative leadership to the presidency."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Dole said it wasn't for him to tell Forbes and Buchanan to quit the race, but suggested they take a long look at the lopsided New York results.

Voter surveys indicated Dole was winning by wide margins in every region of the state. There were 93 GOP convention delegates at stake, and Dole was certain to get most, if not all.

"If the others want to stay in, they ought to focus on Bill Clinton and not kick me," Dole told AP. Speaking to his supporters, he said he was eager to campaign against Clinton, chastising the incumbent for vetoing GOP plans to balance the budget, cut taxes and reform welfare.

Forbes said he would challenge Dole in the Super Tuesday primaries next week and ahead to California at the end of the month. He contrasted his "vibrant vision of the future" with Dole's "politics as usual."

12-foot dinosaur created from plywood, steel, foam, for Pterodactyls production

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

A 12-foot dinosaur made from scratch out of steel, plywood and foam made its grand debut in Pterodactyls at the Rand Theater.

"We named him Elvis since the pelvis is what holds all the bones together by connecting the upper and lower body all in one place," said Technical Director Chris Higgins.

"We tried to make him as lifelike as possible to the historically 38 to 20-foot tall dinosaur," he added.

"It wasn't like other scenery we do," said Higgins. "It isn't flat and it isn't square like the other scenery."

A model of a dinosaur was used as the basis for Higgins studying the bone arrangement and how to carve out the ribs. A computer printout of a dinosaur was used to "get a feel for the line of the body," Higgins said. "To get a feel for the texture of the bones and how the bones are oriented within the face, we used a nuga-zine photograph of Tyrannosaurus Rex.

"The piece has a nice flowing line through it," said Higgins in reference to the legs and backbone.

Higgins came across a challenge when he and his crew had to clamp the two long leg bones since they could not devise a way to drill a hole through the leg and into the pelvis. The leg and backbone are held together by steel piping, he said.

The ribs and tails tend to be very small so "they were done like a string of beads," Higgins said. Since most of the ribs were similar to each other, he and his crew cut out about 80 ribs with appropriate holes and "strung

Turn to DINOSAUR, page 3

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Chris Higgins, Technical Director of the Fine Art Center, displays bones used in the play, Pteradactyl.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, March 8

Panel discussion — The Women of Color Program is proud to host an International Women's Day Breakfast, with a panel discussion entitled "Women's Health Issues: Locally, Nationally and Internationally" from 9–11:30 a.m. at the Bangs Community Center, Boltwood Walk, Amherst. The keynote speaker will be Laura Ramos, a specialist in the field of sexually transmitted disease and HIV/AIDS prevention. Breakfast will be included.

Discussion — Community action forum, join several of our most engaging students, faculty and staff for an important discussion. The topic: "Men are the predominant perpetrators of sexual violence on campus. What campus resources are directed towards men in addressing this important issue and are they adequate?" The discussion will take place in Campus Center, Room 805/809 from 3–5 p.m.

Religious — The Campus Crusade for Christ will have its weekly meeting, "Breakout," at 7 p.m. The room number will be posted on the sign at the Campus Center Concourse. This week's topic is the importance of prayer. For more information, call Pete at 549–4843.

Film — The American Friends Service Committee, in conjunction with the University of Massachusetts Gallery's exhibit of Michael Jacobsen–Hardy's photographs of England factory workers, will be showing the film At The River I Stand at 7 p.m. in the University Gallery. The film documents the 1968 Memphis Sanitation workers' strike and Dr. Martin Luther King's involvement, and will be followed by a brief discussion. Those interested in showing the film at churches, community groups or classes can call AFSC at 584–8975.

Speaker — Humorist Dr. Regina Barreca will be speaking at 7 p.m. in Wright Hall at Smith College. All proceeds benefit the YWCA Tickets at the door cost $5 for students and children, $9 for YWCA members and $10 for the general public. For more information call 732–3121.

Saturday, March 9

Celebration — The Amherst Family Center invites families from Amherst and surrounding communities to join its members at Winterfest. Winterfest is a family celebration of international entertainment and food tasting. Admission is free. The Amherst Family Center is located at Parish Hall in the North Congregational Church in North Amherst. For more information, call 549–4969.

Benefit — The Ninth Annual Benefit Boogie, featuring live music by Quetzal, will take place from 8–11:30 p.m. at the Hotel Northampton. Proceeds from the event support the Northampton Survival Center. Advance tickets for the event are $8, and are available at Beyond Words Bookshop, Chameleons and the Survival Center. Tickets at the door are $10, and patron tickets are available for $15. There will also be raffle tickets available at local businesses from now until intermission time of the event.

Sunday, March 10

Religious — The Hindu Students Organization will celebrate Holi in the Earthfoods Room in the Student Union. The program will begin at 5:30 p.m. and will include Puja, Aarti and Prasad followed by garba dancing. The event is free to the public and all are welcome to attend. For more information, please contact Rishi or Rahul at 549–6778.

Notices

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work–Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbalah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student–run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7–8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586–5812 or 549–2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on–site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545–2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585–0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253–0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nummo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546–2365 or 546–5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Cosuition Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696–7752.

WILDWATER OUTFITTERS

WINTER CLEARANCE SALE!

ALL WINTER PARKAS 50% OFF!
ALL CROSS COUNTRY SKIS 40% OFF!
ALL SKI BOOTS 40% OFF!
ALL SNOESHOES 40% OFF!
ALL SWEATERS 50% OFF!

patagonia®

Route 9
Hadley, MA
(413) 253-5500

20 Elliot St
Brattleboro, VT
(802) 254-4133

Campus Police Log

Accident
March 5
There was a one vehicle accident on Clark Hill Road was due to weather conditions. No one was reported to be injured
An individual reported her vehicle was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. The offending operator was located and issued a citation.
There was a minor accident on Nutting Avenue, which was referred to Amherst Police.

Larceny
March 5
A wallet was reported stolen from Bosden Building.
Cameras were reported stolen from William D. Mullins Center during a recent basketball game.
A bicycle was stolen from Mackimmie Residence Hall.
An individual reported his book bag stolen from Rand Theatre

Car alarm
March 5
A car alarm sounded on Moore Road.

Annoying behavior
March 5
There was a report of an individual in the Campus Center harassing staff.
An individual on North Pleasant Street reported being threatened by a motorist. The matter was referred to Amherst Police.
An individual refused to leave the Curry Hicks Cage Building when requested by staff.

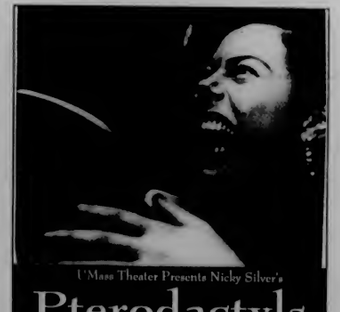
March 6
A resident of Coolidge Resident Hall reported being threatened by another resident.

Assist citizen
March 5
An individual in William D. Mullins Center was extricated from an elevator.

Fire alarm
March 5
A pot, which was left on a stove in Cashin Residence Hall, caused smoke.

Medical emergency
March 6
An individual with a medical reaction was taken from Pierpont Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in Moore Residence Hall passed out, striking her head. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in Mackimmie Residence Hall fell and struck her head. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in Chenoweth Laboratory was taken to University Health Services for a hand laceration.

Assist agency
March 5
A standby vehicle slid off Route 116, Hadley Police was notified.
March 6
Traffic control was called for snow removal on Commonwealth Avenue.



UMass Theater Presents Nicky Silver's

Pterodactyls

The Comedy That Puts the Fun In Dysfunctional
Rand Theater, UMass, February 29-March 2 & March 5-9, 8 p.m. & March 2, 2 p.m. Tickets: $3.50, $6, Call 545-2511 Contains Mature Content

amc THEATRES

$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT

MT. FARMS 4 — Call Theatre For Showtimes

HAMPSHIRE 8 — Call Theatre For Showtimes

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS

MARCH MADNESS BLOWOUT

ZOOM FLIGHT $99.99
SCHOOL FORCE $69.99
MAX TRIAX $74.99
TRAINER PRESS $69.99
AIR $49.98
Mens/Ladies WINDRUNNER $54.99
USA TEES $9.99
Entire Stock Of Cotton Soccer Shorts 30% OFF
SPALDING POWERPLAY Adult Tennis Racquet $24.99 SKILLBUILDER Jr. Racquet $14.99
SPIRITBLADE ABT Mens & Ladies $139.99
SOCCER & BASEBALL SHOES ENTIRE STOCK 20% OFF
1000'S OF SHOES NOW ON SALE FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY!
BRINE SOCCER PACKAGE SPECIAL TITAN BALL & SHINGUARDS $19.99
GOLF SPECIALS ALL BAGS, CARTS & SHOES 20% OFF
SPALDING TOP-FLITE $15.99 Wilson Pro Staff $14.99

SAVE 25% OFF OUR ENTIRE STOCK
OF PRICES SLASHED - PREVIOUSLY REDUCED SHOES

Hampshire Mall, Hadley
Berkshire Mall, Lanesboro

Steve Maddens.
(Get'em while they last.)

ZANA
Downtown Amherst

JA Tower features new voter registration

By Andrew Trodden
Collegian Correspondent

At the entrance of John Adams Residence Hall, a bulletin board bears the slogan, "Don't throw your country away." The slogan, in connection with a picture of a man kicking the United States off the globe, is meant to encourage students to register to vote.

A week–long voter registration drive in the residence hall is concluding today, from 5–7 p.m.

Registering is something that Bob Letteney, a senior political science major, and the rest of the John Adams residence staff take seriously. This week Letteney and fellow staff members set up a table in the lobby of the Southwest residence hall at which students from any state may register to vote. The process consists of filling out a simple form which takes about five minutes to complete. The drive is open to the entire campus.

Letteney, who conceived the idea, says he did so because he was concerned by the low numbers of registered voters, aged 18–25. He said he feels this age group could present a very powerful vote enough of them voted.

Citing a certain amount of apathy towards politics and politicians as a reason for the low numbers of young voters, Letteney realizes these attitudes must be changed, and is more than willing to do something to change them. "If we don't care about [politics], it won't care about us," Letteney said, mentioning the recent cuts in financial aid as an example of how our lack of caring will have adverse affects on our generation.

About 50 students registered on the first day of the drive, "We expect to have registered about 100 to 150 by the end of the week, but we'd love to have more," Letteney said.

As for a follow–up to this week's registration drive, Letteney is working on plans to set up a table to educate students about politics and politicians. He said he hopes this will lead to a greater student interest in the political scene, with the ultimate result being a rise in voter turnout in the 18 to 24–year–old age group.

Letteney said the drive would not be possible without the complete cooperation of the entire staff in John Adams Residence Hall, especially Residence Director Jennifer Wowk, and Ryan McDonald and Brian Strohl, who together made the bulletin board.

Questions concerning the drive should be directed to the John Adams cluster office.

Mass Marketing students promote GM

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

For a team of 26 marketing students at the University of Massachusetts, designing and executing a promotional event for Don Lorenz, Inc. of Greenfield is part of the course.

The class presentation, due April 26, will be the Lorenz Olympic Gold Medal Challenge.

Co–coordinator Angela Tallada said the group chose the Olympic theme because "it had an athletic feel to it, and that's basically the vehicle [General Motors] has. They're rugged, they're sporty."

MBA student Ravya Taghvi said, "We're going to incorporate the whole active lifestyle and outdoors with the vehicles to make that connection."

The event is targeting the Jimmy, a sports utility vehicle, and the Sonoma, a pick–up truck, according to Kenny Pierce, an MBA student.

"The truck has to be there in every aspect of this program," Taghavi said.

Mass Marketing is one of many classes across the country in the General Motors Marketing Internship (GMMI) program. The group at UMass will be competing against other universities nation–wide for over $40,000 in scholarships and prizes.

Judged elements will include market research, promotional development, presentation to Lorenz and the advertising agency from General Motors, the promotion itself, budget management and the best philanthropic tie–in.

Since the truck must be a presence, Mass Marketing chose a food drive for their philanthropy. Non–perishable food items from the University community and three local high schools will be collected in a Sonoma.

The idea, said Tallada, is to "fill a Sonoma with food for the less fortunate."

Also, "it shows you how much volume a truck has, its capacity," Taghavi said.

Students in the 6–credit course have found it necessary to meet more than 6 hours per week, according to Pierce. This is the second year the course has been offered at UMass. Last year's group earned prize money for the marketing department.

"It's a chance for us to reach a target market they want to reach for, and for us to get experience," Tallada said.

Mass Marketing has been broken down into different interest groups, including a research group, a creative team, a media group, a public relations department and an event team.

"We run it like an organization, like a company," said Pierce, who was reluctant to speak for the agency.

The students will be presenting other members of the marketing department, SGRO Promo representatives and General Motors executives with reports of the planning and execution of the campus event.

The Olympic Gold Medal Challenge will take place near the campus pond. The event, which will revolve around the 1996 Summer Olympics to be held in Atlanta, will feature games, prizes, giveaways and hands–on interaction with GMC vehicles.

"The Olympics are associated with excellence, winning, success, a history of being on top," said Taghavi. "Besides, they're fun."

ELECTION '96

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not responded.

Should the trade embargo on Cuba be lifted and, if not, under what conditions should that occur?

"The trade embargo is the best leverage the United States has to promote democratic change in Cuba. It denies the Castro regime the benefits that U.S. trade, investment and tourism would provide. The embargo must continue until the Cuban government takes real steps toward recognizing fundamental freedoms and respecting human rights for its citizens."

Bill Clinton

"A trade embargo should be maintained until Fidel Castro is out of power. He is the problem."

Pat Buchanan

"No."

Bob Dole

In Honor of International Women's Day
Campus Activities at the University of Massachusetts, the UMass Women's Studies Program, and the Stonewall Center present:

A CAPPELLA SINGING SENSATIONS
YAGOTTAWANNA

BLUEWALL CAFE
March 8, 1996
8pm, FREE

A movie portrait of our time: "How To Make An American Quilt" will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 & 10pm.

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

A10
Championship Game
on UVC-TV 19
Channel 19 and 15 on HSCN
Saturday, March 9
Pre-game Show: 6:00PM
Game starts: 6:30PM
Post-game Show: 8:30PM
Courtesy of ESPN

Taiwan to vote, China fires missiles

By Annie Huang
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — China fired two surface-to-surface ballistic missiles early Friday that landed off Taiwan's northern and southern international ports, the Defense Ministry said. The tests are an apparent effort to intimidate the island province before its first direct presidential elections on March 23. China announced the tests on Tuesday and said they would continue until March 15.

The M9 missiles, the beginning of weeklong tests, were shot into mid-sea target areas previously announced by China, the ministry said without revealing the launching location.

One landed west of the southern Kaohsiung port, while the other exploded near the northern port of Keelung, a ministry statement said.

Taiwan's official Broadcasting Corporation of China said China fired a third missile that landed in seas off Kaohsiung, but the Defense Ministry declined to confirm the report.

Beijing is concerned that Taiwan, which it considers a renegade province, is leaning away from eventual reunification with the mainland and towards independence.

The province has lived under a separate government since 1949, when the Nationalists were defeated in a civil war, fled to the Taiwan and built it into an island fortress. Taiwan's 400,000-strong military have been on high alert since China announced the tests.

■ dinosaur

continued from page 1

them onto a steel pipe."

The actual dinosaur bones were constructed from two or more layers of laminated plywood screwed and glued together with a sealer called Super 88, he said. "This seal is actually used to glue milk cartons together," he added.

The Super 88 provided several advantages, such as sealing the grain of the plywood and providing a good surface for paint to adhere, Higgins said.

Plywood was used because the grain of the wood changes frequently and gives the bones a more natural look. According to Higgins, constructing the bones from several layers of plywood "allows you to watch as you are carving so that you don't cut off too much from one side than another."

"We tried to get away from cutting out very flat bones," said Higgins. The two tools used primarily for cutting out the bones were an angle saw and lancelot carver. A lancelot carver is a tight circular blade that works like a chain saw blade, he said. The lancelot carver was used for carefully grinding and contouring the dinosaur bones, he said.

"It was not particularly pleasant when you were in the production process," Higgins said. It took approximately two solid weeks of fulltime work by two people in a continuous cloud of sawdust, he said.

Throughout the stages of production, the crew was worried about the dinosaur body tipping over on stage, according to Higgins. "We screwed the feet onto a ply wood base and had an above support since the upper part of the dinosaur leans forward," he said.

This presentation was offered by the Educational Services free lecture and workshop series offered by the University of Massachusetts Theater.

"We give audiences a feel about what goes on behind the scenes and also a little about our show," said Educational Services Coordinator for the Department of Theater Lisa Donovan.

Joan Osborne
IT CONCERT
APRIL 15
8 pm
ON SALE
SAT. MAR. 9
10:00 AM
The Screamin' Cheetah Wheelies
JOHN M. GREENE HALL
SMITH COLLEGE • NORTHAMPTON, MA
GENERAL ADMISSION • $16.50 ADV.
Tickets Available at the Northampton Box Office and For The Record in Amherst. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1-(800)-THE-TICK.
Presented by MassConcerts and The Smith College Rec. Council

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Iris R. Remillard, IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Oliveri Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Tina Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lisie A. Henry Operations Manager
Ann Paradiso News Editor Maureen Marcewski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reik Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist Casey Katie Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1938. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. To advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Open the doors to your dreams

I've sat beside many doors in my life and peered in from a distance. Some of these doors have beheld great rewards; others I have discovered immense loss; however, in each door I have received a gift. There were instances when these doorways overwhelmed me, and times when I overwhelmed them.

What lies inside every door you will ever walk through in your life is someone's dreams. They come in all shapes and sizes, they vary from careers to fame to wealth to families. Some strive to be doctors, journalists or actors. Others long to be mothers, fathers or florist's. Each dream is equally important and equally significant. As much as the world needs lawyers, it needs truck drivers, and as much as people need money to survive in this world, they need dreams even more. People often have elaborate dreams, envisioning themselves as models or athletes; they focus more on the wealth and fame that these dreams will bring them. Others dream of changing the world, making it a safer and more tolerant environment to live in.

I made a mistake, and I let myself down — no one else. I held myself back from my dreams, but I'm lucky because I discovered this early, when I still possessed the power to make these dreams happen. Some of you may come to this realization later on in life, some of you may never come to this realization.

Liana Melinnis

Basically, people dream to have something to look forward to in their lives, besides managing school and maintaining a career; they strive for something more. Unfortunately, many of these dreams do not come true, and the "dreamers" are left with nothing but regrets. Don't be one of those people. Don't live each day thinking "what if?" Don't close the door to your dream without ever knowing if it could become a reality.

To some people my dream is going to sound ironic, and even more so like a royal screw-up — it isn't, and if you think it is then this is not for you, a non-dreamer. I consider myself to be a writer. I've been called creative and talented since the age of eight, and it was then that I knew what my destiny was going to be. I was going to be a writer, a journalist, the next Barbara Walters!

This is my long term dream. Obviously, it varies from time to time, but ultimately, I know what it is I want to do, and lucky for me, it also gives me great pleasure. But, for right now all I really wanted to do was to write for the Collegian, but it seemed like there was always something standing in my way.

When I first came to UMass in September I had high hopes and great expectations for myself. I can admit now, without feeling embarrassed, that I was overwhelmed and scared to be here. The goals I had set for myself diminished, my dreams had faded, and so did my self-esteem.

I planned on joining the Collegian the very first day I was here, and I was unstoppable — nothing and no one could ever change that. I was wrong. I was naive, fresh out of high school, thinking I could take on the world, or at least the Collegian. I found other writers who were just as good as I thought myself to be; students just as smart as I was, and many who were better. I was easily intimidated, exceptionally influenced; as quickly as I had marched through the doorway of my dream like a brave soldier, had I abandoned it with the disgrace of a coward.

I was heartbroken, my dreams shattered; I lost all hope. I lost who I was. For months now I have longed to go back. I have been depriving my mind, my heart, and more so, my dreams.

Often I would sit in the basement of the Campus Center reading or doing homework. I usually sat next to the doorway of the Collegian office; this was as close as I could get to my dream. I had resorted to gazing in from a distance. I watched endless numbers of people walk in and out of the office. I felt angry that others were living my dream. They had won, while I had come out the loser. I guess that was when I hit the bottom, it was then that I realized who was to blame for my shattered dreams — I was. I didn't let myself win. I had failed myself, no one else had done it for me. My own fears and uncertainties had destroyed my dreams, not talented writers or honors students. I held myself back, and when I finally came to this realization, I chased after my dream and took the first steps to achieving it.

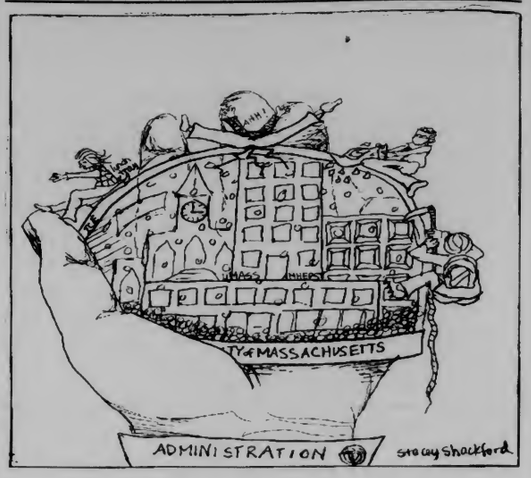
None of this may matter to you, but it should. You see, you just as well could be in the exact same situation I was in just a few weeks ago. You may have opened the door to your dream slightly, but retreated in fear when you saw what stood inside it, just as I did. The cause of these fears could simply be inside you, as the result of your own insecurities and self doubts. It is the scariest thing in the world to do what we want.

I made a mistake, and I let myself down — no one else. I held myself back from my dreams, but I'm lucky because I discovered this early, when I still possessed the power to make these dreams happen. Some of you may come to this realization later on in life, some of you may never come to this realization.

Don't close the door to your dream before you even walk through it, before you allow yourself to see what lies inside. Be aware that you are not perfect, that no one is, and there will always be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Be hard on yourself, but know how much is too much. Making my dream come true has decreased my fears, but not erased them completely. Fear makes you strong, it keeps you from being vain, but it should never rule your life, as it ruled mine. The world is full of dreamers, as it rightfully should be, but only the strongest and bravest will make their dreams realities.

Liana Melinnis is a UMass student.

Opinion/Editorial



Depend on me

Beem was the coolest guy we knew. He was the best basketball player. He set the trends of what music we would listen to. He dated the hottest girls. He could drink us all to tears, but still make us laugh.

And he was a bed wetter.

The most recent episode was not too long ago. Beem had spent an evening at a friend's house, and when he was too drunk to drive home at the end of the night, he opted to sleep on the couch. He awoke the next morning to that feeling that starts as pure pleasure but quickly turns to pure panic, when your body is wet enough to wake up and realize what is happening.

Given the circumstances, he did the only thing he could do to save himself from utter humiliation. He flipped the couch cushions and made a run for it. To this day the people's who's house he stayed over and wet at have said nothing to him.

Dave Copeland

You might be asking yourself right now, "What's a 25 year old man doing dropping his bladder every time he has a few drinks and goes to sleep?" The answer to that question not too long ago was "trend setting."

A few summers back we got jobs as camp counselors. We spent a sober summer complaining about the kids who wet the bed (the most notorious bed wetter at camp that summer was a kid named Fiefield whose father was, ironically, a plumber). At the end of the summer, to compensate for our stress, a few of us were asked to stay for an extra week to drink ourselves senseless at night while performing menial tasks by day.

Beem wasn't the first to wet the bed first that week, but when he did it became a very trendy thing to do. Aside from the sticky comfort of your own urine soaked sheets, the laundry room was the most happening place that week at camp.

My point today is this: very odd things can become very popular if the right people start doing this. If you don't believe me, ask yourself why large companies pay huge sums of money to get certain actors and actresses to mention their products in movies and television shows.

Let's say the Wipe Away Rubber Sheet Company wanted to boost sales. They might try to work the following scene into a blockbuster movie:

Tom Cruise — I thought I was the only person with this problem until I met you.

Sharon Stone — Why must we be persecuted for who we are? And what will we ever do to cut our laundry bills?

Cruise — I don't know about the persecution part, but I do know we can solve our laundry woes by buying a set of Wipe Away's Pee Free Rubber Sheets.

Soon after the release of this movie, the standard red AIDS ribbon worn by Hollywood's movers and shakers (as well as my colleague Andrew Bryce) would be replaced by a yellow ribbon to show actors' support for bed wetters. It would be made out of the same material used to make Wipe Away's Industrial Strength Brand Pee Free Sheets.

The one trend that Beem tried to start that never really caught on was the Depends Brand Adult Under Garment Party. The notion was to have a party where each guest would be given their standard keg cup as well as a set of Depends, which as you know, are diapers for adults. I thought it would be a great theme for a Superbowl party, as not only would you not have to wait in line for the bathroom, but you wouldn't have to miss the big plays because of Nature's Most Persistent Calling.

When I told my friends at UMass about the Depends Brand Under Garment Party and what a great idea I thought it was they all got very quiet and stared at me with looks of deep concern. Finally, Lacey looked me in the eye and said, "Cope, I want you to be honest with us. Have you been taking your medication?"

"No," I admitted. "And that might explain why I haven't been able to wet the bed lately."

Dave Copeland is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

"Hey Bob, can I do notes this week?"
"Uh, well, are you a senior?"
"Yes. I just look like a freshman."

* * *

Yesterday I got carded for cigarettes at the Amherst Newsroom. The day before that Dairy Mart hit me for the ole' license for a dollar scratch ticket. The doorman at Pearl Street asked me for two picture ID's and then spent 15 minutes trying to peel off the hologram. I went to Filene's with my housemates and a lady wearing her entire cosmetic counter asked if the high school got out early today. I guess when I'm 50 I'll appreciate it — just like Dick Clark does.

* * *

Tara MK Connelly

With all the cutbacks at UMass, you have to wonder why reshaping the Campus pond has become such a high priority. Do the ducks pay $10,000 to use the pond? I bet they'd get more financial aid than I if they did. Is a bridge spanning the entire pond going to make that much of a difference when you're running to class?

* * *

Senseless violence is so damn frustrating. You just want to smack a few heads together and shout "wake up." It's so disheartening to think that people would rather bomb the hell out of innocent people to make a point that could have been easily made across a conference table.

* * *

UPC is hosting a Battle of the Bands contest for five national bands. The winner will be signed to a major label and a whole bunch of raffles and give away contests will also be included. Question: why is UPC hosting a free concert for five bands no one has ever heard about? Why don't they just wait for the Spring Concert?

* * *

Speaking of the local music scene, The Loud Music Festival usually held in March is one of the biggest things the Valley ever had. In fact it was the one thing that Northampton had over Boston. Guess what? It's been moved to Boston. So much for that one good thing.

* * *

I have a cold. I've had this cold for about a week. I don't get sick a lot. In fact I never get sick. I'm single handedly supporting Tropicana with my intake of o.j. and single handedly destroying our forests with the amount of tissues I'm using. There's just no happy medium.

I once saw a "Far Side" comic that had a mother chicken serving her son a bowl of soup and the caption read: "Relax, it's suppose to be good for you and besides it's no one we know." I thought it was funny.

* * *

Allen Ginsberg spoke at the FAC the other night to a sold out crowd. It's nice to see that people can enjoy listening to a person that isn't speaking simply to promote his own political views or warped sense of priority.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MR. WOLFE, IT'S BEEN SAID THAT BUCHANAN COULDN'T HAVE BEATEN GRAMM IN LOUISIANA WITHOUT THE HELP OF DAVID DUKE...
NONSENSE!
Pre
PAT WENT TO ELABORATE LENGTHS NOT TO GET HIS PHOTOGRAPHED WITH DUKE. HE ANGUISHED THAT DAVID PUSHES A LOT OF BUTTONS WITH THE NEW YORK MEDIA CABAL.
BUT PAT BUCHANAN LIVES IN THE REAL WORLD! AND THE FACT IS, YOU CANNOT WIN A GOP PRIMARY IN LOUISIANA WITHOUT THE SUPPORT OF THE NAZIS!
I... I DIDN'T KNOW THAT.
NEITHER DID GRAMM. HE MIGHT AS WELL HAVE CAMPAIGNED IN BELGIUM.
Buc
For

Letters to the Editor

Ibish's facts are inaccurate

To the Editor:

Hussein Ibish has recently been quoted in a number of news reports as claiming his vituperative and false attacks on Israel cannot be factually refuted. That's nonsense — they are readily debunked.

Ibish's column devoted to the theme that Zionism is inherently prone to violence within its own ranks enumerated one spurious example after another. A particularly shameless instance of his campaign of deception concerns a Jewish refugee ship.

He alleges that Palestinian Jews deliberately sank the Patria, a ship filled with refugees from Nazi Europe. He writes, "The Jewish Agency and its armed wing determined that if these refugees couldn't live in Palestine, then they shouldn't live at all and, as the Patria was leaving Haifa harbor on November 25, 1940, they blew the ship sky high. Two hundred and forty innocent Jewish refugees were murdered by the Zionists in this stunning but little-known action. For the insane political reasoning behind the action, as well as details of the killings, readers are encouraged to consult the account of the Haganah officer who planned the mine, Magna Mardor, in his memoirs, Strictly Illegal (London: Robert Hale, 1964)."

This is a fabrication of a particularly cold-blooded variety—the book (entitled Haganah in its American edition) records precisely the converse of Ibish's claims, detailing desperate and heroic efforts to prevent thousands of Jews confined in ships from being turned away from safe haven. Coordinating as best they could with refugees on the Patria, which was heavily guarded by hostile British troops, members of the Haganah attempted to disable the ship sufficiently to force delays in deportations of its passengers. Tragically, they failed to anticipate the decrepitude of the ship, and what was expected to cause relatively minor damage to the craft instead sank it. Although most passengers were rescued, nearly 250 were lost. Hans Wendel, the Jewish refugee on the Patria who placed the explosive charge, died trying to free fellow passengers locked up by the British in compartments below deck.

One can only marvel at the depth of animus and contempt for truth that would convert a valiant rescue attempt in a time of frightful danger into a tale of calculated murder. Although currently a "columnist" at the Collegian, Ibish's record of systematic deceit should disqualify him from any post on a responsible publication.

Andrea Levin
President
Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting In America

Conner's column is insulting

To the Editor:

Do you mind if I tell a black joke? Wait a minute—why bother? I just read an editorial from one.

This letter is in response to C. Taylor Conner's "Not quite Theo" editorial (March 6). Conner refers to whites as "poor saps" because UMass culture is "homogenized," and in the next paragraph writes that [he] doesn't mean that makes them "bad people".

Hey, Taylor, if you call someone a "poor sap" don't bother to try to sugarcoat your frustration/hatred/anger.

What if someone called you the N-word but then said, "But that doesn't mean I think you're a bad person."

If New England states had allowed slave ownership, the descendants of those slaves would make up a large percentage of the current UMass population. Please don't blow me [expletive] because of the fact that my ancestors did not own slaves.

The lack of diversity at UMass is not caused by white hatred. Get over it.

Ed Crory
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Women's Issues

Friday, March 8, 1996

History of Women's Day celebrated

By Hannah Thorne
Collegian Staff

March 8, International Women's Day is a day to honor women — especially working women.

The day has its roots in the March 8, 1857 demonstration of garment and textile workers in New York City. On this day women protested the harsh conditions in these industries. Women fought for better hours, higher pay and safer working conditions.

The origin of International Women's Day dates back to 1857 but the day was not recognized as a national holiday until 1910.

International Women's Day is one of the most widely observed holidays of recent origin. Not only is the day widely observed in the United States, but it has been adapted by many other countries, including Russia and China.

Today, the University of Massachusetts will be holding a few events in commemoration of International Women's Day. The Women of Color program, of The Everywoman's Center, is hosting a breakfast at the Bangs Community Center from 9-11:30 a.m. The keynote speaker is Laura Ramos, a specialist in the field of sexually transmitted diseases (STD) and HIV/AIDS prevention.

Yagottawanna, an a capella singing group, will be performing at The Bluewall Cafe at 8 p.m. This performance is sponsored by Campus Activities, the women's studies program and the Stonewall program. This event is free and open to the public.

Sue Lee, from the women's studies department, noted that this is the first time the department has had any formal recognition of Women's Day, due to a lack of funding from the University in past years. The Women's Day breakfast was organized as a result of University support this year. There are additional events going on throughout the month of March in the Five College Area to commemorate Women's History month.

KATINA PAPSON / COLLEGIAN

Taking a stand...

Smith College senior Kate Fields protests at the National Young Woman's Day of Action Rally in October.

NARAL approves John Olver with 100% pro-choice rating

By Hannah Thorne
Collegian Staff

The National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League has given U.S. Rep. John Olver (D-Mass.) a 100 percent approval rating for his efforts in defending women's reproductive rights. NARAL's ratings are based on votes cast during the first session of the 104th Congress.

"A women's reproductive rights are not something that should be dependant on which political party is in the majority," Olver said. "It's vastly important that we continue to protect women's health rights, and those that try to deny any woman those rights are swiftly rebuffed in their actions."

A women's reproductive rights are not something that should be dependant on which political party is in the majority.
–Rep. John Olver

According to the Congressional Record on Choice, the house has a clear majority of 218 anti-choice votes. This majority, along with the incoming tide of conservative republicans, threatens a woman's right to choose for the first time since Roe v. Wade, the landmark case that legalized abortion in the U.S.

During the first session of the 104th Congress, members of Congress enacted an unprecedented number of laws that threaten women's reproductive health as recorded by the Congressional Record on Choice. Anti-choice legislative gains in both houses include:

— denying funds to protect women's health clinics;
— ending U.S. support for international family planning programs;
— denying access to abortion for women in federal prisons;
— ending U.S. support for international family planning programs;
— prohibiting Medicaid coverage for abortion for low-income women pregnant from rape or incest.

Most significantly, Congress for the first time directly challenged Roe v. Wade by passing legislation that criminalizes certain late term abortion procedures and jails doctors that perform them.

"There is little doubt that extremists in the house are denying women some of their basic health rights," Olver said. "The fight is far from over. In defense of choice, we must ensure that those rights guaranteed under Roe v. Wade are not discarded wholesale or slowly chipped away. This is far too important a right for us to allow it to be destroyed slowly but steadily."

On the same note, The National Women's Political Caucus has endorsed State Senator Jane Swift in her bid for the 1st Congressional District in Massachusetts.

Swift was endorsed by the caucus during its National Steering Committee meeting on February 23-25, in Orlando, Fla.

Caucus endorsements entitle candidates to assistance from the national office and contributions from its national Political Action Committee (PAC).

The political planning committee considers the candidates record on positions such as preserving reproductive freedom, support for accessible and affordable child and dependent care and support for the Equal Rights Amendment.

NWPC is a 25 year old, National, bi-partisan, grassroots membership organization dedicated to identifying, recruiting, training and supporting women candidates for elected and appointed office at all levels of government regardless of party affiliation.

It's the same old story

Recently, a letter to the editor resurfaced from a 1991 Collegian, entitled "Pike frat boys ought to be held responsible." It was an open letter from Jeanne E. Hagarty, a former student of the University of Massachusetts. The letter addressed the issue of sexual harassment on campus.

Hagarty, described walking home from a night of studying at the Newman center on the night of Thursday, April 25 1991. As she passed the Pi Kappa Alpha (Pike) house on her way home, Jeanne heard derogatory remarks such as "pussy," directed towards her. In her letter she referred to the members of pike as "boys" not because of their age but because of their behavior.

Jamie Sinsheimer

On Monday March 4, 1996 an editorial appeared in the Collegian about the instances of rape and sexual harassment around campus. I wrote this editorial, titled "She Is Me." I wrote that editorial before I became aware of the letter written by Hagarty. Now that I am aware of that letter, I am annoyed. I am annoyed because this has been happening for so long and to me it doesn't seem like the University is doing anything to prevent it.

If this issue of sexual harassment has persisted since 1991 (and I'm sure since way before then) then why is it still happening now — five years later at the same place as the recent reports have indicated? Why is the name Pike house constantly coming up when we speak of sexual harassment or rape on campus? Why is the University not doing anything to inform the public and the student body of all the things that are happening? Why is it necessary for me to write two editorials about this issue for someone to realize what's happening?

Pi Kappa Alpha house has responded recently to the alleged reports much in the same manner that they did to the accusation five years ago, as if there really is no problem. Their 1991 open letter to the Collegian spoke of all the positive things Pike does on campus and how they are seldom recognized. The letter stated: "We are proud of the rich traditions and numerous accomplishments achieved by the brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha ...the brotherhood has worked diligently in the area of philanthropy..." They also reiterate the idea that it is an individual who rapes, not a fraternity. The house sticks by this point (they seem to restate it all the time), stating that it is unfair to "stereotype" and "condemn" the entire Greek system for the mistakes made by a few individuals.

At the rally which 700 people attended on March 1, many of the speakers (most were victims themselves) held the same point in common. It was as follows: fraternities as a whole create the environment that condones these sexual assaults to occur. There must be something about their whole "brotherhood" philosophy which contributes to the degradation of women. The basic concept of fraternities is the "all for one, one for all mentality" which promotes group mentality. In turn, they claim kinship with their "brothers," therefore they should realize that one person's actions are reflective of the whole fraternity (as well as the whole Greek system) because of this close-knit brotherhood. It simply cannot be one person's actions because it happens all the time — rape and sexual harassment is a constant occurrence in fraternity houses, whether they wish to take the blame or not.

I have a brother who was in a fraternity for his first two years of college; his fraternity no longer exists because it was closed last spring. Due to the closing he was then free to talk to me about what went on in his house because he was released from his bond of "brotherhood." This bond of brotherhood makes me wonder why the president of Pike, Taylor Mascovitz, would be willing to blame one of his brothers for the reported incident that happened in his house.

If these fraternity houses spent more time trying to stop this behavior and less time repeating that its only an individual who does these things, then maybe they would not have to constantly remind the public how good they really are. A statement made by Taylor Mascovitz stated the following, "The members of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity have actively addressed the issue of sexual assault and harassment on a National and local level. In our new member program we inculcate the ideals of mutual respect for all individuals, of self-respect and of service to others." This seems to be the same empty rhetoric they spouted to Hagarty in 1991. Why don't you stop spouting these vague generalities and give some concrete answers? A rape occurred at your house; acknowledge it and give substantial evidence that you are going to do something about it.

If Pike was doing so many positive things in 1991, why are these the results in 1996, boys?

Jamie Sinsheimer is a UMass student.

Feminist humorist to speak at Smith

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) will be hosting feminist author Dr. Regina Barreca at Smith College tonight in honor of International Women's Day.

Barreca is known for her ability to combine humor and politically correct issues that evolve in society, and has been dubbed by Ms. magazine as a "feminist humor maven."

"Her characteristic wit and wisdom allow her to demystify the institutions, roles and expectations of marriage clearly and usefully," said Ms. magazine about her book Perfect Husbands (and other fairy tales).

COURTESY OF HARMONY BOOKS

Dr. Regina Barreca

Barreca is the author of several other books including Sweet Revenge: the wicked delights of getting even, Demystifying Marriage, Men and Romance, and They Used to Call Me Snow White, But I Drifted: Women's Strategic Use of Humor.

"Using Humor to Survive the 1990s" is the title of Barreca's speech. She will address issues such as the difference in humor between men and women.

Barreca talked previously about this issue. She has said, "Humor is rigidly mapped and marked by subjectivity. It is liable to be sorted out by factors such as history, social class, ethnicity, race and gender. Traditional women's humor is based on the experience of being a woman, where women's experience is devalued."

Barreca is a professor of English literature and feminist theory at the University of Storrs and was recently appointed an advisor to the library of Congress for her work on humor and the American character.

Barreca has also appeared on a number of radio and television programs including the "Donahue" and "Oprah."

Tickets for the performance will be sold at the door. The cost for children and students is $5, $9 for YWCA members, and $10 for the general public. All proceeds benefit YWCA. For information call YWCA at 732-3121

Gazing out at the deep blue horizon, I felt lost, lost in a world of life — a life that was teasing me.
She walks out from the depths of the unknown towards me. I watch her as she moves in closer to me. Quietly she moves in, like a vulture after their prey. I give in —
Moved ever so slightly by the ocean, I sink into a world of my own. To be a creature of the sea wrapped up in my shell, avoiding the cultures of life– what I wouldn't give for one moment of silence out there with the waves crashing down around me...
To be lost out there with her, not having to answer to anyone, that would be like liquid gold and I would use it to make a mold of our bodies becoming one near the ocean floor.

— Jamie Sinsheimer

she sits there like america suffering through slow reform
but she'll never get back the time and the years sneak by one by one
she is still playing the martyr and i am still praying for a revolution
-ani difranco, "fixing her hair"

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Anna Lotto & Stacey Shackford • Photos by Thang Vo

Who was your most influential female role model growing up and why?

"My mom because she taught me respect and how to eat right."
— Ryan Harris
junior, plant and soil sciences
Wilmington, Vt.

"Smurfette was cool. She hung out with all the guys. She knew where it was at. I was a tomboy growing up so I also hung out with the guys but she brushed her hair a lot and I didn't brush my hair as much."
— Rachel Wells
senior, printmaking
Sterling

"My mom and my grandmother because black role models when I was growing up were few and far between. We didn't learn about them in the history books in my school. My mother and grandmother, who encouraged strength, education, dignity and pride, were my role models." — Lilian Coleman
junior, University Without Walls
New York, N.Y.

"Wonder Woman because I loved her invisible jet and she always got the bad guys with her lasso."
— Derick "Cheese"
Cheeseboro–Weaver
junior, sociology
New York, N.Y.

"Definitely not Barbie. Definitely my mom."
— Yen Mach
sophomore, HRTA
Boston

"Angela Davis because she had a lot of the same goals as I do, mainly the upliftment of the black people. She taught me that black women must be strong and do what they must to resurrect ourselves from ignorance."
— Dana Salmon
freshman, undeclared
Worcester

...ving

...ts' sound to fill Pearl Street

...ved They Might Be Giants are set to ... tonight to perform old favorites as ... and latest album John Henry, released in ... result of major transformations within the ... their drum machine for the larger impact ... The album expands on frontmen John ...lassbergh's extraordinary melodic talents. ...s which are live cuts, have been said to ...ther gut immediacy of the new line-up. ...ersonic guitar are prominent in many of ... complimenting the high energy of They ...ver show. "Snail Shell," the first single, ...talents of the new rhythm section. The ...ecognizable advantage of the band's horn ...dman, Frank London and Steven ... Stax stylings of "Dirtbike" and the ... of "Spy" to the Latin flavor of "No One ...to the pure pop pulse of "Sleeping In ...Depression."

...g of the album, the band has been ...ongs live, including performances at ...festival last summer and fall.

...They Might Be Giants have appeared on "David ...Letterman" twice on the "Tonight Show," and ...Jay," "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" ...ugust the Pope."

...ung after a movie with the same title ...ey plays starring George C. Scott and ... has been recording since 1986. Their third album Flood, released in 1990 by Elektra records was recently certified gold in the United States, having sold over 500,000 copies.

Long-time fans can also expect the band to play their favorite songs off some of the older albums. Songs like "Don't Let's Start," "Particle Man," "Istanbul (Not Constantinople)" and "The Guitar" are common in the band's line-up.

They Might Be Giants perform at Pearl St. tonight at 6:30 p.m. The show is 18 and over. Tickets are $15.

COURTESY MICHAEL LAVINE

They Might Be Giants

...ttawanna' to perform at Bluewall

...a cappella group made up of three ...outh tonight at the Bluewall. The group ...ation of tight harmonies, thought provok- ...ics with their audiences. As a part of the ...ry Friday series at the Bluewall, ... perform original songs as well as cov- ...songs.

...been singing together for over a ... sisters, Janet and Kathryn, started ... growing up in Southern California. ...ongs they would sing with their moth- ... Scott. Cindy Garthwaite, the third ...is a New Jersey native who used to ... as well. The three women have been ... grade in both church and school ...d to sing throughout their formative ... camps, touring the United States ... groups, joining in high school ... in college.

...dy have sung together in various ... In 1990, they joined Betts Davis ... Possibility and began experimenting with the powerful realm of a cappella. In Aug. 1991, the three women regrouped as Yagottawanna and have been playing to packed houses ever since. With the release of their first recording, Don't Stop!, they established themselves as a premier a cappella group. In 1992 the group began writing and performing their own songs ranging from soulful ballads to fun parodies, from hard-hitting social commentary to jazzy thought provokers.

Yagottawanna, now based in Portsmouth, NH, recorded their second release at a concert at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Portsmouth. Yagottawanna Live! projects the group's originality, energy and humor. It is a blend of blues, country, folk, funk and trademark harmonies that are so blended it is sometimes difficult to distinguish the three different voices.

The women of Yagottawanna definitely are not afraid to speak their minds about the ills of society. The group sings to the heart of the child and the adult, reaching out with unadulterated music to permeate prejudice, deface abuse, empower people and breach boundaries of lifestyle, politics, gender and religion. Yagottawanna speaks to everyone with their easily relatable music.

Yagottawanna will play tonight at the Bluewall at 8 p.m. The show is free.

...ke tonight.

Enquiring minds... ...ered with almost ... as though the Pla... knows that the way to get ... is to whisper, not scream.

G Love (left) the... Brotherly Love in 1992 for Boston ... where he perfected blues-... Harvard Square making ... $5 and $10 in busk... independently to accumulate a ... enlisted "Oh Yeah" and then ... ly met up with drummer Jeff ... Clemens and bassist ... Prescott. Soon the program ... endlessly at the venue. ... Tam O'Shanter, Nightlife ... Boston. The Spiritual Front ... brewing.

Their popularity has ... since their days at the Tam and they now ... venues across the nation. Since ... act, as demonstrated ... a ...

[S...
...und...
(A...

Hindu Students Organization Celebrates

Holi '96

@ 5:30 p.m.
...oom
...t Union)
& Garba)

~ SPORTS ~

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Brad Norton and the UMass Minutemen will take on the top-seeded Boston University Terriers in the first game of tonight's Hockey East playoffs

■ horn

continued from page 12

official Thom Corbin after St Joseph's loss to UMass, Feb. 28-I wonder if he apologized because Atlantic 10 Commissioner Linda Bruno reprimanded him, or because he saw highlights of his outburst while he was watching television with his nine-year-old daughter.

"Daddy, why were you yelling?"

Perhaps St. Joe's players Terrell Meyers and Mark Bass should apologize for their behavior as well.

Both players left the Mullins Center court with one finger extended, and I don't think they were pointing out the Ted Cottrell signs in section T.

• For the past two weeks when I have looked at the nightly television listings I have a had a problem. The nightly sports highlight show on ESPN is listed as Sportscenter, but lately — like, for the past two weeks — it should have been labeled Wayne's World.

Enough already. So Wayne Gretzky was traded from the Los Angeles Kings to the St. Louis Blues. Yes, that's news. Yes, it's important. But, c'mon, to run it as the first, second, third, fifth and seventh segments, plus as the Breakdown, is too much.

Memo to sports broadcasters everywhere: there is a saturation level. And we have reached it.

• Last week's Sports Illustrated had a story on Dennis Rodman, in which Chuck Daly called the Bulls' forward possibly the best rebounder ever, ranking him with Wilt Chamberlain and Bill Russel.

OK, looking strictly at numbers, it's safe to say Rodman's still got some work to do. Chamberlain averaged 22.9 rebounds per game, while Russel averaged 22.5. Rodman is working with a 12.5 rpg average.

I'm willing to cut Rodman a little slack, though. The game is a lot different now.

• The men's basketball program at Rutgers-Camden has been eliminated by the school's Provost, Walter Gordon, after 108 straight defeats. The Division III Pioneers were 0-24 this season, their third consecutive losing campaign.

The team's last win was a 74-73 barn-burner against Ramapo College on Jan. 18, 1992. Since that victory the Pioneers have had three different coaches.

How pathetic is it that a student currently enrolled at the school has never seen the team win a game? How sad is it that no player on the roster had ever won a collegiate game when the team was disbanded?

• April is just around the corner, and you know what that means... Mel Kiper will make his annual weekend appearance in living rooms across the country for the NFL draft. I find it insane that man makes a living out of one weekend a year.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist

■ gym

continued from page 12

mates and coaches enjoy.

"Ruth has had such a positive influence on this team," Kuzara said. "And she represents just what the epitome of a student-athlete is. I think her GPA has been just under 4.0. Ruth has also really helped to keep everyone on the team loose, and that's important.

"Most seniors, when they're done with their four years of their sport, are ready to call it quits. But these seniors love the sport so much that if they could go on for another five years, they would," he continued. "But the fact that they're leaving in their prime is a great thing. We're working hard to prepare them for the transition to focus on things other than gymnastics like a job, or another sport. They've been such a major factor in the team's improvement."

The Minutewomen are looking to improve their record to 5-4 tonight. Currently, they are the No. 1 seed for the upcoming Atlantic 10 Championships on March 30th, which they have never won. UMass will host the Championships, and Kuzara thinks the advantage is a great one.

"We've performed exceptionally at home the past couple of years," he said. "The way things are going, hopefully we'll never lose again at home."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Leann Zavotka will be competing in the last home meet of her gymnastics career tonight in the Boyden gym.

■ hoop

continued from page 12

16 assists, behind Edgar Padilla's nine, to only four for the Bonnies.

"Everybody did their job today both defensively and offensively," Padilla said. "Everybody played unselfish and that's the key to our team. As long as we keep playing hard, with defense, rebounding and playing unselfish we're going to keep winning."

The Minutemen put the full-court pressure on right from the start, which St. Bonaventure coach Jim Baron felt his team did not handle well.

"UMass took us out of our timing and made us turn the ball over, especially in the first half when we turned it over 14 times," Baron said. "We had trouble getting the ball inside, and that presence was something we had last night [against Dayton]."

The Minutemen and the Bonnies both committed 21 turnovers on the afternoon, but UMass was more opportunistic, converting the Bonnies turnovers into 20 points. Padilla had a team-high four of UMass' nine steals, while the Bonnies were able to tally 10 picks.

After Travieso, Donta Bright was the team's second leading scorer with 15 points, while Camby chipped in 12. Tyrone Weeks was strong again off the bench, grabbing eight rebounds and racking up five points.

The slowest St. Bonaventure would get in the second half was within 11 points with 12 minutes to go, when James Singleton hit a three pointer as the shot clock ran out. He finished with eight points on the day, behind teammates Shandue McNeill (11) and Rashan Palmer (21). UMass built up its lead to as many as 16, as the Minutemen were too much for the Bonnies.

"On the whole we played hard, but not well enough to win," McNeill said. "UMass can beat you from so many angles. That's why they're the No. 2 team in the country.

UMass controlled the points in the paint 28-14 over the Bonnies and nailed four 3-pointers on the afternoon. St. Bonaventure shot 34 percent from the field, but drained five treys to keep it close for a while.

"We came here on a mission," Camby said. "This is our tournament. We've won it four years in a row, and we just want to come out here and try to stake our claim for what is ours."

"I think we're real good when we play together," Travieso said. "If we can play helping each other the way we do, especially on defense, we can win this tournament and go on to win the whole thing."

Ever Think of writing for Sports?

Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru Thur. Mar.8-14/Seperate Ticks
Daily 7pm | Daily 9:15
ONE OF THE BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR
★★★★
SHANGHAI TRIAD
"SIMPLY ONE OF THE YEAR'S FINEST FILMS."
SUSAN SARANDON SEAN PENN
A FILM BY TIM ROBBINS
DEAD MAN WALKING
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

Welcome Home
to the ANNUAL THREE COUNTY HOME & BETTER LIVING '96 SHOW
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
MARCH 9 & 10
Saturday 10am - 9pm Sunday 10am - 5:30pm
CALL 1-800-237-6024 FOR MORE INFO
ACRES OF FREE PARKING!
Adults $4.50
Seniors $2.50
Children under 12 FREE with adult
Five College Students and Faculty $2.50
REGISTER TO WIN! A VACATION GETAWAY! AND OTHER GREAT PRIZES!
NARI

POE Live In Person! at . . .
B SIDE RECORDS
4 Conz Street (next to Maplewood Shops)
Northampton, MA • 586-9556
Saturday, March 9th
3:00 P.M.
Autographs, Posters, CD's and CD Singles
Can't talk to a psycho like a normal human being POE
my debut album features TRIGGER HAPPY JACK

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The COLLEGIAN is looking for candidates for Special Issues Coordinator. If you are organized, a good communicator, creative, and more...Come down and apply!
Special Issues Coordinator offers great experience in advertising, business, and communications.
GET YOUR EXPERIENCE HERE!
Build your resume @ the COLLEGIAN!
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst • 413- 545- 3500

come to a free seminar
LSAT
TARGETED TRAINING
Targeted Training turns Kaplan's LSAT expertise into a study plan made just for you.
Learn about
•the latest developments in the LSAT
•the inside story on admissions
•how to target your study needs
Find out about Targeted Training and Get a Higher Score!
DATE Wednesday, March 13th
TIME 7:30 PM
PLACE Amherst Kaplan Center, 150 Pleasant St
The answer to the LSAT question
Call: 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment For Rent
- Auto For Sale
- Employment
- Entertainment
- For Sale
- Found (2 days Free)
- Happy Birthday
- Houses For Rent
- Instruction
- Lost
- Musicians
- Miscellaneous
- Motorcycles
- Personals
- Room For Rent
- Room Wanted
- Roommate Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Transportation
- Wanted to Rent
- Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time ... on the web ...

Joseph Fountain ... best friend ... Love, Mom

Ken Chi ... Sunday thru Thursday ... and Saturday

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Pulfton Village one Bedroom Available ...

South Deerfield Cir 1 BR hardwood floors, quiet, walk-in ... lease 665-8184

Available immediately 1 BR ... apartment ... Call now to view the ... $495 per month ... Call ...

Moving off Campus? 3 pedrms 2 bed ... Must have gas ... minutes to UMA ... 549-8169

AUTO FOR SALE

Buick Skylark 1985 New exhaust sys ... 548-9791

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Mustang Asst runs great 800 or BO Call 549-6841 Lv Msg

Honda Prelude S 1988 5 speed, snow tires, moon roof, runs $800 549-8149

86 Dodge Ram 50 pickup. Excellent vehicle 2 new tires $3,800 549-9393

'86 Geo Prism hatchback. High mileage but very reliable vehicle. 36 mpg. $750.00 549-9393

For Spring Break Toyota 1980 Station wagon snow tires only $900. Needs to go fast 584-9223

87 Acura Integra A/C, new clutch man ... $2500 B.O. 549-4042

EMPLOYMENT

Tired of being broke? PT $200 to $400 weekly, FT $600 to $1000 weekly. Start immediately. Call 800 691-7888

Waiters/Waitresses needed from June 1 to September 1 in Lake George, NY at Roaring Brook Ranch. High wages and housing available. For information call Andrea 546-1170

Photographer Wanted. Need photographer for wedding June 29 1996 portfolio required. Call experience 862-296-7811

Professional male escort service Available for all functions. "At last minute call that will last all night". 256-8978

SCruise Ships Hiring! Students needed! $$$+Free Travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii)+ Seasonal/Permanent. No Experience Necessary. Gde. 919-929-4398 ct140

Make $$744 this summer. Work right west. Interviews Friday 3/18, 12 4pm Room 803 Campus Center

FOR SALE

Yamaha vf70 receiver Klipsche 4 Ohm speaker. Pioneer CD player with Aiden wireless microphone. 3 free lasersdisc. More than 50% save. Call Dve 546-6396

Powerbook 165 8MB RAM 160MB hard drive system 7.5 internal modem all. Fred at 549-1166

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Excellent ... Trans. scroll control ... speed ... attachable CDROM (ROM)A ... Bubble ... $2,000 OBO 549-...

1985 Chevy Nova Runs. Power steering, brake, new ... good ... $750.00 BO 549-7959

Brother wordprocessor ... spread sheet business letter ... and thesaurus with ... Originally bought @ $700 and used @ $400 ... price offer $150 ... best offer ... 549-0...

Austina Ticket ...

LOST

Lost Zodiac diveswatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Eric at 665-3680

MUSCIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist, vocalists a plus. Call Andy 549-1016 or Jason 367-1758

MISCELLANEOUS

Women do you worry so much about how you look. Free six week body image Art Therapy Group now forming. Call today 585-0809

MISCELLANEOUS

Clarity Press, INC. introducing new perspectives on ... and human rights issues. Catalogue orders ... booksales@c ... sandy

PERSONALS

CONGRATULATIONS ATTIA on becoming a pledge of SDT! Good luck on becoming president! Love You! Mom, Samantha

Karen W HAPPY BIRTHDAY Little Sis! I Miss You! Love, Ann Marie

Congratulations to Sigma Kappa's new associate members: Kelly, Kelly, Alicia, Naomi, Sarah, Liz, Joanna! Get excited for a great semester!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY KAREN! Hope you have a great day. Love Ya! Meredith

Congratulations to the new pledge class of: Kerry, Erica, Jona, Maureen, Karen, Hilary, Christy, Aimee, Michele, Mara, Jill, Alison, Sheena, Nikki, Elinor, Danielle, and Suzanne. Get psyched for a great semester! The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau

Boring Summer Job? Make $ ... Williamsburg Travel Bund resume ... Interviews Friday 3/18 12 4pm Room 803 Campus Center

ROOM FOR RENT

Montague House 3 rooms for rent $325 each ... 2468 John Lakeside

Large House, private bath, walk in closet. Mt. Valley, bus line $388 ... 256-0877

Room for Rent Belchertown Beautiful house. For info call Justin 323-7661

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring ... assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Alternative Spring Break - 5 days ... music, dance, yoga, meditation, Museum ... Cuisine, Vegetarian meals $149 800-... 298-2787

Spring Break Condo! Marco Island Florida ... Pool, partners, boats ... $650 per week ... 253-4713414

Spring Break '96 Panama City Beach from $129 ... Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369 ... Guaranteed lowest prices ... Endless Summer Tours ... 1-800-234-7007

Spend Spring Break with whom you know! Jamaica $549, steamboat $815, Killington #2581 UMass ski club 545-3431

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters, door-to-door, affordable ... advanced reservation 253-1350

Spring Break Panama City $149 ... Daytona Beach $119 ... Best hotels and prices ... Call Heidi 256-6110

Work out west Make $$14/week ... Southwestern. Interviews Friday 3/18 ... 4pm Room 803 Campus Center

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Aromatic plant
5 Acid in vitamin B complex
10 Scope
14 Native American
15 New York City opera company
16 Quechuan of Peru
17 Honest
19 House of worship
20 Where early Greeks wrestled
21 Futile
23 Sweetsop
24 Eklund from Stockholm
25 He's quarrelsome
28 Put to use
31 French artist-poet
32 Bell-shaped lilies
34 Words for Ben Jonson
35 Informers
37 — disturb: sign on the door
39 Deer
40 Grate residue
42 Climbing pepper
44 Letter from Athens
45 Became more profound
47 Books, in Barcelona
49 Seasonal song
50 Tony of golf
51 Caused damage
53 Assistant, of a sort
57 Olive genus
58 In a bad way
60 Encourage
61 Moran and Gray
62 Regarding
63 Swindle
64 Withdraw from office
65 Art colony in New Mexico

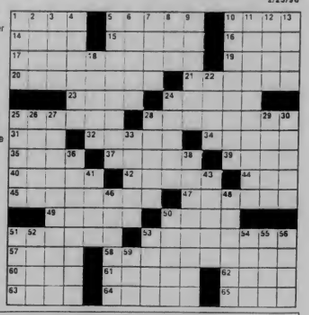
DOWN

1 Croquet wicket
2 Landmark in Sicily
3 Near Eastern weight
4 Decapitate
5 Spoke hesitatingly
6 Dry measures of Biblical days
7 Aslcano's output
8 Yemen addition
9 Distorts
10 Some aliens
11 Having difficulties
12 Former EEC coins
13 Corduroy feature
18 — Park, Colorado town
22 Yugoslav statesman
24 Muddle with infatuation
25 Unit of capacity
26 Wide out
27 In a tough spot
28 Prepared for an exam
29 Muse depicted with a lyre
30 Contemporary of Monet
33 Lonesome George of TV
36 — Tables, David Niven film
38 Put on the air
41 Winnerec
43 Choreographer Maurice ... dancer Josse
46 Indicated agreement
48 Rockin Hoodlin away
50 — Lenape, Delaware Indians
51 Castle protection
52 Duchess of — Goya model
53 Emulate Biondi
54 Lady in Leon
55 Something to spend on the Continent
56 Aves
59 Oslo coin

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

R	A	R	E	M	A	D	A	M	B	R	E	T
A	C	E	S	U	T	I	L	E	L	E	A	H
V	I	D	E	O	T	A	P	E	S	O	S	A
I	D	O	L	C	U	L	S	S	I	T	T	E
R				T	A	L		S	A	N	T	A
F	E	N	N	E	L		R	E	G	R	O	U	P	S
A	R	E	N	T		R	E	N	E	E		R	A	T
C	A	W	S		B	I	N	D	S		H	A	I	R
E	S	P		M	A	L	T	S		P	E	N	N	A
S	E	A	M		L	E	S		P	R	E	T	T	Y
	J	O	L	L	Y		M	O	O	D
A	N	A	L	O	G		W	A	C	O		L	E	I
L	I	M	E		A	D	A	Y	O	F	R	E	S	T
A	L	A	S		M	A	N	O	N		A	N	T	E
N	E	S	T		E	N	E	R	O		P	O	E	M

2/23/96



"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."

"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

watch what you heat!
prevent home fires
fire prevention week
October 8-14 1995
National Fire Protection Association, Batterymarch Park, Quincy MA 02269
"Sparky" The Fire Dog is a trademark of the NFPA

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuring victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the initiative in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound; take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

OUR NEW VP IS COMING. IS THE DEMO OF OUR HOLOGRAPHIC INTERFACE READY?
EVERYTHING SHOULD BE FINE... UNLESS WE'RE SUDDENLY VISITED BY THE DARK ANGEL OF PRODUCT DEMOS...
HELLO-O-O, WALLY DID SOMEBODY SAY "DEMO"?
I'M DILBERT, LOYAL PEON

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

HEY, JO? THAT GIRL LIVES DOWN THE HALL FROM YOU. HIS ROOMMATE ENCHANTED HIM INTO A FROG.
I'M GONNA GO TALK TO HIS ROOMMATE, SO ME A FAVOR AND STAY WITH HIM FOR A WHILE, OKAY? BYE!
UMM, I'M NOT A PRINCESS
I HADN'T GOTTEN MY HOPES UP

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Mr. Peterson was sprawled out on the floor in the sun ray from the window.
She was so far asleep that when I walked by she didn't even move.
Normally she's startled by the slightest thing. but I nudged her and she only twitched her leg.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My dad woke me up this morning at 3 a.m. in the middle of the night phone calling from the other side of the country. I could barely find the phone in the dark..

He started telling me how we should always be close. He asked if I'd like to go out to dinner with him when he returns home.

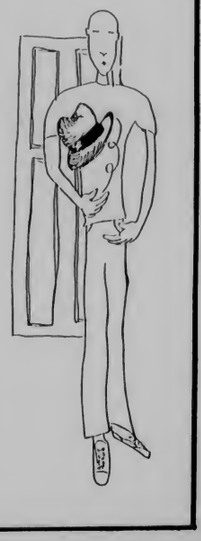
I told him I wasn't hungry, but I really liked it when he cried.

I told him I didn't like the way he dressed and, I thought he was fat.

I asked him if he could give me some money.

He's sending money.

I think I'm growing up, but I don't know about him.



Close to Home By John McPherson

Chuck's fascination with macrame was beginning to annoy Coach Paparella

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I GUESS YOU FEEL DIFFERENT ABOUT DR. TURNER SINCE HIS ANTI-DOTE SAVED THE MAN-MONSTER!
NO! HE JUST GOT ALL THE BREAKS BECAUSE OF HIS COLOR!
IT'S UNFAIR! I'M NOT A BIGOT! I JUST WANT WHAT'S COMING TO ME!
AND YOU GOT IT!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

The Nuckle Buster By Dug

Beth enlightened me yesterday.
she said "men will never know what women mean by 'did you pack enough shoes'"
"and women will never understand what a man means by 'you can never have enough tools'" maybe that explains my deep urge to work on my car in the buff.

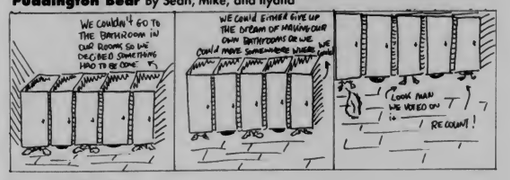
Puddington Bear By Sean, Mike, and Ilyana



WE couldn't GO TO THE BATHROOM IN OUR ROOMS SO WE DECIDED SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE
WE COULD EITHER GIVE UP THE DREAM OF MAKING OUR OWN BATHROOMS OR WE COULD MOVE SOMEWHERE WHERE WE LOOK HOW WE VOTED ON it RECOUNT!

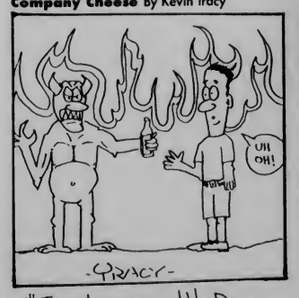
Hannah Dip By Mo

Company Cheese By Kevin Tracy



Guess what Johnny's bringing for Show and Tell today.
1-800-WE-PREVENT
Not one more loved life. Not one more grieving family. Not one more

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that your residence hall is unsafe:

10. Rickety ladders serve as stairs to upper floors.
9. Fire alarm replaced by really loud parrot who squawks, "Fire!"
8. The walls sweat blood.
7. Bedding filled with asbestos.
6. Residents frequently warn you of the "Candyman."
5. Building constructed by same people who designed the W. E. B. DuBois library.
4. You find a man fixing the elevator repeating to himself, "Righty tights, lefty loosey."
3. As the RA hands you room key, he chortles, "See you in hell, sucker!"
2. There's a neon sign on the front door reading, "OPEN DUSK 'TILL DAWN."
1. Homer Simpson is the building's safety inspector.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Laura Stack
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor ..Dave "Schmidt" Voldan
Production ..... B. "Butler's friend" Inocencio
William "No nickname tonight" Darby

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hamboogers
Garden Vegan Burger
Raditore/Tomato Sauce

DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Veggie Gumbo
Pastabilities
Stuffed Shells

Franklin

LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken
Hot Beef Sandwich
Captain's Catch

DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Stuffed Shells
Quarter Pounders

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamboogers
Chicken Cutlet
Captain's Catch
Stoned Willy's Pizza
Summit Subs

DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Stuffed Shells
Stoned Willy's Pizza
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Hamboogers
Raditore/Tomato Sauce
Garden Vegan Burger

DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Veggie Gumbo
pastabilities
Stuffed Shells
Half Time Deli

Collegian Comics, for that good old fashioned, unfiltered taste.

Quote of the Day

"The ticket gives you the whole seat-
But you'll only need the edge!

–Commercial for Monster Truck Exhibition"

Sports

Travieso leads UMass to win over St. Bonnie's

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — St. Bonaventure had less than a day to revel in its first Atlantic 10 Tournament win since 1985, as the Massachusetts men's basketball team put an end to any further hopes of post season play for the Bonnies. UMass extended its conference tournament streak to 13 straight wins, and took one step closer to their fifth A-10 title with a 69–56 victory over St. Bonaventure yesterday.

The UMass will play again tonight at 7 p.m., facing the winner of the George Washington–St. Joseph's quarterfinal game, in the semifinals of the tournament. Should the Minutemen win, they will play for their fifth straight tournament title Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

In front of a somewhat scattered crowd at the Civic Center, UMass (30–1, 16–1 in the A-10) spotted the Bonnies (10–18, 4–12) only one lead, 2–0, as it was all Minutemen from start to finish as they shot 52 percent from the field and jumped out to a 39–25 halftime lead. This was something UMass knew it needed to do right from the start, instead of battling back from a halftime deficit which it has done 10 times this year.

"It's tough to come back at a noon game and get your body going said Carmelo Travieso, who drained three 3–pointers en route to a team high 21 points. "I was happy that we came out, ran the floor, defended and got to them early.

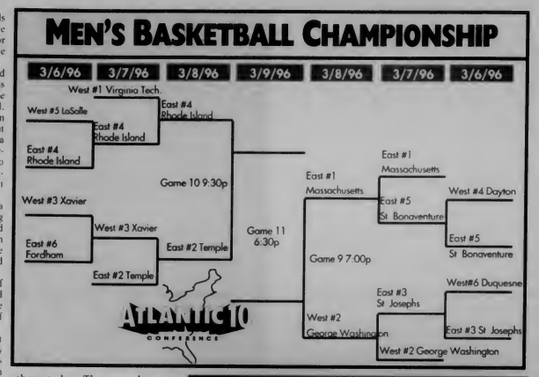
Within the first two minutes of the game Travieso had already found his range as he drained the first three buckets for UMass and scored 19 of his 21 points in the first half.

That was all UMass needed as it began to increase the lead midway through the first half as Marcus Camby's turnaround jumper with eight minutes left until halftime keyed a 14–4 run by the Minutemen which ended with a 3–pointer by Travieso from the left corner to bring UMass to a 39–25 halftime advantage.

"I thought our effort was good, and I thought we played solid," said UMass coach John Calipari. "The effort and intensity I thought was there today. That was the most important thing, so we understood how we have to play the rest of these games and the rest of the tournament."

UMass out–rebounded the Bonnies 35–30, led by Dana Dingle with nine. The Minutemen recorded

Turn to HOOP, page 7



Game Preview

Donta Bright

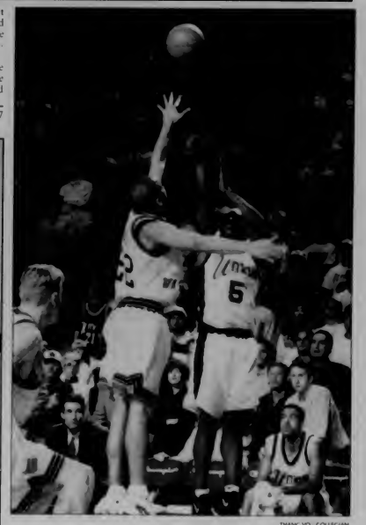
UMass Tonight 7:00 Philadelphia Civic Center Colonials

Vaughn Jones

Atlantic 10 Tournament

On the Air
TV: ESPN, UVC - TV 19
Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM
Dan Welch, Greg Corey
WHMP 99.3 FM
Mark Vandermeer, Tony Barbee, Jack Leaman

UMass Probable Starters		GW Probable Starters
F	Dana Dingle	F	J.J. Brade
F	Donta Bright	F	Vaughn Jones
C	Marcus Camby	C	Alexander Koul
G	Carmelo Travieso	G	Kwame Evans
G	Edgar Padilla	G	Shawnta Rogers



THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke has been a key contributor off the bench for the Minutemen, who are seeking their fifth straight Atlantic 10 title.

Philly Latino group salutes 4 Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — A large part of yesterday's 69–56 Atlantic 10 Tournament win for the Massachusetts men's basketball team were Minutemen guards Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso. Although their actions on the court contribute mightily to UMass' cause, it may be their actions off of the court that speak greater volumes.

Philadelphia mayor Ed Rendell joined with leaders of the city's Latino community in a special assembly Wednesday to honor Padilla and Travieso, along with Rigoberto Nuñez and Giddell Padilla, for their contributions to the Latino community.

"We are honoring these players because they have served as outstanding role models to young Latino boys and girls throughout the community," said Angel Medina, coordinator of the Latino Partnership Initiative. "For most of the year the University of Massachusetts was the No. 1 basketball team in the nation, and these players, particularly Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, played a major role in their success."

The assembly was held at the Roberto Clemente Middle School where the players spoke to the student body, mostly comprised of Latino students. They attempted to provide a strong role model for these young adults.

"It's important to give back to the community," Edgar Padilla said. "We have all come from the same background and same situation as those kids. It's important for them to understand that. It makes us feel good that we can make them feel good."

The players' coach John Calipari emphasizes what the members of his team mean to society as both players and citizens.

"I think the one thing that makes this team special is that they understand," Calipari said. "They go back to their communities and they help."

The saying goes, Some people climb the ladder of success and turn around and pick up the ladder. Some people climb the same ladder, turn around and pick up the next person, and the next person, and the next person. They gave an unbelievable talk, telling the students do what you can do, take care of business and stay in school. They told the kids, 'I may not make it in basketball, but I'm going to get my degree'.

"What they did [Wednesday] was just as big as what they did to win that game [yesterday]."

The Latino Partnership Initiative is made up of over 100 Latino organizations in and around Philadelphia. The group was brought together with the goal of developing a long term community agenda addressing every function of Latino life in the city of Philadelphia. The organization felt these four players exemplified what Latino members can be in the community and throughout the world.

"These players have carried themselves with dignity and class, and they are good students as well," Medina added. "As Latinos we are proud of them and their accomplishments and see them as outstanding role models for our youth. So the purpose for this salute is to thank them for making us proud."

UMass set to tangle with Terriers

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

There's many a professional wrestling fan on the Massachusetts hockey team whose battle cry in this weekend's Hockey East quarterfinal series, at defending league and National Champion Boston University, could come straight from the mouth of long–time WCW champion Ric Flair.

"To be the man, you gotta beat the man."

As the eighth–seeded Minutemen struggle to gain respect and acceptance from their Hockey East brethren nothing could catapult the team into the league's upper echelon faster than stunning No. 2 BU, the league's regular–season champion, in the playoffs, at historic Walter Brown Arena.

It is an accomplishment that any team in the nation would take pride in, and one that would thrust the fledgling program in the Pioneer Valley into the national spotlight.

While the UMass program is still in its infancy, the Terriers are an established national power, a perennial National Championship contender. BU is perpetually the proverbial Beast of the East, posting just four losing seasons since the Kennedy assassination.

In the span since that fateful day in Dallas, the Terriers have appeared in 14 NCAA Final Fours, won four national titles, nine conference titles (ECAC and Hockey East) and 17 Beanpots. BU has posted a 519–246–40 record since Jack Parker assumed the head–coaching reigns midway through the 1973–74 season.

The 1995–96 Terriers have hardly deviated from this trend, posting a 26–5–3 mark, and placing a trio on the All–Hockey East squad. The team has the league's Player of the Year in Jay Pandolfo, and its two leading scorers, Pandolfo and Chris Drury are both candidates for the Hobey Baker Award.

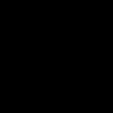
The 1995–96 Minutemen, on the other hand, have been a team of "almosts" this year. They almost won five late–season games, but ended up tying them all, setting a league record for most shootouts in a season. UMass almost placed Sal Manganaro and Rob Bonneau on the All–Hockey East team, and in their most recent trip to 300 Babcock Street, the Minutemen almost toppled the spectorous Terriers, playing BU tough for 60 minutes, but were burn by ill– timed penalties.

Rich Fowkes, who whistled the bulk of those penalties will not be working the games this weekend, as the league instead assigned Jim Fitzgerald, Tim Benedetto and Jeff Bumyon to officiate the series.

This news should buoy UMass spirits. The Minutemen have proven that they can hold the Terriers in check at even strength. In three games this year, BU has outscored UMass 15–5 overall, but eight BU goals came on the power play.

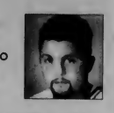
While at even strength BU and UMass scored just two goals apiece in their Dec. 1 meeting before a school record crowd of 7,089 at the Mullins Center. The Minutemen played a 2–1 game at even strength against the Terriers in their game at BU on Feb. 9, but allowed a pair of second period power–play goals that buried them.

Hockey East Playoffs
Quarterfinals
Walter Brown Arena



Chris Drury
BOSTON UNIVERSITY

VS.



Sal Manganaro
UMass

Friday, Saturday, Sunday - 7 PM
Best of three series

TV: Saturday NESN
Radio: All games WHMP AM 1400
Hank Morse and Brock Hines

Women's gym set for finale

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

After spending over 80 percent of their lives competing in the sport they love, when the season comes to an end later this year so will the gymnastics careers of four senior Minutewomen.

And tonight's women's gymnastics meet against Bridgeport at 7 p.m., at Boyden gymnasium will mark the final home meet for seniors J.J. Tolhurst, Lisa Coyne, Ruth Reeves and Leann Zavotka.

"You can't exactly enter a gymnastics pick–up game," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said. "There's nowhere else to go after college. It's got to be a big transition for the girls. You spend 15 to 18 years of your life in a sport, and then it just comes to an end. Friday will be a nice way to give them some accolades. All four of them hold important positions on this team, while serving as role models for the underclasswomen."

The seniors will be competing in as many events as they possibly can in tonight's affair. What's more, they will be holding the anchor positions in their respective events.

Two years ago, co–captain J.J. Tolhurst transferred to UMass from George Washington, and she's hardly the only one who has been happy about that decision. As a junior last season, much to Kuzara's delight, Tolhurst was the NCAA Regional All–Around and beam Champion, capping a top– notch season for the Minutewomen.

"You can't say enough about J.J.'s attitude and work ethic," Kuzara said. "Not a bad word ever comes out of her mouth. It's only been two weeks and already she's almost back from a major ankle sprain. Friday, we'll try and get her to compete on the bars."

Leann Zavotka, the other co–captain, will be competing in the No. 5 spot on the beam tonight. Zavotka appears to have come back from last year's knee surgery, and is ready to become a significant part of the team's success.

"Leann, along with the other three seniors, represents the best team leadership we've had in years," Kuzara said. "She's like the team Mom. She's one of the nicest, most thoughtful gymnasts I've ever had the pleasure of working with. She's come a long way as a student and an athlete in her years here.

Coyne, who originally joined the team as a walk–on before earning some scholarship money last year, will be competing on the floor for the first time this season, along with her usual beam routine. The last two seasons, the Scituate native has been a mainstay in the beam lineup. She'll be manning the No. 6 spot in both events.

"Lisa has improved her skill level on the beam and floor tremendously," praised Kuzara. "Senior night or not, she would be competing in both events for us Friday."

Reeves, a three–time Academic All–American, will hold the No. 5 spot in the floor routine. One of the squad's most consistent, talented athletes, she has helped to keep a loose atmosphere in "the clubhouse" by writing several poems with some other gymnasts which both her team-

Turn to GYM, page 7

NCAAs a dream, unless you're looking for tickets

March is a basketball lover's dream. Constant action, conference championships, and the grand–daddy of 'em all — the NCAA Tournament.

Does life get any better?

Around the Horn
with Casey Kane

I'm making my predictions (and going out on a limb) early, look for Arizona to be upset in the first round.

A wise man once said, "March is for basketball. April is for rest." I'd like to meet that man.

- The NCAA has made ticket applications for the 1997 men's Final Four, to be held in Indianapolis. To obtain an application you must call 1–900–646–1997. Of course, it will cost you, just to get a ticket application it's $1 for the first minute, $.50 each additional minute.

Hmm... I wonder if the phone is answered with, "Hi, my name's Buffi. What's your fantasy?"

- Phil Martelli apologized for his reaction towards

Turn to HORN, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 92 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, March 11, 1996

Tourney Bound!
The women's basketball team earned its first ever NCAA Tournament berth yesterday with a No. 8 seed in the Mideast region (See Sports Weekend, page 10).

Telling the story with pictures
The Amherst Family Center celebrated a Winterfest this past weekend with international entertainment and a food tasting (See photo essay, page 3).

Giants invade Pearl St.
A hyper and frenetic They Might Be Giants excited fans at Pearl St. on Friday night. Check out the review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Today and tomorrow will be sunny and cold with a low near 5. Rain is expected to begin tomorrow evening and continue into Wednesday, with a chance of snow.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 15	HIGH: 40 LOW: 15	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25

UMass prepares for NCAAs

By Justin C. Smith & Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Selection Sunday has always made the world of college basketball wait and hope for post season votes. The prayers were doubled yesterday on the campus of the University of Massachusetts as the women's team looked for a first ever invitation to the NCAA Tournament and the men's team looked for their first ever top seed.

Both teams got what they wanted.

Last evening, the Minutewomen received an at large bid into the tournament with a No. 8 seed in the Mid–East conference. They will face No. 9 Michigan State on Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Gampel Pavilion in Storrs, Conn. This is the first time in school history that a women's basketball team has been honored with a berth into the national tournament.

Amassing a record–breaking 20–9 mark, including a home win over Stanford, who received the No. 1 seed in the West, and a competitive loss against Louisiana Tech, the No. 1 seed in the Midwest, was enough to get the Minutewomen into the field of 64.

Last season, the Minutewomen competed in their first postseason berth in 14 years competing in the National Women's Invitational Tournament. Head coach Joanie O'Brien has clearly turned around a program that was winless during the 1990–91 season, the year before she took the reigns.

The entrance into the tournament is the highlight of O'Brien's first recruiting class of seniors Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter. These four players were the first crop of players to help revitalize the UMass program.

"One of the best parts of this whole thing is to see them go from little high school girls to nice young ladies. They really make my job easy."

Meanwhile the Minutemen won their fifth straight conference title and were rewarded with their first ever No. 1 seed. They will play on Thursday in Providence against only the eighth team in the history of the NCAA men's Tournament to enter the field of 64 with a losing record.

Central Florida, winner of the Trans America Conference tournament with a mark of 11–18, will be the No. 16 seed in the East and oppose the Minutemen.

John Calipari's squad broke the program's record of wins in a single season with their 31st coming against Temple in the A–10 Tournament.

Recent NCAA Tourney history shows a No. 1 seed has been a fairly good sign of things to come for teams with it. Since 1979, eight of the 18 National Champions have been top seeded teams.

DAILY FILE / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby (left) and Melissa Gurile (right) lead their teams to school first as the men's basketball team recieved its first No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament and the women's squad earned its first NCAA berth.

George Burns dies; straight man legend passes away at 100

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif — George Burns, the wry, cigar–smoking comic who played straight man to Gracie Allen for 35 years, then found new popularity when he won an Academy Award at age 80, died Saturday just weeks after turning 100.

Burns, whose health had been declining in recent years, died at 10 a.m. at his home, said his manager, Irving Fein.

He was with his son, Ronald Burns, a nurse and a housekeeper, Fein said.

Entertainers and politicians alike mourned his death.

"All I can say is that I've lost one of my dearest, closest friends who I've known for over 75 years," said Milton Berle. "I'm going to miss him terribly. I think the world is going to miss him because he gave us so much happiness."

President Clinton, traveling in Northern California said in a statement that Burns "enabled us to see humor in the toughest of times and laugh together as a nation."

There will never be another era like Burns', Carol Channing said. "What he stands for is the dignity and the aristocracy of show business," she said. It won't ever be gone. Everybody who knew it is going to carry it on as hard as we can."

Burns' career lasted more than 90 years, spanning vaudeville, radio, movies, television, nightclubs, best–selling books, recordings and video. He was the oldest actor ever to receive an Oscar.

At age 98, he was still delighting audiences with his perfectly timed quips, many of them at his own expense. ("I'm doing better with 18–year–old women now than when I was 18.") Fans eagerly awaited his long promised 100th birthday shows in Las Vegas, with the $100 tickets selling out long in advance.

"Age to me means nothing," he once said. "I can't get old. I'm working. When I'm out in front of an audience, all that love and vitality sweeps over me and I forget my age."

But declining health ended his performing career after he was injured in a fall in July 1994. The 100th birthday shows were canceled. More recently, ailing with the flu, Burns was unable even to be a spectator at a gala in his honor a few days before he turned 100.

He did put out a statement, saying, "What do you give a man who's been so blessed? Another 100 years? A night with Sharon Stone?"

Burns' career was at a crossroads after Gracie — the ultimate ditzy comedian and the love of Burns' life — retired in 1958. She died in 1964 and he never remarried.

He developed his own act as a single, starring in TV specials and playing Las Vegas with such discoveries as Ann Margret and Bobby Darin.

His popularity soared in the 1970s, with his Oscar for the aging vaudevillian in The Sunshine Boys touching off a string of movies, books and sold–out nightclub appearances. He said he accepted the role in the Neil Simon comedy, his first movie in more than 35 years, for the same reason he continued performing after Gracie retired: "You can't quit show business — not at my age." The role was to have gone to his close friend Jack Benny, who died in 1974.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Burns

Community service luncheon praises volunteers

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Jay Bragg coordinates a presentation on community service to Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) on campus.

By Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

Participants from the University of Massachusetts volunteering programs met Saturday in the Student Union Ballroom to honor work of the past year.

"The one thing that binds us all together — community service," said Jay Bragg, a junior BDIC major and one of the organizers for the event.

"It is for us to come together and celebrate the growth of service at UMass," said Joan Stoia of Mather Career Center. "It is an opportunity for Boltwood, TEAMS, VIVA (Vitally Involved in Voluntary Action) and other groups to come together and hear inspirational words from the chancellor and legislative leaders."

The community service conference provided a luncheon, guest speakers and workshops to enhance volunteering opportunities. Volunteers celebrated past achievements and planned for Into Amherst Day. The Into Amherst Day is an opportunity for UMass students to give back to the town.

"It creates a sense of community between the University and the town," said Chancellor David Scott. "Some people call what we are doing a 'commUniversity' rather than a university. It creates a linkage and a spirit of cooperation between the university and the town."

Community service activities are a crucial aspect of the Greek Area that often goes unnoticed, said Jeremy Chua, a sophomore school of management major.

"Delta Chi wants to show the rest of the university that there is a good side of Greek life and that we are very involved and we do all that we can," Chua said.

A workshop on fund raising and getting started will enable Delta Chi to set up a recreational program for 13 and 14– year–old Amherst residents, said Ramy Eid, a sophomore political science major.

"We want the house to take an initiative to get involved in community service projects," Eid said.

Trying to increase student involvement in service programs is a vital aspect of college life that the conference is attempting to improve, said Scott.

"To make the community service activities part of the curriculum, a part of the educational experience [is important], said Scott. "How you integrate learning and service in an integrated way. I think, will lead to an expansion of community service activity. It will create another win–win strategy."

Robin Weiner, a sophomore English and education major, said volunteering is an important aspect of her college life.

"I volunteer at special education at an alternative school and I tutor at Greenfield Middle School," said Weiner. "It is really important to learn outside of the classroom plus experiencing what you want to do."

Weiner signed up for a workshop on service learning in the classroom. She wanted to learn how to incorporate service programs in earlier grades.

"I've also seen a lot more discus-

Turn to LUNCHOEN, page 2

SGA election delayed due to lack of organization

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Student government elections originally planned to be held Wednesday and Thursday are expected to be canceled this week by the Student Government Association (SGA) because of organizational and constitutional problems.

The Elections Commission, an independent body affiliated with the SGA who is responsible for overseeing the campaign and voting process, will meet tomorrow and likely decide that there has not been sufficient preparation to follow through with elections this week, according to Dan Castellano, speaker of the SGA Senate.

The decision will be final once the SGA Senate approves a by–law change Wednesday, to allow for the elections to be held before March 29, and not March 25, which the rules currently stipulate. This move will make it possible to conduct elections the week after spring break.

The elections will decide who shall serve as SGA President, Student Trustee and all area government positions for the next academic year.

The two students chosen by each area government to sit on the Commission were not provided to the SGA as of last week. Therefore, no organizational base was in place to coordinate the elections this week.

At the Wednesday night meeting, the SGA Senate attempted to fill these vacancies with its own members. However, this was found to be in violation of SGA by–laws which prohibits any SGA official from working for the commission to ensure the legitimacy of the elections.

> "The delay allows candidates to get their message across campus,"
> – Dan Castellano

"We couldn't mobilize an Elections Commission that didn't exist," Castellano said.

Some candidates expressed concerns about holding the elections this week, claiming that not enough time for campaigning had been provided, according to Castellano.

"The delay allows candidates to get their message across campus," said Castellano.

The candidates for president are Larry Piano and Maurice Caston, both SGA Senators. Joseph Fountain, Neil Collins and Sean Carter are running for the office of Student Trustee.

A public "Candidates Forum" scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union Building, will include all the students running for president and student trustee.

SGA is in the process of selecting students interested in joining the Elections Commission. Some positions, such as working each polling station, are paid. Those interested should contact the SGA as soon as possible at 545–0341.

Perry–Jenkins rewarded grant to study working class couples

By Dahlia Desimone
Collegian Correspondent

The National Institutes of Mental Health (NIMH) recently rewarded Maureen Perry–Jenkins a $350,000 grant to study the conditions of working class couples as they transcend into parenthood, and the impact and demands work and family life has on new parents.

Assisted by graduate and undergraduate students at the University of Massachusetts, Perry–Jenkins plans to interviews 200 couples "to look at working class families where there are few resources for support outside the home, where affording high–quality child care is difficult and where the women hold jobs with little flexibility in the workplace, jobs in which they're often expandable as employees in the first place."

Under specific criteria, such characteristics as class, race, educational status, degree of autonomy and infant temperament will be implemented. The racial diversity criteria will primarily focus

Turn to COUPLES, page 2

For Your Information

Monday, March 11

Meeting — There will be a MASSPIRG Youth Vote '96 Campaign at 6:30 p.m. in 423A Student Union. For more information, call Stacey at 546–5779 or the MASSPIRG office at 545-0199.

Workshop — There will be a free time management workshop offered by the Learning Resources Center from 3:30 to 5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. To register call 545–5334.

Meeting — The UMass Japanese Anime and Manga is holding its weekly meeting in the Campus Center. A brief meeting will begin at 6 p.m. and various Japanese animation films will be shown from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. for more information, call 546–3065 or online contact http://edlab- www.cs.umass.edu/~fzado/umjams.html.

Tuesday, March 12

Workshop — There will be an free introductory tutoring workshop offered by the Learning Resource Center from 3 to 5 p.m. in Room 1038 of the W.E.B. Du Bois Tower Library. Call 545–5334 by Tuesday, March 5 to register.

Meeting — The Hunger and Homelessness Campaign will hold a general interest meeting specifically involving the Hunger Clean–up. RSO representatives and all else interested are welcome and encouraged to attend. The meeting will be held in the MASSPIRG office, 423A Student Union at 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Revisiting Clarendon Heights: Ain't No Makin' It, Updated," a brown bag colloquium presentation, featuring the author of Ain't No Makin' It: Leveled Aspirations in a Low Income Neighborhood, Jay MacLeod, will take place at noon in the Thompson 6th floor lounge. Sponsored by the Sociology Department and Social Thought and Political Economy Program.

Music — The Five College Early Music Collegium, directed by Robert Einstein, will present a program of music for the Easter Mass in Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, at 8 p.m. The voices and medieval and renaissance instruments of the Collegium will join in presenting Gregorian chant and settings of Easter music written between the 11th and 17th centuries. Composers represented will include Leonin, Perotin, Isaac, Josquin and Gabrieli. Admission in free and open to the public. For further information, contact the Early Music Program Office at 538- 2079.

Film — RAIL will be presenting Green Guerrillas at 7 p.m. in 805 Campus Center. The film documents the struggles of the New Peoples Army and the indigenous Mandayan people to save the last rainforests in the Philippines.

Meeting — There will be an SATF relief rally meeting to organize the SATF rally on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Earthfoods. All RSOs must attend, and students are welcome. For more information contact Arik at 545–3434.

Lecture — New York University art history professor Carol Karinsky will speak on "The Architecture of a Minority: Synagogues in Europe" at 4 p.m. in 319 Bartlett.

Wednesday, March 13

Dancing — Extremos presents "Something Divine" gay night, featuring local diva Christo, at Club Metro on 492 Pleasant St. in Northampton.

Meeting — The HANDS club, the UMass sign language club, will meet at 7 p.m. in 217 Herter. For more information call the HANDS office at 545–1925 or Shawna at 253–0316.

Meeting — The Drum and Dance Collective, a new RSO, will be having a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. The focus of the group is to bring diverse music and dance to UMass. Ideas are encouraged. For more information, call Aimee at 527–1443.

Lecture — Exercise science professor Gary Kamen will lecture on "Human Motor–Unit Firing Behavior" at noon in 319 Morrill Science Center–South. For more information call 545–2046.

Notices

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work–Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbalah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7–8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586–5812 or 549–2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on–site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545–2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585–0015.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253–0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546–2363 or 546– 5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus–stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

■ couples

continued from page 1

on African, Hispanic and Caucasian Americans; "working–class" will be considered to be families earning $10,000–$40,000 per year. No gay or lesbian couples will be included in this study.

Qualitative and quantitative surveys will be administrated throughout the five years of research, allowing the attainment of necessary information gained by standardized testing, as well as receiving greater insight with open–ended questions. From this, Perry–Jenkins will be able to discern more clearly what causes conflicts and how to work toward resolving them, if possible, Although women will be focused on more attentively, research will include fathers' perceptions, as well as their conditions and roles during the transition of parenthood. There will be individualized interviews, as well as interviews accompanied by spouses.

Previously employed for six years in the department of human development and family studies at the University of Illinois, Perry–Jenkins was hired at UMass as assistant professor in the Family Studies Program in fall of 1995 to advocate and help the lucent importance of our family studies program. During the past 10 years, she has published numerous articles in accordance with working–class families and parenthood genre and presently, chose to dissect and examine this alteration due to the lack of data documented during the last five years. Perry–Jenkins cares to understand how patterns of families are set up, and why certain stigmas associated with the gender roles of parents have damaged family atmosphere.

"Societal prescription, for what it means to be a mother and father, are incredibly restrictive," said Perry–Jenkins. "Gender roles limit everybody's opportunities... we created these roles, we can change them."

By recognizing the circumscriptions of gender roles, we can either choose to dismember its intricate history coercing our actions, or follow its nefarious path. Which frequently, and almost always, leads to unnecessary calamities, according to Perry–Jenkins.

Perry–Jenkins said she is interested in the mental health of both parents, specifically the mother.

"Whenever we talk about families and work, we expect all the bending to be within families. All our solutions are focused on how parents can cope — –they should spend quality time with their children, get more exercise, that kind of thing. But those are band–aids, not solutions. We need to build flexibility into work–places, school settings, and other institutions to be more supportive of families in general."

Jenkins said, "Parents should think creatively and push the limits of work places... create change... by responding, you are challenging them." Parents must request the support of their work–places to tend to their families more sufficiently.

"Work and family are the two most important issues concerning someone's life," said Perry–Jenkins, who plans to help parents "manage the demands of both worlds." She believes the only way one can surmount demands, or fulfill them, is by transgressing work policies, transgressing gender roles, and openly responding to the inconsiderate, ill–natured factors causing conflicts during family inception.

Perry–Jenkins said her ultimate goal "is to be able to understand what work–place characteristics, social support and characteristics of marriages predict how women and men are going to cope during dual transition periods."

By locating this information, Perry–Jenkins plans to convey her data to the public through articles and through hospitals and agencies tending to families during the periods of pregnancy. Perry–Jenkins will be discussing this study and total family development on March 28, in Skinner Hall at 4 p.m.

■ luncheon

continued from page 1

sion and dialogue on campus about community service activities and outreach of the university as a whole," Scott said. "In the next 16 to 20 years there will be greater emphasis on caring and less on individual selfishness. College or call Janet at 587–9884. There are signs of a new spirit of caring. I see a period ahead with greater community collective consciousness. Very often, important movements begin with students."

Students' efforts in helping the town with the decrease tension between the students and Amherst, said Scott. "I think that people in town recognize student involvement, in spite of all the tension we've heard."

UMass alumni Keith Morton, who teaches at Providence College, spoke about public service. He said community service became active again in 1985 with college interest as more services and college presidents gave more attention to service.

"I don't see the service losing ground but I don't know if the degree of public interest that we now have will continue. It tends to cycle through every 25 years. I think that we made some real progress in capturing institutional resources," Morton said.

Senior English major Eileen Carroll has been a supervisor for the Boltwood group for the past four semesters. She felt a need to volunteer at the Farren and Care Center in Turner Falls.

"It is a special hospital for residents having a combination of medical and mental problems," said Carroll. "It has mostly senior citizens who don't get many visitors, so we bring activities for them to do."

She signed up for a workshop about volunteering, exploring options after finishing graduate school.

"Data and research shows that if one is involved in it early on, that kind of spirit and mindset stays with you with whatever career or profession you chose later on. That's what our society needs," Scott said.

Collegian Classifieds
They Work!
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Collegian Graphics
Our day is just ending While yours is just begining

LAST CHANCE!! GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX PHOTO NOW!

CAMPUS CENTER HOTEL ROOM 402

March 11 - March 15 *

CALL NOW

(800) 836-0558

Be a part of the first all-color yearbook in New England!

*Sittings cost $5 without purchase of Index, if you decide to purchase a book the fee will be waived.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Rizvana, an Amherst mother, holds her baby in order to feed her at the new Amherst Family Center.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Tiffany, Merisa and Chelsea of the dance group, Umoja, stop to grab a snack after their performance on Saturday.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The African folk dance group, Umoja, meaning "unity," performed at the Family Center on Saturday.

PHOTO ESSAY
BY ELIZABETH BROWN

On Saturday the Amherst Family Center celebrated its Winterfest of International Entertainment and Food Tasting. People from all different cultural backgrounds came to join the festival, listening to storytelling, music from Cambodia, African dances and various tastes from all over the world.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Bruce Watson, a Leverett resident, reads a story to his children, Nate and Nala, at the Family Center on Saturday.

BAD CALLS.
STUPID TURNOVERS.
TICKY-TACK FOULS.
LANE VIOLATIONS.
TECHNICALS.
PRESS CONFERENCES.

GET READY FOR THE BIG DANCE.

Good luck to a coach who knows how to take the heat.

© 1996 Helene Curtis Inc.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Cusmir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Lisa M. Oliveri Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lise Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Amy Paradyse News Editor
Emily Reily Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist

Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Heim Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Index in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Hey Girlie Girlie

"Hey girlie girlie."

"Why hello there boy."

Thus begins my average everyday dialogue.

"Why do you call me boy? You know my name."

"Why do you call me girlie girlie?"

It's a two way street you know. Girl:boy, woman:man, cat:tiger, lions:tigers:bears. Oh my.

Which is not to say, however, that I am offended at being called a girl most of the time. On the contrary. I often cringe when referred to as a woman. Now, I can almost hear the grunts or upping of arms of women everywhere as they read this. Don't get me wrong, there are definitely times when even I agree that the term girl is wholly inappropriate and demeaning. For instance, I would never, ever, refer to sexism and equal rights as "girl" issues. Rather, I relish in the carefree connotation that is associated with the term girl.

What I needed was a reminder about what it means to be a woman. I went to a single sex school for six years... I grew intellectually, independently of the social pressure from boys which permeates most co-ed experiences. My personality developed; my mind; my self. Being with girls all the time, I also became comfortable and knowledgeable about my sex. There are certain things men will never, can never, experience.

Stacey Shackford

Furthermore, the term girl gives an excuse to women everywhere to take advantage of the unique qualities of being female in front of members of the opposite sex who squirm at the drop of phrases with the word girl in them. For instance, two or more women are able to clear out a room of men in record time when they suggest they would like to talk about "a girl thing." They make for the nearest TV set and sit down silently watching grown men grunt and jeer and sweat and tackle and shoot and score, all the while assuming that the girls are talking about some oozing girl thing or searching frantically for tampons or tissues while sobbing away or what have you. As if that's not great enough, there's also "girls night out" or long chats on the phone with "just one of the girls" and the giggling excuse, "oh sorry, I was just acting like a girl."

Now that I've gotten you to stop using the word girl as every other word, allow me to interject with a word or two about women. Women. Even the word itself is heavy, weighty. So, too, are its connotations. As Caroline Knapp suggests through her character Alice K., "you can't utter a phrase like 'women's issues' or 'women's health' or 'women's rights' without being flooded with a host of grave realities: abortion and equal pay and rape and battering and sexism and breast cancer." Speaking of which, with all the references to frat boys they would like to be referred to as fraternity men. Thus it is with women, or womyn as many prefer. There is a certain heft and weight and dignity that is unspoken with each uttered "women."

Friday was International Women's Day. Most likely, and unfortunately so, it was no big deal for many of you. Classes were still held and all that snow and icky winter stuff probably had you more preoccupied than any "special interest" day. I must admit, even I trudged briskly from one class frigidly to the next, and certainly did not celebrate my position as a woman while pacing to and fro and listening to one girl's futile cries to "whoever the hell decides whether we have school or not." Apparently, she would have liked to see them trek across campus to each of their classes instead of sitting on their posterior ends all day admiring the view from inside their plush offices.

But anyway, I'm getting off the topic here. The fact of the matter is, I was supposed to go to a concert and instead ended up at a Women's Day event and bonding with some girl I didn't even know watching a "chick flick." It was just what I needed.

What I needed was a reminder about what it means to be a woman. I went to a single sex school for six years. It was pretty brutal. Yet it was also the biggest growth experience of my life. I grew intellectually, independently of the social pressure from boys which permeates most co-ed experiences. My personality developed; my mind; my self. Being with girls all the time, I also became comfortable and knowledgeable about my sex. There are certain things men will never, can never, experience. Of course, some of these experiences include procedures that would send chills up the spine of any neighborhood he-man, but these same experiences make us individual and strong.

It's hard to pinpoint what makes a woman and I can hardly even attempt to discover it in 80 lines. But just keep this in mind. When you spend that much energy attempting to define yourself as a Woman — a powerful, deserving, equal being who can do everything a man can — you can lose sight of what it's like to be a girl — a powerful, deserving, equal being who's also capable of being vulnerable and playful, who's drawn toward what are known as "feminine" things like intimacy or feelings.

On the occasional new pair of shoes.

Stacey Shackford is a UMass student.

Don't pick Strawberries

Saturday afternoon I went to Strawberries to trade in some Compact Discs because I heard a commercial on the radio telling me I could get $10 per CD toward any new one. I naively thought there was no catch involved.

When I went to have the value of my three CDs assessed, all three were rejected. There was no sign anywhere in the store explaining their trading policy. They rejected one CD because it was from a record club, and another because it was a prize from a radio station. When I took the radio station sticker off my CD, the manager threw me out of the store!

No chain of record stores has the right to dictate to the customer terms of the trade of used CDs because the market is too competitive. I told this to the manager as she escorted me out of the store, but she ignored me.

Matt Wurtzel

There are over a half dozen used CD retailers in Amherst and Northampton, and about a dozen stores selling new CDs. Some of the stores are small and privately owned such as For the Record and Al-Bums, while others are large national chains such as Media Play. The diverse record store market is essentially a classic example of monopolistic competition. There are numerous retailers providing a similar service, but each store attempts to differentiate themselves from their competition.

Every store is a little different from the next. Take for example the stores in Amherst and Hadley which most UMass students frequent: Strawberries, Newbury Comics, For the Record, Al-Bums and Media Play. Strawberries, a chain, is the most basic of all the stores. They sell new and used CDs, but they differentiate themselves with listening stations. Newbury Comics, a privately owned New England chain, sells T-shirts, lava lamps, comics and posters. For the Record, a local store, sells tickets to concerts at Pearl Street and the Iron Horse along with the traditional fair of CDs. Al-Bums, another small Amherst store, specializes in imports and hard to find recordings. Finally Media Play, a national chain, sells software, T-shirts and movies besides the usual CDs.

If customers do not like one store, then they are free to shop at another store. If Strawberries refuses to take a used CD for trade, then they will lose the customer to another store. If customers do not like the prices at one store, then they are free to go to another who provides cheaper prices. However, because this market is so competitive, most stores charge about the same price for most popular CDs. If buyers do not like chains, then they can take their business to a small store.

Under a monopolistic competitive market structure the buyers hold power over the sellers. Although the sellers have some control over prices, they can not afford to increase them too much before customers will find another cheaper substitute.

Basically we have the power over the stores, and we should no longer let them dictate to us the rules of the trade. Remember the old maxim old ma and pop stores used to live by: "The customer is always right."

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

HEY, YOU WHATCHA DOING?
DIGITAL CAMPAIGNING.
I JUST SENT STEVE FORBES' PROGRAM TO OUR ENTIRE CUSTOMER BASE. I REALIZE I'M KIND OF ABUSING THE COMPANY SYSTEM, BUT WHAT THE HELL...
3-11
SOME PEOPLE STEAL PAPERCLIPS. I SEND OUT 200,000 E-MAILS!
I DON'T LIKE IT. YOU USED DISCRETIONARY TIME THINKING ABOUT STEVE FORBES INSTEAD OF ME!
YOU'RE RIGHT— HOW DO I STOP IT?
TOO LATE. I CAN'T WAIT TO SEE HOW YOU'LL MAKE IT UP TO ME!

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Plantains and duct tape

I hate when I have to try to think of something to write and I can't. Last night I tried to write this three separate times. The first time I scrapped it because it was way too offensive to the folks over at Whitmore. The second time it contained the sentence: "Training hordes of giant armadillos to dance with perfect rhythm to a recording of Allen Ginsberg reading 'The Tyger.'"

That one was going nowhere. And then in a valiant last ditch effort to salvage the shattered remnants of my words I wrote the following as an opening sentence — "Having goals is important, part of coming to college is figuring out what you're goals are and what you want to do with your life." Crap. Absolute crap. I killed that one as quickly as I created it.

Daniel E. Levenson

Now I know what you're thinking, that I'm going to spend the rest of this space talking about all sorts of weird ideas I had to write about and how I couldn't actually get my act together enough to write about them. And how I'll whine exponentially until I can just end the article. Wrong! Well, sort of. I am going to write about weird ideas, but not just to take up space. I did, after some completely reckless thought, come up with what I do want to write about today.

As some of you may or may not know the university is going to cut all funding for the Distinguished Visitors Program for the next school year. I think this is a big mistake because it is important for the campus to bring interesting speakers. College isn't just about going to class during the week, drinking on the weekends and sleeping at every available opportunity, it's about opening your mind to new experiences and ways of looking at things. I particularly enjoyed Charles Murray on campus debate with Dr. Alvin Poussant. While I thought that Murray was blatantly wrong and that his ideas were misguided, I still enjoyed having the opportunity to hear what he had to say. He offered a perspective on the issues being discussed, as did Dr. Poussant, that was fairly unique.

Why not give the DVP at least part of the funding it needs and let them do fund-raisers to get the rest? Cutting all of their money was not a very bright move.

Is it me, or is it always snowing here? I feel like I should be carrying an avalanche transceiver around with me in case all of the snow suddenly decides to slide off the top of the library. I can see the headline now: "Student missing in freak avalanche, administration blames inadequate shoveling of library roof."

Stranger things have happened. To me. But that's another story.

Here is a really bad idea: Put on a pair of wood socks, carrying a full glass bottle of root beer, run into your friend's room. Start to slide as soon as you hit the tile. Do this every day. If you have enough courage, skill and grace maybe you'll end up exactly how I did: On the floor. I nailed a chair, hit the door on the way down (slamming it closed) and managed not to break the bottle.

While The Princess Bride is a totally stupendous movie, for pure inspiration (at least for twisted, deranged, obnoxious, groovy, snazzy English majors like myself) nothing beats The Dead Poets Society.

If that doesn't make you want to go out and "Carpe Diem," nothing will.

There are few things more utterly repugnant than finding a long, nasty, piece of hair on your plate halfway through a meal at the dining hall. This happened to me. Today. It was a very gross experience.

Another really gross thing is when someone takes a banana and dust tapes it to your door. But I don't know anyone who would do that. OK, so I did it once, but only because my friend Gertrude threw it at me. I mean, it's not like I taped a live penguin to her door. Cheeze Whiz !! it was only a banana.

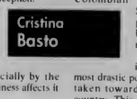
Well, that about wraps it up for today. Don't cut the DVP, please keep the hair out of my food, keep an eye out for avalanches, wear your wool socks, don't throw plantains at me. And oh yeah, one more thing.

Carpe Diem.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

The punishment doesn't fit the crime

The peace and stability of the Latin American countries relies in the ability to keep good political relations with the United States and to abide by its rules. Colombia is no exception.



Cristina Basto

The battle against the drug business that Colombia has had to fight has been a war against its own people. This battle has been supported financially by the U.S. since the drug business affects it directly.

This financial help, called the certification, constitutes a bilateral cooperation that recognizes that the drug business is not only Colombia's problem but also the U.S.' problem, for there will always be a producer as long as there is a consumer.

Last week, Congress decided to stop the certification to Colombia affecting it politically, economically and socially.

The decision was pronounced by Subsecretary of Narcotics Robert Gelbard, who explained that the actual Colombian government has been weak and ineffective in the battle against drugs. Gelbard also referred to the accusation that Colombian President Ernesto Samper's political campaign was supported by drug-dealers' money.

The no-certification is said to be one of the most drastic policies that the U.S. has taken towards a Latin American country. This policy stops all financial aid and support to battle against the drug business in Colombia. It also imposes commercial sanctions and restrictions on products such as sugar, coffee and flowers. Colombia will not be eligible for international credit altering its commercial activity and its whole economy. Airflights to and from Colombia could also be suspended.

With the political instability that occurs in Colombia, the no-certification only worsens the situation.

After years of violence and struggle against the "Mafia – cartels," the U.S. punishes Colombia too harshly, hurting many working and honest people.

Under the label of a "narco-democracy," Colombia joins the status of countries such like Afghanistan, Nigeria, Iran and Syria, countries with limited commercial benefits from the U.S., that have been harmed for not playing under our rules.

Cristina Basto is a Collegian Staff member.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Bob.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Bob Dunn.

Arts & Living

Fresh flowers & art fuse at Hampden

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Hampden Gallery will present "Joining Forces: Flowers & Arts," starting today. The project brings together two diverse communities of artists in a multi-faceted group exhibition. The opening reception will be held tonight from 4 – 6 p.m.

"Joining Forces: Flowers & Arts" will display original designs in floriculture by two-and-four year students of floral design in the Department of Plant and Soil Sciences, Stockbridge School of Agriculture. Art work contributed by member artists of Leverett Crafts & Arts (LCA) acts as an "inspiration" for the students. LCA artists are known for their high quality and workmanship.

The medium of fresh flowers and foliage will be used by students to create designs. The students drew their inspiration from instructor Nancy Garrabrants and the Leverett artists.

Garrabrants, who has taught Floral design in the Plant and Soil Dept. and the Stockbridge School for 15 years, is an established designer and freelance floral. Garrabrants also enlisted the help of UMass alumni, Michael J. Skaff.

The students used color, line, form, texture and space to emphasize their designs. The usage validates the floral designs as "art." The exhibition will offer an opportunity to view and appreciate unique art forms that are created by students. The exhibit also presents the opportunity to view the artistry of students who rarely have the chance to show their works in on-campus galleries.

Hampden Gallery is located in Hampden Commons, in the Southwest Residential Area. Gallery hours are 3-7 p.m. Admission is free. The gallery is wheelchair accessible. For more information please call 545-0680.

COURTESY HAMPDEN GALLERY

An examine of an original design in floriculture by Michael Skaff, on display at the Hampen Gallery.

Playful hits highlight Giants' Noho show

By Anna Feder
Collegian Staff

THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Pearl Street
March 8

COURTESY MICHAEL HALSBAND

They Might Be Giants revved up the crowd at Pearl Street on Friday night.

NORTHAMPTON — The "Giants" crept stealthily onto the stage amidst an enthusiastic roar from the crowd at Pearl Street Friday night. Neither rain nor sleet nor snow could keep fans from attending the show.

The band opened with "Istanbul (Not Constantinople)," one of their more popular songs, which was easily identified by the audience and created the mood for the rest of the show — very energetic, upbeat and playful.

In addition to the older favorites, the band played some new tunes. "XTC versus Adam Ant," a number rooted in the traditional Giants' sound, received considerable applause and laughter from the crowd.

The energy steadily increased with each song of the concert. The climax of the performance came toward the end when the group played "Twisting," "Birdhouse In Your Soul," "Snail Shell" and "The Guitar." Guitarist John Flansburgh entertained himself and the audience by pacing the length of the stage and leaning periodically into the crowd.

The set also included "She Was a Hotel Detective," which frontman John Linnel dedicated to his friend's six-year-old daughter who, he explained to the audience, couldn't attend the show. The band didn't neglect to play "Particle Man," from the album Flood, which was saved for the middle of the performance.

Another highlight of the show was the song "Ana Ng," after which the band left the stage. The crowd stomped and cheered until they returned. The band played a six song encore that include "Spider" and "Why Does the Sun Shine?"

The atmosphere was conducive to high pitched shrieks of excitement and spontaneous "Phish style" body gyration. During the course of the performance, members of the audience danced, crowd surfed and formed never-ending conga lines, all of which are characteristic of a They Might Be Giants show.

The mood created by the band had its initial roots in the opening act, The Ray Mason Band. A native of Northampton, the group seemed familiar with the audience. Their funky bluesy sound was a perfect compliment to the "Giants." Their set included strategically placed drum, bass and guitar solos.

Overall the show the band appeared to have as much fun as the audience, certainly not a big surprise. The performance was positive proof that, unlike many bands who have been around as long, They Might Be Giants just keep getting better and bigger.

University Press shows off it's newest releases

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Press produces a varied and interesting books on diverse topics ranging from the African American detective to the Viet Nam war.

In The Viet Nam War/The American War Images and Representations in Euro-American and Vietnamese Exile Narratives, author Renny Christopher seeks to reformulate the canon of writings on what is called "The Viet Nam War" in the United States and "The American War" in Viet Nam. Until recently, the accepted cannon of literature dealing with this topic has consisted almost exclusively of American, white male combat narratives. The problem with this perspective is that it often reflects and perpetuates Asian stereotypes. Christopher includes material that displays a bicultural view, including works by Vietnamese exile writers and by lesser-known Euro-Americans who attempt to bridge the gap.

The author traces the history of American stereotyping of Asians and shows how Euro-American ethno-centricity has limited most American authors' ability to represent Vietnamese fairly in their narratives. This method allows Christopher to present a context for understanding the way the war was experienced from the "other" side.

Christopher is a resident of Carralitos. An assistant professor of English at California State University at Stanislaus, she has contributed to Viet Nam Generation, American Letters and Commentary and Multicultural Review. She has also written a novel, A Spy in the Land of the Living as well as a volume of poetry titled Viet Nam and California.

Another new release from the UMass Press is Decadence and the Making of Modernism by David Weir. The cultural phenomenon known as "decadence" has often been viewed as an ephemeral artistic vogue that flourished briefly in nineteenth- and early twentieth-century Europe. Weir's book makes the case for decadence as a literary movement in its own right, based on a set of aesthetic principles that formed a transitional link between romanticism.

In this developmental context, decadence represents the aesthetic substratum of a wide range of the fin-de-siecle literary schools, including naturalism, realism, Parnassianism, aestheticism and symbolism. As an impulse towards modernism, it prefigures the thematic, structural and stylistic concerns of the literature that followed.

Weir is an associate professor of comparative literature and director of foreign language programs at the Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art. He has contributed to James Joyce Quarterly and also wrote James Joyce and the Art of Mediation.

The latest volume in the series Massachusetts Studies in Early Modern Culture, Mapping Morality: The Persistence of Memory and Melancholy in Early England by William E. Engel, has been released.

The extensively illustrated book is a cultural study of the ways men and women in early modern England confronted, accommodated and paid to tribute to mortal life and certain death. Drawing on prose and poetry, painting and statuary, social practices and religious rites, Engel reopens central questions about the Renaissance habits of thoughts. He explores how the metaphysics of that period signaled and enacted a continual revelation of mortality: the death of the body (figured as a kind of vehicle) and the externality of the soul (that which was to be transported).

Engel is an assistant professor of English at Vanderbilt University.

Stephen Soitos is the author of The Blues Detective: A Study of African American Detective Fiction. The book makes the case for a tradition of African American detective— in particular, novels written by black Americans about black detectives and incorporating distinctly African American tropes and themes.

Beginning with Pauline Hopkins in 1901, black authors consciously altered and subverted the formulas of detective fiction in significant ways. Such writers as J.E. Bruccand andClarence Major created a new genre that responded to the social and political concerns of the black community.

By examining the work of these pioneer authors, Soitos frames his analysis in terms of four uniquely African American tropes: altered detective personas, double- consciousness detection, black vernaculars and hoodoo. He argues that black writers created sleuths who were in fact "blues detectives," engaged not only in solving crimes but who were also exploring the mysteries of black life and culture.

A local resident of Northampton, Soitos obtained his degrees at the University of Massachusetts. His work has also appeared in the Boston Review, Masterpieces of African American Literature, Popular Culture Newsletter and Clues.

All of these books are available through the University of Massachusetts Press. For more information, please call 545- 2217.

BLUEWALL'S
Special Coffee of the Week:
Breakfast Blend
A blend of Brazilian, Guatemalan & Venezuelan coffee beans
Also Featuring No- & Low-Fat Muffins
2 different flavors each day in honor of National Nutrition Month!

TONIGHT
Set March Madness in Motion!
The NCAA Tournament
PEP RALLY
Monday, March 11
@ 7:30 pm
Curry Hicks Cage
Special appearance by Coach Calipari and the Men's Basketball Team
Cheer on the Minutemen as they take us down
The Road to the Final Four!
Featuring performances by:
The UMass Cheerleaders
The Dance Team
The Doo Wop Shop
Recognition will also be given to other winter sports teams.
sponsored by
UMASS STARS (STudent Alumni Relations Society)
For more info. on STARS, contact Alumni Relations at 545-2317

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

come to a free seminar
LSAT
TARGETED TRAINING
Targeted Training turns Kaplan's LSAT expertise into a study plan made just for you.
Learn about
•the latest developments in the LSAT
•the inside story on admissions
•how to target your study needs
Find out about Targeted Training and Get a Higher Score!
DATE: Wednesday, March 13th
TIME: 7:30 PM
PLACE: Amherst Kaplan Center, 150 Fearing St.
The answer to the LSAT question
Call: 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
E-mail: info@kaplan.com America Online: keyword "Kaplan"
Internet home page: http://www.kaplan.com

■ hockey

continued from page 10

BU coach Jack Parker said. "They started the second period off as hard as they can play which frustrated us. I thought in the second period they played much better than we did. If it wasn't for Tom Noble they would have tied it and gone ahead."

"We got the puck deep and played well down low," Norris said of the team's play early in the second. We cycled and let the puck do the work from there. If we try to get fancy, we're not going to win a lot of hockey games. We're not a fancy team. We like the bump and grind style of hockey and that's what it's going to take to win."

After falling behind 4-1, UMass kept up its pressure, as Norris scored again 9:43 into the third to make it a 4-2 game.

On a four-on-three advantage, Dale Hooper flung the puck on net after Noble had lost his stick. With the BU goalie unable to clear the rebound, Norris poked it past him.

Norris put forth a tremendous effort in the game, playing most of it while still feeling the aftershocks of elbows to the stomach and head by BU's 6-foot, 244-pound Mack Truck-on-skates Mike Grier. Grier smacked Norris well after a play in the first period, and Norris commented that his head was still ringing twenty minutes after the game.

"Norris has had a real good couple of weeks," coach Joe Mallen said. "I'm looking at the broad picture and our returning junior class. Warren's going to be a key guy in that next year."

The Terriers added an empty net goal for the 5-2 final, but the overall impression of the Minuteman gritty effort resounded over the loss.

"Despite the three goal difference I thought it was one of our better performances of the year," Mallen said. "I feel [BU] has the potential to be National Champion and we held them in check for a while."

Parker on the other hand gave UMass credit, but had trouble looking past his team's poor display.

"I was real disappointed in our effort," the coach said. "Our focus was off. The difference in this game was how hard UMass worked and how hard we didn't. It pisses me off to tell you the truth."

With UMass-Lowell and Maine charging, BU had cause for concern regarding the security of their three-peat entering Saturday's game.

In Game Two, BU tallied a trio of first period power play goals, but Brad Norton trimmed the lead to 3-1 after one.

Hearing Parker's wake-up call, the Terriers scored twice in the first 38 seconds of the second period. BU blitzed the UMass net, scoring six goals on 23 shots in the second, and adding five goals against Dave Kilduff in the third.

Midway through the game Hockey East clearly had a new boss, and it was the same as the old boss.

Mallen hopes that UMass won't get fooled again.

"We had a rough night. It's real disappointing to work as hard as we did all year and go out with this type of a loss. We made a lot of progress this year. Our program is going to grow and as it grows, I think we'll remember this one."

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass hockey team dropped two games to Boston University in the first round of the Hockey East Tournament.

Wild weekend provides surprises in NCAA pairings

(AP) — Midwest Region — Top-ranked Kentucky should have a much easier time in its' next tournament game than it did in its last tournament game.

The Wildcats, upset by Mississippi State in the Southeastern Conference tournament championship, are the No. 1 seed in the Midwest region and will play San Jose State in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Kentucky is 28-2. San Jose State is 13-16, one of only two teams in the tournament with a losing record. The Spartans got an automatic NCAA berth by winning the Big West tournament Sunday. Kentucky had won 27 straight before losing 84-73 to Mississippi State.

"They're a great team," Morrison said. "They have two great teams. One is sitting on the side. The other is on the court." The No. 2 seed in the Midwest is Wake Forest, which went 23-5 behind the play of center Tim Duncan. Duncan had 27 points and 22 rebounds in leading the Demon Deacons past Georgia Tech in the championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Wake Forest will play Northeast Louisiana (16-13) in the first round. Northeast Louisiana got into the tournament by winning the Southland Conference tournament.

Villanova, with Kerry Kittles back in the lineup, is the No. 3 seed in the region. Kittles sat out the final three games of the regular season for improperly using a school phone card. With him in the lineup, the Wildcats (25-6) figure to have an easy time with No. 14 seed Portland (19-10), winner of the West Coast Conference tournament.

Utah, coming off a loss to New Mexico in the championship of the Western Athletic Conference tournament, is the No. 4 seed and will play Canisius (19-10) in the first round. With players like Keith Van Horn, Brandon Jessie and Michael Doleac, Utah (25-6) has enough size and experience to give teams trouble in this region.

West Region — When Kansas lost the Big Eight tournament championship game on Sunday against Iowa State, it supplied the West region of the NCAA tournament with a No. 2 seed that almost was a No. 1.

Bob Frederick, athletic director at Kansas and chairman of the selection committee, said the Jayhawks' 56-55 loss left the committee scrambling a bit.

With Frederick out of the room, the remaining committee members discussed three candidates for the final No. 1 seed — Purdue, Cincinnati and Kansas. Complicating that conversation was the fact that Purdue also lost its last game of the season, on Saturday against Iowa.

In the end, Frederick said, the decision came down to numbers. "Purdue was 9-1 in its last 10 games," he said. "Cincinnati was 7-3 and Kansas was 7-3."

Purdue coach Gene Keady said he had no idea how the loss to Iowa would impact the Boilermakers' seeding.

"I didn't even know if we'd get a No. 1 if we won," he said. "You never know. The only people who know are the committee." Still, Keady said, he had a hunch following Sunday's games. "I thought when Kentucky and Kansas got beat, we had a shot at it today," he said.

The committee likes to avoid homecourt advantages, but it supplied a major one to Arizona, seeding the Wildcats No. 3 in the West and keeping them in Tempe, about two hours away from the school's campus in Tucson. Arizona opens against No. 14 Valparaiso. Frederick defended the assignment and the decision to move Pac-10 champ UCLA, the 1995 NCAA champion, out of the West as a No. 4 seed in the Southeast while leaving second-place Arizona in the region.

Southeast Region — UCLA, Duke and Indiana have won national titles, but those high-profile teams don't figure to survive in the Southeast Regional. Connecticut probably has the best chance of reaching the Final Four — unless streaking Mississippi State can pull off an upset.

The Huskies, led by Ray Allen and winner of the Big East Conference tournament, were awarded the No. 1 seed Sunday by the NCAA selection committee, setting up a relatively easy path to the round of 16 in Lexington, Ky.

The Huskies (30-2) will play Colgate (15-14) in the first round at Indianapolis. After that, UConn would play the winner of the Duke-Eastern Michigan game.

After beating Georgetown 75-74 Saturday to complete a sweep of the Big East regular-season and tournament titles, the Huskies donned T-shirts to mark the occasion. They decided against the traditional net-cutting ceremonies, however, to show their focus was on the NCAA tournament.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

Ask for our specials.

Hey Hoop Fans!

Re-live the thrill of UMass Basketball with the Minuteman Hoop Band! Our CD/Tape, recorded live at the Mullins Center, captures the talent of the Hoop Band in action!

Don't miss out! Simply mail back the order form below!

UMass Hoop Band CD/Tape Order Form UMass

NAME

ADDRESS

CITY STATE ZIP

CDs x $15.00

Tapes x $14.00

TOTAL:

Office Use

Minuteman Hoop Band CD/Tape - Old Chapel - University of Massachusetts - Amherst, MA 01003-6300

COL

Under new coach, Knicks shock Bulls

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks, a team in turmoil coming off its worst week in a half-decade, pulled off the most unlikely upset of the NBA season Sunday, shocking the Chicago Bulls 104-72. It was by far the worst loss of the season for the Bulls. Chicago fell behind by 17 in the second quarter, battled back early in the third quarter to go ahead by three, then watched Derek Harper almost singlehandedly turn around the game.

Harper made four 3-pointers and scored 16 points in the period as New York broke open the game and brought the Madison Square Garden crowd to its feet for its loudest outburst in months. New York, which fired coach Don Nelson on Friday and replaced him with 34-year-old assistant Jeff Van Gundy, led by 16 at the end of the third period, held the Bulls to 12 points in the fourth quarter and led by as many as 34 in the final minute.

Patrick Ewing had 26 points and 14 rebounds, and Harper had 23 points.

Michael Jordan, coming off a season-high 53-point performance, finished with 32 points, but Scottie Pippen's 11 were the team's next-highest total. The Bulls shot just 37 percent for the game and managed only 30 points in the second half.

Chicago, which had its six-game winning streak snapped and lost for only the seventh time all season, hadn't lost by more than 10 all season.

The Knicks played as cohesively and with more passion than they had all year under Nelson, who was fired after 59 games. The Knicks lost to the lowly Philadelphia 76ers on Friday night under Van Gundy but they seemed to be a different squad less than 48 hours later.

When the final buzzer sounded and the crowd already had been on its feet applauding for a full minute, Harper, Ewing and the rest of the Knicks whooped it up near midcourt as the Bulls sulked off. Early in the second half, there was no indication the game would turn out as it did.

Jordan made a jumper, a 3-pointer and passed to Dennis Rodman for a dunk as Chicago scored the first seven points of the third quarter. A 3-pointer and short jumper by Pippen put the Bulls ahead 54-51.

Harper then made three of his 3-pointers over a span of four minutes as part of an 18-4 run that put New York ahead 69-58. After Toni Kukoc's two free throws, Reid made a side jumper, Harper pulled up for another 3-pointer and had his foot on the 3-point line for his last shot of the quarter, a jumper that made it 76-60 going into the final period.

The Bulls never got any closer.

New York opened a 26-13 lead less than 10 minutes into the game and a 21-foot jumper by John Starks with 9:54 left in the second quarter made the score 38-21.

Jordan had 10 of his 19 first-half points from that point on, helping the Bulls cut the lead to 50-42 by halftime.

Notes: Chicago's other losses were to Miami, Denver, Phoenix, Indiana, Seattle and Orlando. ... Rodman had only 10 rebounds, almost six below his average. J.R. Reid, who started at power forward for New York, had 12 points on 6-for-8 shooting and seven rebounds. ... Harper drew the defensive assignment on Pippen, who was 5-for-16 from the field. ... Prince was among the celebrities attending the game. He spent halftime, along with his new bride, in the back of a limousine underneath the stands.

WANTED

WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, COMPUTER LITERATE, CREATIVE

MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS

Java, Shockwave, Emblaze, C++, VRML & Visual Basic

NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS

LEAN & MEAN 1 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART TIME HELP, INTERNS

please include: resume, letter of interest, reel

PASSION, BUT NO EXPERIENCE? WRITE US A LETTER!

VISION

Multimedia & Video
P.O. Box 776, Amherst, MA 01004
bballou@shaysnet.com
attn. Ben Ballou, Production Mgr
NO PHONE CALLS

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK

PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Safety on Our Campus

The Student Government Association, the Department of Public Safety and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs are pleased to announce that they have joined forces to sponsor a "Summit on Safety" to help make our campus a safer place. The Summit will be an on-going series of programs and events accompanied by safety information distributed to students, faculty and staff. Students, the police, faculty and staff all share the desire that this campus be as safe as possible for those who live, study and work here. We are particularly concerned about personal safety and general safety at events and activities. We hope that you will join us in raising awareness about safety and share in the responsibility for making the campus a safer place.

Christine Lopes SGA President
Jack Luippold Chief of Police
Tom Robinson Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

UMass

■ NCAA

continued from page 10

solid and fundamental.

Carter came to UMass as a walk-on, and over the years became an emotional team leader.

"We saw her play and let her know that we wanted her to be a part of the team," O'Brien said, "hopefully her emotion can continue to carry us through this weekend."

Hopson has been a consistent performer in the guard spot, who had her sights on UMass early on.

"She recruited us almost as much as we recruited her," O'Brien said, "I think she had a gut feeling about this place and hopefully this [tournament] will be the cherry on top of the sundae."

The Big 10 is characterized as a tough, physical conference, and Saturday's game against the Spartans should be no different.

"We're used to playing against physical players," said Gurnie. "We'll just have to use our strengths, like our quickness."

If the Minutemen defeat Michigan State, they will remain in Storrs to face the home team Connecticut Huskies. The team hopes the proximity to Amherst will draw substantial team support.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

Jackson was a force down on the blocks, scoring a game high 24 points to go with nine rebounds and a brand new William Cunningham, with a first ever double-double against Rhode Island, was a spark off of the Owl bench with seven points and six boards.

"I thought he played great," UMass coach John Calipari said. "He made some shots and rebounded well. On the defensive end he made plays just by being around the ball. I'm really happy for him."

Temple made their big run early on in the second half. Trailing 38-33 with a little over 18 minutes left, the Owls forced UMass into three of their 11 turnovers and Lynard Stewart hit for five points as Temple took their first lead with an 11-0 run.

After a Stewart trey form the right corner boosted the Owl lead to 44-38, Calipari called for a timeout and exchanged pleasantries with Tyrone Weeks. Though Weeks did not come out on the floor after the break, the Minutemen used the incident as a catalyst and took off on a streak of their own.

The Minutemen hit a barrage of three pointers, hitting five-of-five from downtown to take the wind out of Temple's sails with a 24-6 run to give UMass a 62-50 lead with 5:50 to play. The team pointed to that 20-second timeout as the turning point of the game.

"Tyrone and I had words in the huddle," Calipari said of what happened during the TO before UMass' game clinching run. "I just told him not to get mad at me if he was frustrated with himself. At that point everyone picked their intensity level.

"Tyrone came over to me 20 seconds later and said 'coach I'm sorry.' I told him I was fine. He's a great kid."

Temple coach John Chaney felt fortunate about the success they have had over the course of the season.

"We were fortunate to get in front. Our weaknesses overwhelmed us," Chaney said. "We don't have the talent in the backcourt, we don't have guards. UMass has a very talented ball club and they had an answer for everything. They were shooting 10-for-17 on their threes and those threes were from everywhere.

"We tricked [everyone]. There's no way one guard should be 19-12," said Chaney.

Camby, who had averaged only seven points in his previous two A-10 finals, only took eight shots from the field hitting on four of them as he finished with 12 points on the night. Padilla was impressive once again, taking all three of his shots from three point land, hitting two while dishing out seven assists while committing only one turnover.

Massachusetts 74, George Washington 65

UMass trailed 54-53 with just over eight minutes to play when the Minutemen took control using a 13-1 run, capped by a Donta Bright trey with two minutes remaining.

Marcus Camby and Bright both hit for 19 as UMass broke its four game losing streak against GW their win in the Atlantic 10 semifinals.

Minutemen Milestones: The UMass win in the finals raises its record on the season to 31-1. The 31 wins are a program best. The most wins in one campaign for the Minutemen prior to this year was their 30 win, Sweet Sixteen season in 1992.

With the tournament title, UMass becomes only the second team in college basketball to win five straight conference and tournament titles outright. North Carolina State duplicated the feat in the Southland Conference from 1947-51.

The five tournament titles is also a Conference best overall, as Temple is next in the Atlantic 10 with four. UMass has won 15 straight A-10 Tourney games, as this is the second consecutive Minutemen graduating class to never have lost a game in the conference tourney.

Massachusetts 75, Temple 61

At Philidelphia Civic Center

Temple (19-12)
Stewart 2-6 3-4 8, Jackson 9-16 5-6 24, Cunningham 4-8 0-0 8, Alston 1-5 2-4 4, Futch 1-2 0-0 3, Battie 0-5 1-2 1, Ivey 2-5 3-4 8, Adams 0-0 2-3 2, Rios 0-1 0-0 0, Laws 0-0 1-2 1, Reid 1-1 0-0 1 2, Van Velsen-0-1 0-0 0. Totals 20-50 17-26 61.

Massachusetts (31-1)
Dingle 4-5 1-2 9, Bright 4-15 0-0 9, Camby 4-8 4-6 12, E.Padilla 2-3 5-6 11, Travieso 7-13 0-0 21, Weeks 3-7 3-4 9, Norville 0-0 0-0 0, Clarke 0-1 2-3 2, Nunez 1-1 0-0 2, Cottrell 0-1 0-0 0, C.Padilla 0-0 0-0 0, Burns 0-0 0-0 0, Maclay 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 25-54 15-21 75.

Halftime— Massachusetts 35, Temple 30. 3-Point goals— Temple 4-12 (Jackson 1-1, Futch 1-1, Ivey 1-2, Stewart 1-4, Rios 0-1, Alston 0-3), Massachusetts 10-17 (Travieso 7-13, E.Padilla 2-3, Bright 1-1). Fouled out— None. Rebounds— Temple 35 (Jackson 9), Massachusetts 32 (Camby 6). Assists— Temple 6 (Stewart 2), Massachusetts 18 (E.Padilla 7). Total fouls— Temple 17, Massachusetts 18.

Carmelo Travieso – 21 points, 3 rebounds

Highlights...

Carmelo Travieso led the way for the Minutemen with 21 points, as Donta Bright chipped in to the effort with 15 points of his own. ...UMass was ahead 38-33, and Temple went on an 11-0 run to capture their first lead 44-38. . . UMass went on a 20-4 run to take the lead 58-48. . . Tyrone Weeks. . . With 5:50 to go in the game, UMass went on a 24-6 run to take a 62-50 lead and the wind out of Temple's sails. . Tyrone Weeks provided the Minutemen with off the bench intensity in the win.

Massachusetts 74, George Washington 65

At Philidelphia Civic Center

George Washington (21-7)
Bracle 0-1 3-4 3, Jones 5-7 4-6 14, Koul 8-13 4-7 20, Rogers 1-7 2-2 4, Evans 3-14 6-7 14, Green 1-5 2-2 4, Mescherlakov 3-6 0-0 6, Williams 0-1 0-1 0, Camera 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 21—54 21-29 65.

Massachusetts (20-1)
Dingle 3-7 2-4 8, Bright 8-17 1-3 19, Camby 6-23 7-8 19, E.Padilla 3-4 0-0 7, Travieso 2-10 5-7 10, Norville 3-5 0-0 6, Weeks 2-6 1-3 5, Clarke 0-1 0-0 0. Totals— 27-73 16-25 74.

Halftime— Massachusetts 37, George Washington 27. 3-Point goals— George Washington 2-10 (Evans 2-7, Green 0-1, Rogers 0-2), Massachusetts 4-13 (Bright 2-3, E.Padilla 1-2, Travieso 1-7, Clarke 0-1). Fouled out— Koul. Rebounds— George Washington 41 (Koul 11), Massachusetts 49 (Camby 9). Assists— George Washington 13 (Rogers 6), Massachusetts 17 (E. Padilla 7). Total fouls— George Washington 20, Massachusetts 20.

Donta Bright – 19 points, 7 rebounds

Highlights...

Donta Bright and Marcus Camby led the Minutemen in scoring with 19 points each. . . Alexabder Koul got two quick fouls early in the first half and remained on the bench for the final 10 minutewes of the first stanza. . . UMass found itself down 12 early in the second half, but GW countered the GW attack with a 10-1 run to give them a 10 point lead with 1:39 remaining in the game. . . The win broke UMass's four game losing streak to GW

■ UMass

continued from page 10

Alexander Koul, the 7-foot-1 center, who has had his way with the Minutemen was on the bench for the second part of the first half with two fouls. Marcus Camby also had two early ones, but was subbed in and out by Calipari for the remainder of the first frame.

However George Washington was not ready to go home early. They erased a 12 point deficit early at the start of the second half down to one in a matter of three minutes. When the second half began, Koul came back with two quick hoops as Vaughn Jones came alive for the Colonials scoring seven points capped off with a hoop to cut the lead to one.

This time UMass did not sit down. After GW ended up taking the lead by one, 43-42, and again 54-53, UMass went on a 13-1 run to make a 10 point lead for themselves and by that time the clock read 1:39 and the Minutemen faithful began singing the "Hey-Hey-Hey-Goodbye.

The Minutemen broke the barrier with a 74-65 win and was off to the final game to try for their fifth consecutive A-10 Title.

"I guess the percentages favored UMass and they had to win one game sometime against us," said George Washington head coach Mike Jarvis.

Both teams shot low percentages from the field with 38 percent for GW and only 37 percent for Massachusetts. However, it was the UMass offensive rebounding edge the Minutemen compiled (26-14) that led to the win. Inus Norville provided a good spark off the bench with six points and six boards, as did Tyrone Weeks with six boards and five points.

"I think you're seeing a team that will advance and give people a lot of trouble in the NCAA tournament," said Calipari.

Jarvis didn't knock the effort both teams put forth though, and felt his team is going to be ready for post season play.

"They're obviously a great basketball team, and we will use this game to get even better," said Jarvis. "We have nothing to be ashamed of, we played a hell of a basketball game. When the brackets are announced who ever's playing GW better watch out."

It wasn't any easier for the Minutemen on Sunday when they faced arch rival Temple for the A-10 Championship. Temple is always an opponent that will come to play as the Owls did not just hand over the Minutemen their fifth tourney title without a battle.

Temple has faced UMass the past four years in the finals and each time has come up on the short end, this time by the score of 75-61 as the Minutemen were victorious once again.

UMass ran off to the lead from the start and held the advantage by five at the half 35-30. UMass then had another lapse, like they did with GW, in which Temple took control. They went on a 14-4 run and took a six point lead 44-38, behind Lynard Stewart who hit two free throws, stole the ball, and drained a three to put the Owls on top.

"We were fortunate to get in front," said Temple head coach John Chaney.

Then it was UMass' turn once again. Donta Bright fired in a three, Camby jammed one home and Carmelo Travieso most outstanding player of the tourney, drained a three ball to put the Minutemen on top by two. The load would dramatically increase and remain for good.

This weekend's contests for the Minutemen were games of runs. Opposed to UMass having to battle back from deficits right from the start, the Minutemen set the tone early. However the lapses came later in the games, but UMass came alive to shave away any hopes of an upset.

Weeks played very strong again for UMass as he recorded nine points and grabbed three boards. Travieso was phenomenal for the Minutemen all weekend long hitting three after three for a well deserved Tournament most outstanding player award.

"They had an answer for everything," said Chaney. "They were shooting 10-17 on their threes and those threes were from way out. You were looking at the best team in the country and there is no reason why they shouldn't be No. 1."

The All section of the Collegian's open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept ads over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible. All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to answer any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

DAILY COLLEGIAN

The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994

Free Every Day

Legal Problems?

Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!

Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...

Call 545-1995
for an appointment

UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

BLUEWALL Special

Date Nut or Banana Nut Bread with a medium coffee for only $1.65!

1 pm - 5 pm

WE'RE HERE!

Come To Amherst Barbers and See Jim and Terri, Formerly of University Barbers!

Amherst Barbers

Now Open
Unisex Hair Stylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across Newbury Comics)

$8 and up
Hours: Mon - Wed 8am-5:30pm
Thurs & Fri 8am-8pm, Sat 8am-3pm

Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini
Formerly Of University Barbers

Jim Terri

Make Spring
Sizzle
Not
F I Z Z L E
Use Latex!
Stop by the Peer Health Educator Table
Campus Center March 11 & 12
for condoms, dental dams and other goodies

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Miscellaneous
Announcements	Motorcycles
Apartment For Rent	Personals
Auto For Sale	Room For Rent
Employment	Room Wanted
Entertainment	Roommate Wanted
For Sale	Services
Found (2 days Free)	Summer Sublet
Happy Birthday	To Sublet
Houses For Rent	Travel
Instruction	Transportation
Lost	Wanted to Rent
Musicians	Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Women: do you worry so much about how you look? Free tri-week body image Art Therapy Group now forming. Call today 585-0803

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time — SEE is on the web http://www.umass.edu/~polsci/polson.html

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton Village One Bedroom Avail Now.
480 mo. heat/hot water incl
Call now Amanda 549-1796

South Deerfield Ctr 1 BR hardwood floors, sublet w/option to lease 665-5184

Moving off Campus? Spacious 2 bed room apartment. Heat, hot water, gas included on bus route 5 minutes to cam pus. Call 549-6729

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Chevy Nova (Toyota) Power steering brakes, cruise control, a/c, good condition, $1700 or BO. 586-7866

1986 Saab 900 (Lic/new) condition 153K miles $2600 BO 253-8172

1986 Saab 900 Turbo (81K) m loaded Looks good runs great Many new parts $2900 / BO 256-8667

1986 Dodge Colt. Good solid transportation. Low miles. Call 253-4012

Buick Skylark 1985 New exhaust system runs great, reliable 548-9797

86 Mustang Notchback runs great, 300 or BO Call 549-6841 Lv. Msg.

Honda Prelude S 1988 5 speed, snow tires, moon roof, radar $3800 549-6149

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Dodge Ram 50 pickup. Excellent vehicle 27mpg/tdk $3,800 549-9293

90 Geo Prism hatchback High mileage but very reliable vehicle 36 mpg $3500 549-9293

For Spring Break Toyota 1980 Station wagon, snow tires only $900. Needs to go fast. 584-9273

87 Acura Integra A/C new clutch, man cal $2500 B/O 549-4042

Ford Escort 1991 LX The best in town Marcello 549-7226 $5000

EMPLOYMENT

Waiters/Waitresses needed from June 1 to September 1 in Lake George, NY at Roaring Brook Ranch. High wages and housing available. For information call Andrew 546-1170

Photographer Wanted. Need photogra pher for wedding June 29 1996 portfolio required / yrs. experience 802-295-7911

#Cruise Ships Hiring! Students needed! $$$+Free Travel (Caribbean, Europe Hawaii) Seasonal/Permanent. No Exper Necessary. Gde $19-929-4398 x1040

FOR RENT

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

FOR SALE

Yamaha V870 receiver Klache 4 2Kw speaker Pioneer CLD V870 with Acden wireless microphone 3 free Laserdiscs More than 50% sales Call Wes 546-6796

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen Electronic pen Trans. script mdm next 2 speed attachable CROM/PCMCIA slot Bubble jet printer $2,000 546-4736

Brother wordprocessor w/spreadsheet business letter, and Personus soft ware. Originally bought @ $300 and valued @ $400. resale price $175 or best offer. call 549 3774 for more information!

Airline Ticket for sale Miami- Spring Break B/O call Jen 549-8589

LOST

Lost Zodiac driewatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Bill at 665-3083

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1116 or Jason 367-0159

MISCELLANEOUS

Clarity Press, INC. Introducing new perspectives on minority and human rights issues. Catalogue/orders: http://www.booksmasters.com/clarity

PERSONALS

Turn #115 Go to travel section. See Bay Travel ad

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent, Belchertown, beautiful house. For info, call Justin 323-7560

Large Room, private bath, walk in closet. Mill Valley, busline $300 Lm 256-0877

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bay Travel Call 1-800 505-9596

Spring Break Condo!
Marco Island Florida
Pool parties, boats
$69pp per week
271-4711414

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $129
Cancun Jamaica Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1-800-234-7007

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters door to door affordable advanced reservation 253-1350

Spring Break
Panama City $159
Daytona Beach $119
Best hotels and prices
Call Heidi 256-6310

WANTED

Cash $$$ for your magic cards 585-9382 After 5 p.m.

One or two tickets to NCAA Tourn at Providence for March 14 or 16. Call 253-4265. Ask for Judah

Spring Break Daytona Beach
March 15-24
7 Nights at a Beachfront Hotel
$89.00
$219.00 Bus & Hotel
To book, call Breakaway Tours
1-800-465-4257
SPACE IS LIMITED

The UMASS Daily Collegian

A wealth of information at your finger tips everyday.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's Largest College Daily.

When our job is done, your day is just beginning.

The DN section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept DNs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

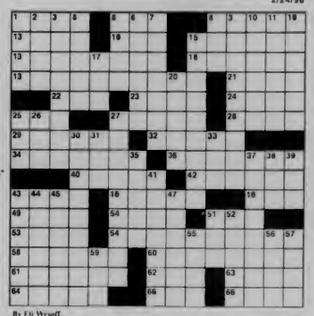
ACROSS
1 Lewis'"— Timberlane"
5 Sash, Sapporo style
8 Fleeced
13 Bassoon relative
14 Pester for payment
15 Particular New Englander
16 Reckless gamblers
18 Kindle
19 Choice cut of meat
21 Gritty
22 Hard-won award: Abbr
23 Hair style
24 — impasse
25 Consenting words
27 "— of star-crossed lovers."
28 Contact —
29 Vanquish
32 11th cen. biblical commentator
34 Unbeliever
36 Shades of difference
40 Pyle
42 Metal castings
43 Wife of Esau
46 Whitney's business partner
48 Go bad
49 Take it easy
50 Sir Charles's spouse
51 "The — Couple"
53 Production preceder
54 Complicated procedures
58 Ring of color
60 Rival
61 Cutaneous
62 Dinghy propeller
63 Annapolis letters
64 Cultural studies, to Cato
65 Direction: Its
66 Tyrant

DOWN
1 Egyptian Christians
2 Skilled
3 Boast
4 Excites
5 Baltic feeder
6 Sacking
7 To a degree
8 Buckle
9 Bell sound
10 Eastern church member
11 Court competitor
12 Links' locations
15 Kind of bridge hand
17 Sparkler
20 Pertaining to an eye area
25 Autocrat: Amin
26 Retreat
27 Without regard for time
30 Two quarters
31 Pother
33 Solo played by Ford
35 La reine's mate
37 Type of phone
38 Ike's arena
39 Fast flyer: for short
41 Burma's capital
43 Large fleet
44 More precious
45 Postulate
47 Certain W Floridian
51 Cortez's quest
52 One for "dunkin'"
55 Bitter: to Moliere
56 Sicilian resort
57 Luminary
59 Music syllables

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	E	R	B		F	O	L	I	C		V	I	E	W
O	T	O	E		A	M	A	T	O		I	N	C	A
O	N	T	H	E	L	E	V	E	L		S	H	U	L
P	A	L	E	S	T	R	A		O	T	I	O	S	E
				A	T	E	S		B	R	I	T
F	E	U	D	E	R		B	E	S	T	O	W	E	D
A	R	P		S	E	G	O	S		O	R	A	R	E
R	A	T	S		D	O	N	O	T		S	T	A	G
A	S	H	E	S		B	E	T	E	L		E	T	A
D	E	E	P	E	N	E	D		L	I	B	R	O	S
		C	A	R	O	L		L	E	M	A
M	A	R	R	I	E	D		S	E	C	O	N	D	E
O	L	E	A		D	O	W	N	A	N	D	O	U	T
A	B	E	T		E	R	I	N	S		I	N	R	E
T	A	K	E		D	E	M	I	T		T	A	O	S

2/24/96



By Eli Wessoff
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/24/96

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — Someone's plans change, allowing you to do the impossible! Seize a chance to increase joint assets. Too many social engagements could leave you exhausted.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — You and that special someone are on the same wavelength. Teaming up could help both of you achieve stardom. Entertaining at home can be less stressful than you think. Keep the guest list short.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — A partnership blooms thanks to share goals. Pooling your funds or skills will pay off. A feeling of deep contentment takes over when you share your thoughts with a loved one. Listen to a teenager's views.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Your gentle, playful manner mesmerizes a member of the opposite sex. A relationship that starts now could be based solely on passion. Better slow down and get to know each other better!

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your great concepts make terrific things happen. Any chances you take in business or romance are shrewdly calculated and well-timed. Putting your talents on the line produces a big pay-off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to tie up loose ends. Add a few artistic touches. Love intensifies when you show appreciation for a mate's special qualities. Avoid finding fault with a child's efforts. Pour on the praise!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — Domestic tensions melt you when you speak from the heart. Time invested in romance or play will revitalize you. A financial venture flourishes thanks to your efforts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — A surprising announcement will catch you unprepared. Nevertheless, you will come up with the right response! Get to the heart of a domestic dispute before trying to resolve it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Suggestions that will appeal to those whose cooperation you need. Confuse clears when you and a co-worker discuss an issue face-to-face.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — A period of reflection triggers a breakthrough where a project is concerned. An authority figure's advice has real merit. Follow it. Pay cash whenever possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You will bounce back quickly from a disappointment. Concentrate on planning for the future. Romantic partner will be helpful. Do not neglect your children or parents while trying to get ahead in your career.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — The more flexible you are, the quicker you will get results. A new contact may not be on the level. Have a heart-to-heart talk with a partner and iron out any difficulties.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Jim's Journal By Jim

Tony came over last night and we ordered a pizza.
We got just about everything on it, even pineapple.
When we ate it, Tony said, "This pizza rules!"
Then he said, "No, this pizza rocks!"

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE PLANNED A DAZZLING DEMO FOR YOU, BUT AS YOU CAN SEE, WE'RE BEING VISITED BY THE DARK ANGEL OF DEMOS.
THE DEMO IS A SHAM. THEIR PROJECT IS DOOMED. CUT THEIR FUNDING BEFORE YOUR NAME IS ASSOCIATED WITH IT.
THE WORST IS OVER.
LOOK AT SOME OF THE PICTURES THE "BOYS" STORE ON THE FILE SERVER...

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WALLY AND I CAME UP WITH A GREAT NEW PRODUCT IDEA!
INSPIRATION ALERT IN EFFECT!!
DANGER! NEW IDEA
STATE YOUR IDEA NOW
UM, YOU TELL HIM.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

PETER! WHAT HAPPENED TO YOUR LEG?
IT'S NOTHING, PROFESSOR. JUST A SPRAIN!
I HEAR THAT FLASHPOINT HAS BEEN CLEARED OF ALL CHARGES!
YES, HE'S BACK WITH HIS FAMILY, WHERE HE BELONGS.
AND I'M ABOUT TO CHANGE MY LIFE, TOO!
?!!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

IS IT TRUE THAT PROFESSOR TURNER PLANS TO LEAVE THE UNIVERSITY?
YEP, HE WANTS TO DEVOTE HIS LIFE TO COMBATTING RACIAL PREJUDICE!
I GUESS EVERY ONE FIGHTS THE GOOD FIGHT IN HIS OWN WAY-- LIKE YOU, DARLING!
DR. TURNER'S EVEN BRAVER! HE DOES IT WITHOUT A SUPERPOWER!
UH-OH!
WHAT IS IT? WHAT'S WRONG?

Kippii By Barry Deutsch

SO, DO YOU LIKE COLLEGE SO FAR?
WELL, I'M A FROG
COLLEGE HAS BEEN OKAY FOR ME, I GUESS... IT'S SO BIG. I HAVEN'T REALLY MADE ANY FRIENDS YET...
MMMPH
WELL, I DID MEET THIS ONE GUY NAMED ZACK, AND SEEMED OKAY AT FIRST, BUT HE TURNED OUT TO BE KINDA A JERK SAY, I DON'T EVEN KNOW YOUR NAME...
UM-MY NAME? UH
"FRANK"

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold was especially struck by his first lesson in his psychology 101 class as taught by Mr. Smokey Robinson on the subject of obsessive-compulsive disorder as it might manifest itself in a powerful love addiction.

I don't like you, but I love you seems like I'm always thinking of you.
Oh, oh, oh, you treat me badly,
I love you madly.
You really got a hold on me.

I don't want you, but I need you don't want to kiss you, but I need to Oh, oh, oh, you do me wrong now my love is strong now.

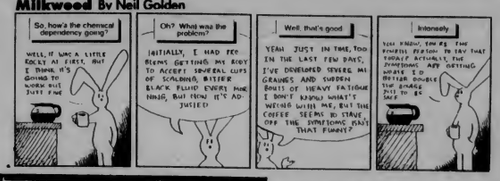
I don't want to leave you, don't want to stay here
don't want to spend another day here
Oh, oh, oh, I want to split now
I can't quit now.

You really got a hold on me,
You really got a hold on me.... Baby!
I love you and all I want you to do is
Hold me, Hold me, Hold me.

Milkwood By Neil Golden



So, how's the chemical dependency going?
WELL, IT WAS A LITTLE ROCKY AT FIRST, BUT I THINK IT'S GOING TO WORK OUT JUST FINE
Oh? What was the problem?
INITIALLY, I HAD PER BEMIS GETTING MY BODY TO ACCEPT SEVERAL CUPS OF SCALDING, BITTER BLACK FLUID EVERY MORNING, BUT NOW IT'S ADJUSTED
Well, that's good.
YEAH, JUST IN TIME, TOO. IN THE LAST FEW DAYS, I'VE DEVELOPED SEVERE MIGRAINES AND SUDDEN BOUTS OF HEAVY FATIGUE. I DON'T KNOW WHAT'S WRONG WITH ME, BUT THE COFFEE SEEMS TO HAVE OFF THE SYMPTOMS. ISN'T THAT FUNNY?
Intensely.
YOU KNOW, FOR AS FAR AS THE PHYSICAL REASON IS CONCERNED, I'M SAY THAT TODAY ACTUALLY, THE SYMPTOMS ARE GETTING WORSE. I'D RATHER DOUBLE THE DOSAGE. PUT IT AS SAFE

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Believe it or not, this particular tooth-extracting device was designed by a guy who makes corkscrews."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Michael "Burke " Burke
Photo Technician ..... Elizabeth Brown
Production Supervisor ..... Kathryn E. Gracia
Production ..... Matthew Audette, Ray Keenan

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH: Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich, Fettuccini/Tomato Meat Sauce, Golden Burgers
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Tofu Fajita, Pastabilities, Chicken Parmesan

Franklin

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken Sandwich, Turkey Chili, American Chop Suey
DINNER: Roast Pork, Breaded Chicken Breast Steaks, Lentil Chili, Quarter Pound Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger, Chicken Cutlet, American Chop Suey, Stone Willy Pizza
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Breaded Chicken Breast Steaks, Stone Willy's Pizza, Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH: Carbroiled Chicken Sandwich, Fettuccini/Tomato Meat Sauce, Golden Burgers
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Tofu Fajita, Patabilities, Chicken Parmesan

GOOD, CLEAN, WHOLESOME FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY.
WHY NOT BUY A CAN TODAY!

Collegian Graphics
Where it pays to play!
Located somewhere deep in the Campus Center basement
WARNING: may not be suitable for young children

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Having forgotten to save room for his dessert, Duane switches to his reserve stomach.

Quote of the Day

"Say goodnight Gracie."

–George Burns

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, March 11, 1996

Inside this issue:

- The women's basketball team received its first ever NCAA Tournament bid earning a No. 8 seed in the Mideast region. See Sports Weekend for the story.
- The men's basketball team earned its first No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament announced in yesterday's selection show. See Sports Weekend for the inside scoop.
- The Women's Gym team recorded its highest point total of the season in a victory over Bridgeport. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The UMass Hockey team lost two games to Boston University in the first round of the Hockey East Tournament. See Sports Weekend for the story.

Massachusetts claims No. 1 seed in East Region

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

With a 31–1 record, the Massachusetts men's basketball team earned its first ever No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament. The Minutemen will be the top team in the East and play Thursday in Providence against the No. 16 seed Central Florida (11–18).

The Golden Knights became the eighth team to make the Big Dance with a losing record by virtue of winning the Trans America Athletic Conference tournament, thus receiving an automatic bid. San Jose State (13–16) became the ninth by winning the Big West Tournament yesterday.

While UCF doesn't look to pose an imminent threat to the Minutemen's aspirations of a trip to the Meadowlands for the last weekend in March, several other teams in the Eastern region have the potential to derail the UMass express to the Final Four.

The second round game for the Minutemen could be a rematch of last year's second round game. No. 9 Stanford (19–8), who lost to UMass 75–53 in the round of 32 faces No. 8 Bradley with the winner drawing the East's top seed.

The Cardinal backcourt of Dion Cross (14.7 points per game) and Brevin Knight (14.4 ppg) will pose a formidable threat to Anthony Parker and the Braves (22–7) who received an at–large bid from the Missouri Valley Conference.

If the Minutemen are successful in winning in those first two round games, they will then travel to the Georgia Dome in Atlanta to compete in the Regionals where arguably the hottest team in the country may be waiting for them, No. 4 Marquette.

The Golden Eagles (22–7) have wreaked havoc in Conference USA beating tournament teams Louisville at Freedom Hall, Cincinnati at the Shoemaker Center and Memphis in the Conference Tournament, which the Tigers hosted. Guards Aaron Hutchins (13.7 ppg) and Anthony Pieper (11.6 ppg) anchor a deep Marquette backcourt.

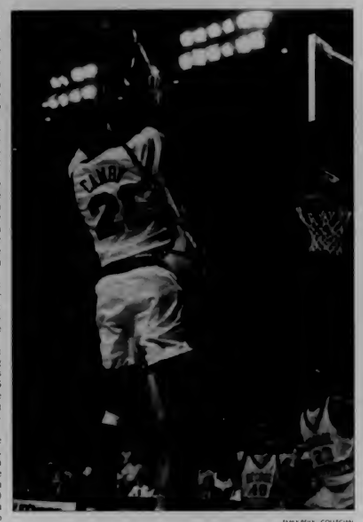
If No. 5 seeded Penn State starts getting hot from long range, especially Pete Lisicky (13.2 ppg) who has 84 treys on the year, they can beat any team on any given night.

The most daunting task that may cross the Minutemen's path is the No. 2 seed, Georgetown. John Thompson's Hoyas (26–7) has a very physical ball club down low with Othella Harrington, Boubacar Aw and Cheikh Jai–Jai Dia and will pose a problem on the glass for John Calipari's troops.

In the backcourt is the athletic twosome of Allen Iverson and Victor Page. Iverson, runner up for Big East Player of the Year, has been averaging over 30 points a game down the stretch for the Hoyas.

Page broke the Big East Tournament single game scoring record with 34 in the semifinals against Villanova. He averaged 23 points a game during the conference tourney and was named Most Outstanding Player in the tournament.

Also in Georgetown's half of the bracket lies No. 3 Texas Tech (28–1), only one of three teams along with UMass and Kentucky to finish the regular season with one loss. Dean Smith's No. 6 Tar Heels (20–10) which are always tournament tough and a highly underrated New Mexico (27–4) team, seeded seventh, that knocked off Utah in its Conference tournament final.



EMILY REIF · COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby and the Minutemen secured the No. 1 seed in East bracket of the NCAA Men's Basketball Tournament.

UMass claims 5th straight title, dismantles Colonials and Owls

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — For the fifth straight year the Minutemen put their stamp on the Atlantic 10 Tournament by downing the Temple Owls in the final 75–61, Sat. at the Philadelphia Civic Center.

"This is our tournament," Marcus Camby said after he and his Massachusetts basketball team won their quarterfinal game against St. Bonaventure. "And we came down here to claim our territory."

Massachusetts	75
Temple	61

Most Outstanding Player of the Tournament Carmelo Travieso lit up John Chaney's patented match–up zone defense to the tune of seven treys for a team high 21 points. In the three games against Temple this year, Travieso hit 19–of–35 from behind the three–point arc.

"I give a lot of credit to Edgar Padilla," Travieso said of his starting backcourt mate. "[He's always] setting me up for good shots. I don't even have to look at him on the floor when I'm setting up, because I know he'll give the ball in good position."

Also selected to the All–Tournament team with the UMass junior guard was teammate Marcus Camby, Temple's Marc Jackson, George Washington's Alexander Koul and Rhode Island's Tyson Wheeler.

At first, UMass looked like it would have an easy time taking home its fifth straight A–10 Tourney title as Bright hit two quick jumpers just 2:30 into the game to lead 9–2. But Temple, playing tired as three starters played all 40 minutes of their semifinal win the previous night, would not roll over.

Turn to HOOPS, page 7

UMass finally beats GW

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — Throughout this year there has been much talk of the Minutemen's success in broken records and extended streaks. With its fifth Atlantic 10 Conference Tournament win, regular season A–10 title, school record 31 wins in a season and a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament, to say this has been a good year is an understatement. However, one of the most important things that the Minutemen accomplished this past weekend was not allowing one streak to increase, that of George Washington's four consecutive wins against Massachusetts.

"The barrier was, they're the only guys that beat us, they're the only guys that really give us trouble," said UMass coach John Calipari. "Let's break that barrier going into the tournament knowing that there's no team in the country we can't play against."

George Washington has been a team in the past couple years that the Minutemen could not shake. They have been the only team to beat the Massachusetts at home in the William D. Mullins Center, not once, but twice. In the last four meetings the Minutemen just did not play UMass basketball. Their only loss this season was two weeks ago to GW by 10, 86–76.

Friday night was a different story. UMass came out of the box with intensity from the start and ran off to an early 37– 27 half time lead. From there it looked like the Minutemen would break the streak and be on their way to the title game the next day.

Turn to UMASS, page 7

Women's hoop earns first NCAA Tournament berth

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The cover of the Massachusetts women's basketball media guide reads "steps to success." Throughout the season, UMass steadily climbed toward the ultimate step, a berth in the NCAA Women's Basketball Tournament. Last night, the Minutewomen reached the top of the staircase obtaining that goal by securing a No. 8 seed in the Mid–East Division of the tournament.

The Minutewomen will travel to the Gampel Pavilion on Saturday in Storrs, Conn. to face No. 9 Michigan State at 6 p.m. in the first round of the tournament.

Leading up to this honor, UMass amassed a school record 20–9 season, competing in a tough out of conference schedule. Early on, the Minutewomen proved they had what it takes to secure a tournament spot when they beat national powerhouse Stanford 65–56 in the Mullins Center. Soon after, they played a close game against No. 1 Louisiana Tech on the Lady Techsters' home court.

Last season, the Minutewomen entered the postseason for the first time in 14 years playing in the National Women's Invitational Tournament.

UMass joins George Washington and Rhode Island as the representatives from the Atlantic 10. Despite some strong A– 10 teams, Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien, was confident that her team had a legitimate chance at a tournament berth.

"We were a little bummed after losing to GW and hadn't really started to think about what would happen later on down the line," O'Brien said. "As the week went on and we went through the whole thing and looked at our schedule and other teams' schedules and who they played and teams we played, we felt good." This is just the pick me up the Minutewomen could use after losing to George Washington in the semifinals of the A–10 Tournament.

O'Brien was all smiles as ESPN cameras captured this historical moment live from the Rafters Sports Bar in Amherst for the network's tournament selection show. Perhaps four of the biggest reasons to smile come from the four seniors Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter, the squad that form the coach's first recruiting class.

Thomas holds the school record in career rebounds and has been one of the key offensive forces for UMass in her four year tenure.

"She [Thomas] saw coming to UMass as an opportunity to get a great education and a lot of playing time and she has certainly made the most of that," O'Brien said.

Gurile has not missed a single game in her four years at UMass.

"I've had more people come up to me and compliment Melissa," O'Brien said, "because she is so

Turn to NCAA, page 7

MEN'S NCAA EAST REGIONAL BRACKET

1 Massachusetts
16 C. Florida

8 Bradley
9 Stanford

1st & 2nd Round at Providence C.C. March 14 &16

5 Penn State
12 Arkansas

4 Marquette
13 Monmouth

6 UNC
11 New Orleans

East Regional at the Georgia Dome March 21 & 23

3 Texas Tech.
14 N. Illinois

7 New Mexico
10 Kansas St.

1st & 2nd Round at Richmond Colliseum March 15 & 17

2 G. Town
15 Miss. Valley

UMass trounced by BU

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The movie Mary Reilly opened last week and the Massachusetts hockey team fittingly did its finest Jekyll & Hyde impression in this weekend's Hockey East quarterfinal match–up with No. 2 Boston University.

Boston Univ.	5
Massachusetts	2

Friday night the Minutemen played one of their better games of the season, despite falling 5–2 to the Terriers, controlling the play for extended periods of the game.

Boston Univ.	14
Massachusetts	1

In game two of the best–of–three series Saturday night, Mr. Hyde made his appearance as BU rambled to a 14–1 victory.

Before 1,569 fans at Walter Brown Arena, by far BU's smallest crowd of the year, home or away, UMass was not intimidated by the Terriers on Friday night.

UMass fell behind 2–0 on a pair of power play goals in the first period, but played even with the two–time defending Hockey East champions when at even strength.

The Minutemen went beyond merely playing even early in the second, and dominated the play for the first 14 minutes of the period.

Warren Norris would tally a power play goal at 8:04 of the second, collecting the rebound of a Tom Perry shot and beating BU netminder Tom Noble, to make it a 2–1 game.

"Give UMass credit, they played real hard and kept coming at us,"

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 93 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday March, 12 1996

Glass, men's Lax set to start season
The No. 11 UMass men's lacrosse team plays Hartford at Springfield College today in their season opener. (See Sports, page 10).

Dole searches for party unity
G.O.P. Presidential candidate Bob Dole trus to unify his party, while Jack Kemp and Steve Forbes feud (See story, page 3).

Don't fall for Lucy
Sarah Jessica Parker and Elle Macpherson (left) are objects of adoration in the lackluster comedy, If Lucy Fell (See Arts & Living page six).

Extended Forecast
The weather is getting progressively worse as we head toward the middle of the week. Yesterday's sun will be darting in and out today before hiding from Wednesday's impending rain.

	Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH:	40	40	45
LOW:	15	25	30

Students ask parents to help fight high tuition

RYAN TEZZI · COLLEGIAN

Freshmen Pre–Vet major, Denise Hale, and Plant and Soil Science major Alexander Howard, put in a few hours for the SATF's phone banking in hopes to reduce tuition at UMass.

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Student Center for Education and Research Advocacy (SCERA) is in the process of calling over 12,000 families of in state students in support of lower tuition and fees and more state funding.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. 10 to 20 student employees call parents and request them to call their state representative and express their concerns about the "fair share" budget for UMass.

"This is our third annual phone–banking," said Marc Kenen, the director of SCERA. "Each year our message is better refined. Legislators report dozens and dozens of phone calls concerning the fair share issue."

"Because parents have a high level of voter registration, they can have a tremendous impact on legislators," Kenen said.

The fair share budget involves a common formula in which the students and families pay for 33 percent of the cost of the student's education while state and private donations pay the rest.

However, at UMass, students pay 40 percent of their educational costs.

Freshman plant and soil sciences major Alexandra Howard said, "I had not heard of fair share until I began phone banking. Now I realize the importance for both students and parents to know about their rights."

The student callers begin their conversation by stating that they represent the Student Government Association (SGA) of UMass.

They then assure parents that they are not asking for money, instead they are calling to request help in saving $440 from the UMass tuition and fee bill.

"Of the 12 phone calls which I have made, 100 percent of the parents agreed to call their legislator," said sophomore communications major Kelly Bernie. "The parents are very enthusiastic, especially when we tell them that we are not asking for money."

Within an hour Howard called 15 parents, all of whom agreed to call their legislator.

"This definitely seems very effective in informing parents about their situation; the effectiveness is furthered by the Representative knowing about the parent's concern," Howard said.

Denise Hale, a freshman pre–vet major, was also very successful in her phone banking efforts. Nine of the 10 people whom she had called within the hour had agreed to make the call.

"It is so simple for the parents to make the call," Hale said. "Everyone wants to save money and with more effort, they will see the fair share budget enforced."

Kenen said that the phone banking has been a great way to get students involved with an issue which greatly concerns them.

"Students are not only helping in a great cause, they are also getting paid six dollars an hour for two and a half hours per night," Kenen said.

SCERA, which is located at 424 Student Union, will continue phone banking from April 1 to April 15.

U.S. watching China war games

Warships heading to Taiwan in response to intimidation

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At least one of three missiles fired by China in a recent test passed over Taiwan's territorial waters, a lawmaker who attended a CIA briefing said yesterday.

"Of the three missiles, at least one went over Taiwan's territorial waters on its way to the target," Sen. Frank Murkowski, R–Alaska, told the Associated Press.

The United States is moving warships closer off Taiwan in response to China's plans to stage live–fire war games near the island. The exercise is part of its escalating intimidation against the Taipei government.

Murkowski said the CIA has set up a task force to closely monitor China's military moves.

China's M–9 missiles are highly capable intermediate range weapons, Murkowski said, able to elude the most advanced missile defense systems now in service.

The CIA task force of China experts was particularly busy midday during Murkowski's visit to the agency's Langley, Va., headquarters. That's when the missile test activity, nighttime on the other side of the world, is most likely.

"We've got theater aircraft, satellites, our traditional means of surveillance," Murkowski said.

Republicans and Democrats supported the president's decision to move warships nearer to Taiwan.

"I do think it's a good idea," said Senate Majority Whip Trent Lott, R–Miss. "I don't know what option we have."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D–S.D., said China's policy of intimidation "could undermine U.S.–Chinese relations in a very severe manner."

"We need to send as strong and clear a message as we can that activity like that is not acceptable," Daschle said.

Besides moving a naval battle group led by the aircraft carrier USS Independence to within about 100 miles of Taiwan, the Pentagon plans to pull the carrier USS Nimitz out of the Persian Gulf earlier than scheduled. The Nimitz battle group is due in the vicinity of Taiwan in about two weeks, a senior defense official said yesterday.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Sunday the Independence would sail somewhat closer to Taiwan, but he was not more specific. The Independence and its escort ships had been within about 200 miles of Taiwan last week as they monitored China's test firing of three unarmed ballistic missiles.

Sen. Bob Dole, campaigning in the Republican presidential primary in Florida, said yesterday, "I support sending a strong signal to China. In a sense, they may be testing the president." Christopher noted on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the Navy had sent the Nimitz and escort ships through the Taiwan Strait in December to show support for Taiwan.

He did not say whether the U.S. warships would enter the 6,600 square–mile area designated by China for live–ammunition exercises. But he said, "We're concerned to make sure that those forces, that carrier battle group, are in a position to be helpful if they need to be."

The Nimitz had been scheduled to leave the Persian Gulf in April to return to its home port at Bremerton, Wash. The plan now is for it to leave on March 15.

U.S.–Israeli pact a possibility

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's trip to the Middle East is the first step toward a strategic anti–terrorism and intelligence agreement between the United States and Israel, one designed to bolster Israel's capacity to make peace securely, diplomatic sources said Monday.

The agreement, now in preparation, would be announced in April during a visit to Washington by Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. One intended purpose is to enhance Peres' prospects for winning election May 29 against the Likud opposition.

Clinton goes to Israel after participating Wednesday in the "Summit of the Peacemakers" at Sharm el–Sheik, the Israeli–built resort on Egypt's Red Sea coast.

"Leaders from the Middle East and around the world will stand as one for peace in the Middle East, together to combat the merchants of hatred with every means at our command," Clinton said Monday night in New York.

Accepting an award for his work in Northern Ireland, the president added: "We must not let the terrorists in the Middle East have the victory they seek — the death of every hope for peace."

Clinton plans to leave Secretary of State Warren Christopher behind in Jerusalem, and that stopover will result in a formal counterterrorism agreement, providing for shared intelligence information and counterterrorism expertise and equipment.

CIA Director John Deutch is accompanying the president to the summit, and will contribute to finalizing the accord. The larger strategic agreement, which stops short of a mutual defense treaty, will include counterterrorism provisions and others still under consideration, said the diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. An administration source confirmed the account. After suicide bombers rocked Israel and staggered the peace process, Clinton last week approved recommendations of his national security advisers and sent some equipment and technical experts to Israel. Philip C. Wilcox Jr., U.S. coordinator for counterterrorism is due to go to Israel later this month.

The agreement to be announced in Israel will embellish this help, providing for a continuing cooperation arrangement. It and the security accord due in April are designed to flesh out Clinton's promise to stand by Israel as it takes risk for peace. Peres slumped badly in the polls after the bombings, boosting the chances of Likud leader Benjamin Netanyahu to defeat him and take over as prime minister. Netanyahu is less inclined than Peres and other senior Labor Party leaders to entrust security on the West Bank and Gaza to the Palestinian Authority or to give up more land in exchange for Arab recognition.

Clinton, meanwhile, is encouraging cooperation in countering terrorism between Israel and Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority. Some of the equipment delivered by the United States is to be shared with Arafat's police.

"Tomorrow I will go to Egypt to try to advance that cause (of peace) and beat back the terrorism that threatens it today," Clinton said in New Jersey, while on a political trip.

Clinton said he agreed with those who say there can be no peace unless Israel is secure.

"The United States has been very insistent that Arafat take stronger steps to crack down," Clinton said. "And in recent days there's some encouraging signs that he has. Some important arrests have been made."

Police arrest two after Springfield fund–raiser shootings

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — In the wake of two arrests, police today were trying to figure out what sparked a fatal shooting at a fund–raiser for legal costs of a gang member convicted of an earlier murder.

The shooting at the fund–raising party left one man dead and a teen–ager wounded.

Police said David Allen, 17, was arrested on murder charges. Gloria Santiago, 17, was arrested on accessory charges for allegedly hiding Allen from police. Both of Springfield, they were arrested overnight at her home by Springfield police.

"It was kind of tense there for a few minutes, because he was lying down and would not obey the orders of the officers," said Capt. Elmer McMahon of Springfield police.

He said a gun was recovered but would not say what kind. Authorities were checking to decide if it is the same gun used in the shootings at the party.

Allen was expected to be arraigned today in Springfield District Court.

Investigators said shots broke out shortly before 12:30 a.m. Sunday during the party at a duplex. About 100 people were at the party.

Tyrone Raiford, 20, of Springfield, was shot once in the chest and pronounced dead at Baystate Medical Center around 6 a.m. Police said the other victim, Charnell Oates, 17, also of Springfield, was in stable condition at Baystate. Her wounds were not believed to be life–threatening.

McMahon said police do not believe the shooting at the party was related to the earlier gang killing by Jason Iiles. That murder occurred outside a Springfield restaurant when Carlos Falcon was mistaken for a member of a rival gang. Iiles was convicted of first–degree murder on Dec. 6, and the party was held to help raise money for his legal costs.

However, police said the violence Sunday appeared to erupt out of an argument during the party. It was not immediately clear if there was any gang connection at all.

The investigation remained active, police said.

Prosecutors attempt to destroy Salvi insanity

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

DEDHAM — Just because John C. Salvi III had an "A" average in beauty school, moved into his own apartment and kept up bank accounts does not mean he is sane, a psychiatrist testified Monday as the defense rested its case.

"A paranoid schizophrenic can be much more organized and have more clarity of thought" than people with other forms of the mental illness, Dr. David Bear told the Norfolk Superior Court jury.

Salvi's lawyers say he was a slave to convoluted conspiracy theories that pitted Roman Catholics against the Mafia, Freemasons and the Ku Klux Klan, and saw himself as a warrior for good when he armed himself with a .22 caliber rifle and handgun and raked two abortion clinics with gunfire Dec. 30, 1994. Two people were killed and five others wounded.

Prosecutors dispute the insanity claims, and say it was Salvi's strong anti–abortion beliefs, as demonstrated by his past participation in anti–abortion rallies, that led him to kill. After the shootings, "Salvi never declared, 'I've just saved the Catholic people,' did he?" prosecutor Marianne Hinkle asked Bear.

"No he did not," Bear said.

Nor did Salvi boast of saving unborn babies, Bear said under further questioning by defense attorney Janice Bassil.

Bear conducted 15 hours of interviews with Salvi in jail. He also has testified in other high–profile cases, including the trial of John Hinckley Jr., who was found innocent by reason of insanity in the 1981 shooting of President Reagan.

Bear said Salvi was obsessed with bizarre delusions, such as that nurses in hospitals were injecting newborn Catholic babies with spermicide to sterilize them, and that in the future, there will be surgery to implant computer chips in people's fingers to keep track of them.

The delusions went far beyond unusual beliefs that Salvi shared with some fringe groups, such as that the Freemasons were involved in a conspiracy against Catholics, he said.

"If you took John Salvi's writings to some of these fringe groups, they'd tell you get lost, is that right?" Bassil asked. "Yes," Bear replied.

A string of defense witnesses — including Salvi's father, uncle and aunt — have testified about Salvi's odd behavior during five weeks of testimony. They said he withdrew from his high school friends, began reading the Bible constantly and became obsessed with fighting evil.

He told Bear that he thought a Catholic militia should be formed and led by priests armed with M–16s and pistols.

Prosecutors argue that Salvi meticulously planned the shootings, practicing at a shooting range, withdrawing money before the attacks and cutting his hair to hide his identity after the killings.

If convicted of first–degree murder in the attacks at the Planned Parenthood and Preterm Health Services clinics, Salvi faces mandatory life in prison without the possibility of parole. If acquitted by reason of insanity, he will be committed to a state hospital until deemed sane.

RYAN TEZZI · COLLEGIAN

HEADS DOWN?

Freshmen Bio–Chem major Pepe–Yeslow–Finn, decides to take the easy way down to the ATM's in the campus center basement.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, March 12

Workshop — There will be an free introductory tutoring workshop offred by the Learning Resource Center from 3 to 5 p.m. in Room 1038 of the W.E.B. Du Bois Tower Library. Call 545-5334 by Tuesday, Mar. 5 to register.

Meeting — The Hunger and Homelessness Campaign will hold a general interest meeting specifically involving the Hunger Clean-up. RSO representatives and all else interested are welcome and encouraged to attend. The meeting will be held in the MASSPIRG office, 423A Student Union at 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Revisiting Clarendon Heights: Ain't No Makin' It, Updated," a brown bag colloquim presentation, featuring the author of Ain't No Makin' It: Leveled Aspirations in a Low Income Neighborhood, Jay MacLeod, will take place at 12 p.m. in the Thompson 6th floor lounge. Sponsored by the Sociology Department and Social Thought and Political Economy Program.

Music — The Five College Early Music Collegium, directed by Robert Einstein, will present a program of music for the Easter Mass in Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, at 8 p.m. The voices and medieval and rennaisance instruments of the Collegium will join in presenting Gregorian chant and settings of Easter music written between the 11th and 17th centuries. Composers represented will include Leonin, Perotin, Isaac, Josquin and Gabrieli. Admission in free and open to the public. For further information, contact the Early Music Program Office at 538- 2079.

Film — RAIL will be presenting Green Guerillas at 7 p.m. in 805 Campus Center. The film documents the struggles of the New Peoples Army and the indigenous Mandayan people to save the last rainforests in the Philippines.

Meeting — There will be an SATF relief rally meeting to organize the SATF rally on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Earthbloods. All RSOs must attend, and students are welcome. For more information contact Arik at 545-3434.

Lecture — New York University art history professor Carol Karinsky will speak on "The Architecture of a Minority: Synagogues in Europe" at 4 p.m. in 319 Bartlett.

Workshop — Golden Key National Honor Society will be sponsoring a workshop for anyone who is interested in learning about co-ops. It is free of cost and will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 804.

Lecture — The Program in (Former) Soviet & East European Studies presents Dr. Alla Skvortsova, senior researcher from the Institution of National Minorities, Chisinau, who will be speaking on the topic; "Current Ethnopolitics in Moldava" at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 601.

Wednesday, March 13

Dancing — Intermix presents "Something Divine" gay night, featuring local diva Christo, at Club Metro on 492 Pleasant St. in Northampton.

Meeting — The HANDS club, the UMass sign language club, will meet at 7 p.m. in 217 Herter. For more information call the HANDS office at 545-1925 or Shawna at 253-0516.

Meeting — The Drum and Dance Collective, a new RSO, will be having a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. The focus of the group is to bring diverse music and dance to UMass. Ideas are encouraged. For more information, call Aimee at 527-1443.

Lecture — Exercise science professor Gary Kamen will lecture on "Human Motor-Unit Firing Behavior" at noon in 319 Morrill Science Center-South. For more information call 545-2046.

Seminar — Gary Kamen, of the UMass exercise science department, will present "Human Motor-Unit Firing Behavior" as part of the Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminar Series. It will take place in 319 Morrill South at noon.

Meeting — The UMass Film Society will hold an informational meeting for people interested in making movies at 7 p.m. in the Foreign Language Resource Center, Herter Hall.

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with The Education of a Singer at the Beijing Opera, about operal singer Wang Runquing's rigorous training at the Conservatory of Beijing National Opera. Lecture by executive director Amy Chin to follow the free 7 p.m. showing in Herter 231.

Thursday, March 14

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be making a banner for protecting whales at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. for more information, call the ARC office at 545-0358.

Meeting — A mass meeting to form a day of action, coalition to mobilize a March rally for access to education, ending of attacks on affirmative action, abolishment of sexual and gender oppression and an end to corporate degradation of the environment will take place at 7 p.m. in Room 162-75 in the Campus Center Basement.

Thursday, March 21

Lecture — Migraine sufferers are invited to attend Franklin Medical Center's "News About Migraine, Important Information for Sufferers," at 6:30 p.m. in Franklin Medical Center's conference rooms. Dr. Joseph Viadero will be the featured speaker. Fro registration and more information, contact The Professionals at (413) 773-8557.

Notices

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work-Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and building two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586-5812 or 549-2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

Campus Police Log

Assault & battery
March 9
Kali K. Robinson, 24, of 93 Munroe St., Roxbury was arrested for assault and battery, possession of a class D substance and for a warrant.

Vandalism
March 7
An individual reported the soft top on her vehicle was slashed in Parking Lot 49.

A PVTA bus driver on Clark Hill Road requested assistance with an individual who was damaging the bus.

March 8
A fire extinguisher was thrown through a Coolidge Residence Hall window.

A window was broken on a vehicle in Parking Lot 44.

March 9
There was damage to a tenth floor bathroom of John Q. Adams Residence Hall.

Homophobic graffiti was written on a Kennedy Residence Hall door.

A windshield was damaged on a vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

There was graffiti written on fourth floor walls of Kennedy Residence Hall.

March 10
Graffiti was written on Patterson Residence Hall.

An individual reported his convertible top cut while his vehicle was parked near Gorman Residence Hall.

Health/ safety hazard
March 7
A ballast in a Goodell Library light fixture was smoking.

March 9
A fire pull station was torn from the wall of Mackimie Residence Hall.

March 10
A ceiling in Goessmann Laboratory was leaking.

Water was leaking through the ceiling on the second floor of Tobin Residence Hall.

There was a smell of gasoline in the County Circle area. Environment, Health and Safety checked it.

Accident
March 7
Two vehicles on Governors Drive were in an accident. No injuries were reported.

There were no injuries after a Southwest Circle two vehicle accident.

A minor two vehicle accident on Hicks Way was reported. There were no injuries.

A vehicle in Parking Lot 79 was struck by a snowplow.

A two vehicle accident on Sylvan Drive resulted in minor damage.

There was a report of a vehicle that struck two other vehicles in Parking Lot 12. The vehicle left the scene. The incident is currently under investigation.

March 9
There was a vehicle off the road on Route 116 south bound. Amherst Police were notified.

March 10
A vehicle caused damage to another vehicle in Parking Lot 64 and left the scene.

Assault & battery
March 7
An individual in the Campus Center was being assaulted. The matter was referred to court.

Assist agency
March 8
Police were called for traffic control for snow plowing operations on Southwest Circle.

Larceny
March 8
A computer telephone connector was reported stolen from the Engineering Building.

An individual in John Adams Residence Hall reported charges on credit cards he does not own.

There was a report of a tailgate stolen from a truck in Parking Lot 44.

A telephone was stolen form a Gorman Hall Residence room.

March 9
An individual in Gorman Residence Hall reported his jacket and wallet stolen.

March 10
A bicycle was stolen from Lewis Residence Hall.

A credit card was reported stolen from John Adams Residence Hall.

An individual reported to University Police his license plate stolen.

Suspicious person / activity
March 10
Tyler J. Moak, 22, of 33 Marlboro St., Newburyport was arrested on a warrant arrest.

Annoying behavior
March 8
An individual on Infirmary Way reported threatening behavior by a motorist due to a traffic tie-up.

There was a report of snow boarders in Clark Hill Road.

Homophobic graffiti was written on a Washington Residence Hall doorway.

March 9
Furniture was thrown from the second floor balcony of Moore Residence Hall.

An elevator in Washington Residence Hall was stuck on the 17th floor.

Medical emergency
March 8
An individual caught a knee between two vehicles in Sylvan Drive. He declined medical treatment.

An individual in Patterson Residence Hall was unresponsive. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Disturbance
March 9
There was a minor scuffle in Mackimie Residence Hall between two individuals.

March 10
A verbal argument in Moore Residence Hall between two individuals was resolved.

Family offenses, domestics
March 9
There was a violation of a restraining order.

Missing person
March 10
An individual reported missing in William D. Mullins Center was located by relatives.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

You Gotta Get One!

$12.99
Sizes: M, L, XL
Phone lines are open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day, or stop in at the University Store, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mon. thru Fri.
MAIL ORDER
Shipped same day!
Add $3.00 Shipping & Handling
TO ORDER CALL
1-800-UMASS-94
Complete line of Refuse to Lose tees in stock!
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open Monday - Friday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
Located in the Campus Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Joseph Fountain for Student Trustee

As Student Trustee, Joseph will work toward:
- More call boxes around campus, better escort services and an education program to prevent violent crimes.
- Revisions of the harassment policy, so that it is fair to all students.
- Subsidizing of child care or undergrads with children and expansion of the present child care program.
- A better, more affordable, meal plan that is fair for all students.
- More University aid and grants for undergraduates and with my salary as Student Trustee, I will set up 12 $200 book grants for students who demonstrate financial need.

HE'LL GET THE JOB DONE.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW
will be having our St. Patrick's Day Raffle on Wednesday March 13th!
Come buy a Shamrock for $5 and Receive $5 in Mad Money & a Surprise Gift. Your Shamrock will be used for our St. Paddy's Drawing
1st Prize: $50 Gift Certificate to Pinocchio's
2nd Prize: $25 to Pub and lots more!
THURSDAY NITE IS PARTY NIGHT!
MIKE'S 22OZ. BIG ONE - DRINK OF THE WEEK
WATCH UMASS PLAY IN THE NCAA PLAYOFFS
FREE BUFFET DURING UMASS GAMES

...and you do the hokey pokey...
The UMass cheerleaders and coach John Calipari get the fans pumped up for this year's NCAA tournement which starts Thursday in Providence.

Clinton proposes environmental tax breaks

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

HACKENSACK, N.J. — In a stinging denunciation of Republican clean-earth policies, President Clinton accused Congress on Monday of engineering an "anti-environmental campaign" in concert with industrial lobbyists.

Making his first election-year address on the environment, Clinton proposed $2 billion in tax breaks for companies that clean up and develop land contaminated by toxic waste. And he promised more vetoes for bills he thinks would undermine the environment. "When it comes to protecting our air, our food, our water, I cannot sacrifice America's values or America's future," Clinton told a crowd of 6,000 at Fairleigh Dickinson University.

Fighting a bad winter cold, Clinton also traveled to neighboring New York City to be honored as Irish America magazine's "Irish American of the Year." The president, who heads to Egypt today for an anti-terrorism summit, also met in Hackensack with families of two American victims of Middle East bombings.

In his main address of the day, Clinton called for a bipartisan approach to environmental control — a point easily lost in a highly partisan speech.

"It is incredible to me now that the environment has, for the first time in a generation, has become a source of political division," the president said.

His voice cracking from his cold, Clinton added, "Congress has mounted the most aggressive anti-environmental campaign in our history. And I am proud that we have stood against that." Poll after poll shows Clinton making strides against Republicans by portraying them as enemies of the environment. Every word and every photo here was designed to capitalize on that.

Republicans argue that the Environmental Protection Agency is a bulky bureaucracy that overregulates. EPA money and rules can be trimmed without hurting the environment, the GOP says.

Clinton began the day with a tour of a Superfund site in nearby Wellington, N.J. His motorcade rolled past a sign reading, "Danger: Hazardous Waste" and wound down to the bottom of a bowl-shaped field that consists of 20,000 tons of snow-covered, PCB-contaminated soil.

At the rim of the field stood an elementary school, its students lining a security fence and shouting down happily to Clinton. He was told that cleanup work at the abandoned Industrial Latex site stopped last year after Congress imposed a 25 percent cut in the Superfund budget.

"We cannot afford to just stop things like this," Clinton replied.

Though the GOP budget included a major cut for Superfund projects, so did a stopgap spending bill signed by the president this year to reopen the government.

The EPA says the budget restraints forced the agency to abandon cleanup work at 60 other toxic waste dump sites across the country. After years of bipartisan environmental reforms, Clinton said, Congress worked hand-in-hand with business lobbies to roll back environmental reforms in the past year.

His tax incentive plan — nicknamed "brownfields" — underscores his argument that a healthy environment and healthy economy are not mutually exclusive. It also goes to the heart of voters' concerns about the environment: They don't want toxic waste in the neighborhood.

The program, which Clinton mentioned in his State of the Union address, allows companies to deduct the cost of cleaning up industrial sites that are tainted but not in such bad shape that they qualify as Superfund sites. It would cost the government $2 billion over seven years.

VOTE '96

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Day by day, bit by bit, presidential candidates have gone beyond the central message of their campaigns to visit a range of issues as broad as the country they want to lead.

The Associated Press is asking major Republican candidates and President Clinton to respond to one question each weekday during the primary season.

Here are questions and answers from the series. Some questions are from a survey by the nonpartisan group Project Vote Smart. Only Steve Forbes, repeatedly invited to take part, has not responded.

Do you support federal subsidies for the arts?

Bill Clinton

"The National Endowment for the Arts — in partnership with individuals, corporations and foundations — has brought art and culture to communities large and small throughout the country. The arts provide Americans of varied backgrounds an opportunity to share experiences they otherwise may not have. Federal subsidies for the arts — less than 0.02 percent of the federal budget — help attract tourists, stimulate business, and expand the tax base. This small investment expands the education and cultural base of all Americans."

Bob Dole

"I opposed the establishment of the National Endowment for the Arts in 1965 and I continue to question why the federal government should be actively involved in the culture business. I support the elimination of the NEA."

Pat Buchanan

"No. Federal subsidies should be phased out and ended."

Whitewater prosecutor claims funds went into McDougal's account

By James Jefferson
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — As governor, Bill Clinton helped secure a $300,000 business loan for one of his Whitewater partners that she instead put into her personal checking account, a federal prosecutor said Monday.

Susan McDougal had told financier David Hale that she was going to use the money for her real estate marketing company, prosecutor Ray Jahn said in his opening statement. Hale later spoke with Clinton at the Capitol about the loan, Jahn said.

Jahn alleged that Mrs. McDougal, her ex-husband, James McDougal and Clinton's successor, Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, obtained nearly $3 million in illegal loans from Hale in the mid-1980s.

"It was the intention of the defendants to go in, obtain the money, make their profits and sneak the money back," Jahn said. "This was nearly the perfect crime. Until David Hale came forward in 1993, the crime was undiscovered."

Defense attorneys attacked Hale's credibility and urged jurors not to believe him.

"He was a fraud from the top of his head to the bottom of his feet," said Tucker's lawyer W.H. "Buddy" Sutton.

Tucker and the McDougals are accused of arranging sales of real estate at inflated prices to funnel extra money into Hale's Capital Management Services Inc., a Small Business Administration-backed lender. McDougal faces 19 charges, Tucker 11 and Mrs. McDougal eight.

Jahn said everything about the loans appeared proper, but that because of plotting to overvalue property and determining who would get loans, the three broke the law, Jahn said.

"The fraud was in the lies told and the truth concealed," he said.

During a break in Jahn's statement, Tucker said he didn't recall the events the same way as prosecutors.

"I've heard almost nothing that was accurate," Tucker said. McDougal defense attorney Sam Heuer said "That meeting between Hale and Clinton at the Capitol never, ever, ever took place." Clinton has called Hale's claims "a bunch of bull." Clinton is expected to testify in person, via videotape or by satellite for the defense, probably sometime in early April.

Neither Clinton nor first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton are charged in the case.

Before court convened Monday, McDougal said he declined an offer of immunity from the government in exchange for his testimony. Government lawyers denied making the offer.

Jahn acknowledged that Hale was a convicted felon but maintained he was a trusted member of a circle of conspirators until he began cooperating with Whitewater investigators.

Clinton, Hillary Rodham Clinton and the McDougals were partners in the Whitewater land development in northern Arkansas. The Clintons say they were only passive investors.

Jahn gave his opening statement to a nine woman, three-man jury after U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. reinstated a black woman he said was improperly excluded by the prosecution.

Dole searches for Republican unity; Forbes, Kemp feud

By John King
Associated Press

DANIA, Fla. — With one eye already turned toward a fall showdown with President Clinton, Bob Dole yesterday urged rivals Steve Forbes and Pat Buchanan to rethink their presidential candidacies if they fare poorly in this week's "Super Tuesday" primaries. Fielding questions from reporters in Florida, Dole, the faraway Republican front-runner, said he expected a big day today, when Texas, Florida and five other states divvy up 362 convention delegates. Dole leads everywhere and could end the day well past the halfway mark in the nomination chase.

"Then I would hope we can come together as a party and as a team," Dole said. "What I want to do is bring the party together and beat Bill Clinton."

Dole said he hadn't spoken to either rival about quitting but said if he has another big primary day, "obviously we will be looking for signals that might indicate a willingness to come aboard."

Forbes, however, seemed to be in no mood to think of quitting. Yesterday he rebuked his old friend, Jack Kemp, for talking about acting as a broker with the Dole campaign. Forbes called Kemp's suggestion "totally out of bounds."

"I'll certainly be in San Diego. I'm in this for the duration," Forbes said in another interview.

And Buchanan told a radio interview that "The future of the party does not belong to Senator Dole and the old bulls in the Senate."

In the interest of unity, Dole passed up several opportunities to pick a fight with Buchanan, who has been scathingly critical of Dole.

Dole said he hadn't given a moment's thought to what role Buchanan might play at the August GOP convention, though he did say Buchanan's leverage depended on how many delegates he amassed. And Dole declined to comment on Buchanan's warning that anti-abortion voters would bolt the party if Dole selected Colin Powell or someone else who supports abortion rights as his running mate. Dole said he hadn't begun to think about running mates.

As Dole headed from Florida to Texas, Buchanan acknowledged he had little hopes of surprising the front-runner on "Super Tuesday."

"We may have a rough day today," Buchanan said.

But he said he wasn't about to quit.

"We're going forward because I represent a cause and the people who are behind me want me to represent that cause in the Republican convention, ..." Buchanan said this morning. "We're going to San Diego to do battle for the things we believe in," he said. Forbes wasn't offering any predictions about today, but promised to stay in the race despite the results.

His top worry was trying to calm internal campaign turmoil caused by Kemp, the former housing secretary who endorsed Forbes last week but began talking Sunday or brokering a deal with Dole that would get Forbes out of the race.

Suggesting Forbes might not be in the race much longer, Kemp said Sunday that, "I have a lot of friends in the Dole camp and maybe, if he asked me, at the right time, to help build a bridge to the party or to Dole, I could play that role."

Perfectly Natural
LOSE WEIGHT BY SPRING BREAK!
5% off any bottle or program
Ready to put on that bathing suit?
We have every confidence that we carry the best weight loss programs available!
SAFE, EASY, effective, all natural herbal combos STANDARDIZED
Herbal Health & Fitness Products
321 Main St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)253-7716 • Closed Wed

Northwestern College of Chiropractic
Professional Success Through Clinical Excellence

For 53 years, Northwestern College of Chiropractic has been preparing doctors of chiropractic. We have more than 3,000 graduates across the globe who are successful, productive clinical practitioners.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic will provide you:

- A well-rounded, rigorous education integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics and practice management
- Clinical education through every step of the curriculum, beginning with hands-on chiropractic technique classes in the first trimester
- Limited enrollment, small classes (11:1 student to faculty ratio), individual attention from faculty, and easy access to educational resources
- Clinical internships within 35 Minnesota community clinics and five College public clinics
- A research center known internationally as a leader in clinically-controlled research trials, which is dedicated to advancing the knowledge of chiropractic
- Extensive financial aid resources
- Final term, full-time private practice internships in clinics around the world

For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern Admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777. You'll discover the exceptional difference an education at Northwestern can make in your life.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic
2501 West 84th Street
Bloomington, MN 55431
1-800-888-4777

Hey Hoop Fans!

Re-live the thrill of UMass Basketball with the Minuteman Hoop Band! Our CD/Tape, recorded live at the Mullins Center, captures the talent of the Hoop Band in action!

Don't miss out! Simply mail back the order form below!

UMass Hoop Band CD/Tape Order Form

NAME
ADDRESS
CITY STATE ZIP

CDs x $15.00
Tapes x $14.00
TOTAL:
Office Use

Minuteman Hoop Band CD/Tape - Old Chapel - University of Massachusetts - Amherst, MA 01003-6100
COL

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni F. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gaules Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara-Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotte Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Olbert Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Werner Distribution Manager
Arina Feden Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradyst News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reh Photography Editor Marty Pappa Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Calvon Staff Artist Cases Kane Librarian

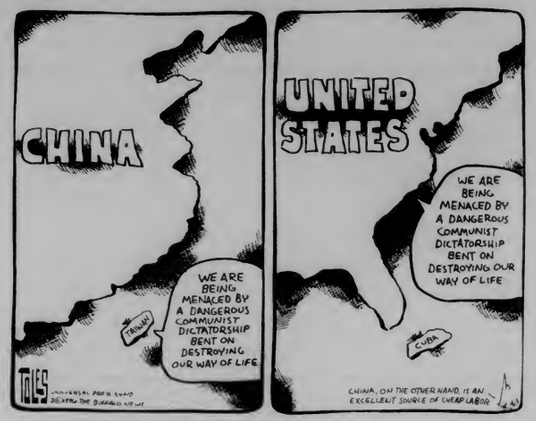
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Fri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.



CHINA
WE ARE BEING MENACED BY A DANGEROUS COMMUNIST DICTATORSHIP BENT ON DESTROYING OUR WAY OF LIFE
TRUMP
UNITED STATES
WE ARE BEING MENACED BY A DANGEROUS COMMUNIST DICTATORSHIP BENT ON DESTROYING OUR WAY OF LIFE
CUBA
TOLES
CHINA, ON THE OTHER HAND, IS AN EXCELLENT SOURCE OF CHEAP LABOR

Die–ning in

Man, I miss the Dining Commons.

I never thought I'd say that. I've been free from the grease pits for two years now and I'm starting to wish I was still welcomed.

There's only so much pasta a body can take. I'm starting to speak Italian. Plus, the cost of food is outrageous — I used to like cereal, but have you seen the cost of that stuff? Mr. Kellogg must be loaded.

So, I do what any other off-campus student does: buy tons of Ramen noodles. It's like fooling your body that your actually getting a full meal. Have you ever looked at the nutritional contents of these bad boys? There's something like eight grams of fat. How can there be that much fat in water, noodles and broth?

The worst thing about them is they have no vitamins or nutrients to offer the system.

A kid in my health class told me what he does to ensure nutritional balance, but still spend only two dollars a day on meals.

"OK, you eat Ramen noodles for every meal, but you break-up a Centrum pill in it to make sure you get all the vitamins."

Scurvy-free Ramen.

So this Centra-Ramen has you covered from A to Zinc, but I'd go bonkers after a while — sometimes I need a change. College student budgets just don't leave a lot of room for change. I actually found myself clipping coupons and putting them in an envelope. I felt like my mom. Next thing you know, I'll be wiping off my friend's faces with a wet tissue.

Tim White

The Scan Saver card at Stop and Shop can either be a life saver or a death knell. If what you need (like Ramen and Centrum for example) is on sale with a Scan Saver, life is good. But sometimes, you end up buying stuff you don't really need.

"Oh wow, buy one get two free boxes of parrot food."

"Tim, we don't own a parrot."

"Yeah, but two free, you can't go wrong."

The same guy who practices the Ramen fortified with vitamins thing told me he was going to try and get food stamps.

"I told my dad," he said. "He almost had a heart attack ... no, I swear to God, he almost had a heart attack. He kept saying 'no son of mine is getting food stamps.'"

I'd be like, "Dad, if you sent me money, maybe I could uphold the family name."

I don't see anything wrong with food stamps ... just don't tell your parents.

I always try to weasel my way to get my friends to put me on one of those two precious "Guest Meals" they have at the D.C. When I do get in, I line my pockets with plastic and bring in some severe Tupperware action.

"Hey, you can't leave with that!"

"What are you going to do ... kick me off the meal plan? Ha ha ha!"

People have the weirdest combination of foods when they eat at the D.C. — I would never eat like that at home with my folks.

Can you imagine sitting at your dining room table with a chicken puck on your plate and a side of french fries, no vegetables. A glass of chocolate milk, a glass of Hi-C lemonade and a glass of Coke. Followed by a third course of Lucky Charms and an ice cream sundae.

My mom would have a gerbil if she saw me eating like that. But, we cover the four of the five main food groups: some kind of meat, a liquid of some sort, vegetables (french fries) and the desert food group.

The fifth group, beer, is taken care of uptown.

I'm getting a little better at cooking though. When I do get my hands on a steak, I don't turn it into a leather jacket anymore.

I've started to get kind of cocky behind the old stove-top, like combining the hot dogs right into the baked beans instead of separate, or like, making coffee. Hey, I have to start slow; I'm "cooking-challenged."

Maybe I should just start jamming vitamins into my Ramen noodles.

I don't think there's a cure for rickets, is there?

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

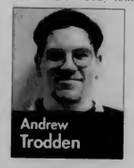
UMass vs. Mother Nature

Last week brought this campus yet another wonderful pile of that glorious, glistening menace we choose to call snow.

At the dawn of winter the occasional snowfall can certainly make the landscape a beautiful sight rivaled only by the stars in the sky. But by winter's end an additional 15 inches poses nothing but an annoying delay to the onset of spring.

Unfortunately for the numerous amounts of pedestrians here at UMass the delay of spring is not the only obstacle we must hurdle. There's also the knee deep snow that must be traversed on our way to classes on a day such as last Thursday or Friday.

Oh what a treat this is, as a typical five minute walk turns into the human Iditarod.



Andrew Trodden

Where's Yukon Cornelius and his hefty pick axe when you need him?

The sidewalks and paths on this campus have seemingly been "overlooked" — things that could, shall we say, use a little shoveling. The plows around here seem to put 100 percent of their effort into making the roads and parking lots so clean the Virgin Mary would be delighted to eat off of them. Whereas the only dinner we'll be served is a mouthful of snow after falling ass-over-tea kettle into a pile of dirt riddled slush that just got plowed onto the sidewalk.

It would sure be nice to walk to class without the fear of having to be carried the rest of the way after slipping a disc during a stunning rendition of the agony of defeat. Maybe that's what it will take for someone to wake up and realize that the sidewalks are more important than Joe Schmoe finding a parking spot without having to drive his 4x4 through, what it considers, a Lilliputian amount of snow.

I know that if I were to hurt myself after falling in snow that should have been removed there'd be hell to pay. I'd round up whoever is responsible, ask them what they want on their Tombstone pizza, then let the firing squad have at it. Because there's no way I'm taking a ride in an ambulance without somebody taking the trip with me.

However, should that little drive take place, I'm quite sure the roads will be clear.

This University is continually coming up with new and creative ways of telling us, the students, that they are not concerned with our well-being, just our checkbooks.

Well now that you've got our money, here's a little free advice for some wise investments.

Shovels!

And I don't mean those dinky, little pooper scooping things. I'm talking about good old industrial strength, working on the chain gang, snow shovels. Oh and while you're at the hardware store you may want to pick up a bag or two of concrete to do some much needed patchwork around campus, namely that sandy, skid mark of a beach alongside the campus pond that has virtually been turned into a duck trough.

Winter is bound to happen every year, and with it there is a good chance snow is not far behind.

While true it may be that McNeeley's had a better chance against Tyson than we do against Mother Nature, there's no reason why a certain compromise can't be safely and comfortably attained. If a safe environment cannot be created for the students then we should not have our safety compromised by trudging through hazardous conditions.

Really, I mean it was dangerous enough for McNeeley to even get in the ring with Tyson, but imagine if he had his hands tied behind his back.

So instead of waiting till the day is almost over to close the University, close it earlier in the morning. I find it hard to believe that this action would cause such a catastrophic amount of irreparable damage that it would necessitate endangering the students to prevent this Armageddon. If it would cause immeasurable damage then pick up your brand-spanking new shovel and get to shoveling.

Allow me to put it in terms the execs might understand. Shoveling... lawsuit... shoveling... lawsuit... real tough decision.

It's unfortunate that none of this really matters at this time, as winter is nearly over, but it will return to be sure.

For now I'm sitting on the edge of my seat eagerly awaiting the arrival of spring so this University can break the suspense by showing us how, even in spring, it can manage to turn our lives on campus into little runs through the gauntlet.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Been there, done that

I hate UMass. It's too cold. I wish I went to school in Florida." "I'm so sick of the bars here. They're always too crowded. You have to go out before nine if you even want to think about getting a table." Do you know how many times I've heard these statements in the last couple months? I'm sure you've heard them also. You might even have uttered these words yourself from time to time.

I know. I have. Especially now that our long, storm-filled winter has reached into March, everyone is in a bad mood.

I was talking to one of my friends a couple weeks ago. It was a Friday and we were standing at the bus stop, having your typical UMass Friday morning discussion:

"So what did you do last night?"

"Oh, we went to Delano's, but left because it was too packed. Then, we just went over to a friend's house. What about you?"

The conversation went on for another couple minutes, about which bars he had visited, how crowded they were, and if he had bumped into any mutual friends. Does anyone else feel like they have this exact same conversation with the exact same people, every time you see them? After we finished, the bus hadn't arrived yet, so it was time to start the, "So what are you doing tonight," discussion.

He informed me that he was going home for the weekend because he had to get away from UMass. I could sympathize that he needed a change. However, when he went on to ask, "Aren't you sick of UMass and doing the same thing every weekend?" I had to think about what he said.

Dawn Jennings

Of course I welcome doing different things. It's great to break out of an old routine and try something new. Yet, there's something to be said for old routines too. Life can't always be new-and-exciting.

I strongly believe in going out and having fresh experiences. I've had some fun times when I've been doing something out of the ordinary and different from everyday life. However, I don't want you to think that my life just goes from one exciting moment to the next. I don't go sky diving or rock climbing every weekend. In fact I spend most of my weekends doing pretty much the same thing.

I'll admit sometimes it can feel repetitious. Last semester I used to go to Mike's Westview almost every Thursday night. I could not only tell you who would be there, but where they would be standing and who they would be talking to. I'd walk in and see Becky and Tracy to my left conversing with Joe, who'd be working the door. As I continued towards the bar, I'd recognize some of the people I used to live in the dorms with, playing pool. Matt would be leaning against the jukebox because he would again have already drunk too much, and I'd definitely see Julie and Meg in line for the bathroom at least three times. Pretty sad, huh? I've since decided that even though Mike's is really convenient to get to from my Brandywine apartment, I definitely need to limit the number of times I go there. Besides, I was running out of shirts that I don't mind having beer spilled all over.

I could go on for paragraphs about all the complaints I, or anyone else, might have about the social scene, the weather, or anything else at UMass. If I felt like it I could write a whole other article about Time Out itself. However, you know what, it's not really UMass. It doesn't matter the situation, we'd be unhappy anyway. Instead of complaining that Mahar is freezing (especially at 9:30 on a February morning), we'd be bitching because the air conditioning wasn't on if we lived in Florida.

Have you ever had a class in Tobin with the sun beating in when it feels about 90 degrees? I can't imagine what Florida is like in May. There are also many colleges where you are guaranteed a table when you go to the bars. Of course you might be the only people in the bar too. I'll admit I was a little annoyed because I didn't know we'd have to go to Rafters four hours before the game last Thursday night to be able to get a table for dinner. I was starving. However, just think why there was such a wait. The little inconvenience is small considering all the excitement, fame and good times that basketball has brought to my life and this school. Besides, I probably wouldn't have even been at Rafters had it not been for the game. Therefore, don't knock UMass.

The next time you find yourself saying, "This is really boring," Change your attitude so it's not so boring. Cherish all the moments in your life, not only the ones which you would classify as exciting.

Dawn Jennings is a Collegian columnist.

Royal flush

It's funny how much things can change in 15 years. When flipping through last week's issue of Time magazine, I came across a picture of Prince Charles and his beautiful wife Diana on the day of their wedding. The Prince could well have been taken directly out of a storybook and the Princess looked perfect in her amazingly elegant (and expensive) gown. It was a beautiful wedding, the couple charmed the world. At a time when the popularity of the Royal Family was on the decline, the wedding injected it with new life and a new hope.

Mark McGrath

Now that hope, and the marriage that instilled it, is shattered. Although the end is not surprising in the least, the truth is starting to sink in. I'm not going to claim to be a fan or even a regular watcher of the Royal Family, but the events that have transpired over the past 15 years have something to say to us as a society.

In a way, I found the Royal breakup disheartening, because it lends credence to something that I've been trying to ignore for a long time now. Every day, it seems like there are new stats saying how unsuccessful the institution of marriage has become. I've heard that half of all weddings that take place now will eventually end in a divorce.

In this case, we're talking about one of the most watched weddings of all time. Witnessing its falling apart is sad because it confirms the fact that divorce has truly pervaded every corner of our society.

I've always believed that marriage is a sacred institution, that it's something that should not be entered lightly. When a bride and groom exchange their vows, a commitment is being made, a lifelong commitment. If that wasn't the case, then there would be no purpose for them. When you love someone so much that you want to commit your life to that person, it makes a strong statement. At least it used to.

While Charles and Diana's marriage cannot be labeled typical, I'm afraid that its ending has become just that. The Royal Family, rooted deeply in tradition, is helping to destroy one of the most sacred traditions in society. Seeing the figureheads of one of the oldest established governments in the world disregard their wedding vows is tantamount to saying that divorce is OK.

Acknowledging that the Royals have problems is good, but not when those problems are dealt with in the way that this one was. Giving up on that marriage was the easy way out, the cowardly way. The British take pride in refusing to give up, but that didn't stop this tragedy from occurring.

Nothing in this world is guaranteed. That's one of the things that we can learn from the plight of the Royals. You'd think that people with as much money and power as them could find a way to live together comfortably. The divorce, in its own way, says that money isn't equivalent to happiness at all.

In this world, we are constantly trying to acquire more and more material and monetary possessions to insure our comfort. What can we learn from Charles and Diana, the people who have as many of these things as anyone? All the money in the world can't save a relationship on the rocks if that relationship on the rocks if that relationship is not based on love.

Nobody is above that truth.

The couple's two children were the most notable of the products of the failed marriage. The older of the two, William, should eventually be King. You have to wonder, in light of what happened to his father, whether or not he will even be allowed to have a queen.

If he does, one would hope that he's allowed to marry whoever he loves, not someone who's there to look pretty and drink tea. That's how his parents got into trouble in the first place. As I've already stated, the Royal Family is deeply traditional. Let's hope they haven't started a new one with this divorce.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

I KNOW YOU DON'T QUITE GET THE STEVE FORBES THING, KIM, BUT TRUST ME—HE'S ONE OF US. HE'S A CORE LIBERTARIAN GEEK!
HE UNDERSTANDS OUR WORLD! HE KNOWS HOW TAXES KILL INCENTIVE! WITH FORBES AS PRESIDENT, WE'LL GET TO KEEP EVERYTHING WHEN WE CASH OUT OF THE STOCK-OPTION LOOP!
LISTEN TO ME
YOU SAY YOU USED TO LIVE IN A COMMUNE?
GBTrudeau

Black Affairs

All about the Shout

By Humphrey Brown III
Collegian Staff

People who have been to a sanctified Pentecostal Christian church, know what "the shout" is all about.

It is the kind of shout that moves the spirit, stirs the soul and makes you want to praise. It is the kind of shout University of Massachusetts music professor Horace Boyer said "shakes your body and sets you free."

It is the shout found in gospel, and there are few as schooled in gospel as Boyer.

"We've found [the shout] before through the old Negro spirituals," he said. "It sustained us through slavery. We sung through our problems. It provided hope and strength for people to get up and go back to the same old thing. Nothing but the shout sustained us through that time and during the Civil Rights Movement."

Boyer recently published a book that not only gives a definitive history of gospel music, but includes the knowledge and experience of a man who has been performing and studying gospel music more than half his life.

As a teenager, Boyer made up one half of "The Famous Boyer Brothers," sharing venues with Mahalia Jackson, the Dixie Hummingbirds and the Clara Ward Singers among others.

Last year, Boyer helped create the award-winning National Radio series on gospel, "Wade in the Water."

How Sweet the Sound: The Golden Age of Gospel Music, Boyer's new book, shows how gospel music has influenced many of today's popular singers and how it has changed over the years to cross over color lines and into the mainstream of contemporary popular music.

"Until 1969, gospel music was a adult music taught to young people," Boyer said. "In 1969, Edward Hawkins released a record called 'Oh Happy Day' which shifted it to a young people's music taught to adults."

This switch to a younger generation of gospel singers also brought about the switch of traditional gospel music to a more contemporary sound, combining the styles of rock, rhythm and blues and jazz, Boyer explained.

"The line between traditional gospel music and black popular music has almost been blotted out," he said. "Groups like Take 6 and the Winans all incorporated new sounds into gospel music so that now, more than ever, gospel's become more of a fusion music. [Like] a fusion of Mahalia Jackson plus Gladys Knight and The Pips all rolled into one."

The transition from traditional gospel music to the new sound of gospel today was hard for those who were not ready for it, Boyer said. The move away from the traditional church and into the entertainment industry had many worrying about the direction gospel music was going.

"Many people get some kind of spiritual fulfillment from contemporary gospel as others got from traditional gospel," Boyer said. "There was a tremendous church base to the older style. [That] doesn't mean there isn't one today, but you don't have to be a Christian now to enjoy the music.

"When you move gospel out of the church, into the stadiums and Carnegie Halls, the gospel musicians become responsible. When you expose it to the people, you're taking that tradition into your own hands. I call it diffusion to avoid a value judgement. To diffuse means to spread abroad, then you decide if it's good or bad."

Boyer said he wants readers to come away from his book with a rich understanding of gospel music and its roots as well as how it has helped shape contemporary music.

"I want them to discover that American pop music is our greatest export commodity," he said. "It's all over. I also want them to see how gospel has insinuated itself on that culture. I want them to know about the great people who sung the songs."

Boyer gets open on the ivories at the W.E.B. DuBois Memorial celebration.

FAMILY BEES / COLLEGIAN

Blackness is not Darkness

The light shineth through the Dark
And the Dark understands not!
Blackness is not Darkness
For within it a marvelous
Light Comes Forth
A Light that appears as a bow in the sky with
Many different flavors
Acknowledge, that within all the flavors
A twist of Blackness is represented
Blackness is good
Blackness is bold
Blackness is the continent we now call Africa!
From it, all flavors of Blackness are derived.
The flavors all consist of four basic ingredients:
7 cups of sugar
1/2 a pound of Curiosity
2 loaves of Love and
A Ton of Knowledge!
Oh, just taste and see
How good the flavors can be.
If you don't find favor in one
There is always another
And another
And another. . .etc.

by Tunaka Boros

Dr. Betty Shabbazz

Shabazz and Meese to debate affirmative action

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

The issue of affirmative action in the United States remains to be one of the most talked about and debated issues in recent times.

While some feel that affirmative action is essential in helping to rectify the wrongs set upon African-Americans and other minorities, others feel that it is unfair and causing jobs to be given to unqualified people in an effort to fulfill quota requirements.

On Wednesday, the debate comes to UMass as Dr. Betty Shabazz and former U.S.

Attorney General Edwin Meese, square off in the Fine Arts Center about this pressing topic.

Edwin Meese was former President Ronald Reagan's attorney general and a major Reagan advisor during the '80s.

He recently published a book, With Reagan, and writes a newspaper column for a nationally syndicated publication.

Meese is a renowned conservative who will be speaking against affirmative action in the U.S.

Dr. Betty Shabazz is widow of activist and former Nation of Islam leader, Malcolm X.

Shabazz received her doctorate degree in education at the University of Massachusetts in 1975.

During the filming of the Spike Lee film, Malcolm X, about her husband's life, Shabazz served as a consultant to Lee in his efforts to portray the slain black leader in an accurate light.

Today, she is public relations director at Medgar Evers College in New York.

Still a major voice in the black community, Shabazz will be arguing in favor of affirmative action.

The debate is set to take place at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

Tickets can be picked up — $3 for students and $10 dollars for non-students at the Fine Arts Center Box Office. Seating is reserved.

One time for the mind

Allana E. Todman

For generations, the American dream, for many blacks, was to gain a college education, get married and move into a suburban environment.

Although there are many black Americans that have been able to achieve this goal, many others are still striving to do so. The city is usually the place where most black Americans migrate.

The city, which appears to have a lot of opportunities for blacks, is ironically neglected by the government. With living and economic appeal most of the white majority just come into the city to work, but at the end of the day, they get back into their cars to return to their suburban homes.

They are not the ones that have to live in the unkept, and often times filthy environment. That is why we, as black Americans, need to take hold of our own, and make our living and economical situation one to be proud of.

Should we, as black Americans, once we have attained the "American dream," stay in the urban environment, or move into the suburban area, where the white majority is taking care of their own?

How long are we going to live under someone else's wings?

Even if many of us who are in college, attain our degrees and gain financial success, we won't be helping our black community by moving out of the city.

Without any return investment into our communities, they will not only continue to get neglected by the government, but become forgotten by our own people.

We need to realize that gaining a college education is not an individual thing, but a unified accomplishment.

We can either allow our education to be a tool to enhance and uplift our black community or as an additional additive to uplift and enhance the "other man's" foundation.

It is time to grasp what we have and build a stable foundation of our own.

Of course it seems much easier to move out of the city and into the suburbs, but with comfortability, there is no change.

The race is not over, it has just begun.

Arise, arise, arise my black son
there will be a day when we can say "We have won" everyone will laugh at the good ole dayz
when we thought it was hurd to change the bad ways we'll go to church and say "thank you lord" for the changes you helped to make was like a double e d g e d sword.
yes we have made it my strong, intelligent handsome black son
yes we have made it "we" have finally won.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian staff member

The untold story

Gregory H. Casimir

It has been a frequent reoccurrence that the only time that black or other minority groups make the front page is when a prestigious figure comes for a lecture, or when such groups become either the center of a racial incident, or a violent episode.

Last semester, a very powerful Kwanza ceremony was put on by Malcolm X Cultural Center. It was a night dedicated to praising African traditions. It was a night when blacks from all backgrounds; Haitians, Nigerians, Ghanese, West Indian, and African-Americans, put aside their national pride and recognized their common origin.

It was a positive night when blacks got together for culture, song, dance, and food.

Completely un-newsworthy.

However, last semester, on Dec. 4, a shooting occurred during a party at the Malcolm X Center. This story made front page, as well as it's two follow-up stories.

Granted, a story about a shooting does have enough impact to make the front page. It involved the lives of UMass students. Fine.

Unfortunately, 99 percent of the students involved in the incident were black and Hispanic. From the outside looking in, this equates to that the only way such groups can make headlines is when we do something that jeopardize the lives of one another.

On Mar. 2, the African Student Association (ASA), for the final week of Black History Month, had a semi-formal African Culture Night, another positive black event, celebrating the individual uniqueness of several African countries.

The night's festivities include an enactment of a traditional African wedding, a speech given by Prof. Femi Richards, and an entertaining fashion show.

All who attended had a great time, and even told those who missed it that they should have been there.

Being that it was Black History Month, this event should have at least gotten some mention. True, nobody died, nor was there an anti-something rally, but it left an impression on the people involved, and present, just the same.

The point is it that the media seems only pays attention to the negative aspect of the black community. They paint a picture of how brutal and ruthless black teenagers are, or how the black woman has once again abandoned her child in a dumpster because of her inadequate income.

Why can't the same reporters who "risk their lives" to go undercover and expose a drug ring in the most notorious hoods, go into these same hoods and write the story of the teacher who got the children to enter afterschool programs, or write about big community unifying activities. Why can't they?

In my opinion, the media is an old dog that is in need of a few new tricks.

Gregory Casimir is a Collegian staff member.

Represent

Humphrey brown III

Exactly one week ago today, I was covering a story for the Collegian on a guest speaker by the name of Morris Dees, who was speaking on the problems of hate groups and racism in America today.

You would think that someone speaking on such a topic would draw a large crowd of African-American listeners, considering that the majority of hate groups in this country center most of their hate on blacks. Much to my surprise, the night of the lecture, Morris Dees was looking out to a sea of mostly white faces.

Not to say that whites don't need to be educated as well as brothers and sisters, but it doesn't make much sense to me when we aren't even the majority of the ones trying to be educated. Especially when someone is speaking on a subject that directly affects black students on this campus.

Just go to various areas on campus and see how much the hate has to be erased every other day, because of racist graffiti splattered on a wall in a Van Meter stairwell or on the ceiling of an elevator in Coolidge. I can't remember a time when I have gone the entire day without seeing some kind of racist, anti-Semitic or homophobic remark written somewhere on this campus.

So, when it's pretty obvious that we do have major problems that need to be rectified at this University and all over, why are we not looking for ways to solve them?

About two weeks ago, I attended a nice little get together at the Hamlin Hotspot in Northeast residential area, where students and faculty were celebrating African Heritage. As I sat and observed the faces that were also in attendance, I happen to notice that — again — there was a lack of African-American representation.

This should never happen on a campus where blacks only comprise about 7.2 percent of the entire student body. Back in the days of the civil rights movement and before, it was natural for blacks to come together in instances where there weren't a lot of us around. We would look for each other and make a conservative effort to get together and we supported nearly all events that dealt with our people. Now it seems that the only events that are being supported are parties and semi-formals.

We've got to go a little further than that if we truly plan to make a difference anywhere. Discussions, debates and lectures that concern our people should be attended by our people. We can't afford to lay dormant while everyone else around us is being informed. If you want the knowledge, you have to go get it. If you want change, you have to make it. If we don't do for us, who will? So, I ask you: when was the last time you've been to an informative black function?

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian staff member.

Write for Black Affairs

For info call Humphry brown III or Gregory Casimir 6-2489

Arts & Living

Exciting action game Beast Within shines

Exciting, fascinating and suspenseful are just a few words that describe The Beast Within, the second Gabriel Knight mystery by Sierra. This gothic adventure game chronicles Knight's quest through the Munich area to find the perpetrators of several "mutilation" killings.

The game's central character is Knight, a Steven King– esque author from New Orleans. The sole heir to the Ritters' estate, his mission is to destroy what the villagers believe to be were-wolves, and what he believes to be escaped wolves from the local zoo.

Knight's journey takes him to various people who give him clues to finding the murderers. Pretending to be writing a new novel, he encounters everyone from a university lab assistant to the hostile German Polizei. The other main character is Grace Nakimura, Knight's colleague from New Orleans. After receiving word that Knight is working alone, she heads to Germany to assist him.

The game itself is intriguing and captivating. It is hard to play for a short time; once involved, it is almost impossible to tear yourself away. Filmed almost entirely in Germany, the graphics and location shots are fantastic. With its eerie background music and movie quality scenes, this six CD set will give the player days of nightmarish fun.

The Beast Within is designed to read like a novel. In order to advance through the chapters, one must travel to all the designated locations and obtain all the clues. For each clue Knight finds, he receives one point, and he must achieve 679 points to finish the game. However gaining points is not only hard, but very time consuming. For a novice, achieving a mere 30 points can take over five hours.

Another difficulty encountered is the lack of English from many of Knight's liaisons. In the first chapter, Knight goes to a police station in hopes of obtaining information, only to meet an officer who speaks to him entirely in German. Without a working knowledge of the language, these scenarios can be annoying and confusing. However, even a basic understanding of German will allow the player to learn hidden messages and advance more quickly.

In the first chapter we learn that Knight has been living in Germany for over a year. Yet he simply cannot understand such basic German as "Aufwiedersehen (Good–bye)" and "Er is nicht hier (He is not here)."

Turn to ON-LINE, page 7

~MOVIES~

Lucy falls short; Birdcage confusing but amusing

Despite star filled casts, overacting, jumbled story lines keep new releases from shining

By Laura Stock & Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

IF LUCY FELL
Directed by Eric Schaeffer with Sarah Jessica Parker, Eric Shaeffer, Ben Stiller
Playing at Hampshire Six

One or two quirky characters can make a movie uniquely interesting — but when every character is bizzare and eccentric, viewers are left begging for some normalcy.

Such is the plight of If Lucy Fell.

Tack this one onto the list of Gen X dramedies, which already includes Reality Bites and Singles. Eric Schaeffer, who made his debut in the movie scene with the independent comedy My Life's in Turnaround (which he co–starred, co–directed, co–wrote and co–produced), also wears more than one hat in this, his first major release.

Schaeffer both directs and assumes the male lead role in Lucy. His character, Joe MacGonaughill, is an artist in New York City, who also teaches painting to young children. He is obsessed with his sultry neighbor Jane, played by Elle MacPherson, and has spent five years ogling her from his window. Too shy to approach her, a date with Jane is a pipe dream to Joe.

Sarah Jessica Parker (Honeymoon in Vegas, Miami Rhapsody) plays the title character, Lucy — Joe's roommate and plutonic friend since college. Lucy is a therapist whose father is pressuring her to go to Harvard Medical School. She too has been unlucky in love, lingering in a loveless relationship for years, fearing the dating scene.

With Lucy's 30th birthday is a month away, the two friends are reminded of a pact they made in college: if neither one of them were in love by the time they were 30, they would jump off the Brooklyn Bridge. This agreement, appropriately deemed the "Death Pact," becomes the central focus of the movie.

And these kids are serious, too. A therapist herself, Lucy has a lot of mixed–up notions about love and life, and we sense that she will actually commit suicide if she does not find love in a month. She seems normal, but she asks Joe some really strange questions, like "would you drink my spit?"

Hoping to conquer the Death Pact, Joe finally musters up the courage to ask Jane out on a date, and Lucy returns to the dating scene. Joe soon finds out that reality doesn't always live up to fantasy, and realizes who he truly loves.

Lucy, on the other hand, becomes enraptured with a peculiar and erratic artist named Bwick (Ben Stiller). Bwick is less–than charming as a pseudo–soulful painter who cannot even articulate a complete thought. With nobody else in mind though, Lucy falls for the odd character and thinks that she may not have to follow through with the Death Pact.

While Lucy's sometimes playful, sometimes morose, demeanor creates some amusing situations, most of the banter in Lucy is more quixotic than humorous.

The hardest thing to believe is that Joe, a rather homely– looking guy with the social aptitude of a 12–year old boy, gets a date with Jane. To his credit, Joe does have a big heart, and he is a sincere guy. In fact, he was celibate for five years, waiting for his beauty in the window — now that's dedication.

By the genre's standards, Lucy is just plain weird, which doesn't necessarily make it entertaining, or trendy. Joe and Lucy's conflict and its obvious and utterly predictable resolution hardly seem worth exploring in a two–hour format. Lucy doesn't fall, it plummets. C (LS)

THE BIRDCAGE
Directed by Mike Nichols with Robin Williams, Nathan Lane, Gene Hackman
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

COURTESY GENE PAGE

Sarah Jessica Parker stars in If Lucy Fell.

Boy meets girl. They fall in love — they want to get married. They have to meet each others parents. Under normal circumstances this would be daunting (especially if you are only 19 and 20), but in The Birdcage, this task turns monumental.

Barbara's parents are conservative Republicans. Her father (Gene Hackman) is a governor running for re–election on a highly moral platform. Scandal hits the family when his party leader is found dead in the arms of a 14–year–old, African–American prostitute.

Val's parents aren't conservative, or even married. His father (Robin Williams) is a homosexual and owns a night club in Florida called The Birdcage (a haven for drag queens and other eccentrics). He lives above the club with his companion, a man blatantly fulfilling the gay stereotype.

Hilarity ensues when Barbara's parents meet Val's, believing that his father is cultured art attache to Greece (a type of ambassador if you will) and his mother a happy homemaker. The governor hopes that the wedding between the two will help the media overlook the scandal, thus assuring re–election. Val's father hopes that the meeting will get over as soon as possible.

The film reaches it's climax at a dinner party where Lane does a Mrs. Doubtfire and appears as Val's mom, while the media is circling outside like sharks waiting for the governor to realize he has fled from one scandal only to enter into another.

Nathan Lane steals the show as Robin Williams' hilarious, and perfect, counterpart. But Lane's gay man is so over–the– top that it begins to grind upon your senses. Like spice in a stew — sometimes he adds just the right touch and other times he just overpowers the taste. Yet, the two have definite chemistry and the scene where Williams is trying to teach him to become a straight man will have you on the floor.

Williams' performance on the other hand, is more convoluted. He switches from being a strong character to a meek and overly tedious one. He too has his moments, but they are like brief skits in a comedy routine and by the end of the film you feel like he is saying, "don't I play the part of a gay man rather well?" Yes, he does — but the viewer is always reminded of that.

The plot is supposed to revolve around the two young lovers' dilemma, but that plotline takes second and often third stage to the antics of such a star–studded cast. Hackman is perfect as the conservative father although at some points his character reminds you of his Lex Luther days. Diane Weist, is his wife and a perfect cast for the

Turn to MOVIE, page 7

Friedman discusses relationships

By Anna Feder
Collegian staff

MANIS FRIEDMAN
School of Business Administration
March 7

Last Thursday night Rabbi and noted author, Manis Friedman took time out of his world tour to speak to students of the University of Massachusetts about "Reclaiming Intimacy and Sexuality in Our Personal Relationships."

The speech was sponsored by the Chabad Student Coalition and the Judaic and Near East Studies Department and is funded in part the Grad Student Senate, SGA, Cultural Enrichment Fund and the Office of Jewish Affairs.

Friedman is famous for his scholarship, his deep understanding of the human psyche and his unique speaking style. His fusion of age–old Talmudic wisdom and modern day wit to address the subject of love, intimacy and community makes him accessible to all audiences, regardless of their age, race or religion.

Despite the raging snowstorm a devoted audience showed up at the School of Business Administration to hear Friedman, who was introduced by Yocheved Adalman of the Chabad house. The speech began in a very informal manner with the Rabbi in front of the podium and closer to the audience.

Friedman began by questioning the euphemisms that we use to identify relationships. His point being that such terms can say a lot about societal attitudes.

Friedman stressed time and again that despite the media we have a hard time changing our ideas about intimacy.

The Rabbi explained that we need to "preserve our sensibility to what is sensual." Intimacy, he explained, is inherent in most of the actions that we engage in on a daily basis, such as handshakes, hugs and being alone with another person.

Another idea that Friedman tried to express is the need the to abolish familiarity in relationships.

"When we are being intimate" he said "we are entering a private space where we don't belong." This creates excitement and also abolishes familiarity between the couple — every time becomes the first time.

Friedman is the author of the vastly acclaimed book Doesn't Anyone Blush Anymore? Reclaiming Intimacy, Modesty and Sexuality.

The book, which deals with problems in modern relationships received rave reviews and is going into its fourth printing.

Friedman has also been featured on CNN, A&E Reviews, PBS and in the New York Times, Rolling Stone, Seventeen, and the San Francisco Examiner, to name a few.

"Rabbi Friedman's roster of fans range from music legend, Bob Dylan to radio great Paul Harvey," said Yonah Blum, Director of programming at Chabad House of Amherst. "Amherst is very fortunate, and I am personally honored, that he shared his wisdom with us."

The overall message of the speech was critical: "If we're going to reclaim our intimacy we must stop destroying ourselves with this sexual weapon — we must reclaim our sanctity."

Graduate studies are the best prescription for career advancement.

Informal Open House for all Graduate Programs

New Classroom Building across from Dana Hall on Forsyth Street
Saturday, March 30, 1996

There will be no formal program. Program Directors, Professors and current students will provide overviews of degree programs and look forward to meeting with you. Also: representatives from Graduate Admissions, Financial Aid, Residential Life, Graduate Student Association, Lane Health Center and Commuter Services will be available to answer questions you may have

RSVP requested by Wednesday, March 27th
Call (617) 373-2706 FAX (617) 373-8701 or write
Graduate Office, Attn: Grad Open House, Bouvé College of Pharmacy & Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Sciences Building,
360 Huntington Avenue,
Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115

Graduate Programs and Degrees
Counseling Psychology,
Rehabilitation and Special Education
Health Professions:
Biomedical Science
Communication Disorders:

Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Northeastern University

Northeastern University is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges Inc.
An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action educational institution

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Kendrick B. Bowers, O.D.
Contact Lens Clinic Director - Eye Program

University Health Services • 549-2671 X244

come to a free seminar

LSAT

TARGETED TRAINING

Targeted Training turns Kaplan's LSAT expertise into a study plan made just for you.
Learn about
•the latest developments in the LSAT
•the inside story on admissions
•how to target your study needs
Find out about Targeted Training and Get a Higher Score!

DATE: Wednesday, March 13th
TIME: 7:30 PM
PLACE: Amherst Kaplan Center, 150 Fearing St.

The answer to the LSAT question
Call: 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
E-mail: info@kaplan.com America Online: keyword "Kaplan"
Internet home page: http://www.kaplan.com

Late for Lunch?

2 Burgers, small fry, & medium soda for $2.99
2:00-3:00pm

the hatch

COURTESY STEVE PAGE

Ladies Night Out

Africa's premiere world beat band brings their unique rhythms and vibes to Pearl Street tonight.

■ Movie

continued from page 6

part. She is sweet with an edge and her character is one of the more interesting.

A highlight of the movie comes when the parents are dancing around a room singing, "I Could Have Danced All Night." Right at the pinnacle of the song, Agador (the gay Guatemalan house–boy turned butler) bursts in to give a rousing end to the song evoking applause not only from the people dancing, but those in the audience as well.

What The Birdcage needed to do was stay with one plot instead of trying to cram in three. All of them hold some sort of interest, but none of them are allowed to fully develop. There is such a rush at the end to get things settled that the viewer can't sit still — not because it's so engrossing but because it's so confusing. There are also a lot of messages that the film is trying to convey (and mostly cliches at that). There is the "it's okay to be gay" message, the "love will conquer all" message and the "everything works out in the end" message.

And end it does in a neat fairy tale type way that leaves everyone sated. Alas, The Birdcage is like a three day visit to a relative — your glad to see them, but you wouldn't want to live there once it's over. B– (TMKC)

■ On-Line

continued from page 6

Since Knight is the main character, he is the one who speaks the most and his ignorant, insulting comments bring the game down. In one instance Knight walks past a German bookstore and says, "Lots of Nietzsche and Kant... I don't even understand that stuff when it's in English!" The instruction manual advises that Knight should speak to everyone he can, yet when the player attempts to talk to Germans in the city Knight comments, "Germans, always in a hurry." Not only do his comments make Americans sound stupid, they can also be offensive.

The game requires at least a 486 33 MHz with eight megabytes of memory, a dual speed CD–ROM, sound card and about 16 megabytes of hard drive space. The game operates in both Windows 3.1 and 95, and Sierra is working on a Macintosh version. Although the requirements are only a dual speed CD–ROM, users may encounter difficulty without a quad speed and a soundblaster card.

These quirks aside, The Beast Within is an intriguing game that should give even the most die–hard computer game fanatic a good time. It will not be conquered in just a few hours, so with a little patience, most should be pleased. Once you start playing, this addictive game will captivate you for hours. B+

Lisa M. Olivieri is a Collegian staff member

■ Lacrosse

continued from page 10

UMass jerseys for the first time tomorrow. Midfielder Jay Negus, attackman Mike McKeefrey and defender Zach Hergott have all caught Cannella's eye early on. Negus has a UMass bloodline; as the freshman is the nephew of all–time leading scorer Jeff Spooner.

"I think that did help us a lot in recruiting him," Cannella said. "Sometimes that's tough to follow somebody with that kind of name, but Jay is his own person. He's going to be a super player here."

Negus is coming off knee surgery, but is expected to contribute during the season.

Buddy Hoffman will return for his second season as a captain and will be joined by Todd Sokolowski and Kelly as the Minutemen will use a tri–captain system.

With three year starter Tom LoPresti gone to graduating, the top goaltending job will belong to sophomore John Kaselakis. Despite starting only two games last year, the Manhassett, NY native has been impressive in the preseason.

"John provides us a lot of leadership and athletic ability and has done a good job. He makes top saves," said Cannella, who has also been impressed with the play of backup goalie Kevin Ratkiewicz. "Kevin has done a great job. He's worked his tail off. We're very happy to have two top goalies."

Fundakowski, a junior college transfer from Maryland will be the third goaltender.

There will be new starters outside the goaltender position as well. Hoffman has switched from midfielder to attack replacing Jeremy Murphy as the crease man. Ken Sussi will try to step into the big shoes of Mike Valente who was a stalwart at the feeder position. Harold Drumm, Adam Waxer and Thalander will all see significant playing time with two drawing the starting nod on defense.

• • •

Like most top lacrusse programs, UMass' 1996 schedule features a who's who of top collegiate lacrusse programs. Including Virginia, who has already beaten previously No. 1 Syracuse and presently No. 2 Princeton, the Minutemen will play nine of their 15 games against teams currently ranked in the USILA top 20.

No. 3 Syracuse (Apr. 28), No. 7 Brown (May 4), No. 9 Duke (Apr 6), No. 12 Hofstra (Mar. 23), No. 15 Army (Mar. 30), No. 16 Notre Dame (Apr. 20), No. 19 Delaware (Apr. 13), and No. 20 Harvard (Apr. 17) round out the Minutemen's ranked opponents.

In addition to Hartford, the Minutemen will also battle unranked UNH, Boston College and Yale.

Minutemen Notes: UMass will be without the services of sophomore midfielder Mike DelPercio who has mononucleosis. The game will be broadcast on the UMass lacrosse flagship station WMUA, 91.1 FM, with Anthony Guido on the call of the game and Justin C. Smith providing the color commentary.

Illinois, NCAA snubs ready for NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — After dropping its final two games and falling out of consideration for the NCAA tournament, Illinois might not have had another chance to play for Lou Henson.

Then the National Invitation Tournament beckoned Illinois, and Henson will coach at least one more game.

The Illini (18-12) entertain Alabama (16-11) tomorrow night when the 32-team NIT begins. It will be the Illini's third NIT appearance and first since 1982.

"If we'd have won both games, we'd have been in (the NCAAs)," Henson said Sunday following losses to Michigan State and Minnesota. "If you're going to gripe and complain, you shouldn't go."

But the Illini will go to the NIT, and Henson hopes they put in a better effort than he's seen recently.

"With our team this year, a second game would be great," said Henson, who announced his retirement Feb. 24. "It can be done, but we can't have just half the team playing, like we have been. We've got to play defense the way Illinois is supposed to play defense."

Also tomorrow night, it will be Marist at Rhode Island; Murray State at Missouri; Tulane at Auburn; Saint Louis at Minnesota; Manhattan at Wisconsin; Charleston at Tennessee; Davidson at South Carolina; Arkansas-Little Rock at Vanderbilt; Miami of Ohio at Fresno State; Washington at Michigan State, and Mount St. Mary's at Illinois State. On Thursday night, it's Gonzaga at Washington State; St. Joseph's at Iona, and Nebraska at Colorado State. Providence plays Fairfield at New Haven, Conn., Friday night.

Illinois State (20-11) is making its second straight appearance in the NIT. The Redbirds beat Utah State in overtime on the road, then lost at home to Washington State last season.

"We're thrilled to be back in the NIT and extremely happy to be hosting a game," Illinois State coach Kevin Stallings said. "Our home game in the NIT last year was a great experience.

> "If we'd have won both games, we'd have been in (the NCAAs). If you're going to gripe and complain, you shouldn't go."
> Lou Henson

"I know very little about Mount St. Mary's, other than they have an outstanding coach. I know they have done well against quality opponents, and I'm sure we'll have our hands full." Mount St. Mary's, located in Emmitsburg, Md., was 21-7 this season.

"It feels good," said Jim Phelan, who has been coaching for 42 years. "It's hard to convince the players that this is an important tournament. We've never been there before. I thought it would be a nice experience to try it."

Also thinking about the experience is Wisconsin coach Dick Bennett, whose Badgers were 16-14.

"I'm very happy that we're in. I was hoping that this opportunity would come and I think it's a very good way to end this first year of our program," said Dick Bennett, who left a hugely successful program at Wisconsin Green Bay to resurrect Wisconsin basketball this season. "I can't think of a better step for us, in realistic terms. I, of course, would've loved to have made an NCAA run, but this is just about as sweet."

■ NHL

continued from page 10

season), then the Bruins are in good shape. Already led by the famed Big Three, temporarily down to two with Neely gone, Adam Oates and Ray Bourque are getting a big lift from Ranford, a healthy Joe Mullen and newly acquired Ron Sutter. The latter's no one special, but he's one heck of a penalty killer, and the Bruins have not done that job well. Chalk up another crafty move to Boston General Manager Harry Sinden He looked long and hard to pull this one — Sutter had been toiling as a free agent with the IHL Phoenix Roadrunners.

• Hey, didn't you used to be Jyrki Lumme? And I mean that in a good way — the floater's got 14 goals this year.

• Time to pick this year's unsung heroes in the NHL. Let's start with Doug Weight, Edmonton's fine young center on pace for 100 points with a meager offensive team. He scored 22 goals and 59 assists for 81 points through 62 games.

How about Zigmund Palffy, the right wing with the great name and even better moves, who has kept the Islanders hovering near respectability through the season's second half. (26–35–61 in 60 games.)

Ziggy also shed No. 68, obviously worn as a tribute to fellow Czech Republic star Jaromir Jagr, in favor of No. 16. No truth to the rumor he changed to the new number just because Jozef Stumpel, another Czech, did the same so Rick Tocchet could have his No. 22.

Colorado is loaded with stars that make it a genuine Stanley Cup contender, but one who's not getting the ink is Adam Deadmarsh. When the Avalanche lost Wendel Clark, they were in need of a grinder, and they fostered one right from their own minor league system. He's not the big right wing with the well–adjusted attitude 18–21–39, as well as +20 and 136 penalty minutes.

Oh, all together now a big round of applause for Alexander Mogilny. Totally lacking the popularity outside Vancouver enjoyed by injured teammate Pavel Bure, the other speedy sniper on the right side posted 51–41–92 figures in 60 games. The deserving Hart Trophy finalist is also the league's most consistent scorer: his home and road point totals were identical.

In goal I like Nikolai Khabibulin, fourth in the league in save percentage at .915 and below the league average in goals against average at 2.92. And don't blame Winnipeg's up and down season on him; his record of 18–12–1 (including two shutouts) is just a little better than deposed Tim Cheveldae's 8–18–3 mark.

On the blueline it's got to be Roman Hamrlik, who has grown into a bonafide two–way No. 1 defenseman. Only 21, he netted 11 goals and 39 assists in 60 games. A real whiz at the point on the power play (9–24–33 with the man advantage).

Along side him is Toronto's Larry Murphy, who's been the offensive defenseman the Leafs have long lacked. He's as consistent as Mogilny, too, with 23 points in home and road games.

• With Wayne Gretzky out of LA, the Mighty Ducks are the sole NHL attraction in Smog City. They're now a lot more attractive than the dirty skyline as Paul Kariya and Teemu Selanne have collaborated as well as anticipated. And for the last time, Anaheim goalie Guy Hebert, the pride of Troy, N.Y., should be pronounced GUY HEE– BURT, not GEE AY–BARE. Get with it, ESPN!

Ted Kottler is a Collegian colum mist.

■ Baseball

continued from page 10

a 5–7 day that produced five RBI's. Senior catcher Andy Kiah was the Minutemen's only multi–hit player as he pounded two doubles and scored a run.

Stone pointed out that his team faced an Olympic hopeful on Sunday making its early offensive success all that much more impressive.

The UMass skipper also noticed a great deal of improvement on both sides of the Minutemen's game and knew that continued exposure to green grass and warm weather would improve their success.

UMass travels to Florida for spring break on a six–game road trip that begins with a two–game weekend series with Bucknell on March 16–17, and includes a game against a strong Northwestern team.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Brad Gorrie had a strong weekend for the Minutemen during the Minutemen's weekend at Rice, but UMass was swept in the three game series.

Guess what Johnny's bringing for Show and Tell today.

Every day, thousands of kids bring guns to school. Find out how to help get guns out of the hands of children. Call 1-800-WE-PREVENT for free information.

Not one more lost life. Not one more grieving family. Not one more.

CAMPAIGN TO PREVENT GUN VIOLENCE

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Make Spring Sizzle

Not F L I Z Z L E

Use Latex!

Stop by the Peer Health Educator Table
Campus Center March 11 & 12
for condoms, dental dams and other goodies.

WANTED

WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, COMPUTER LITERATE, CREATIVE

MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS

Java, Shockwave, Emblaze, C++, VRML & Visual Basic

NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS

LEAN & MEAN 1 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART TIME HELP, INTERNS

please include resume, letter of interest, rael

PASSION, BUT NO EXPERIENCE? WRITE US A LETTER!

VISION

Multimedia & Video
P.O. Box 776, Amherst, MA 01004
bbellou@shaysnet.com
attn: Ben Bellou, Production Mgr
NO PHONE CALLS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Women do you worry so much about how you look? Free six week body image Art Therapy group now forming. Call today 549-0909

University Productions & Concerts ... come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting tonight at 8:00 in room CC 162. Everyone is welcome. Come get involved!

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time ... call 5 ... in the web ... a ... a ... Lists of UMass edu ... ions of UMass educ ... division ... new!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Pelham Village Nine Bedroom Apartment Now ... 480 mo. heat/hot water incl. Call now Amanda 549-1795

South Deerfield Ctr. 1 BR hardwood floors, sublet a option to lease 665-5164

Moving off Campus? Spacious 2 bedroom apartment. Heat, hot water gas included on bus route 5 minutes to campus. Call 549-6578

AUTO FOR SALE

80 Toyota Celica AT ... A/C, Sony CD player, many new parts ... $1,600 miles $1000 546-0761

1986 Saab 900 excellent condition 150K miles $3500 ... 253-4132

84 Saab 900 Turbo 16 V ... Loaded ... runs great runs great. Many new parts ... $1400 ... 256-8667

1986 Dodge Colt Good ... transportation ... low miles ... Call 253-4132

AUTO FOR SALE

Buick Skylark 78th New exhaust system ... runs great reliable 548-9791

86 Mustang Rare ... runs great ... 400 or BO Call 549-6842 ... Meg

Honda Prelude S ... 1988 5 speed, snow tires, moon roof, radar $3800 549-6189

For Spring Break Vanna 1980 Chevrolet wagon, snow tires only $900. Needs to go fast. 548-9273

87 Acura Integra A/C new clutch manual ... $2500 BO 549-4042

Ford Escort 1991 LX The best in town! Marcello 549-7328, $5000

EMPLOYMENT

Production Manager Wanted $7 $10/hour South Shore of Boston to Bourne area. Call now. Space limited John Trudeau 1 800 829 4777

Waiters/Waitresses needed 7am June 1 to September 1 in Lake George, NY at Roaring Brook Ranch. High wages and housing available. For information call Andrea 546-1170.

$Cruise Ships Hiring! Students need not! $$$+Free Travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii)+ Seasonal/Permanent. No Experience Necessary. Call (919) 929-4398 ext. c1040

FOR SALE

RAM 4MB 60ns $75 or b.o. Call 6 0938

Yamaha YS70 receiver Klache 4.2Kg speaker. Pioneer CLD-1870 with Astatic wireless microphone. 3 free Laserdiscs. More than 56% sales. Call Wen 546-6798

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto laptop with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans. script into text. 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot) Bubble jet printer $2,000 546-4736

FOR SALE

1986 Chevy Nova ... runs well ... new timing belt ... new brakes ... asking ... $1000. Please call me 549-1988

Brother wordprocessor ... sheet ... features ... new ... Original value ... asking ... sacrificed @ $400 ... Make great ... offer. Call 549-1988 ... Serious inquiries only

HOUSE FOR RENT

Cape Cod ... summer rentals ... Waterfront Houses. Falmouth area 508 ... 6000

LOST

Green Gloves in Student ... on Thursday around 1:30 Call 76 ...

Lost Zodiac Breastwatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Eric at 665-3681

MUSCIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist. Vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1016 or Jason 367-0758

PERSONALS

Terri #115 Go to travel section. See Bay Travel ad

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent. Belchertown ... house. For info call Justin 323-7990

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? ... of Amherst area for free testing and caring ... assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bay Travel ... 800 ... 9926

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $119
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1 (800) 234 ...

Flying away for Spring Break? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporters door to door affordable advanced reservation 253-1350

Spring Break
Panama City $159
Daytona Beach $119
Best hotels and prices
Call Heidi 256-6353

WANTED

One or two tickets to NCAA Tourn. at Providence for March 14 or 16. Call 253-4765. Ask for Judah

Spring Break Daytona Beach
March 15-24
7 Nights at a Beachfront Hotel
$89.00
$219.00 Bus & Hotel
To book, call
Breakaway Tours
1-800-465-4257
SPACE IS LIMITED

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together New England's Largest College Daily.
When our job is done, your day is just beginning.

The UMASS Daily Collegian
A wealth of information at your finger tips everyday.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

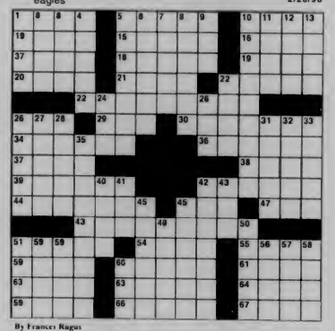
ACROSS
1 Porkpies
5 Milan's La —
10 Make a — try
14 Ambiance
15 Less vivid
16 North or South
17 Lonely partygoer
18 George or T.S.
19 Part of HOMES
20 Await anxiously
21 Hemsley vehicle
22 Discourage
23 Sang to his ladylove
26 Emulate Emma Thompson
29 Face color, at times
30 "— to Watch Over Me"
34 Kept out
36 Eccentric one
37 Irish Rose's lover
38 — Bator
39 Enclosed the yard
42 Current measure
44 Emulated a canary
46 — -Magnon man
47 Draft gp.
48 "And pretty maids —"
51 Rose attackers
54 Achy
55 Of the ear: Comb. form
59 Take shape
60 Mea —
61 Han, the spy
62 Attitude
63 Michaelmas daisy
64 Issue
65 Discard
66 Borscht ingredients
67 Capone's nemesis

DOWN
1 Yesterday's roast today
2 Mobile start
3 Lint attachment
4 Wise ones
5 Pierced
6 Pacified
7 Martian
8 Helmsley and others
9 Dance or drama
10 Accelerated
11 Legal wrong
12 "I cannot tell —"
13 Skittles companion
22 DJ's disc
24 "— I saw Elba"
25 "What's up, —?"
26 Toward the stern
27 Throwing pole in a Scottish game
28 Singer Lopez
31 Glad eyes
32 Approaches
33 White-tailed eagles
35 Restored
40 Extensions
41 Dolores — Rio of the silver screen
42 Debts
43 Bossy noise
45 Cessation of practice
46 Rug
49 Nick of films
50 Alcott's "Little —"
51 European range
52 "Winnie the —"
53 Garden fixture
56 Manageable
57 "—a far cry."
58 Broadway meowers
60 Calloway

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	A	S	S		O	B	I			S	T	U	N	G
O	B	O	E		D	U	N		M	A	I	N	E	R
P	L	U	N	G	E	R	S		I	G	N	I	T	E
T	E	N	D	E	R	L	O	I	N		G	A	M	E
		D	S	M		A	F	R	O		A	T	A	N
I	D	O			A	P	A	I	R		L	E	N	S
D	E	F	E	A	T		R	A	S	H	I
I	N	F	I	D	E	L		N	U	A	N	C	E	S
			G	O	M	E	R		I	N	G	O	T	S
A	D	A	H		P	R	A	T	T			R	O	T
R	E	S	T		P	O	N	D		O	D	D
M	A	S	S		R	I	G	M	A	R	O	L	E	S
A	R	E	O	L	A			O	P	P	O	N	E	N	T
D	E	R	M	A	L			O	A	R		U	S	N	A
A	R	T	E	S				N	N	E		T	S	A	R

2/26/96



By Frances Ragus
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: ... Date: ... Taken By:

Date(s) to run: ... Headline:

Total Days: ... X ... Words: = ... X rate = ... Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): ... Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 ... 1
2 ... 2
3 ... 3
4 ... 4
5 ... 5
6 ... 6
7 ... 7
8 ... 8
9 ... 9
10 ... 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — An overdue message could make this an A-1 day! There is no need to walk on eggshells or act hard-boiled. Good news centers around a romance or events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new project or duty is your vehicle to stardom. It pays to clarify team goals and each player's role in the ensuing victory. Let your actions reflect what you feel in your heart. Romance soars!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — You are an ingenious business manager who knows the score. Take direct action on several fronts. Pay more attention to psychic promptings and intuitive hunches.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Romance occupies your thoughts. As you receive new information, someone's motives and objectives become clear. Take the initiative in your personal relationships.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Your smooth style and excellent timing put you in the swing of things today. Bright ideas abound; take steps to protect yours. Romance brightens when you adopt a more confident approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — A good day to review accounts and catch up on your bookkeeping. Family members can help you if you tell them exactly what you need. Finding common ground with a co-worker is not easy. Try harder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — The sure path to success becomes slippery. Keep your footing by checking the accuracy of the information you are given. Refuse to act without proof.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Knowing the ropes puts you at an advantage now. You could receive a substantial pay raise. Give some thought to purchasing a car. Clear communication is vital at place of employment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — You will make swifter progress if you do not fret over your workload. Do everything you can to clear away a web of confusion. If a real estate deal is pending, settle it this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Be practical in money matters. Even minor repairs will make your home more comfortable. Paying closer attention to detail will prove highly beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You could receive something of a shock at work. Take any changes that are announced in stride. Stick to the task at hand instead of chatting with co-workers. Those who gossip will waste valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Use your negotiating skills to gain long-term benefits. An older person has played a major role in your personal and professional life. Try not to be thrown by a change in your relationship.

Jim's Journal By Jim

Mr. Peterson cleaned herself then got comfy in the window's sun ray today.
After an hour or so, the sun ray moved, and Mr. Peterson wasn't inside it anymore.
She got up and stretched.
Then she moved over to where the ray was and fell asleep again.

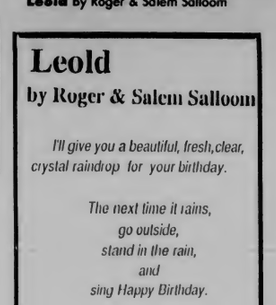
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

ALL THE LIGHTS ARE OUT! IT KEEPS HAPPENING WITH THIS BUILDING'S FUSES!
HERE COMES THE SUPER.
I MADDA SEND FOR BOB GOODE. HE'S THE ONLY ONE WHO CAN FIX THE WIRING IN THIS OLD BUILDING!
HERE HE IS, NOW!
HOW COME MY SPIDER SENSE IS TINGLING?

Dilbert By Scott Adams

IF THIS COMPANY WON'T USE OUR PRODUCT IDEA LET'S QUIT AND START OUR OWN BUSINESS!
WHY QUIT? WE CAN RUN OUR NEW COMPANY FROM OUR CUBICLES AND GET PAID TOO
WOULDN'T THAT BE IMMORAL?
THAT'S ONLY AN ISSUE FOR PEOPLE WHO AREN'T ALREADY IN HELL.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



Leold
by Roger & Salem Salloom
I'll give you a beautiful, fresh, clear, crystal raindrop for your birthday.
The next time it rains, go outside, stand in the rain, and sing Happy Birthday.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

I'M LOBBIED THAT PEOPLE WILL TREAT ME DIFFERENTLY, YOU THAT I'M A FROG. THERE'S A PREJUDICE AGAINST FROGS.
WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME YOU SAW A FROG DELIVER THE EVENING MAIL?
NEVER MIND, I'M JUST LAMING LOUD! YOU HAVE GETTING DINNER FOR ME?
SURE! UH, DO YOU WANT ONIONS ON YOUR FLIES OR-SEE, I JUST A BURGER, PLEASE.

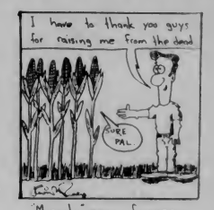
Company Cheese By Kevin Tracy



Milkwood By Neil Golden

WHAT ARE YOU WATCHING?
MTV
OH DEAR! WHAT'S HAPPENED TO THAT POOR GIRL?
HER NOSE IS PIERCED!
OH MY!
IS SHE GOING TO EMBRACE CHANGE?
MAYBE SHE WAS TAUGHT BY SCIENTISTS SO THEY CAN UNDERSTAND THE MYSTERY OF HER RECORD SALES

Milkwood By Neil Golden

IS THIS SINGER PAID SOMEONE TO STICK A PIECE OF METAL THROUGH HER NOSE?
YUP
AND SHE IMPRESSES LIKE A HOBO DESPITE HAVING SOLD OVER MANY COPIES OF HER NEW ALBUM?
TWO MILLION!
I DON'T GET IT
IT'S A FASHION STATEMENT
WHAT'S THE MATH?
"THERE ARE TWO MILLION SUCKERS BORN EVERY MINUTE," I GUESS.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Olympius By Konrad Kubaska

YA KNOW, SHEDD, YOU'RE MORE WORKING FOR MY LIKE
YOU GOT WORK LUCKY! MY WAY.
WHAT'S WRONG BOY?
I'LL DANDY.
WHA— WHAT'S BOTHERING YOU
NOOOO

Ever Think of writing for Sports?
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

Today's Staff

Night Editor ... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ... Mike Maclean
Photo Technician ... Ryan Tuzzi
Production Supervisor ... Jeff Hodge
Production ... Candice Flemming, Rob Snow

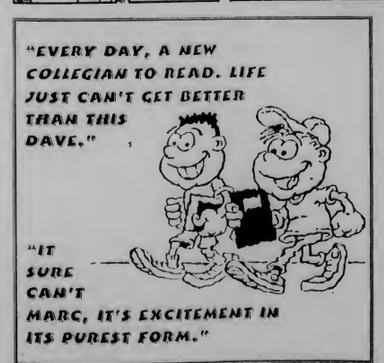
Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire
LUNCH: Chicken Burrito, Ziti/Tomato Sauce, Bean Burrito
DINNER: 1/4 pound Burger, Garden Vegan Burger, Pastabilities, Manicotti in Sauce

Franklin
LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll, Kielbasa Grinder, Chicken Burrito
DINNER: Fried Shrimp Dinner, Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing, Eggplant Parmigiana, Grilled Ham & Cheese sandwich

Hampshire
LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll, Grilled Chicken sandwhich, Chicken Burrito, Stone Willy's Pizza, Summit Subs
DINNER: 1/4 pound Burger, Chicken breasts with rice stuffing, Stone Willy's Pizza, Summit Subs

Worcester
LUNCH: Chicken Burrito, Ziti/Tomato Sauce, Bean Burrito
DINNER: 1/4 pound Burger, Garden Vegan Burger, Pastabilities, Manicotti in Sauce



"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Sparky's Safety Spot
FIREWORKS ARE DANGEROUS!
Even sparklers, which burn as hot as 1200°F (649° C), cause thousands of injuries to children each year. Attend professional displays and leave fireworks to the technicians who are trained to use them.
National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA
NFPA

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Quote of the Day

"I think Calipari is overrated."

–Jim Molinari, Bradley's men's basketball coach.

Sports

Final AP Top 25 – Men's Basketball

1. UMass	6. Purdue	11. Arizona	16. Memphis	21. Iowa
2. Kentucky	7. Cincinnati	12. Utah	17. Iowa St	22. Va Tech
3. UConn	8. Texas Tech	13. Georgia Tech	18. Penn St	23. N. Mexico
4. Georgetown	9. Wake Forest	14. UCLA	19. Miss. St	24. Louisville
5. Kansas	10. Villanova	15. Syracuse	20. Marquette	25. No. Carolina

Hoop teams honored for efforts

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

There once again was a "Rage in the Cage" last night as over 1,000 students and members of the community turned out to pay tribute to the men's and women's basketball teams as they head into the NCAA Tournament this weekend.

The Minutemen (31–1) head to Providence as the No. 1 seed and face Central Florida (13–18) Thursday in the first round of the East Regionals.

The eighth-seeded Minutemen play Michigan State Saturday in Storrs, Conn.

Many members of each squad, including both coaches John Calipari and Joanie O'Brien, spoke to the fans in attendance, thanking them for their loyal support of their teams.

"This has been a fabulous ride and we hope that you all have enjoyed it," Calipari said. "I hope you appreciate the way your team plays the game, the class they have on the court and the way they represent your University.

"I'd like to thank you for all the support you've given us," O'Brien said about the fans of her women's squad. "We didn't lose a game at home this year and I think a lot of it is because of you."

Graduating players also had kind words for the fans who have been supporting them over their four years at the University.

They hope to reward their faithful with wins in the post-season.

"You all have been great fans over my four years here," senior co-captain Donta Bright said. "And hopefully I can leave with a National Championship."

"Thanks for coming out here tonight," senior Melissa Gurrie said as she spoke to the crowd. "We're very excited about going to the tournament.

"I'm very happy to [be playing in the Tournament] but we are going down there to do some damage."

The event was sponsored by STARS, the STudent Alumni Relations Society, and along with the various players and coaches talking to their fans, there were raffles for gift certificates and performances by the UMass Dance Team and the UMass cheerleading squad.

Senior Rigoberto Nunez got the biggest cheer of the evening, getting all the cheerleaders together at center court to do the Minutemen's bounce which the team does before the beginning of every game.

Overall, the people who put the night tonight were pleased with the event which they have put on for the last three years.

"I happy to have as many people come out as we did tonight," Derek Cheeseboro-Weaver, representative for STARS said of last night's turnout.

"I'm glad to see coach O'Brien here and get the recognition they deserve for their first ever tournament berth. The attitude of the crowd was great."

RYAN TEZZI / COLLEGIAN

UMass men's basketball coach John Calipari thanked over 1,000 fans who came to the pep rally in support of his and the UMass women's team which will begin competing in the NCAA Tourney this weekend.

Baseball drops three as lack of outdoor practice plays part at No. 19 Rice

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's baseball team traveled south to Houston, Texas this past weekend for a three-game series against No. 19 Rice University. Despite dropping both games of a doubleheader on Saturday by counts of 17–5 and 15–7, the Minutemen showed considerable improvement in the finale on Sunday, losing only 7–3.

Due to the lovely New England weather provided by Mother Nature, coach Mike Stone's team has not yet had much exposure to realistic playing situations, therefore making the first few games of the season that much more difficult.

"Right now we need more time to play in the outdoor conditions," Stone said. "We did get better this weekend, but we knew they would be a tough time anyway."

In the front end of Saturday's twin-bill, Massachusetts posted its worse defensive effort of the series, giving up 17 runs on 17 hits and two errors.

A strong offensive first inning produced two quick runs for UMass, but was immediately offset by a five-run first frame by Rice putting the Minutemen in a hole they would never recover from.

Leading the way for Massachusetts was junior shortstop Brad Gorrie, as he finished the day by going 3-for-4 with one RBI on two singles and a double.

Junior third baseman Ryan Thistle also played a role in the Minutemen's offensive attack with a couple of singles. Junior right-hander Chad Paronto suffered the loss.

In the second half of the double-header, UMass once again led the game off by posting two runs en route to a quick 2–0 lead after one inning.

Unfortunately that would be only one of two innings in which Rice did not swing the bats effectively, and Massachusetts would soon become the victim of a incredible display of power by Rice's Lance Berkman. Berkman homered in each of the third, fifth, six and eighth innings on his way to a 4-for-5, six RBI day, all accounted by his dingers.

Despite Berkman's awesome performance, the Minutemen pestered the Owls until the seventh inning, trailing only 10–7.

Freshman third baseman Bryan Mazzaferro was the most productive member of the squad as he completed the day with a 3-for-5 performance at the plate.

Numerous other players compiled two hits including sophomore Muchie Dagliere, junior Nate Murphy, senior Justin Kelly and freshman Doug Clark.

Other than some early control problems, starting pitcher Jason Bennett kept Rice in check for the first three innings allowing only two hits.

Stone was encouraged by the hitting prowess of his team, but showed concern about the mistakes in the field.

"We hit the ball real well," said Stone. "Unfortunately we made some mistakes on a few pitches and they seemed to capitalize on each one of them."

The Minutemen pitching staff redeemed themselves in the final game of the series but failed to receive enough assistance at the plate to pull off the victory. Senior southpaw David Dart went six strong innings, relinquishing only two runs on four hits, while striking out two.

The Minutemen went up 2–0 in the top of the third on senior left fielder Ryan Jette's RBI single and Dagliere's RBI triple.

The lead was extended in the fourth inning to 3–0 on an RBI single by sophomore Pete Gautreau, but that would be the extent of Massachusetts' run production.

Rice's tandem of Bubba Crosby and Lance Berkman combined on

Turn to BASEBALL page 7

Women's gym rolls on Senior Night

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Against one of its weaker opponents of the season, the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team improved its record to 5–4 Friday evening, as it downed the University of Bridgeport, 191.650–188.425.

The Minutewomen obviously weren't distracted by the fact that it was Senior Night at Boyden Gymnasium, as they recorded their second highest point total of the season.

What's more, junior Tara Swartz tied her own school record on the uneven parallel bars with a with a first place score of 9.950.

To say that the UMass dominated the meet may be an understatement.

The squad recorded first place finishes on all four events in the meet. In addition to Swartz' victory on the uneven parallel bars, junior Lianne Laing finished first on the vault (9.800), the floor routine belonged to freshman Denise Johnson(9.875) and freshman Anita Sanyal beat everyone else on the beam, tying a season-best score of 9.800.

> "All four of [the seniors] hold important positions on this team. And they serve as role models for the underclassmen"
> –David Kuzara

Bridgeport's Stephanie D'Lugas placed second on the vault with a 9.750, while the third spot went to Swartz (9.700).

The bars event was swept by the Minutewomen, as Sanyal and Johnson both notched a 9.700 to follow Swartz' record tying 9.950.

On the balance beam, Laing managed second place, along with Bridgeport's Tiffany Dickey, who also scored a 9.650 for the event.

The floor routine was also owned by Massachusetts, as the top four spots belonged to the Minutewomen.

Laing's 9.875 was followed by Swartz' 9.825, Penny LeBeau's 9.575 and senior Lisa Coyne's 9.600.

The four seniors being recognized were LJ Tolhurst, Coyne, Ruth Reeves and Leann Zavotka.

All four were participating in the final home meet of their gymnastics careers.

"All four of [the seniors] hold important positions on this team," coach Dave Kuzara said before the meet on Friday. "And they serve as role models for the underclassmen. They've been such a major factor in the team's improvement.

"We're working hard to prepare them for the transition to focus on things other than gymnastics, like a job, or another sport."

The Minutewomen will return to action on Saturday, March 16, when they travel to Philadelphia, Pa. to face Atlantic 10 rival Temple University at 2:00 p.m.

Then, on March 30th, the team will host the Atlantic 10 Championships, which UMass has yet to win.

This season, however, the Minutewomen are currently the No. 1 seed, and rightfully so. Although they fell out of the Top 25 last week, they are subject to stricter judging in the East and are continuing to garner considerable respect on a national level.

Lax faces Hartford in opener

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

While a layer of snow still blankets Richard F. Garber Field, the No. 11 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team will open its season today at Springfield College at 2 p.m. against the Hartford Hawks.

The meeting is the first ever between Massachusetts and Hartford. The Minutemen usually open their season against perennial powerhouse and current No. 1 Virginia, but this season coach Greg Cannella opted to start his season sooner, scheduling Hartford, a lesser opponent in the opening game to give his players a game under their belt before taking on Virginia this Saturday.

UMass will be without five players for today's game as Jim Kennedy, co-captain Dennis Kelly, faceoff specialist Jay Robbins, Matt Tholander and Matt Fundakowski were all suspended by Cannella for violating team rules.

The Scarlet Hawks return a trio of senior offensive leaders from a squad that went 8–6 last year. Attackmen Dan Hynes (34 goals, 16 assists, 50 points) and Greg Sherwin (32–11–43), and midfielder Jason Gilford (30–11–41) will all be counted on to have big games if Hartford will have a shot at upsetting the Minutemen.

"The reason that we scheduled it is to get a real game before Virginia, so we can get those first game jitters out," said Cannella, who has warned his team against overlooking the Scarlet Hawks. "We have to prepare for all of our opponents the same way, whether it's Virginia or Hartford, Syracuse or New Hampshire. You have to get ready mentally."

In previous years, due to New England weather, the Minutemen have been unable to schedule many games during March. That is changing however as artificial turf is scheduled to be laid on Garber Field for next season. But Cannella isn't waiting to next year to begin scheduling earlier. The matchup with Hartford is one of six games that the Minutemen will play in March as opposed to just two a year ago.

"We've been reluctant to [schedule March games] because of the field conditions," Cannella said. "I've adjusted the schedule in anticipation of the astroturf."

The season opener will serve as the sideline debut of new assistant coach Chris Burdick. The former assistant coach and player at Delaware drew praise from Cannella.

"Chris Burdick is an outstanding person, and outstanding coach," Cannella said. "He's a very enthusiastic and knowledgeable coach. He's a super recruiter and has opened up some doors for us. He's a great person to have and the guys all like him."

Burdick replaces former assistant Mario Lopez, who is attending graduate school in Virginia.

While his first year coach is getting his feet wet, Cannella is more relaxed headed into his second year as a head coach.

"It will be easier, because our guys know me, my style and the way our staff coaches here. We're still in transition. You can't say a transition is complete until a couple years has past," said Cannella, who is pleased that his team shares his work ethic. "One thing that has impressed me about our team so far the desire to work, pretty hard. That's what's going to help us."

Nine freshmen and two junior college transfers will don

Turn to LACROSSE page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Minutemen square off against Hartford today at 2 p.m. in their season opener at Springfield College.

Bruins making a playoff run; Unsung heroes get noticed

Bud Kottler on the NHL

A couple of days ago a friend and I were watching television, and he asked me to switch over to the sportsticker so he could find out the Celtics score. Hey, I really admire team loyalty, but was it so important to know if the miserable C's had won some trivial game?

No, he wanted to know if they had lost. All the better when the NBA lottery comes around in June.

Hey, wait a minute, this is a hockey column. The NHL has instituted a draft lottery as well, but it's not in the best interests of the playoff bubble teams to play their way into it. Everyone knows who will be off the board early in the NBA draft, and while it's nearly as certain in the NHL, it's nowhere near as easy to tell how the skaters' pro careers will pan out.

Which brings us to this space's favorite subject, the Boston Bruins. They don't own a first-round pick in the 1996 entry draft (they traded it to the Oilers in the Bill Ranford deal), so there's no reason to bury the hatchet and finish below the top eight. Of course, for a while it seemed they had no choice, but their strongest two-game set of the season, a 3–2 comeback at the FleetCenter over the Flyers and a dominant 4–1 performance at Florida put them just one point behind Montreal (imagine if they both didn't make it) for the final berth.

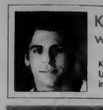
So, is it worth it? Well, yes. Draft Day differs immensely between the two sports, and so do the playoffs. While an upset is possible in the NBA, particularly for veteran-heavy teams, they seem to be commonplace in the NHL. This is not to say the B's are sure to take their potential first round foe, a sure powerhouse such as the Rangers or Penguins, through a long series, but there's no reason to expect a sweep by the top seed either. Just ask Quebec, 4–2 losers to the Rangers in the 1 vs. 8 series of the 1995 playoffs.

And should the Bruins sneak in, there's always the chance Cam Neely could be back. He's surprised us before, and the longer Boston hangs around, the greater opportunity he'll have for his latest heroics.

If the veteran-intense principle applies in this year's playoffs (it

Turn to NHL page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 94 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, March 13, 1996



Kasselakis, UMass win season opener
Sophomore goaltender John Kasselakis made 16 saves in helping the UMass lacrosse team to a season-opening 14–9 win (See Sports, page 12).

Gay hate crimes down in 1995
The National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs reported a decrease in gay hate crimes, but expected a rise in 1996 (See story, page 3).

Preparing for a Scud attack
Local favorites, The Scud Mountain Boys, team up with Pirate Jenny for a slow revolution in Northampton (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 45	HIGH: 50	HIGH: 55
LOW: 35	LOW: 40	LOW: 40

Students compete in science fair

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

Over 180 students from local counties participated in the Western Massachusetts Regional Science Fair held in the Student Union Ballroom yesterday.

Categories in the fair included biological, behavioral, environmental, engineering and physical sciences.

One project involved testing the safety of Belchertown's drinking water. The pH hardness and amount of chlorine, copper and iron from the tap water of 16 different homes throughout Belchertown was examined by Erin O'Brien of Belchertown High School.

"I found the Belchertown water safe to drink," said O'Brien. The pH level was, on average, a little acidic, which can be a problem for pipes, she said.

"I wanted to see the effect of different pH's on squash, corn, and bean seeds," said junior biological division participant Alissa Reed from Ralph C. Mahar Regional High School.

"The best pH is six and seven," she said. A lot of the bean seeds rotted because of possible over-watering and the squash seeds didn't sprout, she added.

Reed concluded that plants in water with a pH of six or seven yields healthier and longer roots than the plants that were grown in water with different pHs. Plants grew very long with a pH of eight, although the root hairs are not healthy, she said.

How effective is beta carotene in fighting cancer in plants, was the title of junior biological participant Emily Parsons, also from Mahar High.

Parsons injected agrobacterium tunefaciens into the bottom of sunflower plant stems to see if beta carotene could reduce or eliminate the bacterium. This plant pathogen is a bacteria normally found within the soil during watering. Parsons said, "I had to do the experiment five times since all the plants had died," she said.

The working model of the experiment consisted of three groups of plant groups, including one control group where the sunflower seedlings were grown only with tap water. The two other groups included seedlings that were injected with the pathogen and grown with tap water, and seedlings that were injected with the pathogen and grown in a beta carotene solution.

A conclusion of the experiment was not reached since the seedlings were not given enough time to develop gulls where they had been injected. Parsons plans to work on the experiment in conjunction with her science teacher during the summer and present it at the next science fair.

"There is a range of experiments here," said Jerrold Meyer, a science fair judge and professor of psychology at the University of Massachusetts. Some of the projects were quite impressive since they had involved a lot of work, while others were not as well thought out, he said.

"One of the things that I definitely noticed was the use of computers in the presentation of the work," Meyer said. He gave as an example some projects which used color printers and sophisticated software programs to produce graphs.

Among the awards presented, the UMass Award of $100 was given to Sarah Haigh of Mahar High. She was also nominated for the International Science Fair and the States Run Off.

The Society of Women Engineers awarded $50 to Jocelyn Songer of Mahar High and Lynette Legault of Belchertown High School.

The high schools who participated in the science fair included Belchertown High School, Brookings School, Chestnut Middle School, Doorposts Private School, Greenfield High School, Ralph C. Mahar Regional School and Mohawk Trail Regional High School.

SHANE RITENOUR / COLLEGIAN

Lisa Buczkyo, a junior at Belchertown High School, demonstrates her science project to Mike Beresky, a chemistry teacher, yesterday at the Science Fair in the Student Union Ballroom.

Environmentalist's lecture focuses on ocean conservation

By Liz Anderson
Collegian Correspondent

On Monday night Dr. Tundi Agardy, the Senior Conservation Scientist for the World Wildlife Fund, gave a lecture focusing on marine conservation. She examined the causes and effects of the ocean's rapid deterioration and effective conservation methods.

Agardy began the lecture with a brief description of the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), explaining the importance of ocean conservation and why marine protection has not been a global priority until now.

"Conservationists are creating an interface between science and what is happening in the real world," Agardy said. "When conservationists look at the world they concentrate on the rain forests and areas like the Savanna Desert because they are decreasing at a rapid rate. Until recently the ocean has been neglected because it appears to be very vast and resilient."

The WWF is an organization working to end the destruction of the ocean's biosphere. Endangered species, over-utilization of resources, pollution, and coastal over-development are destroying the ocean as well as coastlines all over the world. The ocean is also experiencing changes due to universal threats such as global warming and the destruction of coral reefs. Unfortunately, there is little known about marine ecology because of insufficient funding as well as restrictions from national jurisdiction and competition.

"Marine conservation is a relatively new field, thus our knowledge of marine ecology is not as extensive as terrestrial ecology," Agardy said. "This is due to the fact that humans are terrestrial habitants. Marine conservationists are constantly given the run-around when we request for more money from governmental agencies. These agencies are apprehensive to fund our projects because of our lack of knowledge about ocean life and its immediate effects on terrestrial habitants."

WWF has developed an outline focusing on four areas of marine conservation including developing sustainable use of the ocean's natural resources; intensive studies of endangered species and their populations; ending runoff pollution from lakes and streams; and understanding and reversing global warming.

"Marine conservation is an accumulative process," Agardy said. "Terrestrial conservation can be controlled easier because you can fence in the land, you can not fence in the ocean. In order to achieve complete protection of the ocean we need to accumulate zones of conservation ultimately covering the entire ocean. The outcome will not only protect ocean species and ecosystems it will protect humans as well."

Agardy concluded the lecture describing two successful marine conservation parks the WWF recently finished in Africa. The WWF created marine conservation parks in the Bijagos Archipelago in West Africa and the Mafia Marine Island in East Africa. In both projects the WWF worked with the natives developing regulations ending the destruction of endangered fish as well as coral reefs.

Agardy is a marine biologist and was named by Time magazine in 1994 as one of America's most promising leaders age 40 and under. She is the author of UNESCO's Guidelines on Coastal and Biosphere Reserve Planning and numerous other publications on conservation through marine protected areas. Prior to joining the WWF in 1990, Agardy spent three years as a research fellow at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

"Dr. Agardy presented her topic with style and charisma," said Ed Hall, a University of Massachusetts biology major. "And [she] still managed to break down the complex topic of marine conservation into pieces that the student audience could easily digest."

Lecture to focus on HIV & Native Americans

COURTESY ARIANA SONNIERO

Lisa Tiger

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

She was in a monogamous, long term, hetrosexual relationship, she never used intravenous drugs and she came from Muskogee, Oklahoma. She wasn't supposed to become one of the millions who are HIV positive, but she did.

Lisa Tiger, member of the Muscogee Nation and of Creek, Seminole, Cherokee descent will lecture tomorrow night, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, on her personal experience with HIV as well as how AIDS affects the Native-American community.

In 1992, Tiger tested positive for HIV, the virus that leads to AIDS. She had contracted the AIDS virus from her ex- boyfriend, with whom she had been in a relationship for three years.

Tiger is now active in the fight for AIDS education, prevention and research. She takes her message to schools, colleges, clinics and conferences throughout the nation. Tiger prefers to address Native-American groups.

Karen Ray, Tiger's publicist said, "The numbers of Native Americans in the United States are roughly two million. Native Americans have long been considered to be the invisible people in this country, and the problems they face are the typical "ghetto" problems, such as, teenage pregnancy, alcoholism, and drug use, but, no matter how bad these problems are in the urban areas, on the American Indian reservations, they are 100 times worse."

According to Ray, the life expectancy of Native Americans in the United States is 45 years old. Ray said that Tiger lectures all over the country and for every one public engagement she makes, she makes three to four engagements to speak among American Indian groups and communities.

Tiger takes no western medicine for her HIV, said Ray. Now a mother, she has also recently adopted four Native American children from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota, ages three, five, seven and eight.

Tiger has received the 1994 National Organization for Women "Woman of Courage" award, and in December of 1995, was given the AMFAR award of personal courage for taking her message into the Native American community.

Lecture addresses prospects for peace in N. Ireland

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb which exploded Feb. 6 in London did more than kill two people and shatter a 18 month cease fire — it may handicap the peace process in Northern Ireland for years, according to David Bloomfield of the Program on International Conflict Analysis and Resolution at Harvard University.

Bloomfield delivered a lecture at the University of Massachusetts yesterday night entitled "Northern Ireland in Crisis: the Prospects for Peace, the Prospects for War."

Bloomfield, a Protestant native of Belfast, was quick to dispel the common misconception that the root of the conflict in Northern Ireland between its approximately 950 thousand Protestants and 600 thousand Catholics was based on religious differences.

"We are not fighting about the right way to worship the Christian God," said Bloomfield, who supports the nationalist cause, meaning he favors the unification of Northern Ireland with the Republic of Ireland.

Bloomfield analyzed the events and personalities which brought Northern Ireland to the brink of peace, and then suddenly back to violence.

The three critical divisions aggravating the conflict that will require mediation, said Bloomfield, are between Protestants and Catholics, political officials in Northern Ireland and Ireland, and finally, between the governments in Dublin and London.

"All those relationships need restructuring and reorganizing," Bloomfield said.

A key development in the peace process has been the recognition of all sides that a "negotiated settlement," as opposed to violence, is the best way to reach a sustainable solution, said Bloomfield.

The recent bomb, which has been followed by of string of three others, all claimed by the IRA, puts this subtle advancement into doubt.

"There is absolutely no trust in Irish politics. There is only suspicion," said Bloomfield.

The most divisive issue since the IRA declared a cessation of violent actions in August of 1994 has been the disarmament of all paramili-

Turn to PEACE, page 2

SHANE RITENOUR / COLLEGIAN

David Bloomfield spoke yesterday about the recent bombings in London

Dole continues winning with Super Tuesday races

By John King
Associated Press

Bob Dole won contests in Texas, Florida and four other Southern states yesterday to tighten his hold on the Republican presidential nomination. Basking in victory, he reached out to his remaining rivals and said it was time to "put our ideas together" to beat President Clinton.

"I think it is pretty clear now that Bob Dole will be the nominee," Dole said. "This is now a race between Bob Dole and Bill Clinton."

Early returns showed Dole defeating Pat Buchanan and Steve Forbes by more than 2-to-1 margins in Florida, Texas, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Mississippi. Dole, the Senate majority leader, hoped Louisiana and Oregon would deliver him a seven-state "Super Tuesday" sweep — and leave him with roughly three-quarters of the delegates needed to clinch the nomination.

That prize in sight, Dole made a conciliatory gesture to Forbes and Buchanan — perhaps hoping his tone would convince them to quit, or in Buchanan's case at least damp down his attacks.

Dole clearly hoped his victories yesterday would be so lopsided that Buchanan and Forbes would rethink their candidacies: Dole had at least 641 delegates — two thirds of the 996 delegates needed to clinch nomination. In comparison, Forbes had 73 delegates and Buchanan 62.

"We've listened and we've heard strong messages," Dole told The Associated Press in an interview. He echoed Forbes' theme of economic growth and Buchanan's emphasis on middle-class economic anxiety. "It is time to come together now and put our ideas together and build a strong agenda for November."

Dole walloped Buchanan even in Louisiana, where Buchanan's caucus victory in February triggered a surge of support for the conservative commentator.

Dole's satisfaction at the election results came in the face of three new national surveys showing Clinton with double-digit leads in head-to-head matchups. They also showed Dole would suffer if Ross Perot mounted another independent candidacy.

In these new surveys — and exit polling of yesterday's GOP voters — half the respondents also said Dole did not have new ideas. "What I make of those is that once we get a nominee and he is out there focusing on Bill Clinton instead of getting beat up in primaries every day then we will turn this around," Dole said. "We have been brawling and hopefully that will end soon." The also rans were running far far behind in every state. In Florida, for example, he was getting 55 percent to 21 percent for Forbes and 19 for Buchanan. In Texas, it was 56 percent for Dole, 21 for Buchanan and 12 percent for Forbes. Dole had 61 percent in Mississippi, Buchanan 26 percent an Forbes a paltry 6 percent.

Likewise, Oklahoma returns showed Dole with 59 percent, to 21 for Buchanan and 14 for Forbes. Dole had 52 percent in Tennessee, to 25 percent for Buchanan. Forbes was running fourth behind former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who quit the race last week. Even while anticipating another night of bad showings, Buchanan and Forbes said they weren't about to heed requests from Dole and Republican leaders that they clear the field

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, March 13

Dancing — Extremos presents "Something Divine" gay night, featuring local diva Christo, at Club Metro on 492 Pleasant St. in Northampton.

Meeting — The HANDS club, the UMass sign language club, will meet at 7 p.m. in 217 Herter. For more information call the HANDS office at 545-1925 or Shawna at 253-0516.

Meeting — The Drum and Dance Collective, a new RSO, will be having a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. The focus of the group is to bring diverse music and dance to UMass. Ideas are encouraged. For more information, call Aimee at 527-1443.

Lecture — Exercise science professor Gary Kamen will lecture on "Human Motor-Unit Firing Behavior" at noon in 319 Morrill Science Center-South. For more information call 545-2046.

Seminar — Gary Kamen, of the UMass exercise science department, will present "Human Motor-Unit Firing Behavior" as part of the Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminar Series. It will take place in 319 Morrill South at noon.

Meeting — The UMass Film Society will hold an informational meeting for people interested in making movies at 7 p.m. in the Foreign Language Resource Center, Herter Hall.

Film — The Multicultural Film Festival continues with The Education of a Singer at the Beijing Opera, about operal singer Wang Runquing's rigorous training at the Conservatory of Beijing National Opera. Lecture by executive director Amy Chin to follow the free 7 p.m. showing in Herter 231.

Lecture — The Distinguished Visitor's Program presents a lecture by Lisa Tiger entitled "What Happened To Me Can Happen To You" at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The lecture details the Native American's struggle with the HIV virus. Call 545-0046 for more information.

Meeting — There will be a "Men Stopping Rape" organizational meeting from 6 to 7 p.m. in 801 Campus Center. For more information call Dan at 545-0341 or Rob at 546-4773.

Debate — UMass alumna and widow of Malcolm X Dr. Betty Shabazz and former U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese will appear in an affirmative action debate at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center. Tickets are $3 for high school and college students and $10 for the general public. Seating is reserved. For tickets or information call the FAC box office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Thursday, March 14

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be making a banner for protecting whales at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. for more information, call the ARC office at 545- 0358.

Meeting — A mass meeting to form a day of action, coalition to mobilize a March rally for access to education, ending of attacks on affirmative action, abolishment of sexual and gender oppression and an end to corporate degradation of the environment will take place at 7 p.m. in Room 162-75 in the Campus Center Basement.

Music — The Magic Triangle Jazz Series presents The Dave Douglas Quartet at 8 p.m. in Hampden Theater. Admission is free for UMass students with valid ID. Tickets are $9 and $6 for the general public. For tickets or information call 545-2876.

Notices

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work-Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586-5812 or 549-2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253- 0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546-2363 or 546-5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10-11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8-10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549-6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323-6330.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1-800-696- 7752.

Grant deadlines — The UMass Arts Council single project/event grant applications deadlines for Spring 1996 are February 16 for events after March 6, March 15 for events after April 3, and April 19 for events after May 8 including Summer and Fall 1996 projects/events.

Skiing — Cross country skiing guides for the visually impaired are needed. Guide training is provided. You must have your own equipment and advanced skiing ability. Contact Chris at 584-0807.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association will conduct free Planetarium Shows every Saturday in February at the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. For more information contact Tom at 256-6234.

Health — The Breast Health Project, a program of the Family Planning Council of Western Mass., provides physical exams, breast and pelvic exams, Pap smears and referrals for mammograms and colposcopes at sites in Northampton and Amherst. For more information on these services call Ellen or Anne at 1-800-696-7752.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association, holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., in the Campus Center. For information call Kamran at 256-4482.

Religious — The Muslim Students Association holds daily Iftar every day in the Campus Center. Weekly prayer service is also held in the Campus Center every Friday at 12 p.m. Check at the information desk for the room. Call Kamran at 546-0619 for mort information.

Class — There will be a mindfulness-based stress management course that will focus on meditation, yoga and relaxation exercises. The class will meet every Wednesday, 6-8:30 p.m. at the Synthesis Center in Amherst. The cost is $250, and the class starts Feb. 28. Call Carla for more information at 253-5494.

Exemption Tests — There will be two Tier 1 Basic Math Skills Tests this semester, for exemption from the Tier 1 requirement. Test dates are Wednesday, Mar. 13 and Tuesday, Apr. 2, both at 6:30 p.m. in Marcus Hall, Rm 151. Students taking the tests should bring an ID and a no. 2 pencil. Contact the Math Dept. for information.

Financial Assistance — The Five College Coastal & Marine Sciences Program offers financial assistance to students for research and/or internship positions through the Summer Subsidy Fund. The funds are awarded on a competitive basis; students may apply once they have secured their positions. The deadline is April 12 and applications are available in Burton 211.

Financial Assistance — The E. J. Murphy Fund offers scholarships during the academic year for research-oriented expenses for projects and for costs incurred in order to present papers, attend conferences, meeting, or workshops. Applications can be picked up in Burton 211 and they are due April 1.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1-800-750- 2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contracting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

peace

continued from page 1

tary forces, according to Bloomfield.

The British demanded that the IRA hand over its weapons before their political wing, Sinn Fein, would be allowed to participate in talks which included parties representing every side involved, including the pro-British Unionists in Northern Ireland and the Catholic-based Social Democratic Labor Party of John Hume.

Sinn Fein and their leader Gerry Adams, said Bloomfield, had to convince the IRA that they would be represented fairly in a peace settlement if they laid down their weapons.

However, as it became more apparent that negotiations were stalling because of the disarmament issue, and that the IRA would not get its demands, the bombing campaign was renewed.

According to Bloomfield, Sinn Fein "were horrifically surprised" when the IRA claimed responsibility for the first blast.

"They knew something was going to happen soon," said Bloomfield, but not to the extent of four successive bombs within a period of one month.

Bloomfield said that at best, Northern Ireland can hope for a "de facto seize fire," in the coming months.

A June 10 deadline has been set to bring together the British and Irish governments, along with officials from the various factions within Northern Ireland to re-start the peace process.

However, an agreement is still far in the future. "We're still talking about talks. We can't even agree to negotiate," said Bloomfield.

The event was sponsored by the Five-College Program in Peace and World Security Studies and the Irish Studies Program at UMass.

Read it
Pet it
Obey it
Kiss it
Love it
$*?! it
Lick it
Hug it
Live it
Write it
Your Daily Collegian

DAILY COLLEGIAN

The COLLEGIAN is looking for candidates for Special Issues Coordinator. If you are organized, a good communicator, creative, and more...Come down and apply!

Special Issues Coordinator offers great experience in advertising, business, and communications.

GET YOUR EXPERIENCE HERE!
Build your resume @ the COLLEGIAN!

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst • 413- 545- 3500

SHANE KEENAN / COLLEGIAN

Helping others help you

Teaching Assistant Hillary Noble gives pointers on how to be a successful tutor to Melissa Gomez, a junior exercise science major, yesterday at the Learning Resource Center's free workshop in the W.E.B Du Bois Library.

World leaders gather for summit

Hopes high for anti-terrorism meeting, but some doubts persist

By Dalia Baligh
Associated Press

SHARM EL-SHEIK, Egypt — World leaders came to this Egyptian resort, begun by Israel during its occupation of the Sinai peninsula, for an anti-terrorism summit that President Clinton said yesterday would find "ways to combat those who seek to kill peace with violence."

The conference today is intended to spark new momentum for peace in the region after suicide-bombings in Israel over the past three weeks left 62 people dead. Yet problems that have fostered violence seemed likely to haunt the meeting.

The three-hour forum includes leaders from 11 Arab nations and Israel, Russian President Boris Yeltsin, President Jacques Chirac of France and British Prime Minister John Major, all hastily assembled by the Clinton administration to underscore its commitment in the Mideast.

Clinton said before leaving the White House that "the will of the people for peace is clearly greater than the forces of division... This summit of the peacemakers can be an important step in the process for peace in the Middle East."

The leaders attending the summit are determined to come up with "ways to combat those who seek to kill peace with violence," Clinton said.

After the summit, Clinton said, he will travel to Israel "to stand with the people there in their time of grief."

"In this time of difficulty, in the battle against terror and the struggle for peace, Israel is not alone," he said.

Syria and Lebanon chose not to come. Syria, accused of fostering terrorists, said it won't attend because the meeting is merely "propaganda."

Aboard Air Force One with Jordan's King Hussein, Clinton said he wished Syria were represented at the meeting. "But I believe that in terms of continuing the peace process and keeping commitments, that President Assad will do that," he said. "And that's very important."

Clinton said he hoped the summit would produce "a strong, united stand for keeping the peace process going and standing against the terror."

Differences in Israeli and Arab hopes for today's meeting arose even as workmen were painting the slogan "Summit of the Peacemakers" in Arabic and English on the conference headquarters. While Israeli Foreign Minister Ehud Barak urged efforts to achieve "concrete results" in the war on terrorism, PLO leaders criticized Israel's 17-day closure of Palestinian territories as a hardship that would only provoke more violence.

"Hungry people do not fight terrorism," said Nabil Shaath, a longtime supporter of PLO chief Yasser Arafat and one of the Palestinians' main peace negotiators.

Reports in Israel and at the conference suggested that even before the session started, arguments had arisen between the Arabs on one side and Israel and the United States on the other over the meeting's final statement.

At the heart of the argument was the Arab view that Israel must move forward quickly to save the peace process versus Israel's demand that Arafat wipe out Islamic radicals opposed to peace before the next steps can be taken.

Gay hate crimes down in 1995

Higher rate expected again this year due to anti-gay rhetoric

By Andrea Hamilton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As a gay man, Christopher Green took verbal harassment for granted, but he was stunned when he was beaten and kicked to the ground last summer by a group of men screaming "faggot!"

"It was very traumatic. I don't know how these kids were raised that they would go out and beat someone up like that," said the 27-year-old paralegal, who suffered a bruised kidney and fractured skull.

Green is one of thousands of gays and lesbians nationwide who were the victims of hate crimes last year.

The National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs issued a report yesterday that said there were 2,212 such hate crimes in 1995, down 8 percent from 2,401 in 1994. But the coalition predicted this year would be worse because politicians have been pushing more anti-gay measures.

Documented gay-related murders fell to 25 from 29. Still, the crimes in general were more violent, with a 10 percent increase in assaults and rapes, the coalition said.

For the fifth year in a row, New York City led the nation with 625 hate crimes, followed by San Francisco with 324, Los Angeles with 256 and Minneapolis-St. Paul with 218.

Using a new computer program to analyze the crimes, the coalition said some of its finds were striking.

One is that the percentage of attackers under age 18 has decreased nationally, from 25 percent in 1994 to 17 percent last year. Matt Foreman, executive director of the New York City Gay and Lesbian Anti-Violence Project, said this could mean that more open discussion is making young people more tolerant of homosexuality. For the first time, repeated acts of violence by a person against the same victim were documented last year. The coalition found that 22 percent of all incidents — 40 percent in New York City — fall into this category.

Only 707 of the cases documented by the coalition were reported to police — reflecting a lack of confidence in law enforcement, the coalition says — and only 16 percent of those cases resulted in arrests, much lower than the national rate of 45 percent for violent crimes overall, the report said.

Green said the police who came to his rescue last June in the East Village were very helpful, but that a case couldn't be made because he couldn't identify his attackers.

The national peak in reported violence against gays and lesbians was in 1992, when homosexuality was an issue in the Republican National Convention, the issue of gays in the military was being debated and gay-related initiatives were on the ballot in Colorado and Oregon.

The coalition predicted that 1996 would be another high point because of the presidential campaign and because 18 state legislatures are debating the issue of same-sex marriages, something the Christian Coalition has spoken loudly against. "I feel confident that the Republican National Convention in one way or another is going to be anti-gay," Foreman said. "It's going to be a bad year for the gay and lesbian community."

China's military exercises raise tensions

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — China's complex military maneuvers are essentially a dry run for an operation to gain control of the air and seas around Taiwan, the top U.S. military officer said yesterday. Gen. John Shalikashvili also said a possibly exists that miscalculation by either side could lead to actual conflict.

But Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Associated Press the Chinese operation, which began last week with missile test firings, was "most probably designed to be just an exercise."

Hours later, a U.S. guided missile cruiser, the USS Bunker Hill, steaming south of Taiwan, monitored another Chinese missile test into a landing zone southwest of Taiwan. The firing of the unarmed M-9 medium-range missile broke a four-day hiatus of missile launchings. Last Friday, the Chinese military launched three M-9s in test firings. Those missiles also carried no warheads.

At the White House, spokesman James Fettig called the latest missile test "reckless" and "provocative." He said China's government has told the United States it intends to fire several additional missiles during the course of the exercise.

"We expect them to continue through the Taiwanese elections on March 23," Fettig said. He said President Clinton had been informed of the new test while aboard Air Force One en route to the Middle East for a summit meeting on terrorism.

Dressed in camouflage battle fatigues, Shalikashvili reviewed military exercises by Marines at Camp Lejeune yesterday as China's military launched war games off Taiwan's coast, and the island's government threatened to destroy any attackers.

Shalikashvili said the Chinese are demonstrating the versatility of their military by combining air, sea and amphibious movements. "It's as complex or more complex than any they had done before," he said.

He said they were demonstrating how they would "go through the stages of gaining air superiority and control of the seas." As the Chinese exercises pick up steam, the Pentagon is mounting an unmistakable show of force by adding a second aircraft carrier battle group to one already deployed off the coast of Taiwan. "Those are very important signals to the Chinese that we hope the situation will return back to normal very soon," Shalikashvili said.

The Chinese have told U.S. officials that the United States has nothing to fear from the exercises.

A State Department spokesman begged to differ.

"You know we're concerned, on one level — call it the macro level — about the fact that these exercises are meant for political purposes, to intimidate Taiwan," the State Department's Glyn Davies said.

"You know, I mean, ordnance can go astray. There's shipping in that area, very important commercial shipping. There are 21 million people on the island of Taiwan. We're very concerned, obviously, that there be no accidents."

Davies said U.S. officials were trying to set up a meeting soon between Secretary of State Warren Christopher and China's foreign minister, Qian Qichen. "We're working on possible dates," he said.

STEVE MARTIN

A JONATHAN LYNN FILM
SGT. BILKO
IMAGINE ENTERTAINMENT PRESENTS A BRIAN GRAZER PRODUCTION
DAN AYKROYD PHIL HARTMAN "SGT. BILKO" GLENNE HEADLY MUSIC BY ALAN SILVESTRI PRODUCED BY MARY McLAGLEN
BASED ON THE TELEVISION SERIES CREATED BY NAT HIKEN WRITTEN BY ANDY BRECKMAN PRODUCED BY BRIAN GRAZER DIRECTED BY JONATHAN LYNN
IMAGINE PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED SOME MATERIAL MAY NOT BE SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN SPECIAL VISUAL EFFECTS BY DIGITAL DOMAIN A UNIVERSAL PICTURE UNIVERSAL
COMING SOON

You're Invited!

Chancellor David K. Scott Invites The Entire Campus Community To NOMINATE AN OUTSTANDING INDIVIDUAL

who is most worthy of recognition for his or her contributions toward a diverse, multicultural campus. A Certificate of Appreciation and four $1,000 awards will be presented at a reception to honor and celebrate their achievements on May 6, 1996.

One award each will be presented to an undergraduate student, a graduate student, a staff member, and a faculty member of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Faculty members are invited to use their award for research or scholarships.

Criteria will be based upon one or more of the following related to multiculturalism: a) original contributions to the University; b) attainment of high priority objectives; c) crises of "beyond the call of duty" service; d) achievement of significant improvements in the area of teaching or curriculum development; and e) promotion of the awareness of multicultural issues and concerns.

Nominations should be typed and include specific reasons or examples based on the above criteria, along with biographical and other pertinent information (including a resume or vitae, if possible) regarding the candidate's current position on campus. (Self-nominations will receive lower priority.)

DEADLINE - FRIDAY, MARCH 29, 1996
To: Chancellor's Awards for Multiculturalism
C/O Julie Fifield
129 Herter Hall

For further information, call 545-3517.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief — Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager — James P. Gurley Production Manager — Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager — Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara-Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor — Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Cimmet Co-Black Affairs Editor — Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor — Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor — Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor — Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Oliver Guy Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor — Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor — Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor — Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Ann Paradysz News Editor — Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Kelly Photography Editor — Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor — Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist — Cases Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts' calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Fri. Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January, 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Life after college

"I'm going through a mid-life crisis in the middle of my mid-life crisis," said my friend Matt. "I'm graduating in a matter of weeks, I'm not going to graduate school, I don't have a job and I don't have a place to live — I'm screwed."

This attitude, combined with severe senioritis is the bane of my friends and myself. I have to make a conscious effort to go to class and not sleep in. Perhaps this is an attempt to fail all my classes and not graduate, thereby staying in school one more year and avoiding the real world.

I'm taking a class on career options for women's studies majors and one of my homework assignments was to make a budget. Using the outline we got in class, I went as bare bones minimum as I could go and still survive. According to my budget, I need to gross approximately $33,000 each year.

The problem with this is in both of the professions I am considering my starting salary will be in the range of $17,000 to $22,000. This throws a kink into my budget. Apparently, I am going to starve, naked in the streets of San Francisco.

Finding a job consumes as much time as a full-time job. Looking in the want ads, mailing resumes, setting up interviews, it all takes tremendous amounts of time and energy. Add a full class load and three part-time jobs, and you've got the recipe for getting absolutely nothing done.

Going to the Mather Career Center isn't much help either. For someone with two majors in liberal arts, finding a job listed at Mather that isn't in sales is almost impossible. Sure, I can sell just about anything on the planet, but after five and a half years in college and $40,000 in student loans, I would like to find a job I enjoy, or at least minimally tolerate.

It's all fun and games until mom and dad start telling you to be in by a 10:45 p.m. and without liquor on your breath. Next thing you know, they're asking you to mow the lawn, do the dishes, and start paying rent. It's their subtle way of saying, "Get the hell out of our house."

Marni E. Helfner

Selling life insurance or herbal health food remedies is not my idea of putting my degree to good use.

I thought getting into graduate school would be the answer to avoiding the real world, but I didn't get in, so that idea gets blown out the window.

Of course, for some seniors the option to move back home and flip burgers at McDonald's is a welcome invitation. I don't have that choice, but some do, and enjoy the respite from the real world, including real bills, and real hassles. It's all fun and games until mom and dad start telling you to be in by a 10:45 p.m. and without liquor on your breath. Next thing you know, they're asking you to mow the lawn, do the dishes, and start paying rent. It's their subtle way of saying, "Get the hell out of our house."

So what's our last choice? Save over the summer, work all day everyday, and look for jobs in August. Packing up all your stuff the day after graduation and schlepping it all the way across the country is not reasonable (just think about all the drinking you would have to give up in order to save enough money for the trip).

Don't let parents and friends goad you into doing something you don't want to do. Don't take a job that you will hate. Learn that sometimes you have to take your second choice.

On a final note, just two words of advice to juniors: Be afraid.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Time standing still

For a few hours last Thursday evening, time stood still.

As still as Amherst College when I emerged from the Campus Center at just after 6 o'clock. A few figures darting here and there, off in the distance. A professor prodding the snow off his windshield.

In some far corner someone was shoveling. The accompanying crash of metal against asphalt seemed to be the only sound for miles. The snow had swallowed the rest.

Deep and soft it was, a down blanket keeping the earth warm. Feathers falling from the sky, so silent, silent, silent, only the people below making the sound, uttering the curses.

I looked up across the quad, through the broad trees, up at the chapel, the dormitories, and all the various other buildings. I could hardly see them through the falling flakes. Funny, I thought, if these cars weren't here, it'd be the same as... well, almost the same as a hundred years ago.

Students huddled in their rooms or leaning over warm bowls of soup, gossiping about the elements, worrying about their exams. Then is now and now is then, I thought as I gathered my scarf tighter around my neck.

I headed to the bus stop by the old library. The walking was hard. Drifts seem to reach up and grab me by the ankles, twisting my feet this way and that.

The wind pushed me backwards toward the quad and stopped my head down until I could see nothing but my struggling feet. All the paths were filled with snow, no more footprints left for me to follow.

I turned and stopped. A bus approached, one I couldn't afford to miss, I ran to the right, my legs like lead. Overcoming the mighty force of gravity, I clambered onto the bus and threw myself into a seat.

It was quiet in there too, nothing but the sound of melting snow. After a few minutes, the bus lurched forward and pulled a left.

More waiting at the intersection. The whole world seemed to be waiting. At the crosswalk. At the bus stop. Everywhere people stood and asked, "when will it stop?"

The bus lumbered down North Pleasant Street, picked up some more passengers and got stuck at another intersection. Total silence on board as the sky grew dark and the air turned an even brighter white in the glare of the headlights and street lamps.

I was on a carriage riding home in a storm. Here was the village, the church, another passenger on his way to shelter. Instead of a newspaper vending machine, there was a gas lamp. A horse stood tied up in front of the church. Modrian had become a cobbler's shop. Bart's a tavern. The owners were probably sitting at home in front of the fire at this hour.

Only the Mobil station stayed the same, mired in the warmth of exhaust fumes and glittering in the bright florescent light. Emily Dickinson's house used to be there on that spot, or so someone told me. It's gone now. Imagine the snow on the roof and out in the front yard. The poet looking out the window and seeing a gas station.

The bus moved on, stopped for a few more passengers, and made the left toward UMass. The library stood dark against the gray sky. The Fine Arts Center lay like a mausoleum. Bright lights shining in every corner, but no one to guide. The University was closed.

The desert began at Haigis Mall. Winds swept the sand up in the air, where it swirled around in a loop around the statue. My feet made their own path on the steps going down to the pond. I held on tight to the railing.

Is this the way things will look after we're all gone? The desert will rise up and take this land. When the French found the Sphinx in the last century, it was buried under the desert sands. They had to dig it out.

Time to get the archaeologists to come and dig out the Campus Center. It looked so much like a temple with all those steps. Some of the priests were still alive, studying manuscripts and praying for an end to the terrible storms.

People don't seem to like the weather anymore, especially not this snow, which explains why I was the only one out there by the pond. Not even another person in sight. I stared down at the beautiful curves of the windlashed snowdrift. I listened to the chatter of the ducks. Time to move on.

Eventually the snow came to a stop. Time moved forward and mankind picked up the reins again, clearing the paths and uncovering the buildings. The desert was packed up and dumped somewhere out of sight.

But the illusion had already been revealed.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

Wendy Darling

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE ANYWAY, KIM? I THOUGHT YOU WERE IN A SERIOUS CRUNCH MODE TODAY.
WELL, I AM...
BUT I WAS SITTING THERE HUNCHED OVER MY MAC, TOTALLY GEEKED OUT ON A KILLER RUN OF CODE, WHEN SUDDENLY I FELT A MAJOR NEED FOR FACE-TIME WITH MY PERSON!
I'M YOUR PERSON?
IF THAT'S COOL WITH YOU.
UM... SURE! DOES THIS MEAN DATES?
NO SLEEPOVERS, MIKE, THE DATING THING IS VERY 20 YEARS AGO!

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Can't spare any change

I hate change.

Not the monetary kind. Coins are actually pretty nice because they add up to dollars which add up to more dollars and more dollars are good.

The kind of change that really irks me involves the little things in life, not health care reform or global warming or technological breakthroughs or economic recession or the evolution of man or anything so global and important. The changes I have the most difficulty adjusting to pertain more directly to my ordinary, every day life.

M&M's for example. Blue? At first I was shocked that the candy I have known and loved and stuffed my cheeks with for my entire nineteen years on this earth was adding a color, an alien color, a color that belonged more in a bag of fruity Skittles than the chocolate-inspired brown and white of a package of candy-coated little gems.

Gradually, I got used to the idea — one more pretty color to spot in the palm of my sweaty hand. Blue's OK. I can take blue. Wait a minute though ... what do you mean there's no tan anymore? Dammit, that makes me angry. Additions are one thing...but I hate subtraction.

I used to line up all my M&M's in bar graph form to see how many of each I had. Brown and tan always made up the highest percentage. How can I live without my beloved tan? I've been abandoned, betrayed, ripped off, and I'm not happy about it.

On Sunday, I discovered another change that sent my brain spinning and my mouth whining. Remember those Operation Rice Bowl boxes they always gave us for Lent in CCD class? The purple ones that they gave us as flat cardboard and left us to pinch and fold into a nice little box complete with coin slot on the top? Well, they're pink now. Tall and narrow with a slanted top. Why'd they have to go changing things?

Music is an especially touchy subject for me. When you think of U2, do you think Achtung Baby? Zooropa? The Batman soundtrack? No. I'm sorry. You're wrong. That's not U2. That's someone else. What happened to War? Boy? October? Now that's music.

My favorite bands are the ones that no longer exist because they never had a chance to change their style, to become something different from what I grew up listening to: The Smiths, The Talking Heads, The Police, The Clash. If U2 had stopped at The Joshua Tree and R.E.M. at Green, life would be so much better.

How about T.V.? A new Muppet Show? Are you kidding? It can never be as great as the original. It doesn't even have the same theme song! What are they thinking? I'm telling you, it's Disney's fault. Henson was better off on his own. That's almost as frustrating as Roger Moore and Pierce Brosnan as James Bond. Sean's the only true Bond and we all know it. Why kid ourselves?

Equally depressing were the cancellations of shows like Battlestar Galactica and Amazing Stories and Star Trek: The Next Generation. Now, Star Trek is a good example of a show that I was sickened to hear was coming back when The Next Generation started, but I ended up enjoying the new one even more than the original. So maybe the Muppets have a chance after all.

George Burns's death was another soul-shaking event for me. He was supposed to be immortal. He always has been and always will be — he was God after all, wasn't he? John Denver may be a geek, but you've got to admit George was pretty damn funny in that movie. I'm sorry. I can't accept that he's dead. It's a joke right? George? Speak to me George. George?

Nicole Cournoyer

My youngest sibling is now 16. She's going to be getting her license soon. That's just not right. No. She's nine and I'm 13 and that's the way it's going to stay! I'm not a sophomore in college with no idea what to do with my life. I'm in seventh grade and I've got plenty of time. No reason to worry. Don't have to think about employment or graduate school or marriage. That's all a long way away. Right?

There's a great comfort in living in the past. We thought everything was so concrete then. Nothing would change — that was how things were and always would be. Then puberty sent us reeling and from day to day it seemed our outlook on life changed. We developed new perspectives with every new thing we learned or experienced — and we were learning and experiencing constantly. New people were created inside our bodies as the old ones became obsolete, and the process continues.

Yes, I miss the things that I used to love that have disappeared or evolved into something else, but when I think about it, if things always remained the same, wouldn't they become unbearably boring? Hold on to your memories, but don't let them shape your view of the present and future. Change may be depressing and frustrating, but it's not always a bad thing.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Copeland is part right

To the editor:

The only description of me by Dave is that, yes, I am a character. Had he taken the time to get his facts straight he'd find I'm an interesting one at that. But the rest of his lambasting, libelous, vilifying diatribe on me was dreamed up in the dregs of bigotry in the bottom of his beer.

Columnists of his ilk should be required to take Diversity and Awareness Sensitivity Training. He goes too far in the name of humor at my expense. Exactly what does he find funny in disparaging, scurrilous negative attacks of erroneous exaggeration aimed at me?

I am a hapless, quirky "older" student on again, off again over 10 years in University Without Walls getting my self designed degree in Human Services based on life experience. "Older" around here is anyone 23 and up. Admissions must let me matriculate. I qualify. Education is an egalitarian entitlement, not elitist privilege for a pin-headed few who think they alone rule. Anyone caring to understand me in five minutes walks away feeling my brilliance, excess smarts and native intelligence acquired in a full lifetime of enriching experience in many fields.

Line for line I must debunk his prevarications. I go to school one year then, take off a year to work, finish extended field work in special projects, Independent Studies. I take classes up to 800 level with Ph.D. candidates. How many undergrads can say that?

Being attacked on campus is nothing new. Being attacked nakedly by a columnist is.

I was expelled from campus for two years and all my semester's 15 credits expunged for calling a nurse a "Minutewoman," and tapping my cane on her file to get someone's attention for help.

Does the punishment fit the "crime"? Hardly. It is a foregone conclusion given the atmosphere hereabouts of PC fear, backlash, hysteria and anti-male bias. Read: anti Joel bias! [Copeland] joins ranks with PC police in perpetuating the myth of the monster male along with the demonization of a harmless human being, me! Two lawyers, two years of appeals up thru the federal level. Later I came back, a glutton for self punishment.

Yes, I used to ask persons not to smoke in the Campus Center. Why not? The law's the law. And I need fresh air to breathe. Next complaint.

No, I am not writing a book on how to screw your landlord. But it wouldn't be a bad idea given the inordinate real power of landlords with their inferior but pricey offerings the hapless student perennially must call home.

Yes, smoking still goes on in secret around here. Yet it still finds its way up my nose. But the violations aren't as flagrant.

I've never filed even one lawsuit on UMA. Although for some of the harmful actions done to me they should be sued. Like Martin Jones I sometimes put my life on the line for my beliefs into action. At least he and I try to do something to stir the pot, raise consciousness in the public arena. And we get in trouble for it. I always try through legal means to affect change while protecting my right to exist.

Joel Stanley
University Without Walls

LETTERS TO EDITOR AND COLUMNISTS

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Bob Dunn.

Farrakhan's secret agenda

Louis Farrakhan, the spiritual leader of the Nation of Islam is making headlines again, this time as black America's foreign diplomat, meeting with a number of heads of state in Africa and the Middle East.

Last October, Farrakhan convened the now historic Million Man March as part of his mission to crown himself King of black America.

And black men from around the country and around the world came in droves to rally around "the Minister." They went home fired up to make a difference in their communities. Black ministers and church leaders all made the right call by taking a leap of faith in Farrakhan, supporting him for doing the right thing, and giving him the benefit of the doubt to move into the mainstream of the Civil Rights struggle.

Martin F. Jones

And now, it looks like "Calypso Louie" is back to his old tricks again.

While the Million Man March was supposed to be a call to action to rebuild our decaying inner cities, Farrakhan has just completed a world tour, hobnobbing with Islamic fundamentalists in Iran and Sudan, and also with military dictators in Libya, Iraq and Nigeria.

Well Louis, how about those cities, eh?

Nigeria, Iraq and Iran are all wealthy oil producing states that could spare at least five or $10 million to bail out the NAACP, for example. That is about the amount each of those dictators spend on their numerous palaces, summer bungalows and their wives' wardrobes. So where have these so-called "allies" been all these years?

Now, it looks like Libyan president Mohammar Khaddafy is holding out a billion dollar bone over the salivating mouth of the good minister, supposedly to help finance Farrakhan's anti-American, anti-Israel activities in the US.

I guess Farrakhan's US government security contracts weren't quite making his ends meet.

The truth is, the only reason Farrakhan was invited to share the stage with the president of Iran, Iraq, Sudan and Libya was to serve as a pawn to promote their own anti- Israel campaigns. They could otherwise care less about Farrakhan, his weird pseudo-Islamic cult or black Americans in general.

And when Farrakhan prophecies the "destruction of America at the hands of Muslims," he forgets one very important fact.

He's an American too.

And if America should fall, will Farrakhan survive?

African-Americans everywhere should be outraged at Farrakhan's betrayal. One day he's speaking coalition building, community service and personal responsibility, and then he's roaming the Middle East, trying to lead his own "jihad" with a bow tie and an attitude.

What about the thousands of young black children who are dying of crack and AIDS? Does Farrakhan care about them?

What about the half-a-million black men in prison? Does Farrakhan care about them?

What about the hate crimes and arsons of black Christian churches that are sweeping across the south? What will the black Muslims do about that? What happened to the Muslim-Christian unity at the Million Man March. Does it even come close to rating in importance with his embrace of murderous Nigerian Dictators who are all puppets of Shell Oil Corporation?

No, Farrakhan and Saddam Hussein want to lead an Islamic "Revolution" which will annihilate the United States, Israel and anyone else who gets in their way. If Iraq or Iran were to bomb a major American urban center, like Washington D.C. for example, millions of African-Americans who live concentrated in those areas would be incinerated. Is this what Farrakhan wants to see happen when he talks of a "jihad" against America? Just whose side is Farrakhan on?

Two years ago, the University of Massachusetts was in political turmoil over a visit by Minister Louis Farrakhan. As it turns out, a number of very well-meaning students invited him here to discuss "racism" and other relevant topics. Farrakhan's visit was supported by the entire administration, who elected to pacify the black students and give us our night with Farrakhan. The university was also generous enough to pay Mr. Farrakhan $25,000 for the speech.

And it was a powerful, dynamic speech. Farrakhan, a former Calypso singer, really knows how to work a crowd, as he masterfully dazzled the audience with his rhetoric.

I know, because I was right there in the front section. I supported Farrakhan's right to attend because I did not wish to offend the black community. In fact, everyone who went against their wishes probably thought about that dilemma at one point or another.

Today, however, I am a little older, somewhat more wiser and a lot more courageous. Today, I can publicly condemn Farrakhan without fear or remorse.

Why condemn Farrakhan? It's easy. He's a fascist. He's anti-Semitic. He's a racist. He's a separatist. He's a demagogue. And he's a fool.

Generations of progress by well meaning people of all races are being undermined by Farrakhan's mad quest for power. His agenda is really no secret at all. Promote the interests of Louis Farrakhan and the Nation of Islam. Spend lots of money on Bentleys and $10,000 suits. Exploit a class of people that have suffered through endless successions of slavery, Jim crow, lynchings and injustice. Walk around preaching with a bag of phony promises. Promote hate. Divide and destroy multicultural coalitions that have been the most effective vehicles for social change in America. Agitate and antagonize the relations between blacks and Jews. Advocate a separate black state, segregation, and racism. Promote anti-Semitism. Bash gays and lesbians. Keep women at home and "in their place." Champion the call for the destruction of Israel and the United States.

And like the sheep that so many of us are, we blindly follow this malicious shepherd straight to the slaughterhouse.

So who's gonna' stand up to Farrakhan. Will Jesse Jackson do it? I don't think so. Will Al Sharpton do it? Sorry, not in our lifetime. Is there anyone out there other than Alan Keyes, the black GOP token presidential candidate, who will stand up to Farrakhan?

If the answer is no, then we've already lost.

This is how fascists like Hitler, Mussolini and Saddam Hussein came to power. Through fear and intimidation they reduced all sensible minded people who would otherwise oppose them into shivering, quivering cowards. What's really sad about Farrakhan is that there is nothing to fear from him. He has no army (The Fruit of Islam is not an army). He has no secret police. He has no executive authority. What he does have is rather large mouth, spewing a continuous supply of bigoted hate-filled rhetoric at $25,000 a pop. And yet, Black America's so-called "leaders" have been stopped dead in their tracks by this vain-glorious cult-leader with an obsession with the number 19.

Louis Farrakhan once called Adolf Hitler a "great man." Well, if only Hitler were alive today to see the "almighty" Farrakhan in action. He would be quite pleased indeed.

Martin F. Jones is a UMass student.

Freedom to get obliterated

Rape? Frat? Shocker! C'mon, people! Rape has been around forever. The "officials" are acting as if it's a sudden premiere!

Eileen Stewart, assistant dean of students, recently said, "women should not be with people who are excessively drinking or drugging, and they should not drink to the point where they seem vulnerable."

Leslie Nirenstein

Ms. Stewart, I am appalled! That's almost as bad as: "She was wearing practically nothing, she had it coming to her!"

Women should not have to avoid their own community in order to keep rights to their own bodies! Why, Ms. Stewart, must women have to lessen their intake of drugs and alcohol so as not to be attacked?

On the contrary! Any woman should have the freedom to get obliterated as the next of kin without having to worry about their bodies being assaulted or abused because of a frat member's moments of drunken sexual gratification!

Beer is certainly no excuse. "Brothers" are no alibi. Rape should not have to be turned into a safety workshop. It just shouldn't happen. It's all in the lack of morals. Open your eyes. These are the same people who toilet paper trees and tip cows! Rape will continue as long as these fraternities continue to disrespect and degrade women.

As for Michael Wiseman, the Director of Greek Affairs, I highly doubt that his plans to follow through with any of his quoted intentions of taking "swift action" or any actions at all, for that matter, are valid. The Greek society is guilty and afraid for their "reputation," as well they should be.

There are so many reasons that only this case out of hundreds has been publicized. Among them are the following:

- women blame themselves
- women were threatened
- women were unconscious

It is beyond me why women go to frats in the first place. The members should be in straightJOCKets. Nevertheless, these women with an odd attraction to ignorant, misogynist, homophobic bastards deserve the same feeling of security when drunk and surrounded by beasts as when they are sober and surrounded by beasts in princes' clothing.

I must admit — fraternities have beautiful puppies, and they treat them well; but even Hitler had pets.

Leslie Nirenstein is a UMass student.

What is happening?

"No!... Please!... Somebody help me!" These cries of a frantic female were what my friend and I heard recently coming from a room we were passing by early one Sunday morning.

Laura Forster

The cries and other noises coming from the room led us to believe there was sexual activity taking place which it seemed the crier did not want. Unsure of what to do, we knocked on the door to see if things were O.K.

The noises stopped as soon as we knocked and after some time the door opened to a guy and girl. When we asked if everything was O.K., the two said everything was fine and that they were just fooling around. As my friend and I turned to leave, the girl looked me in the eye and said — "Thanks for caring though."

And so it ended as we walked away feeling like quite the jackasses. However, there was something on that girl's face, the look in her eyes, that sticks in my memory. Something about the way she thanked me made me wonder how much "fooling around" was really going on. Had I seen tears in her eyes? It all happened so fast that it was hard to know what to think or do. Was it another case of rape?

As the issue of rape on campus has become an even greater concern it has matched up in coverage with the Minutemen themselves. I never would have thought that possible.

The accusations held against the frats have dug into a sensitive area for many victims across campus. Yet many have shown hesitancy to come forward. I can see in a sense why this may be, as rape has taken on a snowball effect in its range and degree.

It is an issue which has people bitterly pessimistic and critical while others are left violated and broken. I often hear "well, he only rubbed up against her"... "She's taking this too far"... "All's a guy has to do these days is have sex with a girl and he can be accused of rape, no matter if he's innocent."

I have to admit I have been guilty of sometimes wondering these same thoughts but now I've begun to wonder why would so many girls go through all of the public humiliation? Could bitter revenge really be the whole catalyst? It seems as though it must be something deeper... like a cry to gain back some self-dignity.

I've always been aware of the dangers of rape here at school ever since my freshmen orientation when the first issue addressed was a sharp injection of reality about the dangers of rape on campus. But now I feel like I'm becoming enclosed and on the verge of being swallowed up by the whole mess.

Who's fault is all this?... Can it be put on just one side? I'm not sure what to make of any of this, but I do know the look in that girl's eyes that early Sunday morning are locked into my consciousness. A look that seemed to beg the same question I ask myself — "What is happening?"

Laura Forster is a Collegian staff member.

Defending the system

I still remember the first week of February in 1994 when I participated in Pan-Hellenic sorority rush. I was excited and overwhelmed, but most of all I was looking forward to joining a sorority.

Victoria Yakunin

I began anticipating formal rush during my first semester at UMass. I paid close attention to the way in which the Greek area interacted amongst themselves and the community. From my observations, I realized that not only do the houses support each other but that the Greek area works as a whole to support the town through community service. The Greek area also hosts philanthropic events to benefit their own national philanthropies. After seeing all the positive aspects of the Greek area, I knew that I would be as active as possible in maintaining its success.

As part of formal rush, women are required to visit each sorority. Every sorority welcomes them and makes sure they feel comfortable while visiting their house. The final night of rush is called "preference" night and by this time most women have decided which sorority they prefer. They pick up their bids the next day and from that point on, become members of the Greek area.

I was ecstatic when I received a bid from the sorority of my choice. I could not wait to start the pledging period and become a sister.

As a sorority member for the past two years, I am proud to wear my letters and tell people that I am an active member of the Greek area.

I have gained many valuable experiences within the sorority. I have enhanced my leadership skills and made lifelong friends. Most importantly, I have made a significant contribution to my chapter by holding chair positions and currently the position of vice-president.

For me, joining a sorority has been beneficial for many reasons. For instance, it has given me the opportunity to meet people on a professional and personal basis. Not only has this enhanced my communication skills, but it has given me confidence that I will be able to apply in the professional world. Being a member of the Greek area is rewarding, and has been nothing but a positive experience.

However, I am extremely disappointed with all of the negative publicity Greeks have received in the past few weeks. It is unfortunate that the whole Greek area must be blamed for the alleged act of one or two individuals. While I do not approve of rape, I speak for myself in saying that I am in complete support of the Greek area. We are an organization just like any other who has been targeted in an unfortunate situation.

I feel part of my responsibility is to inform the community about all the great qualities and the services the Greek area has to offer to the university and the town of Amherst. Once again, we are a responsible part of the community and we do not condone any type of violent crime.

As I close this article, I think back to the day when I was proud to be given a chance to be a part of the Greek area. That pride has not changed.

Victoria Yakunin is a UMass student.

What to say today

Today, I heard a great humorist and writer, C. Taylor Conner, say "I'm just not sure I have anything to say." I think he hit the nail on the head. There just isn't anymore to say about anything.

Aren't you a little tired of it all? Aren't you sick of all the crap that we hear about every day? The Joe Government crap? The Jane The Feminist crap? The Muhammed Nation of Islam crap? The Johnny Save-The-Furry-Woodland-Owl Environmentalist-Non-Meat-Eating crap? The Dreaded Cracker Phish crap? The If-You-Want-My-Gun-You'll-Have-To-Pry-It-Out-Of-My-Cold-Dead-Fingers Christian Coalition crap? The Evan-Young-Is-A-Collegian-Columnist crap?

Evan Young

Isn't it annoying? After a while, you get to the point where you walk down Fear Row and you smack your head on a banner that says "Dead Men Don't Rape" because you didn't see the crowd of 800 chanting protesters in your way.

So what do you do?

Naturally, you go to rent an adult video, but you can't because there's a cage match between the pro-porn and anti- porn ralliers going on in the parking lot. You would run them all down in order to rent "Foreskin Gump" but you just got your car washed, so you...

Walk down to the Campus Center, kick the ass of the guy who tries to sell you a copy of the Bhagavad-Gita, then decide to play a few rounds of Virtua Fighter 2. But before you get there, you are practically converted to Judaism and smoked up by a member of the Cannabis Reform Coalition. So, stoned, you...

Walk to Earth Foods and play the "see who has the longest beard" game, drum for a while and gag on some broccoli. On your way to the People's Market you...

Pass by a sign that gives you like 50 different arguments against eating meat, as well as making you feel bad about being human. Eventually you stop reading the sign and start to get hungry for a cheesesteak, and as you feel your arteries starting to harden, you head to the bus stop, but not before...

You throw that yelling idiot masked guy in the campus pond and watch the swan attack him. Laughing as you walk away, you see a bunch of students from the "Campus Swan Freedom Movement" dressed in black and holding clubs mistake the masked guy as an attacker (as well as a general threat to the ecosystem). They pummel him into the earth and feed his remains to the geese. You continue to the bus stop...

And when the bus comes, you throw elbows to get on and get a decent seat in the front but you don't get it because a really fat guy wearing a shirt that says "more cushion for pushin'" is taking up two seats. You look up at the sign that says "please offer seats forward of this line to the elderly and people with disabilities" and wonder if being excessively fat is considered a disability. You get off the bus...

And walk around Central. In front of Franklin you are accosted by some MASSPIRG people. "Are you registered to vote?" they ask. "Like, voting how?" you say. "Do you know what's in your drinking water?" they ask. "Why would I have to worry about that — I'm going to the DC to eat. The water there must be safe" you say. They hand you 15 different pamphlets as you go in the door...

Licking your chops at the thought of Southern Fried Steak Night at the DC. But before you can get in line, a large lunch lady wearing a hair net smells the scent of smoke on your clothes and blocks your way to that culinary heaven. "But I just wanted to sit down and smoke a butt" you tell her, but it's no use. You think about staging a sit-in, but chanting has never cured either hunger or nicotine addictions, so...

You light up outside, inhale deeply, taste the chemical additives. Just as the carbon monoxide cuts off enough of the oxygen to your brain to give you a buzz, a campus mountee shows up and busts you with a citation for smoking within 20 feet of a campus building. In anger, you flick the lit cigarette at the horse, it spooks, tosses its rider, and tramples the MASSPIRG people to death. "I guess that's the risk you have to take" you say to yourself, and walk to the Newman Center to relax and enjoy a butt there...

But NO! You can't even smoke there, where they sell cigarettes!

Then you wonder: can't you do anything at this school without being assaulted by one biased group or another? Are all the people we are surrounded by supporting some kind of cause?

Let's give it up already! We've friggin' heard it all — we don't need to be bombarded with a continuous flow of self- righteous crap day-in and day-out! You don't need to fight for something to give your life true value.

What this means is that "I'm just not sure I have anything to say" is the best thing I've heard all day.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Who is that masked man?

On Tuesday afternoons last semester, a masked-man spoke out to students from the Student Union steps. Lately, people have been asking where the masked man went. The answer is that the masked man is inside you. He is the voice desperately trying to get through to you.

Maybe you only hear this voice vaguely while you are asleep. Or maybe this voice is so strong that it dominates your waking thoughts — you are no longer able to throw things in a trash can without feeling shame; you cannot get to sleep at night out of concern for our 1.5 million citizens in jail; you stopped driving your car after breathing one breath too many of our increasingly poisonous air; you no longer use electricity because you know that 40% of our energy comes from nuclear power plants.

Jed Curtis

The masked man who spoke to us was not the real masked man; he was a human being acting out the role of the masked man inside all of us. Why did he feel the need to do this? Because we are too afraid to listen to the real masked man, that part of our psyche that warns us when our lives are out of balance.

The man on the Student Union steps represented a transpersonal force. He sacrificed himself for the benefit of humanity, yet his message transcended our mundane lifestyles. His concern was the welfare of our planet and its future.

Transpersonal forces exist within all of us. They are the impetus for social concern, spirituality, awareness of mortality, and other qualities that go beyond self-centeredness. These forces are always a burden, and cause discomfort and unrest in our lives, but they are responsible for the elevation of consciousness. In order to evolve, we must face the challenges of these transpersonal forces. This process is often anything but easy, but the evolution of consciousness exacts a high price.

The masked man was provocative and sometimes painful to experience because he embodied the unacknowledged contents of our collective conscious. We all know at some subconscious level that our lifestyles are killing this planet, yet we continuously rationalize our behavior and refuse to admit to our pathological relationship with the Earth.

Why do people miss the masked man and wish he would return? They say they want to be entertained. The real reason is much deeper than this. Actually, they long for his message at a deep subconscious level. They are too afraid to look within themselves because they know that what they find will be too painful to face. Instead, they would rather have inner truth revealed to them through superficial means, e.g. from the masked man.

People love to be entertained, but we are finding that our television sets are leaving us unsatisfied and empty. Most of our media is shallow gossip with no socially redeeming qualities. When a charismatic figure such as the masked man comes along we are naturally drawn to him. Finally, we say to ourselves, here is a real human presence, not another smiling robot.

When the masked man spoke, his audience often argued with his message and views. Why was this? Partially because of human nature. But the main reason was that he touched people deeply and challenged their ingrained assumptions and unconscious habits.

People hate being told that their lives are irresponsible or the cause of the downfall of the earth. But this is precisely what the masked man did, and this made him controversial. Many people argued that the masked man had no right to tell them how to live. It is true that we live in a supposedly free country, and have extensive rights. But we must live responsibly within these rights and it is obvious that we are not doing so.

Everyday most of throw away paper plates and cups, plastic knives and forks. We take more than we need and seldom focus our attention away from our own selfish needs. This behavior is within our rights as American citizens, but clearly irresponsible. Collectively we are unwilling to challenge our excessive lifestyles. We fail to heed the voice of the masked man within us. But the masked man is a transpersonal force, bigger than any of us, and will not go away. We repress him inside ourselves and thus have no choice but to confront him in front of the Student Union.

Jed Curtis is a Collegian staff member.

Arts & Living

Slow rock revolution hits Noho

The Scud Moutain Boys will perform at the Iron Horse tonight. COURTESY CHRIS TOLMER

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Throw out those loud guitars. No more feedback here. Grunge — just a thing of the past. The new Sub Pop revolution is here and it is slow — very slow.

Gone are the days of Nirvana and Soundgarden thrashing it out for loudest and fastest, Northampton's Scud Mountain Boys are poised to take top billing on Seattle's hippest label. And they are doing it — slowly.

April 9 marks the release date of the band's third full length and first on Sub Pop. Simply entitled, Massachusetts, the album is easily the most anticipated local release of the year and should catapult the band into the league of neo- country artists Palace Brother and Sun Volt.

Life has not always been so upbeat for the band — just listen to their lyrics. Formed in 1991, the band struggled around town for four years. They formed simply as the Scuds and performed straight ahead rock numbers; then they found their true calling and haven't looked back since. Their big break came early last year with the release of Dance The Night Away on local label, Chunk Records. The album garnered ace reviews everywhere and led to an increase in interest. Chunk then re-released Pine Box which appeared originally only on cassette. Near the end of 1995 Sub Pop released an endearing two song 7" single featuring "Kneecl."

Massachusetts keeps pace with past releases and should propel the band to national recognition. The fourteen songs on the new album, filled with pure soul and heart-warming lyrics, serve as the perfect soundtrack for recovery on a terrible day. Joe Pernice's soothing vocals mix fluidly with the band's slow country feel.

In concert, the band is notorious for their laid back approach, and they mean laid back. Picture the four members sitting around an antique coffee table, smoking and drinking. Don't forget about their nice lamp which is taken from guitarist and vocalist Pernice's bedroom. Oh yeah, they also play seated around the same table. This is the same band that recorded Pine Box around their kitchen table. Total recording costs — the cost of the cigarettes, coffee and the tape.

Tonight's show will be the last local show before the release of the album and will certainly feature many of the tracks from Massachusetts. It is not often that an overly hyped band deserves all the attention, but the Scud Mountain Boys are not your average buzz band on Sub Pop. The slow rock revolution is here and it is "slow" good.

Opening up tonight's Iron Horse gig will be the up-and- coming Northampton trio Pirate Jenny. Over the past few months, the band has released an impressive debut 7" featuring "Conversation X" and they compiled the much hyped Live in the Living Room cassette.

The Scud Mountain Boys and Pirate Jenny perform at the Iron Horse tonight at 10 p.m. The show is all ages and tickets are $6 at the door. Call the club at 584-0610 for more information.

Chinese filmmakers tackle gang life

Longtime collaboration pays off for Zhang Yimou & Gong Li

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

SHANGHAI TRIAD
Directed by Zhang Yimou
with Gong Li, Li Baotian, Wang Xiaoxiao
Playing at The Academy of Music

For nearly a decade, filmmaker Zhang Yimou and his longtime leading lady and lover, Gong Li, have been creating vivid, emotional tales of Chinese life and folklore. The latest and possibly last outing, (the two recently split due to irreconcilable differences) Shanghai Triad, marks what could be the end of a great era.

Zhang takes a typical 30's U.S. gangster theme and rearranges it so that the film no longer revolves around the rise and fall of a particular mobster but on the balance of power amongst the mobster's underlings.

The Tang family, as an influential force in 1930 Shanghai, goes through an eight day period of radical changes that begin with young Shuisheng (Wang Xiaoxiao) becoming a servant to his distant relative, the triad boss. Shuisheng is placed under the guidance of his Uncle Liu (Li Xuejian) who tries to teach him the ways of servitude.

Boss Tang (Li Baotian) has Shuisheng serve his beautiful nightclub singer moll, Xiao (Gong Li). Gong, who usually plays an upstanding model woman, revels in the opportunity to play the brainy, scandalous Xiao.

Xiao treats Shuisheng poorly and teases him by calling him a "stupid country bumpkin." Shuisheng is miserable away from his home, but while he deals with the abuse Boss Tang is having troubles with a rival gang.

During the next couple of days, Boss Tang takes Xiao, Shuisheng and a few select members of the triad to an undeveloped island to hide out. Here Xiao learns to appreciate Shuisheng and relate to him, telling him that she too is a country bumpkin. The misty island is where they remain until the cataclysmic finale.

Gong continues to dominate with her sheer screen presence. She turns her ill-natured tramp into sympathetic character reminiscent of earlier roles. But with past performances she was in control by extending herself above her lowly social positions. As Xiao, her fleeting power becomes self-destructive.

As the most famous actress in China, the beautiful Gong has been offered many roles in Hollywood. Fortunately, she has turned them down because of their mediocrity and has remained thus far, a strictly Eastern actress.

Zhang is a remarkable director who is just beginning to receive his due praise in the States. His storylines are first- rate, relying on plot as a subtext to strong developed characters.

Lush photography is provided by Zhang's long-time cinematographer, Lu Yue. The landscapes are beautiful and like much of his previous work, he adds a reddish hue to the film that recaptures a China of the past. Rightly nominated for an Oscar for best cinematography, Shanghai Triad reveals more with images than with words.

Since their get-go in 1988 with Red Sorgham, Zhang and Yimou and Gong Li have collaborated for seven epics of Chinese life. Hopefully the end of their romantic relationship will not result in the end of their cinematic relationship. A-

Hampden to host jazz trumpeter

By Ian Simons
Collegian Correspondent

Dave Douglas will play Hampden Theater tomorrow evening. COURTESY WAMUA

The future of jazz cannot rely on musicians who just understand the traditions of this music. Indeed, it is increasingly necessary for the young virtuosos to fuse jazz with music from other cultures and create "new" and hopefully exciting sounds.

Take trumpeter Dave Douglas for example, who will be playing on March 14 with his sextet at the Hampden Theater at 8 p.m. This concert is a continuation of WMUA-FM's Magic Triangle Jazz Series which started off this season with McClaughlin's Free Spirits. The sextet comprises Josh Roseman on trombone, Uri Caine on piano, James Genus on bass, Chris Potter on reeds and Jeff Ballard on drums. The players are a cohesive unit who are capable of adapting rather than just reproducing styles of music.

The evening should be an excursion of eclectic music from a musician who has been described by the New York Times as "a virtuoso trumpeter and a virtuoso small-group arranger."

Douglas is one of the most prolifically recorded musicians of the past five years and his mixture of emotionally deep playing with a light elegance has graced many an album.

As a sideman he is a member of John Zorn's "Massada" Quartet and has played with the hard-bop academy that is Horace Silver's quintet. His own releases as a leader by The Tiny Bell Trio have demonstrated a breathtaking range of music, from the folk songs of the Balkans and Central Europe to Monk.

Stereo Review said, "Douglas is a major talent... his trumpet solos sting with their lyricism and technical daring."

Yet he has still managed to find a common ground among all these interests as opposed to seeing them as isolated forms.

Sound interesting? It should be.

Tickets are $6 for students and $9 for the general public. Advance tickets are available through the Five Arts Center Box Office or may be purchased the night of the performance. Please call 545-2511 for more information.

Concert honors jazz legend Benny Carter

By Mary Campbell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The glory of Benny Carter shone from the stage of Avery Fisher Hall as other jazz artists saluted him in a special concert at Lincoln Center.

"An Evening With Benny Carter" focused on the 88-year-old jazz master in all his guises — saxophonist, arranger and composer. The concert began with a swing piece Carter wrote in 1933, "Symphony in Riffs."

But the Carter music that made the liveliest and strongest impression was a four-part suite, "Echoes of San Juan Hill," which had its premiere Saturday night. The work was inspired by Carter's childhood. He grew up in a tough New York neighborhood known as San Juan Hill, where Lincoln Center now stands.

Wynton Marsalis bounced to the beat as he conducted the crisp Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra in the first section, the driving "San Juan Shuffle." The second part was "Belle of the Block," about a girl so pretty she turned heads.

Carter played a beautiful solo on alto saxophone, and pianist Cyrus Chestnut did equally as well with his solo. Both musicians soloed often and masterfully throughout the evening.

The band blared with joy and triumph in the "Echoes of San Juan Hill" finale, "Movin' Uptown." It was inspired by Carter's family moving to a better neighborhood in Harlem when he was 16.

Carter is a master of melodic invention and the first half of the concert displayed graceful, flowing tunes. "Devil's Holiday," for example, had a bacolic mood that hinted of hayrides and country life.

Singers Joe Williams and Dianne Reeves were peppy. Williams sang "I Was Wrong," which Carter tailored just for him, while Reeves performed "Only Trust Your Heart" like a young Sarah Vaughan. Williams and Reeves did a dynamite duet, "We Were in Love."

Other guests included vibraphonist Lionel Hampton who did a duet with Carter on "How High the Moon." Hampton also played "When Lights Are Low," which Carter wrote in 1937 and Hampton recorded with his band a few years later.

Warren Vache was the excellent guest trumpeter. Marsalis soloed on only one tune, "Another Time, Another Place," pouring heart and soul into it. Jon Hendricks sang and scatted "Cow Cow Boogie," once a hit record for Ella Mae Morse. Bobby Short sang one of Carter's new songs, "You Bring Out the Best in Me."

WANTED

Salary experience helpful, but not necessary

The Collegian is taking applications for:

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.

If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Pete or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement

REWARD Great resume builder! Great pay!

Magic Lantern

40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM

1996 Amateur Night Season

Featuring ... TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING

$500 1ST Place & runner-up prizes

Kick off bash tonight, 8:00 PM

Booking Private Parties now

Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275

Free Admission With This Ad

ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!! Rte. 9 South to Rte. 181 West to Rte. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right

BOSTON RD. • Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275

HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

Olympic champion brings fairy tale to ice in a new HBO special

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES— HBO subscribers will find a new Katarina Witt when she starts in "Ice Princess" beginning Sunday. The two-time Olympic gold medalist skates — and she acts, too.

Her fans may argue that Witt has been doing both during her skating career, bringing rare expression to her graceful routines on the ice. She even won an Emmy for her stunning "Carmen on Ice" on HBO in 1990.

But "Carmen" was strictly skating. "Ice Princess" is a fairy tale in which she plays a peasant girl who seeks to save her village from the oppressive taxes levied by corrupt landowners and politicians. Her pleas — and her sublime skating— capture the eye of the indolent prince. There's a happy ending, of course.

The German-born Witt, Olympic champion in 1984 and 1988 and four-time world champion, talked about the special in a telephone interview while she was in Cincinnati, touring with "Stars on Ice."

"We're touring 58 cities, a grueling schedule, one night in each city," she said. "All the traveling is most tiring, more than anything else. The most fun hours are being in front of the audience."

Although making "Ice Princess" didn't involve travel, it had other difficulties, Witt said.

"I was co-producing it, and I was involved in helping to write the story so it made sense on the ice," she explained. "I was involved in the music and every aspect of the whole movie, which was a very interesting adventure for me.

"For a movie like this, you have to do the choreography for the music. Sometimes, the music didn't make sense. So we went back into the studio and changed it. Something like this hasn't been done before, where the music is such a part of the story."

She was surrounded by professional actors in "Ice Princess," and minimizes her own acting — preferring to call it "my first speaking role."

"My safe part is the skating," she reasoned. "It was fun to say a few sentences and have some acting scenes, but I have the security of the ice under my feet. That helped a lot.

"Then I got comfortable with the whole crew and the cast, and I managed to get some tears out at the end."

Witt had a coach to help with the lines, but found that the first take of most scenes was the best, the most natural.

Witt skirted the suggestion that she might follow the example of another European Olympic champion, Sonja Henie, who skated in movie extravaganzas in the 1930's and 1940's. Witt would need to get more serious and take acting classes, she said. Right now, she's content to concentrate on skating.

In recent years, she has toured in ice shows and worked as commentator for skating coverage by U.S. and German TV networks. She made a well-received comeback for the 1992 Winter Olympics — although more athletic younger skaters dominated the competition.

Does she ever tire of skating?

"No," she said. "You get tired of the traveling, but the skating is what you like to do. It's fortunate to have a job which you really like to go out and perform. Sometimes you are tired, but as soon as you step out there before the audience, you forget about it. Those are the most exciting hours during the day."

Oh sure, it looks innocent. But it could be wired to a no-name company that has no qualms about overcharging broke college students.

So, calling card in hand, you dial 1 800 CALL ATT and save yourself some much-needed* cash.

Live off campus?
Dial 1 800 CALL ATT for AT&T Calling Card calls.
Always get AT&T. Never get overcharged.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.™

AT&T
Your True Choice

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$154	$293
PARIS	$179	$350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$254	$483
TOKYO		$762

Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply
Customs-Immigration taxes apply
Fares subject to change without notice
Int'l student I.D cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

WANTED
WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, COMPUTER LITERATE, CREATIVE
MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS
Java, Shockwave, Emblaze, C++, VRML & Visual Basic
NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS
LEAN & MEAN 1 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART TIME HELP, INTERNS
please include: resume, letter of interest, real PASSION, BUT NO EXPERIENCE? WRITE US A LETTER!
VISION
Multimedia & Video
P.O. Box 776, Amherst, MA 01004
bbalfour@shaysnet.com
attn: Ben Balfour, Production Mgr
NO PHONE CALLS

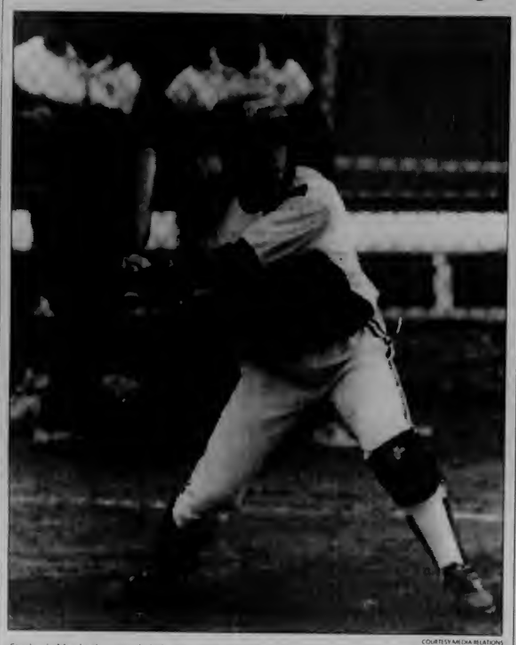
Spring Breakin'.

Steve Madden
If you're gonna go out, you gotta look sport

Nine West
Free your toes, free your soul

ZITI
Downtown Amherst

UMass hoping for solid outing



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Stephanie Mareina hopes to help her team in getting Coach Elaine Sortino's 500th career victory next week.

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts softball coach Elaine Sortino is five wins shy of her 500th career victory, and the Minutewomen look to help her reach that milestone with a solid performance at the Lady Seminole Tournament in Tallahassee, Fla. beginning their 10-game spring "break."

Massachusetts sports a 5–7 record this season— mediocre, but very respectable if you consider the calibre of the teams that Sortino has lined the Minutewomen up against.

In just its fourth contest of the season, the University of Massachusetts tangled with then–No. 2 Arizona. The Minutewomen have gone on to play No. 4 Washington, No. 13 Florida State and then–No. 22 Missouri, who they nearly beat.

Two of their five victories thus far have come against regional rivals Princeton, who beat the Minutewomen on their way to the College World Series last spring, and UConn.

The continued success for Massachusetts lies in the hands of its potent offensive attack led by junior third baseman Sam Cardenas. Cardenas, the lead–off hitter, hit .364 last season, driving in 39 runs while leading the team in doubles (18), triples (6) and runs scored (49). Her efforts earned her a spot on the Northeast Region All–America second team.

Another main cog in the UMass lineup will be Kim Gutridge (first base) hitting in the three spot. The sophomore from LaMiranda, Calif., led the Minutewomen with a .383 average last season. Her 25–game hitting streak in 1995 was the second longest in UMass history. Last year's A–10 Rookie of the Year played for the gold medal– winning USA softball team at the Junior World Championships this past summer.

The primary power source will come from veteran backstop Chris Martens. Last season, Martens set a UMass single–season mark with 42 RBI, knocking a team–high six homers and batting .369. The outfield will be loaded with speed, led by slick–fielding No. 2 hitter Stephanie Mareina, and Tracey Osier, who last season set the all–time Minutewomen single–season stolen base mark with 22.

Jordan earns weekly honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan, who scored an NBA season-high 53 points Thursday, was selected the league's player of the week. The Chicago Bulls star averaged 39.3 points, nine rebounds, three assists and three steals in three games last week.

Other candidates for the award were Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway, Boston's David Wesley, Charlotte's Larry Johnson, Detroit's Grant Hill, Miami's Tim Hardaway, Philadelphia's Jerry Stackhouse, San Antonio's Avery Johnson and Seattle's Gary Payton.

Pippen hurting

CHICAGO (AP) — Scottie Pippen's ailing back may land him on the injured list as the Chicago Bulls prepare for the playoffs.

"We'll give him a couple of days rest at practice and see what Wednesday morning feels like and go from there," coach Phil Jackson said.

With 21 games remaining, including tonight's home contest against the Washington Bullets, the Bulls are 54-7 and hold a 7 1/2 game lead over the Orlando Magic. It would take a major collapse to lose home-court advantage through the conference playoffs.

Pippen has been one of the more vocal members of the team about the Bulls' chances of winning an NBA record 70 games. But having a healthy Pippen for the playoffs is more important than setting a regular-season record.

Pippen has complained of chronic back pain since a 1988 operation to remove a herniated disc. He also has sore knees and twisted an ankle in Sunday's 32-point loss to the New York Knicks. Since scoring a season-high 40 points against Indiana on Feb. 19, Pippen is averaging 14.3 points a game. He has scored more than 20 points just once, against Golden State on March 1.

"Obviously, Scottie is not in great condition and we have to consider that," Jackson said. "He's been in a little bit of a slump the last couple of weeks."

Pippen has said he wants to play through the problem, but lately has conceded that rest might be the best thing for him.

"It would help," he said. "That's something we're going to have to look at the next few days. The overall picture is we want to be healthy going into the playoffs."

NBA Player of the week Michael Jordan

NBA takes legal action

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA took legal action yesterday against several agents and attorneys for the players' union, accusing them of trying to interfere with the new collective bargaining agreement.

"A small group of agents who are unhappy with the agreement reached between the NBA and the Players Association have succeeded in hijacking the union and are attempting to repudiate portions of the agreement previously agreed to by the players' bargaining team," NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said.

The league filed an unfair labor practice charge against the union with the New York regional office of the National Labor Relations Board. The NBA also filed a federal lawsuit against the union and the agents in U.S. District Court in New Jersey. Ron Klempner, assistant general counsel for the players association, denied the charges.

"There's no merit to them at all," he said. "They are just trying to gain some leverage in the remaining negotiations." Klempner said the union isn't trying to back out of the agreement reached between the sides last summer. However, he said there are still many unsettled issues involving "salary cap mechanics, group licensing and benefits."

"We made it clear that with these open issues, we're going to take a very firm stance," Klempner said.

Among the agents cited in the court complaint were Frank Catapano, David Falk, Marc Fleisher, Ron Grinker, Steve Kauffman and Arn Tellem.

"We believe the actions of the agents and the current position of the union's new lawyers are unlawful, and we are asking the NLRB and the court to require the Players Association to live up to the agreement it negotiated," the NBA said.

The NBA said the lawsuit stemmed from a meeting last month between league officials and players' union attorneys Jeffrey Kessler and Jim Quinn. According to the NBA, the lawyers said the union "would not live up to numerous terms" of the six-year deal.

Sports Notice

Team and individual entries are still being accepted for Intramural spring sports:
Softball, Co–rec soccer, Co–rec volleyball
Softball and Co–rec soccer required captains meeting: March 25 & 26 (6 p.m.)
Volleyball required captains meeting: March 27 (8 p.m.)

Paid referees needed for Intramural softball, Co–rec soccer and volleyball
Softball and Co–rec soccer clinic dates: March 25 & 26 (7 p.m.)
Volleyball clinic date: March 27 (7 p.m.) Attend one clinic.
For details about Intramural sports, stop by 215 Boyden or call 545–0022/2693.

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e) J-1 Waivers
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
Relative Petitions
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1163 Main Street - 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103, 781-6370
13 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060, 584-3232
Specializing in IMMIGRATION LAW for over 10 years.

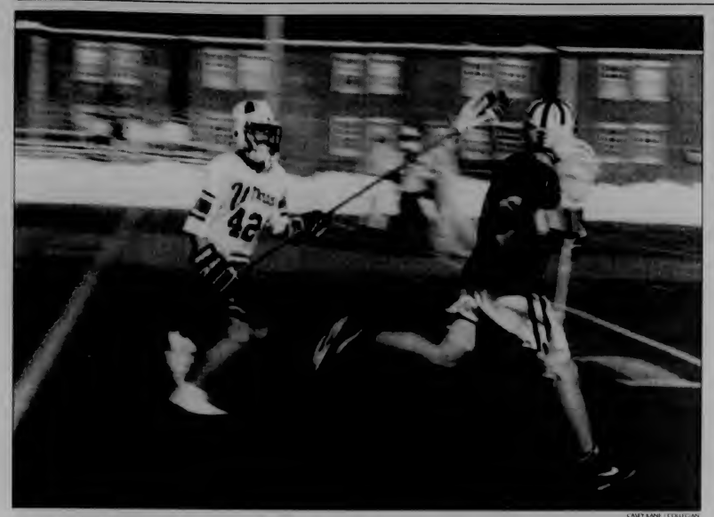
It's coming.....March 25th - 30th
Fentons Since 1914
March Madness Sale
All Baseball/Softball Gloves 10-50% off
All Running, Basketball, Tennis, & Cross Training Shoes 30-50% off
Batting Gloves $5 SARANAC Reg up to $16
ATHLETIC SUPPLIES
Baseball/Softball Cleats $5 WHITE NIKE MIZUNO YTH & ADLT. Reg up to $55 PONY MITRE
Fentons Since 1914
377 MAIN ST. AMHERST 253-3973
Outfitting Colleges, Schools, and Organizations
WATCH THIS NEWSPAPER FOR MORE DETAILS MARCH 26th!

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Thursday Night Jams
D.J. Triqueño
Free Admission Thursday March 28th 9:30pm-1:00am At The Hatch
Male and female Go-Go dancers will teach you how to dance the Latin way
This performance is made possible by:
DAILY COLLEGIAN Classifieds
SEF, a grant from the Cultural Enrichment Fund, Food Services, and a grant from Greek Affairs.

Spring break starts with us!
Live Ska
SKA FACE
Performing live this Thursday 10:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.
PRUDDY'S
FOOD • TROPICAL DRINKS • FRIENDS
Friday
hip hop
The best hip hop played by the Black Presidents
Saturday
Whatever
Dj Yusef plays a mix of 70's & 80's, house, hip hop, reggae, top 40, etc.
MAIN ST. AMHERST • 253-2899
Specials all week long
Come see Road to the Final Four on our two big screen TVs

BLUEWALL
Italian Festival
Sm. Tossed Salad, Garlic Bread, Choice of: Cheese Lasagna, Spaghetti, Ziti / Rotini
Meatballs or Sweet Sausage, Italian Mix Veg., It. Green Beans, Broccoli & Dessert
Only $4.99
Only $4.99
Today 11:30am-1:30pm

LONDON $215*
Paris $275*
Frankfurt $279*
Copenhagen $289*
Prague $329*
Mexico City $257*
Guatemala $265*
Tokyo $459*
*Fares are each way from Boston based on a roundtrip purchase. Taxes are not included. Fares subject to change. Certain restrictions may apply. Depending on destination, changes apply prior to, or beginning with departure. Contact Council Travel office for complete details.
CALL FOR A FREE STUDENT TRAVELS MAGAZINE!
Council Travel
44 Main Street Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/cts/ctshome.htm
EURAILPASSES ISSUED ON-THE-SPOT!



CASEY KANE / COLLEGIAN

Freshman defender Zach Hergott [42] and the UMass Minutemen defeated the Hawks of Hartford yesterday in Springfield, 14–9.

Magic surging towards playoffs

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The NBA's best record probably is beyond reach, so the Orlando Magic are taking aim at what may be a more-realistic goal.

While Chicago remains on pace to become the first team to win 70 games, the Magic hope to compile a better winning percentage the second half of the season.

That probably won't be good enough to catch the Bulls in the race for homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs. However, it would narrow the gap between the top contenders in the Eastern Conference.

"We want to be the best team the rest of the way and keep improving right through the last game," coach Brian Hill said just before the All-Star break.

So far, his players have responded.

The surging Magic began a four-game road trip yesterday night with a seven-game winning streak and had won 13 of 14 games since the season resumed Feb. 13.

Sunday's victory against Phoenix set a league record for consecutive home victories. The Magic have won 39 straight regular-season games at Orlando Arena, 32 of them this season. They've even addressed their inconsistency on the road, winning six of their first seven away games since the break.

The only loss during that stretch came at Chicago, where the Bulls can match Orlando's 32-0 home start, as well as the record 39-game streak, while the Magic are on the road this week. That's one of the reasons the Magic didn't celebrate after beating the Suns. Another is the realization that the ultimate gauge of the team's success will be the playoffs.

"You appreciate what you've done," said Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway, "but you can't spend too much time thinking about it... There are just too many other things that are a lot more important."

Like continuing to win on the road. The west-coast swing that began yesterday night in Denver also includes games against Seattle, Vancouver and the Los Angeles Lakers.

"This trip is going to tell us how far we've come as a team," forward Horace Grant said. "Lately we've been playing great on the road — getting out, getting big leads on teams and really putting them away."

Shaquille O'Neal has led the way, averaging nearly 29 points and 11 rebounds since finishing second behind Michael Jordan in voting for the MVP award at the All-Star game.

"I don't know that being snubbed has anything to do with it, but he is playing with a lot of determination," guard Nick Anderson. "I just think he plays hard. We're all playing hard." Chicago's success has been the talk of the league, overshadowing strong starts by teams like Orlando, Seattle and Utah — all of which have winning percentages of .700 or better.

Sunday's victory over Phoenix left the Magic one game behind last season's pace when they won a franchise-record 57 games and made their first appearance in the NBA Finals.

In some ways, this season's start is more impressive because O'Neal missed six weeks with a broken thumb and has sat out a total of 26 games because of injuries.

The Magic's regular lineup of O'Neal, Hardaway, Grant, Anderson and Dennis Scott had been together just 22 games before yesterday night, compiling a 19-3 record.

Hill quietly kept the team atop the Atlantic Division while O'Neal was sidelined and preached patience in the weeks leading up to the All-Star break, a stretch that saw the Magic fall five games under .500 on the road.

The key since then has been improved team defense, which in turn has helped the Magic offensively.

"I've said all along, just wait to judge us after we get everybody back and healthy and playing," Hill said. "I think since the All-Star break we've shown that."

Lott retires

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Defensive back Ronnie Lott, who played with four Super Bowl teams while with the San Francisco 49ers, announced his retirement yesterday.

"I realized that I've exhausted my ability to play the game," Lott, 36, said in a statement. "My philosophy is to live life to the fullest, and to play the game to the fullest. I'm not able to be a productive player in the NFL any longer. I didn't want to hang on indefinitely."

Lott was voted to the NFL Pro Bowl a record-tying 10 times during a 15-year career that saw him play with the Los Angeles Raiders, the New York Jets and the Kansas City Chiefs as well as San Francisco.

He was on the Chiefs' injured reserve list last year after breaking his left leg in an exhibition game.

During his 10 years with the 49ers from 1981 to 1990, Lott made more than 700 tackles and intercepted 51 passes.

Lott, the eight pick overall in the 1981 draft, intercepted seven passes and returned three for touchdowns in a rookie year that saw the 49ers beat Cincinnati in Super Bowl XVI.

Bruno will be champion when he meets Tyson

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Frank Bruno will be the champion for the first time in a heavyweight title match when he fights Mike Tyson. For the fifth time, Bruno will be the underdog.

Tyson was a 10-1 favorite to win the WBC championship from Bruno on Saturday night in the MGM Grand Garden. He also was a 10-1 choice when he stopped Bruno in the fifth round of an undisputed title defense on Feb. 25, 1989.

The 34-year-old Bruno also was the underdog when he was stopped in the 11th round by Tim Witherspoon in a bid for the WBA title July 9, 1986; when he was stopped in the seventh round by Lennox Lewis in a WBC title bid Oct. 1, 1993; and when he outpointed Oliver McCall for the WBC title last Sept. 2.

"The Rocky story is peanuts to what I've been through," said Bruno, who was thought to be finished after he was stopped by Lewis.

But he refused to retire, stopping Jesse Ferguson in one round in his only fight in 1995 and winning on two quick knockouts before challenging McCall.

"I'm fighting for queen, country and myself, for my pride and dignity," said Bruno, who also claims that he, not Lewis, is the first British boxer to win a heavyweight title in this century. "Lennox Lewis is Canadian, not British, and to be honest Riddick Bowe gave the title to Lennox Lewis," Bruno said yesterday.

Lewis was born in England, but grew up in Canada and won an Olympic gold medal for Canada in 1988. He became the WBC champion when Bowe was stripped of the title for refusing to defend it against Lewis, who lost it when he was stopped in the second round by McCall on Sept. 24, 1994.

"I'm just so damn grateful to be here," Bruno said. "It feels very nice. I'm humble and grateful, but I'm damn proud."

That pride was wounded by the fact that while Bruno is getting $6 million, Tyson is getting about $30 million for the fight, which will be seen on pay-per-view television in the United States and, for the first time, in Britain.

"Would you be happy if you were the champion and were being treated like the challenger?" asked Bruno, who made $3.8 million in his first fight with Tyson, who made about $8 million.

In that first fight, Bruno was knocked down just seconds into the opening round, but then he rocked Tyson with a tremendous left hook to the jaw.

In a television promo for the rematch, Tyson is quoted as saying that was hardest he's ever been hit.

■ lax

continued from page 12

flank and drilled his first of the season for a man–up goal on UMass' first shot on the advantage. Glass finished the second period barrage on LaMonica at 2:47.

Fisher ended the scoreless stretch for Hartford with 24 ticks left on the clock before halftime as the teams went to the locker room with Minutemen leading 7–2. The two goals can be attributed to the strong defensive pressure by Adam Waxer, Harold Drumm and Greg MacDonald.

Overall, Cannella was happy with his goaltender and overall team's first performance on the season.

"I think [Kasselakis] kept us in the game in the first half," Cannella said. "Making some big saves and clearing the ball. Overall, I thought it was a good effort, some young guys got some great experience."

Freshmen Jay Negus and Mike McKeefrey both played significant minutes, and some needed offensive experience benefitted the play of Grande, who notched a hat trick, and Casey Costello who also got his first on the season.

■ Georgetown

continued from page 12

"Why should we not?" Thompson said. "We wouldn't be where we are now if he hadn't been able to do some of the things that he did. People have a tendency to forget very quickly. Say what you want, but you deal with the guy that brought you there.

"He has options to drop if off to his wings. He has options to drop it inside. The problem with Allen is that he's so damn cocky in his own ability that he thinks he can beat everybody anytime he wants to. And that's good. That's not bad. I'm not too certain that we wouldn't be sitting here now if he didn't believe that way."

Mississippi Valley State has a 22 6 record and qualified for the NCAAs as the winner of the Southwestern Athletic Conference. It was no surprise when Thompson issued the usual warning about over confidence.

"People look at historically black schools because of their lack of exposure as not being good," Thompson said. "You've got a tendency, if you don't know something about someone, to rationalize your own ignorance... They have a lot to gain. The incentive is there."

Indiana looks to make run after losses early in season

By Thomas P. Wyman
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON — The steam had hardly cleared from the Indiana locker room before the coaches began plotting NCAA tournament strategy.

"I can guarantee you that as we speak at 7 p.m., one hour after the NCAA pairings, that [assistant coach Ron] Felling is back there with six Boston College films, and he's taking Boston College apart," said Athletic Department assistant Norm Ellenberger.

But never mind the lieutenants. The General — coach Bob Knight — is in charge.

"During the season, there's so many games that one of the assistants is in charge of the scouting and preparing us in the locker room," said Brian Evans, a senior and Indiana's leading scorer.

"But in the tournament, it's coach. And he's directly involved with it at all times, he's running the film. He's got the controller in his hand," Evans said. "And when he's like that, we all get a great deal of knowledge from him."

Knight, winner of three NCAA titles, is a sure bet to use every ounce of knowledge squeezed from 25 years of coaching at Indiana to compete for a fourth.

Sixth-seeded Indiana opens Friday against Boston College at the Southeast Regional in Orlando. The winner plays Sunday against the winner of the Georgia Tech-Austin Peay game.

After the regular season ended Sunday with a victory over Michigan State, Knight feigned bemusement over the NCAA selection process, wondering whether his team would be tapped.

"They could charge us $30,000 for an entry fee," he said sarcastically.

The NCAA did charge Indiana $30,000 last year, but more as an exit fee. The line was levied after Knight unleashed an obscenity-laced tirade following a first-round loss in the 1995 tournament.

In 1986, though, so far, so good.

But the season didn't start out well, with Indiana losing two of three games in Alaska. Home court losses to DePaul and Purdue and decisive road losses at Iowa and Penn State added to the burden. Then Knight dismissed sophomore Sherron Wilkerson in January after he was charged with misdemeanor battery. A court handed Wilkerson a suspended 6-month sentence for allegedly striking a woman.

"We've hung together through all the adversity," Evans said. "I think we've really just kind of formed as a team."

Evans says the team has more confidence going into this year's tourney.

"We're on a little roll. We've got a little streak going," he said, enjoying IU's four consecutive wins to close the regular season.

"We've got a lot of confidence in Todd [Lindeman] and the post play. We've got an inside-outside threat with Neil [Reed] and people shooting the ball well. We're really excited about heading into the tournament."

Valpo thrilled about tourney

(AP) — Forgive Valparaiso's Crusaders. They're in the NCAA men's basketball tournament for the first time, and understandably are more than a bit excited.

"It's amazing to know we're a part of it," forward Anthony Allison said.

The Crusaders, of course, already knew they would be in the tournament, thanks to their Mid-Continent Conference tournament championship last week.

What they didn't know until Sunday night was that they would be seeded 14th and matched against No. 3 seed Arizona on Friday in a West Regional first-round game at Tempe, Ariz.

Arizona (24-6), ranked 11th in the nation, is making its 15th NCAA appearance and reached the Final Four in 1988 and 1994.

"I didn't think it would be this exciting," said Allison, Valparaiso's leading scorer at 17.9 points a game. "After our three-hour practice, we came over here and our legs were sore, and we were kind of dragging and just going through the motions. But when the [pairings] show started, we started sweating and getting into it."

Sophomore guard Bryce Drew, the 1994 Indiana high school Mr. Basketball and the son of Valpo coach Homer Drew, already knows about tourney fever — he led Valparaiso High School to a runner-up finish in the state tourney two years ago.

"I didn't anticipate it being this exciting," he said of his first invitation to the NCAA tournament. "You start sweating and the adrenaline starts pumping. You wait so long and it's great to see your name called."

His father said he expected the Crusaders to be seeded no worse than 15.

"I think 14 is very realistic, and I'm very happy for the team because it shows they have gained some national respect," the elder Drew said.

Valparaiso (21-10) won the Mid-Continent tournament 75-52 over Western Illinois. Drew, second in scoring at 17.2, was the conference tourney MVP for the second straight year.

Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland Ireland Today
In Mexico Spanish Language and Culture
On Nantucket Island Playwriting and Performance
Along the New England Coastline Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island Marine Biology
For information about these programs—and over four hundred courses available this summer—contact
Division of Continuing Education, University of Massachusetts Boston, 100 Morrissey Blvd., Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915 Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

COLLEGIAN SPORTS!!!!!!!
TIME OUT
MARCH MADNESS
•Bud Night•
GIVEAWAYS & T-SHIRTS, HATS, SHORTS
9PM-1AM
GET THERE EARLY!

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATION 586-6843
33 WEST STREET NORTHAMPTON

(413) 549-1840
JUNGLE RED SALON
• Perms
• Colors
• Nails
Special Haircut Day
Lower Level, Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant / Amherst, MA 01002

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals, NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

The An Sci Pre Vet Club [illegible]

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Women do you worry [illegible]

University Productions & Concerts [illegible]

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time [illegible]

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton one bedroom apt [illegible]

Puffton Village [illegible]

South Deerfield Cnr [illegible]

Moving off Campus? [illegible]

AUTO FOR SALE

Mazda 323 [illegible]

1985 Ford Mustang LX Black, many very well maintained features, [illegible]

78 Buick Wagon [illegible]

80 Toyota Celica AT [illegible]

86 Saab 900 Turbo [illegible]

1986 Saab 900 [illegible]

86 Mustang [illegible]

Honda Prelude Si [illegible]

For Spring Break [illegible]

Ford Escort 1991 LX [illegible]

87 Acura Integra [illegible]

Purchasing a used car? [illegible]

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs - Martha's Vineyard [illegible]

Production Manager Wanted [illegible]

$Cruise Ships Hiring! Students needed for $$$+free travel! Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii. Seasonal/Permanent. No experience necessary. Call [illegible]

Town Of Amherst leisure services summer jobs [illegible]

FOR SALE

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto [illegible]

Moving [illegible]

HOUSE FOR SALE

Cape Cod [illegible]

Take over our lease! [illegible]

LOST

Green Gloves [illegible]

Lost Zodiac drivawatch! [illegible]

Hello Kitty [illegible]

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest [illegible]

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Cyndi! [illegible]

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent. [illegible]

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? [illegible]

Business Card Creations [illegible]

TRAVEL

Spring Break '96
Panama City $179
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1 800 734 7007

Flying away for Spring Break? [illegible]

Spring Break
Panama City $159
Daytona Beach $119
Best hotels and prices
Call Heidi 256 6110

TRAVEL

Europe $160
Caribbean-Mexico $189 R
Be a little flexible and save $$$ We'll help you beat the airline prices
Destinations worldwide
Arrivals 800 326 7009
arrivals@ritecom.com

WANTED

One or two tickets [illegible]

Umass at [illegible]

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

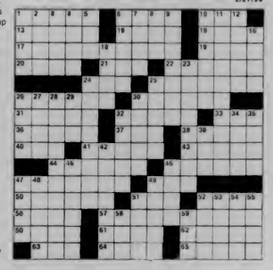
ACROSS
1 Profundo preceder
6 Debark
10 Tests for srs
13 Thespian
14 Sheltered
15 'Oh! — Sing'
17 Sign from Siskel
19 California Indians
20 Shrubby evergreen
21 — blanket killjoy
22 Bakery byproducts
24 Preservative
25 Aquiver
26 Evil spirit
30 Neighbor of Mali
31 Former N W highway
32 — Antoinette
33 Bible rendition Abbr
36 Trifled
37 "Ich bin — Berliner" JFK
38 Collar or caps
40 WWI US group
41 Prepares for business
43 Check books
44 Keys
46 Undergoes a change
47 Calls off
49 Gore and Roker
50 Kind of cat
51 Before, to Keats
52 — 'N' Peppa
56 Berth
57 Bond film
60 To be, in Paree
61 — dixit
62 Ionian island
63 Baalam's mount
64 Orne river city
65 Diminish

DOWN
1 Spa Beau Brummel made famous
2 Yearn
3 Ticket —
4 A few
5 Globe
6 Burdened
7 Thanks —
8 Unused
9 Old Roman coins
10 'Not out'
11 Hitchhike
12 Calyx part
16 A piece of cake
18 Ballet bird
23 Subscribers' concerns
24 Comforter
25 Changes color
26 Information
27 Ingredient for lotion
28 Jack Frost's touch?
29 West or Daisy
30 Improvements
32 Competitions
34 Agitate
35 VFW members
39 Cabin
42 Of the oceans
45 Playbooks
46 Hebrew 'A'
47 Good Hope is one
48 Author Loos
49 "As You Like It" forest
51 Otherwise
52 Name dropper
53 Pearl Mosque site
54 Went away
55 — blue
58 Price org
59 Pulumayo, to the Portuguese

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	A	I	S		S	C	A	L	A		S	T	A	B
A	U	R	A		P	A	L	E	R		P	O	L	E
S	T	A	G		R	L	I	O	T		E	R	I	E
H	O	P	E		A	M	E	N		D	E	T	E	R
			S	E	R	E	N	A	D	E
A	C	T		R	E	D		S	O	M	E	O	N	E
B	A	R	R	E	D				C	O	D	G	E	R
A	B	I	E						U	L	A	N
F	E	N	C	E	D			A	M	P	E	R	E
T	A	L	L	E	D		C	R	O		S	S	S
		A	L	L		N	A	R	O	W
A	P	H	I	S		S	O	R	E		O	T	I	C
L	O	O	M			C	U	L	P	A		M	A	T	A
P	O	S	E			A	S	T	E	R		E	M	I	T
S	N	E	D			B	E	E	T	S		N	E	S	S

2/27/96



Collegian Graphics

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Your Daily Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) — Check personal joint bank accounts for possible errors. An investment proposal needs careful study. Consult experts. The friction between two co-workers is upsetting everyone around them.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) — Consider the value of your economic ties. You will have to do some fancy footwork to keep them intact. Take a good look at long- range work projects. What is their true financial potential?

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) — A missed appointment could cause frustration. Examine your own motives before questioning a loved one's. Take a closer look at a relationship that is going nowhere fast.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22) — Be aware of the factors that stand between you and success. It will take both finesse and some concessions to get what you want. Be generous with those who want to join the team.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22) — Let it slide if an authority figure reprimands you. Continuing to argue the point could work against you. Good financial advice can work wonders. Exercise restraint where spending is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) — Greater efficiency will mean speedier career or business progress. A new plan begins to take shape. A loved one who is under a lot of stress needs your support. Show that you care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) — Past good deeds may be the underlying reason for your receiving a handsome gift. Show your gratitude in meaningful ways. Celebrate quietly with that special someone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) — Do now waste time worrying about past mistakes. Instead concentrate on the project at hand. Teamwork will boost profits. Your image may be a source of concern.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) — Avoid taking unnecessary chances. Speculative investments could make a dent in your cash reserves. Use your considerable powers of persuasion to help secure backing for a pet project. Your enterprising spirit will impress people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) — A job may pay too well for you to walk away from it. Look for good deals when purchasing office or cleaning supplies. Performing more services for yourself could save you a lot of money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) — Curb a tendency to be overly critical or sarcastic. Others will resent your sharp words. Count to 10 before you speak. Remain poker-faced if asked too many questions by nosy neighbors or relatives.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20) — Face a problem head- on. It is not as bad as it seems. Holding a grudge is a waste of energy. Total up personal and joint assets before devising a budget. Allow for occasional splurges.

Olimpius By Konrad Kubaska

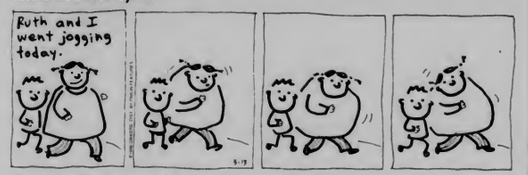
A DETECTIVE'S OFFICE IN NEW JERSEY.
I CAN'T STAND THIS! SO MANY REPORTS COMING IN EVERYDAY OF HAUNTINGLY STRANGE DEATHS.
CHILDREN, PEOPLE IN OFFICE, PEOPLE OF ALL...
RACHEL, WE GOT ANOTHER CALL.

Kippil By Barry Deutsch

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

OKAY, I FIXED THE WIRING.
I SPENT HOURS ON IT AND YOU DID IT IN TEN MINUTES!
YEAH! I'M TOO SMART FOR THIS KINDA WORK!
BUT I WON'T BE DOING IT MUCH LONGER!
STAN LEE LARRY LIEBER 3-25
HE'S PROBABLY BECOMING A BRAIN SURGEON!
HUSH! HE'LL HEAR YOU!

Jim's Journal By Jim



Alien Crackbunnies By Darb

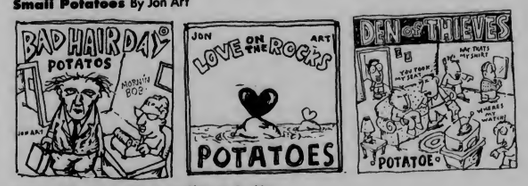
Dilbert By Scott Adams

IT HAS COME TO MY ATTENTION THAT SOME EMPLOYEES ARE RUNNING SIDE BUSINESSES FROM THEIR CUBICLES.
REALLY??
I DON'T WANT TO SEE ANY SIGNS OF THAT IN MY DEPARTMENT.
FAIR ENOUGH
SOFTWARE OUTLET
SALE
SHOE WORLD
PALMS READ 'R US
(WHAT ABOUT "YELLOW PAGES" ADS?)
WALBERT INC.

Milkweed By Neil Golden

EEEEK! EEKALY! CHECK THIS OUT!
MY MOM GOT ME A "ZIP" DRIVE! THESE THINGS HOLD 100 MEGABYTES OF DATA ON A SINGLE DISK!
JUST IMAGINE, ALL THAT DATA! I CAN'T WAIT TO HOOK IT UP! MILLIONS OF GLORIOUS BITS OF DATA, AND THEY'RE ALL MINE!
I'M GOING TO BE A VIRGIN WITH I'M THIRTY, WON'T I?
THAT'S A BIT OPTIMISTIC!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Hannah's Crazy Coincedinces By Mo

Yesterday I went upstairs to borrow Pete and Matt's carpet sweeper.
On the way back, as soon as I opened the door to the stairwell, Leah was there!
She was at the door at the exact same time as I was. Isn't that crazy?

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I have some problems but they're not my problems. They're my parents' problems.
When I was a little kid they exaggerated about how great life would be.
Nowadays, I exaggerate too.
When people ask me on the street, "How're you doin'?" I say, "Good."

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Ways the world would be different if the word "bunk" was a swear

10. Swift kick to the crotch would serve as response to roommate's question: "Wanna bunk beds?"
9. Classic line in Gone With the Wind changed to "My darling, I don't give a bunk."
8. I could tell the next guy who complains about my "talking dolphin" jokes to "bunk himself."
7. Euphemism for the word would be "bonk."
6. I wouldn't be able to print this list.
5. Dance enthusiasts could enjoy (The artist formerly known as) Prince's hit tune, "You Sexy Mother Bunker."
4. Catch phrase in Rage Against the Machine song "Killing in the Name Of" changed to "Bunk you, I won't do what you tell me!"
3. In golf, the term, "sand bunker" would refer to a sexual deviate who engages in coitus with a sand trap.
2. Lovable character Archie Bunker from "All in the Family" would be a porn star.
1. Andrew Dice Clay? Jobless.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Gino's dispute with the neighbors down in 12-C reaches a climax.

Toddler Carnage By Sean

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor ..... Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Shane Keenan
Production Supervisor ..... Marc Dionne
Production ..... Brian Inocencio
Mike Krozy

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Cheese Steak Sandwich
Rotini & Meat Sauce
Rotini & Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Eggplant Cassarole
Pastabilities
Cheese Lasagna

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Breast Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Chinese Beef & Peppers
Broccoli Casserole
Chicken Sandwich

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Sandwich
Cheese Steak Sandwich
Stone Willy's Pizza
Summit Subs

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Stone Willy's Pizza
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Cheese Steak Sandwich
Rotini & Meat Sauce
Rotini & Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Eggplant Cassarole
Pastabilities
Cheese Lasagna

Quote of the Day

"Feelin' really sick,
Wanna start a fight,
Pukin' on your chick,
No sex tonight.

–Project Flatboy"

Sports

Massachusetts defeats Hartford in season opener

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — With momentum switching in Hartford's favor early in the fourth quarter, junior All-America candidate Brendan Glass scored his fourth goal of the game to give the No. 11 Massachusetts Lacrosse team back a three goal lead.

UMass added four more in the next four minutes to pull away from the pesky Hawks and win its season opener, 14-9 at Springfield College's Benedum Field.

That's huge. They were on a roll and fired up," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "They were thinking upset right there. I was worried but I was also worried going into the game."

Hartford had trailed by as many as six (8-2) before scoring five of the next six including three in the first 3:41 of the fourth quarter before Glass' goal. The tally for the Sudbury, Mass., native was a beautiful behind-the-back shot off of a pretty field from midfielder P.G. Massey.

Massachusetts	14
Hartford	9

"I didn't think he was going to be able to get me the ball," Glass said of Massey darting through traffic in front of the Hartford cage. "But he did and just flipped it in over my shoulder."

The first goal of the game went to Hartford's Charlie Fisher on a great individual move in front of John Kasselakis. The junior midfielder scooped a one-handed shot over the Minuteman goaltender for the first lead of the game.

From that point on in the first half, the game was dominated by UMass. Eric Bailey got the Minutemen on the board with a hard shot that found its way over Hartford goalie Chris LaMonica's shoulder for the equalizer. Glass got his first of the day as he curled out from behind the Hawk net and blasted the go-ahead goal just minutes later, as the first period ended 2-1.

UMass' onslaught continued in the second quarter with five more unanswered goals. Bailey got his second of the game on a magnificent feed from Ken Sussi to extend the Minutemen lead to two.

Sussi, who will work the point vacated by the graduated Mike Valente, dropped a pass over the net to Bailey on the far side who deposited it in the back of the net on a one-timer. Glass followed with his second goal 28 seconds later at the 7:15 mark.

The Minutemen got their final three goals of the half in a span of 57 seconds. Buddy Hoffman took a feed from Glass and buried it behind LaMonica for his first of his four. After the goal had been signaled, Hawk defender Tom Giglio gave Hoffman a shoulder, knocking the UMass tri-captain to the ground and Giglio got whistled for a one minute penalty. It didn't take long for the Minutemen to capitalize.

Bailey sent the ball over to Chris Grande on the left

Turn to LAX, page 9

CASEY KANE / COLLEGIAN

UMass goaltender John Kasselakis made 16 saves in the Minutemen's season opening 14-9 victory over Hartford yesterday

Glass adds another dimension to game

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — As he walked off the field, Brendan Glass talked about his performance to teammate Buddy Hoffman.

"Three more assists till my record," Glass said. "Three more assists till I break my record."

The record that the junior attackman is referring to is his record for assists in a season. Glass has been the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team's top scorer for the past two seasons but when it comes to assists? Well, the fact that three assists in his first game of the season brings him within his personal record of six says it all.

So just when it appeared that Glass' game was as complete as it was going to get, the former Lincoln-Sudbury star invested time into adding another dimension to his game.

The early returns were excellent. In addition to the almost expected four goals in the Minutemen's 14-9 win over Hartford yesterday, Glass led his team in feeds.

"In year's past, I'd have like 36 [goals] and six [assists]," Glass said. "To be ranked as one the top attackmen, my goal is to get like 40 and 20, at least 20 assists. When you don't have any assists, the other team knows that you're going to the goal. Now I'm looking. I'm looking for Buddy in the crease."

In the second period, with UMass leading 4-1, Glass first used his famous behind the head move, but instead of scoring he used it to pass to Hoffman who triggered home the fifth Minuteman strike.

While his passing may have surprised the Hawks, his scoring did not. Hartford tried to double team Glass throughout the game, but he still broke through. Late in the first quarter while he was getting hit by a Hawk defender, Glass was able to unleash a shot from about 10 yards out past Hartford goalie Chris LaMonica, to give UMass a 2-1 lead that it would not relinquish.

"We did a lot of special things with Glass," Hartford coach Jack McGetrick said. "We did some shut off and we were ready to double team every time he got the ball. He's usually like a bull dog just going to the cage, but he showed some patience. He's a smart player. He backed off the double team and found the open man."

"He's usually like a bull dog just going to the cage, but he showed some patience. He's a smart player. He backed off the double team and found the open man."

-Jack McGetrick

His fourth goal of the game may have been the biggest however. After UMass had opened up a five-goal lead, the Hawks began crawling back— controlling the ball to score three unanswered goals to cut the deficit to 9-7 and were riding a surge of momentum.

After UMass won the face off, P.G. Massey fed Glass, who this time used the behind-the-head move for its regular purpose, beating LaMonica to put UMass ahead 10-7.

"That was huge," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "They were on a role, thinking upset."

The seven-point performance tied Glass' personal record for points in a game. The three assists are also a record for Glass, who previously had never gotten more than one assist in a game.

Several other Minutemen had career days offensively as well. Hoffman, in his first game since switching from midfield to attack, wasted no time in making his offensive presence felt, notching four goals of his own.

"It felt great," he said. "It's a big change from the midfield, but it's more of a scoring opportunity."

Hoffman had 11 goals in 1995 and already is almost halfway there.

"He's a tremendous shooter," Cannella said. "We're looking for him to step up."

Chris Grande added three goals for Massachusetts while Eric Bailey had two goals and one assist as well.

The Minutemen will try to duplicate that effort against No. 1 Virginia, who looms next for the Minutemen in Baltimore on Saturday.

"We were thinking about them last week," Glass said. "Not to overlook Hartford, but we were always thinking about them."

Massachusetts 14, Hartford 9

At Benedum Field, Springfield

UMass	2	5	2	5	14
Hartford	1	1	2	5	9

Goals — Massachusetts (Buddy Hoffman 4, Brendan Glass 4, Chris Grande 3, Eric Bailey 2, Casey Costello). Hartford (Charlie Fisher 3, Greg Sherwin 2, Dan Hynes, Mike Gilligan, Jason Gifford, Stephen Foresi). Assists — Massachusetts (Glass 3, P.G. Massey 2, Bailey 2, Ken Sussi). Hartford — (Gilligan, Fisher, Hynes). Saves — Massachusetts (Kasselakis 16). Hartford (LaMonica 24) Faceoffs — Massachusetts 13, Hartford 12. Attendance — 200.

Player of the Game

Brendan Glass
4 goals, 3 assists

Highlights...

Glass and tri-captain Buddy Hoffman scored four goals a piece while Chris Grande notched a hat trick to lead the Minutemen in the season opening win. Goalie John Kasselakis stopped 10 of 12 shots in the first half as UMass jumped out to a 7-2 lead at halftime. The Minutemen scored on their first two man-up opportunities finishing the day 2-for-4.

Georgetown happy to be in East again

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In days of old, John Thompson was more than content to take his Patrick Ewings and Alonzo Mournings into West Region cattle in places such as Boise and Tempe for the NCAA tournament.

This year the fourth ranked Hoyas will take a five-hour bus trip down Interstate 95 to the Richmond Coliseum. Thompson couldn't be more pleased.

"In the past, we always loved going west, and that's what we always wanted to do," said Thompson, whose team is in the East Region for the first time in seven years. "But this year I did want to go to Richmond."

Why the change of heart?

The current edition of the Hoyas is younger and more spirited — sophomore Allen Iverson, freshman Victor Page and freshman Joe Toiomour are more susceptible to roller coaster extremes of emotion — than the school's previous title-contenders.

"I think those were different kinds of teams, older, more experienced," Thompson said. "You had guys who were a lot more hardened to battle. You'd rather be in a little bit more comfortable situation with this group."

John Thompson

The trip to Richmond, Va., where the Hoyas are the No. 2 seed and will face Mississippi Valley State on Friday, will be especially sweet for Iverson, whose native Hampton isn't far down the road.

"I was just thinking it would be great for it to come out for me to play that close to home," Iverson said. "I guess God looked out for me again."

The vulnerability of Iverson and the Hoyas (26-7) was evident this year in road losses to mid-level teams such as Pittsburgh, St. John's and Providence, as well as in the Big East tournament. For two games and 35 minutes last week at Madison Square Garden, Georgetown was the class of the conference and looked worthy of a No. 1 regional seed. Then came the last five minutes of the title game against Connecticut, when the Hoyas blew an 11-point lead and the Huskies closed with a 12-0 run for a 75-74 victory.

Even though Iverson was having an off-night — only one field goal in the second half — Thompson left his star in charge in a 1-4 offensive set in the game's final possessions. On the final possession, with less than 10 seconds remaining, Iverson put up an off-balance, fall-away 3-pointer that wasn't close, although Jerome Williams nearly put in the offensive rebound at the buzzer.

"You can't dwell on the past," Thompson said. "If you keep playing the last play of the ball game, you won't last long on the court."

But that didn't stop Iverson from being hard on himself Monday. "I replayed it over and over in my head so many times, man," Iverson said. "As soon as I shot the ball, I knew it was off... My teammates expect me to make some things happen at that time of the game and I wasn't able to do it."

But given a second chance, Thompson wouldn't do anything differently. Whether it be the Big East tourney or the NCAAs, Georgetown is going to ride the shoulders of its star.

Turn to GEORGETOWN page 9

The Collegian's NCAA Tourney Quiz

1. Name the three Bulldogs in the tournament?
2. There are four Wildcats. Name them.
3. Which are the two Huskies?
4. Name the five teams which have Golden In their mascots' names?
5. Name the three Tigers.
6. Name the two Bears.
7. Name the 11 Feline teams.
8. Where does the name Hoya come from?
9. There are Devils, Dragons and Demons (sort of), name them (four teams total).
10. How many teams have colors (including the previous Golden teams)?
11. Name the "State" teams. There are eight.
12. Two teams changed their mascots' names to be more politically correct. Name them.
13. Name the two Red Raiders.
14. Name the Eagles and Owls.
15. How many Tigers?
16. Name the two Spartans.
17. Name the Cardinal(s).
18. Name those which can fly (there are 13).
19. There are Cyclones and Hurricanes. Name them.
20. Can you name the Sooners, the Crusaders and the Privateers?
21. Name the Minutemen, Colonials and Governors.
22. What is a Griffin?
23. Which are the Wolves?
24. Name the two Indians teams.
25. Name the two bullish teams.
26. Other animals in the tourney: name the teams. Turtles, horses, and pigs.
27. Finally, the teams with the unusual nicknames. Name the Hoosiers, Boilermakers, Hokies, Utes and Tar Heels.

See tomorrow's Collegian for answers.

UNH wins marathon, MTU could go

Leigh Torbin on College Hockey

As conference tournaments progressed more or less according to plan this past weekend, the most intriguing story in this space came not from an expected source, but rather from the women's hockey championship game.

Sunday afternoon/evening at New Hampshire's gleaming new Whittemore Center, the host Wildcats and four-time defending champion Providence College Lady Friars engaged in the longest game in college hockey history.

At the 5:35 mark of the fifth 20-minute overtime session, UNH sophomore Brandy Fisher rushed hard to the net and roofed a rebound past embattled PC netminder Meghan Smith to end the seemingly eternal deadlock.

The 145:35 of play blew away the previous record of 102:19 set between the North Dakota and Minnesota men's teams in 1968. The game lasted five and a half hours.

Breaking from long established hockey traditions, both Smith and UNH netminder Dina Solimini made the All-Tournament team. Smith stopped 57 of 60 shots in the game, while Solimini made 23 saves in overtime alone.

One of the more amazing facts about this game is that PC hung in for that long despite skating only 10 players (two forward lines and two defensive pairs). Men's teams dress up to 21 players for a game.

The game-winning goal was even shown on SportsCenter, unofficially the first time that the sport has ever been even mentioned on the world's best known sports news show.

• The Sentinel-Tribune in Bowling Green, Ohio reported rumors of a shake-up in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association on Sunday.

The paper said that Michigan Tech is seriously considering seceding from the Western Collegiate Hockey Association and returning to the CCHA, which it competed in until 1983. Reportedly the Huskies would be joined by their upper peninsula neighbors, Northern Michigan, while the CCHA would jettison Alaska-Fairbanks and Illinois-Chicago to the WCHA.

This move would make sense for all parties involved. MTU and NMU could return to the conference that it geographically fits into, joining its other upper peninsula neighbor Lake Superior State. Of the seven Division I hockey schools in the state of Michigan, MTU and NMU are the only ones competing outside of the CCHA.

The CCHA teams, especially the smaller ones such as Michigan Tech and Northern Michigan, could certainly live without the expense of flying its teams to Fairbanks every other year. With the rumored addition of Mankato State to the WCHA, travel would be dreadful for the two teams.

Meanwhile, uniting the two Alaska schools in the same conference creates traveling-partners, a mutually agreeable situation. UIC could team with Wisconsin to give the Badgers a long awaited traveling partner, and offer opponents some relief from the hostile Madison crowd.

• The only surprise in conference tournament play this past weekend was the fore mentioned Huskies stunning No. 1 Colorado College in the WCHA semifinals, 4-3. The Tigers were the two-time defending league champs and the tourney's No. 1 seed.

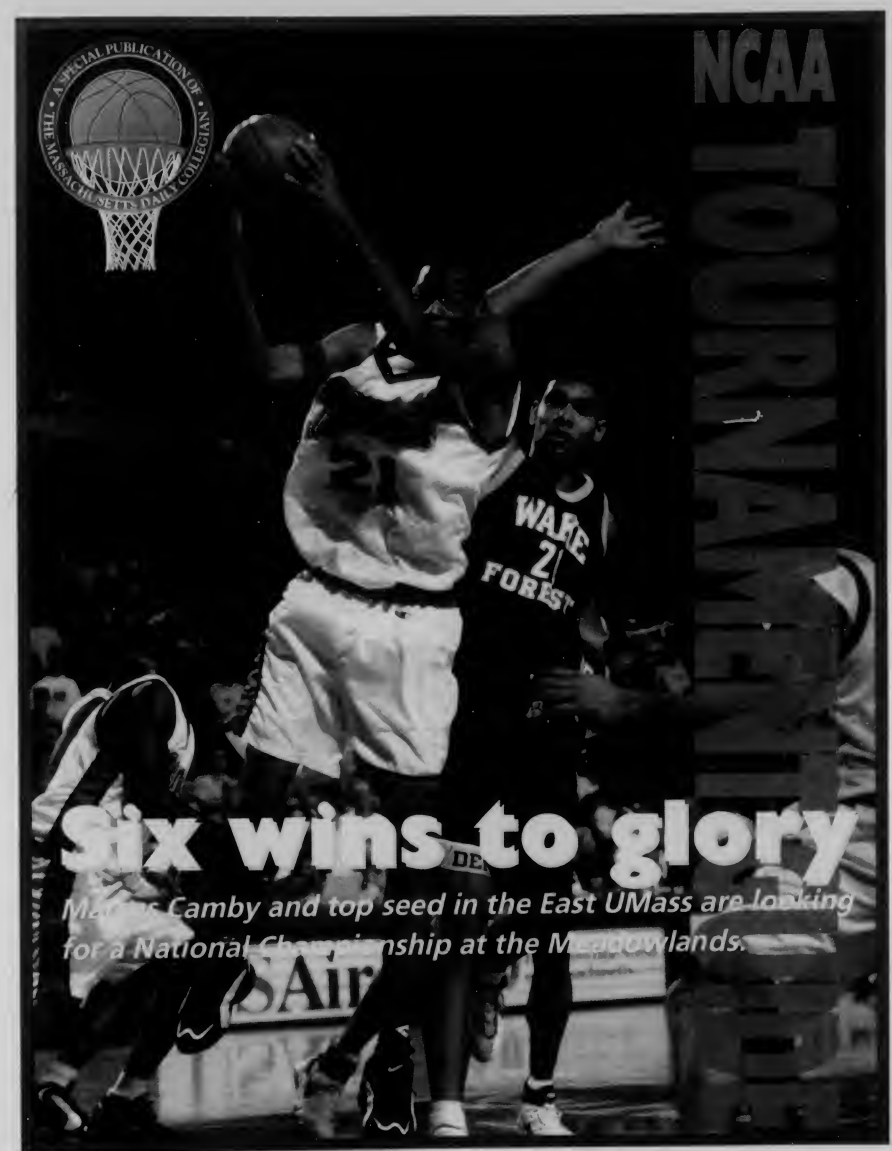
Second seeded Minnesota wiped out Tech 7-2 in the title game.

All of the top four seeds advanced easily in the Hockey East quarterfinals and will face off Friday at the FleetCenter. Boston University, UMass-Lowell, Maine and PC all swept its opponents in best-of-three series.

The CCHA saw its No. 1, 2, 3, and 5 seeds advance. Lake State and Michigan, which tied for the regular season title, swept through its opening rounds games. Bowling Green pulled off the only upset, a marginal one at that, by beating fourth seeded Western Michigan. Only third seed Michigan State needed a third game to advance to this weekend's games at Detroit's Joe Louis Arena.

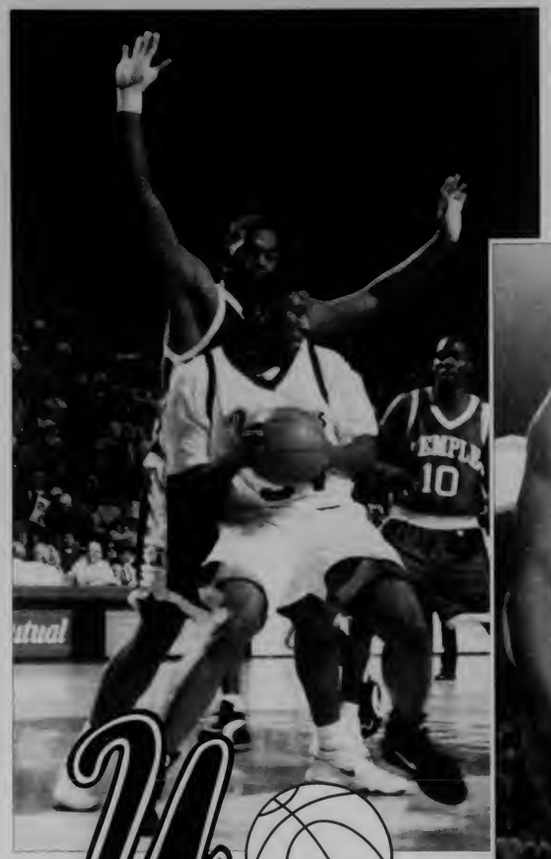
Nothing much was doing in the Eastern College Athletic Conference either where except for sixth-seeded Harvard knocking off over-rated St. Lawrence, things went according to plan.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.



Six wins to glory

Marcus Camby and top seed in the East UMass are looking for a National Championship at the Meadowlands.



UMass basketball

Inside

A look back at what was an unprecedented season for the Massachusetts Minutemen ..... page 2

After his unexplained collapse National Player of the Year candidate Marcus Camby keeps getting better .....page 6

UMass' silent forward, Dana Dingle, favors action over words.....page 8

"The best finisher in college basketball", Donta Bright shines in his senior season .....page 10

See the field of 64 NCAA teams and how they match-up on the road to the Final Four .....page 12

The consistency of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso in UMass' backcourt make the Minutemen Final Four contenders .....page 15

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

NCAA TOURNAMENT GUIDE

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Kara Kilduff Special Issues Coordinator
James P. Ganley Production Manager
Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager

Contributing Writers
Chris Stamm
Justin C. Smith
Casey Kane
Candice Flemming
Matt Vautour

Photography
Emily Reily
Daymion Smith
Ryan Tiezzi

Advertising Production
Natasha Kahn
James Bruneau
Thomas F. Sweeney Jr.

Issue Production & Design
James P. Ganley
David Voldan
Kevin C. Farrar

Cover Photo
J. Anthony Roberts

The 1996 NCAA Tournament Guide is a special publication of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

No portion of this publication may be used or reproduced without written permission from the Collegian Executive Board. ©1996 The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

KLEIN★S ALL★SPORTS
MARCH MADNESS BLOWOUT

ZOOM FLIGHT $99.99
MAX TRIAX $74.99
AIR RBEVIA $49.99
SCHOOL FORCE $69.99
TRAINER PRESS $69.99
USA TEES $9.99
SPALDING POWERPLAY $24.99 SKILLBUILDER $14.99
Entire Stock Of Cotton Soccer Shorts 30% OFF
SPIRITBLADE ABT Mens & Ladies $139.99

Hampshire Mall, Hadley
Berkshire Mall, Lanesboro

UM season of success

Non-conference schedule prepares Minutemen for strong run at NCAA Final Four.

By Justin Smith, Candice Flemming and Chris Stamm
Collegian Sports

Emily Reily / Collegian

Coach John Calipari prowls the sidelines keeping the officials in check and his team motivated on the floor as the Minutemen look to make a run at this year's final four. His flamboyant coaching style makes him a national favorite.

No. 5 Massachusetts 92, No. 1 Kentucky 82
Nov. 28 at Auburn Hills, Mich.Great Eight Tournament

Marcus Camby led the way for the Minutemen with 32 points as UMass knocked off the top ranked team for the third consecutive year. The Minutemen would lead most of the way and used a 10–0 burst to open the second half to lead 55–45 and never trail again.

Freshman Charlton Clarke broke a bone in his foot in his first minute of collegiate action, leaving UMass with only two true Division I guards for the first half of the season. The win erased any thoughts that this team would have a down year after the losses of Lou Roe and Derek Kellogg.

No. 5 Massachusetts 50, No. 19 Maryland 47
Dec. 2 at the USAir Arena

The Minutemen were down by as much as 16 in the first half to the Terrapins before Dingle went on a 7–0 run all by himself to pull UMass to within nine at the half. The second half started out much like the first with the Minutemen falling behind big— this time by 13. But UMass used a 15–4 run keyed by several outside jumpers by Camby to get back into it. Bright finished with a double-double (14 points, 10 boards) while Camby had 14 and Dingle added 10.

No. 3 Massachusetts 60, No. 10 Wake Forest 46
Dec 6 at the William D. Mullins Center

It's quite possible that this game had more hype than any other for the Minutemen this season, merely because it pitted what were possibly the top two players in college basketball this year against each other.

Camby and Tim Duncan, both pre–season All Americans, had a one–on–one showdown and the UMass center came away the victor, both individually and on the scoreboard.

The match–up between Duncan (nine points, 12 rebounds) and Camby (17 points, nine boards) wasn't necessarily the difference in the game, as much as how the supporting cast picked up the slack when the players were off.

Senior co–captain Donta Bright scored 22 points including 6–of–7 from the free throw line as the Minutemen shut down Duncan and the Demon Deacons.

No. 3 Massachusetts 65, Boston College 57
Dec. 9 at the FleetCenter

In the first annual Commonwealth Classic, UMass came away with the hard–fought victory. A Camby block on Danya Abrams with less than a minute to go killed any thoughts of a comeback for BC. Padilla (eight points, five steals, five assists) came up with perhaps the biggest shot of the game when he nailed a trey from NBA range with 1:23 left to give the Minutemen the lead and set up the Camby– Abrams duel. Camby finished with 19 points, seven boards, four assists and three blocks whiel Dingle added a double– double (10 points, 11 boards).

No. 2 Massachusetts 75, No. 21 Georgia Tech 67
Dec. 22 at the Meadowlands

After watching A–10 rival Temple knock off Kansas, the Minutemen went to the court knowing they could capture the No. 1 ranking for the first time since last season. UMass came out fired up as 18 points from Camby helped the Minutemen defeat the Yellow Jackets. UMass was able to take Matt Harpring out of the game from the beginning as the usual high scorer finished with just five points before foulign out. Travieso scored 17 in 40 minutes of action while Dingle ended the evening one rebound shy of a double–double.

Outrigger Rainbow Classic
No. 1 Massachusetts 78, North Carolina State 67
No. 1 Massachusetts 78, Southern California 63
No. 1 Massachusetts 65, No. 13 Syracuse 47
Dec. 28–30 at Special Events Arena

Heading into the first of three games played in the Rainbow Classic, against North Carolina State, UMass arrived at the Special Events Arena as the No. 1 team in the nation for the first time since last February. UMass outshot N.C. State 69 percent to 40 percent in the second half to pull off the 78–67 win.

In game two, the Minutemen were on the good end of a 78–63 win over Southern California. Early in the game, Camby sufferred a bruised knee and was forced out of the game. Norville (nine points, eight boards) and Weeks (eight points) anchored the inside game for UMass. The two wins put Massachusetts in the tournament finals facing an undefeated (11–0) Syracuse squad.

In what was supposed to be a challenge for the Minutemen, Camby came back from injury to score 20 points while earning 11 rebounds and three blocks in UMass' 65–47 win.

No. 1 Massachusetts 64, No. 3 Memphis 61
Jan. 4 at the Worcester Centrum

Bright (15 points) stepped up with two key buckets in the waning moments as the Tigers tried to force the Minutemen into turnovers with their full–court press. The first was a three–pointer from the left corner and the second a driving layup, as the co–captain regained the lead for UMass with both hoops, the latter lead it would never relinquish.

After the Minutemen completely outplayed Memphis in the first half, never trailing and leading by as many as 16 in the first 20 minutes, UMass found itself in a see–saw battle during the final 20 minutes. The lead swap hands 10 times and the two teams were never separated by more than five points. It was UMass' last game before its A–10 schedule. UMass coach John Calipari said he would have been happy just over .500 in non–conference games, this game made his team 11–0.

No. 1 Massachusetts 94, St. Joseph's 89 OT
Jan. 10 at the Alumni Memorial Field House

The upset–minded Hawks took UMass to overtime but the Minutemen pulled out the vitory on the strenght of a 38 point, nine rebound and five block performance by Cambs. Terrell Myers sent the game into overtime by sinking three free throws with nine–tenths of a second left, making it 79– 79. UMass outscored the Hawks 15–10 in the overtime period to claim the victory. Padilla finished with 20 points and eight assists while Travieso added 16 points.

Jan. 14 through Jan. 20, games played without Camby
Massachusetts beat St. Bonaventure 65–52, Rhode Island 77–71 and Duquense 93–89 along with Pittsburgh

After Camby's collapse prior to the St. Bonaventure game, it was unclear how the Minutemen would react playing without their star. Most expected UMass to fall from its No. 1 ranking but the Minutemen surprised all, winning all four games played during Camby's absence. Weeks, Bright and Travieso all reached career highs in points in each game respectively.

No. 1 Massachusetts 79, Pittsburgh 71 OT
Jan. 23 at the Fitzgerald Field House

This would be the last game the Minutemen would play without Camby and they needed a strong effort from Carmelo Travieso and Bright to keep the UMass' dreams of an undefeated season alive. Travieso hit seven three–pointers on the night, two of which went through while he was lying on his back side to dig the Minutemen out of a double–digit lead in the second half. He finished with 26 on the night, while Bright led the team with 27, 18 of which came during UMass' furious second–half comeback.

After the Panthers had a chance to win it on the final possesion of regulation, Travieso gave the Minutemen the lead for good with his final two treys of the night two minutes into the extra session.

No. 1 Massachusetts 78, Xavier 74 OT
Feb. 4 at the Cincinnati Gardens

This game was seemingly out of reach for the Minutemen until the end as the youthful exuberance of the Musketeers kept the pressure on UMass all game long. It was Edgar Padilla's three pointer with just 13 seconds remaining that forced the overtime. The bucket was only the junior point guard's second of the contest.

In the extra session it was Camby once again who rose to the occasion grabbing several key rebounds, but possibly the biggest rebound of all was Tyrone Weeks tip in of a Camby (26 points, 11 rebounds and five blocks) miss with two minutes left in the overtime.

No. 1 Massachusetts 74, No. 10 Virginia Tech 58
Feb. 17 at Cassell Coliseum

It was the first time that two Atlantic 10 teams were ranked in the top 10 in the country and met head–to–head. The Minutemen were up to the challenge, especially Camby. After compiling 31 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots, the Massachusetts center was asked to rate his performance that day. His reply, "It was about average."

Every possible motivational factor for Virginia Tech, such as every one who entered the building got a burnt orange pom pom, to the presentation of the Sugar Bowl trophy at halftime was implemented, providing a tournament like frenzied atmosphere. Defense was also a key for UMass as co–captain Dana Dingle held Virgina Tech's leading scorer Ace Custis to 3–of–13 shooting (seven points).

No. 1 Massachusetts 74, Rhode Island 69
Feb. 20 at the Providence Civic Center

A steal and dunk by Travieso with five seconds remaining iced the hard–fought victory for the Minutemen. The Rams led by as many as seven points in the first half but a 22–10 run by UMass in the final nine minutes before halftime gave the Minutemen a five–point edge at the half. URI hung tough throughout the second half but was never able to retake the lead after tying it at 65 with under five to play. Camby led UMass with 25 points, 13 boards and five blocks. Weeks had a career–high 16 points and nine boards while Travieso added 15.

George Washington 86, No. 1 Massachusetts 76
Feb. 24 at the William D. Mullins Center

The dream of an undefeated season ends, but inaybe more importantly, the Minutemen get a chance to refocus on their goal of a National Championship.

Camby gets blocked on his first attempted shot by Colonial center Alexander Koul and GW was off and running, leading by as many as 11 in the first half before blowing the game wide open in the second. Calipari was thrown out less than 10 minutes into the contest for arguing calls, but his effort was in vain as well as the Colonials took twice as many attempts form the charity stripe than UMass, 36–18. Travieso hit two threes in the final five minutes to get the Minutemen close but clutch free–throw shooting by Vaughn Jones kept UMass at bay.

No. 2 Massachusetts 68, St. Joseph's 66
Feb. 28 at the William D. Mullins Center

Bright's jumper with 3.6 seconds left sent the game into overtime after the Minutemen were down by six with 2:01 remaining. Rigo Nunez took a hard foul late in regulation and then sank one of two free throws to help UMass comeback from the six–point deficit. In overtime, the Minutemen came back from a three–point deficit with 2:53 left to pull out the victory. Bright finished with 15 ponits and 15 boards as three Minutemen finished with double– doubles. Camby had 21 points, 15 rebounds and Weeks had 12 poitns and 11 boards.

No. 2 Massachusetts 62, No. 21 Louisville 59
Mar. 2 at Freedom Hall

A tired Camby poured in 23 points to go along with eight rebounds and five blocks as UMass finished the regular season at 28–1.

The return to the Cardinal lineup by Samaki Walker turned out not to be a large factor in the game as the super sophomore had only four points on the day and was unable to get the UMass big man into foul trouble. Dingle once agian was a key contributor to the Minutemen effort knocking in 11 points while grabbing a game–high 15 rebounds to secure the glass on both ends of the court.

It was his fourth double–double of the season witnessed by a record crowd of 20,076 at Louisville's on–campus home, which has also hosted two NCAA Final Four's. That's a tournament atmosphere.

Turn to RECAP, page 22

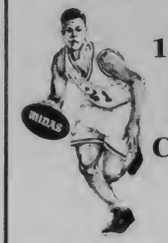
MIDAS®
and
The Golden Touch of
UMass Basketball



10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.!

Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • No over the counter part sales • Offer expires 5/31/96

FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS

Mufflers • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

MasterCard VISA AMEX DISCOVER

SUCCESS IT'S A MIND GAME

The complete line of TAG Heuer professional sport-watches
SUTTER'S

DON'T HAVE THE TIME TO PICK UP THE COLLEGIAN? DON'T WANT TO WASTE A TREE?

CHECK OUT...

http://www-vms.oit.umass.edu/~letters/collegian.html

...THE COLLEGIAN ON-LINE.

The road to the Final Four bumpy in the East

By Casey Kane
Collegian Sports

Will they be in Providence? Who will they play? Will they have the No. 1 seed? In the East or West?

Finally, the questions are answered. The wondering has ceased. The speculation about bubble teams and automatic bids is over. There are now 64 teams still playing Division I men's college basketball.

When the Massachusetts men's basketball team watched the NCAA Tournament Selection show, there were no questions as to whether or not the Minutemen would be in they tourney. Rather, what remained to be seen was whom they would play and where.

UMass wrapped up the No. 1 seed in the East bracket, sending the team to Providence for the first round. There the Minutemen will face 16th seeded Central Florida, which will compete by virtue of winning the Trans-America Conference tournament.

The UMass squad is coming off impressive wins over Atlantic 10 rivals George Washington and Temple, in the semi-finals and finals, respectively, of the A-10 tournament.

A potential second-round matchup for the Minutemen would be the winner of Stanford-Bradley. Stanford boasts a strong backcourt, but Bradley is undaunted by the Pac-10 foe.

Big East power Georgetown lost in a close conference tournament final but still secured the No. 2 seed in the region, and will face Mississippi Valley State, out of the Southwestern Athletic Conference.

The winner of that game will face the winner of New Mexico-Kansas State. The Lobos boast the WAC Coach of the Year in Dave Bliss and will be a tough test for the Big Eight Wildcats.

The surprising Texas Tech Red Raiders, led by Jason Sasser, garnered the No. 3 seed in the East, and will face the automatic bid from the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, Northern Illinois. Texas Tech made a run through the Associated Press Top 25 poll, hitting as high as seventh at one time.

North Carolina dropped to the sixth seed in the region, after finishing third in the ACC behind Georgia Tech (Southeast No. 3) and Wake Forest (Midwest No. 2). Freshman Antawn Jamison will have to stay composed in his first trip to the NCAAs in order for the Tar Heels to do any damage. The Heels first-round matchup will pit them against Sun Belt champion New Orleans, a team which surprised Wimp Sanderson's Arkansas-Little Rock team in the conference tourney.

Penn State, coached by National Coach of the Year candidate Jerry Dunn, grabbed the region's fifth seed and will play the Razorbacks of Arkansas. The season was disappointing for the national runner-ups this year, and without the marquee talent they will not be so lucky this tournament.

Giant-killers Marquette will match up with Monmouth in its opening-round game. Marquette finished off its regular season with big wins over Memphis and Louisville, and lost the Conference USA tournament to Cincinnati by one.

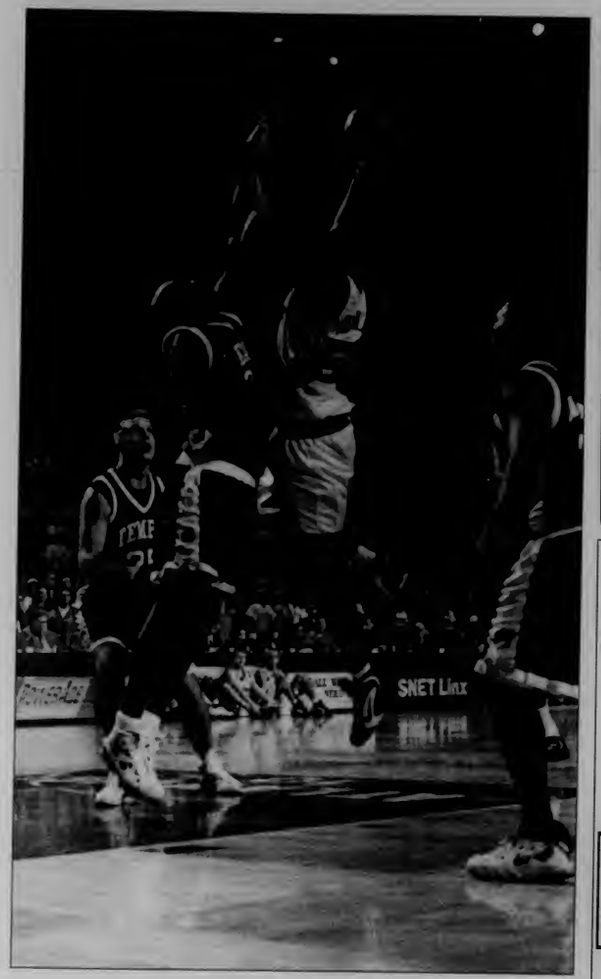
The East Regional first and second round games will be played in the Providence, R.I. and Richmond, Va. The regional final will be played in Atlanta with the winner advancing to the Final Four at the Meadowlands.

* * *

Other Atlantic 10 teams making the cut for the tournament include: Temple, Virginia Tech, and George Washington. Temple, the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament runner-up and No. 7 seed in the Southeast, will play the Oklahoma Sooners in the first round.

Virginia Tech, which was ranked as high as No. 10 in the AP poll during the season, received the No. 9 seed in the Midwest, and will travel to Dallas to face Wisconsin-Green Bay.

The only team to beat UMass, George Washington, was seeded No. 11 in the West, will tangle with a Big 10 tested Iowa team, led by Jess Settles.



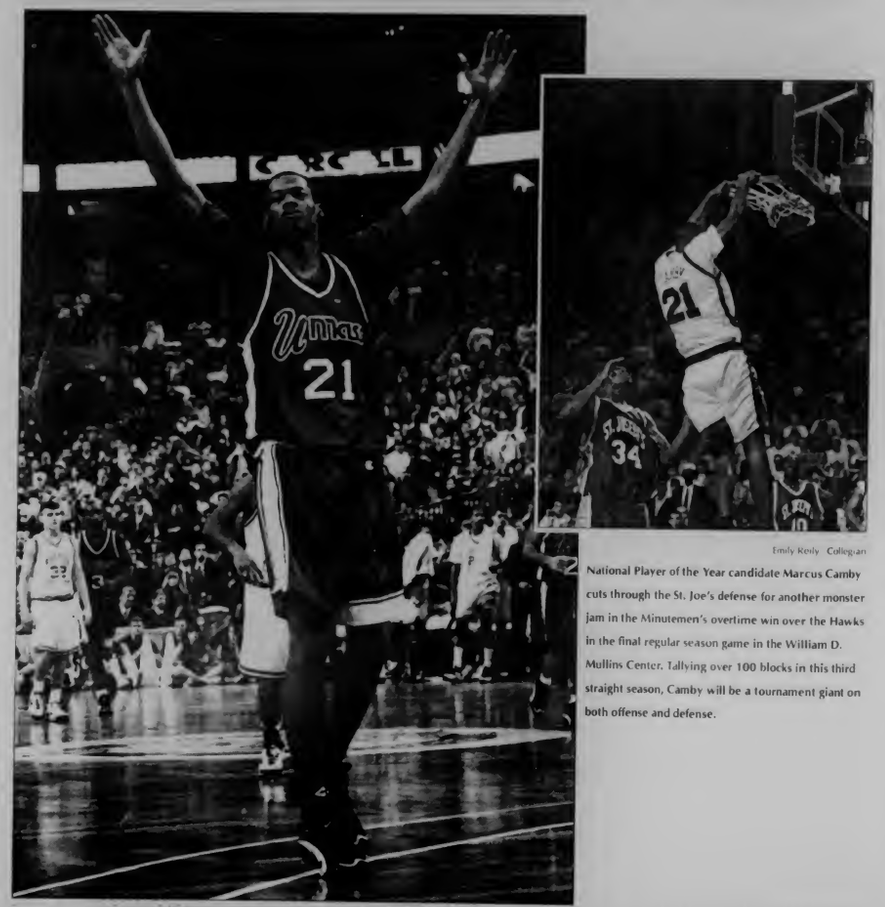
Emily Reily / Collegian

Carmelo Travieso (left) and Inus Norville (above) have performed solidly for UMass throughout the season, and the pair must continue to step up as the Minutemen begin their march to the Meadowlands.

WOW!
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
All American Food
Great Burgers Hot Dogs
Shakes Clams Chicken
Philly Cheese Steaks
Soft Serve Sundaes
BEST BURGERS IN THE VALLEY ADVOCATE READER'S POLL
BEST STAND IN THE VALLEY ADVOCATE READER'S POLL
585-0241
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
PETE'S DRIVE-IN

GOTTA EAT
GOTTA SLEEP
GOTTA STUDY
GOTTA PLAY
GOTTA PLAY IT SAFE
Mass
DON'T DRINK AND DRIVE
University Health Services,
Health Education Division, 549-2671 x181.

Marcus Camby looks to carry team to title



Emily Reilly Collegian

National Player of the Year candidate Marcus Camby cuts through the St. Joe's defense for another monster jam in the Minutemen's overtime win over the Hawks in the final regular season game in the William D. Mullins Center. Tallying over 100 blocks in this third straight season, Camby will be a tournament giant on both offense and defense.

National Player of the Year candidate Camby provides prowess in the paint and leadership on the court for Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Sports

At the commencement of the 1995-96 college basketball campaign, Marcus Camby was selected as a first team All- American selection. Putting him in a select class with fellow center Tim Duncan, guards Ray Allen, Kerry Kittles and forward Ryan Minor.

His first game of his junior year made him an instant front-runner for National Player of Year honors. Thirty-two points, nine rebounds and five blocks in his own little party to kick off the new year by dismantling pre-season number one, Kentucky.

It didn't stop there. A 19-point comeback against Maryland to win on his defensive block in the closing minute, holding Duncan to 4-for-18 shooting from the floor in a nationally televised hype fest for the two big men. And less than 24 hours after injuring his leg in the semifinals of the Rainbow Classic, Camby came off the bench in the finals to record his first double-double of the season, (20 points, 11 rebounds in just 24 minutes) in the championship game.

On Jan. 14, his team was 14-0 and seemed unbeatable, and then two things have happened that no one has yet to understand.

First his inexplicable collapse in Olean, NY just seven minutes before tip-off against St. Bonaventure. To this day doctors cannot explain what happened to make the 6-foot-11 Hartford native lay motionless for 10 minutes in the runway of the Reilly Center.

"Every test possible test has been administered to Marcus," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said upon his superstar's return to the lineup. "We know what it's not. He feels comfortable to play, so I saw no reason not to start him."

His return to the basketball court would leave many around him to wonder how he would play after the explained ailment.

The rematch with the Bonnies came just 13 days after his collapse and would be his first game back in the Minutemen lineup. He started that game and tied the school record for blocks in a game with nine to go along with 19 points and seven rebounds. The second thing that no one could fathom: he not only hadn't missed a beat, he had gotten better.

"I just wanted to go out and prove that I was still the player I was before all this happened," Camby said two weeks after his return. "Coach told me to concentrate on defense and let my offense come over time so that's what I'm doing."

In his 11 games since the collapse Camby has averaged 22.1 points, 8.7 rebounds and 5.2 blocks a game up from his 19.6 ppg, seven rebounds and three blocks before the incident. Statistics alone cannot show what his leadership has meant to this team.

"There are certain players who go out and get their numbers every night," Calipari said. "But special players not only do that, they make everybody around them better. Marcus Camby is that kind of player."

Marcus Camby

His coach isn't the only one to notice his skills.

"I coached in the ACC for nine years and went up against some of the greatest players," Virginia Tech coach Bill Foster said. "I don't know if I've ever seen a college player that does all of the things that Marcus Camby does. He is a point guard in a 6-foot-11 body."

His defense makes the opposition take bad shots with his intimidation factor. In the Temple game at McGonigle Hall, the Owls averaged 21 percent shooting from the floor on the game, including several easy baskets.

"Derek Battie missed three dunks tonight," Temple coach John Chaney said after the Feb. 1st meeting against Camby and UMass. "He was blocking shots that he wasn't even near because they thought he would get there. That's being a dominant factor."

Temple was only one of many key games in which Camby made impacts that will not show up in the final score. During the Memphis game he dove into a fans lap and got drenched with a fans beer going for a loose 50 seconds into the contest.

Blocking Samaki Walker twice at crucial points of the Minutemen's regular season finale. The first on his first attempt and last coming on Louisville's last run to tie the game in the closing minute. Making the extra pass to open forwards Donta Bright and Dana Dingle for easy lay-ups during the UMass comeback against Boston College. He can do it all and his players appreciate it.

"Marcus is a tremendous player and we all follow his lead," senior Rigoberto Nunez said. "Everyone does their job around him, as he helps everyone on the team be better players."

> "There are certain players who go out and get their numbers every night, but special players not only do that, they make everybody around them better. Marcus Camby is that kind of player."
>
> –John Calipari

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1927
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI & TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
AMHERST: 103 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST, MA 01002
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924
FAX: 253-1173
WE DELIVER THRU DELIVERY EXPRESS: 549-0077

3.9% APR*
Up to 48 Mos. On All '96 Accords
*AMHC ONLY Used Car
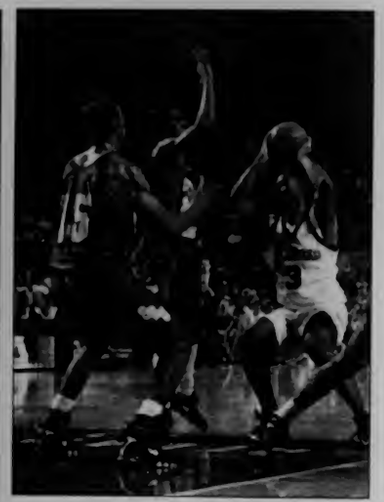
'92 Toyota Corolla #U2220-4 Door $8,777
'90 Toyota 4Runner #U1234-Automatic $14,977
'90 Geo Prism GSI #4718-Sun Roof $7,777
'89 Honda Accord LXI #4700-Low Miles $7,777
'89 Honda Accord #4705-Automatic $8,777
'95 Jeep Cherokee #U2181-Sport $17,977
'90 Honda Accord LX #4627-Automatic $8,777
'90 Honda Civic #9450-Automatic $9,777
'91 Honda Accord LX #4711-COupe $9,777
'92 Honda Accord LX #21893-4x4 $13,977
'94 Jeep Wrangler #U21893-4x4 $13,977
Clearance
New 1996 Honda Civic CX $10,360 Under Choice of Colors
New 1996 Honda Accord DX Sale Price $14,199 #96-040
Northampton HONDA
171 King St., Rte. 5, NORTHAMPTON • 586-8626 • 1-800-369-7889

Hard–working Dingle gets job done quietly



Emily Reily / Collegian

Massachusetts' unsung hero Dana Dingle (3) is known as one of the team's strongest defenders. However, Dingle has proven that he can get the job done on both ends of the court, driving the basket (left) and splitting defenders (above).

UMass' strong silent forward feels actions speak louder than words, Dingle gets the job done leading with actions and not words

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Sports

Unnoticed. Overlooked. Forgotten.

In describing Massachusetts senior forward Dana Dingle, the above words are most often used.

When people think about the Massachusetts men's basketball team, Marcus Camby comes to the mind first and then most likely Donta Bright, Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso— then maybe Dingle.

Throughout the season, Dingle has averaged in double figures in points and led the team in rebounding for much of the season, before Camby took over the team lead after the Minutemen's game against Rhode Island on Feb. 20.

But perhaps the mark that the 6–foot–7 forward is close to reaching will give the Bronx native the respect that he so greatly deserves. The number that Dingle is striving for is 134— UMass' all–time record for games played in a career, held by Lou Roe.

Dingle has played in every single game during his career for a total of 129 as of March 5. If the Minutemen reached the second round of the NCAA Tournament without a blemish, he will tie Roe. If the Minutemen make it to the Sweet Sixteen, Dingle will own the record— a record that is one of the most difficult in all of sports to attain.

Few athletes are able to accomplish such an impressive feat. With all the nagging injuries that can occur on the basketball court, Dingle's achievement would be amazing.

And in this, his final season as a Minuteman, Dingle has performed other remarkable feats.

Need a quick basket? Dingle can drive the lane for the deuce through two defenders. Need something to get the crowd going? Dingle will slam home a thunderous dunk for two much like he did against Maryland last season.

Need a big defensive stop? Dingle will get the job done as he usually draws the toughest defensive assignment.

"When called upon to do something out there, whether it be defense, offense, rebound, all–around aspects of the game," Dingle said. "When called upon, I will get it done."

Whether it's covering a guard or a forward, Dingle indeed gets it done, much like he did against Virginia Tech's leading scorer Ace Custis on Feb. 17. Custis came into the game averaging 14.2 points but finished with just seven on 3–for–13 shooting— mainly because of Dingle's outstanding defense all game.

"I think I probably frustrated him most by not letting him catch the ball in the post, where he likes it, easily," Dingle said. "I just fought around him and made him work and work and work until he was tired."

"We challenged him going into [the Virginia Tech] game," UMass coach John Calipari said. "Ace is about as good a forward as we've played so we told Dana this would see how good he was, and he did well."

Although he is most noted for his defense, Dingle has shown a knack for scoring at times as well.

Dana Dingle

"Everybody knows I can rebound and play defense, but a lot of people don't know if I can score," Dingle said.

Against Duquesne (Jan. 20) he helped pick up some of the scoring slack left by the absence of Camby, who was sitting out because of his collapse, by scoring a career–high 24 points. He also pulled down eight boards in the 93–89 victory. Six days earlier, he scored 17 points and grabbed seven boards in helping to lead the Minutemen to victory after Camby collapsed. In the season opener against preseason No. 1 Kentucky, Dingle scored 19 points second only to Camby who had a game–high 32.

On four different occasions, the quiet leader has come away with double–doubles— against Boston College (10 points, 11 boards), St. Joseph's (10, 10), La Salle (10,10) and Louisville (11, 15).

As of March 5, Dingle had 955 career points and if he was able to score the 1,000th point of his career, he would join teammates Camby and Bright who have already joined the 1,000–point club this season. If Dingle reaches it, it would be only the second time in school history that three players went over the 1,000 mark in the same year.

"I try to lead by example. Some of the other players might be a little more emotional, but I try to do the things that the coach asks and what is right," Dingle said. "The younger players can follow me by doing what is right."

If the younger players do indeed follow Dingle's lead, then his soon–to–be record could be broken. But for now, it is Dingle's to break, and if he is able to set the record at some point during the NCAA tournament, an amazing feat will be reached.

> "Everybody knows I can rebound and play defense, but a lot of people don't know if I can score."
>
> –Dana Dingle

We'll Get You Back On The Fast Track.

We know what a workout a business trip can be.
So, we've pumped up our facilities just for you.
• Larger, more comfortable rooms.
• Updated communication services.
• Outstanding meeting accommodations.
• And a staff trained to meet the special needs of business travelers.
Next road trip, call us at (413) 586-0114.
You'll be pleasantly suprised at our all-new Howard Johnson.

The only thing we haven't changed is our name.

HOWARD JOHNSON
AMHERST/HADLEY
401 RUSSELL STREET HADLEY, MA 01035
(413)586-0114

Donta to shine Bright in NCAAs

Senior co-captain Donta Bright, perhaps the best finisher in college hoops, has been a crucial offensive complement to Marcus Camby

By Casey Kane
Collegian Sports

The time has come for Donta Bright.

When the 1995-96 college basketball season began, there was an abundance of questions as to whether or not Bright would step up and become the kind of player he was supposed to be when he first came to Massachusetts.

And now, as the Minutemen head into the NCAA Tournament, and with the spotlight upon him, Bright has finally become the player everyone thought he could be.

Donta Bright

As a recruit, Bright was a nationally known blue-chipper, a first-team McDonald's, Parade Magazine, USA Today, and Basketball Times All-American. He led his Dunbar (Baltimore, Md.) team to a perfect 29-0 record and a No. 1 ranking from USA Today.

As a freshman Bright faced setbacks as a Prop 48 casualty. As a sophomore he began to emerge as the player many thought him to be. He earned the first start of his collegiate career in only his fifth game. And in the 11-game stretch which closed out his sophomore season, Bright tallied double figure scoring marks in all but one of the games.

As a junior, Bright was named to the third team All- Atlantic 10, after recording averages of 9.2 points per game and 4.6 rebounds per game. As the first man off the bench, Bright combined his size, speed, and shooting ability to score in double digits in 19 games.

And now the senior forward, described by some as, "the best finisher in the nation," will help carry his team on a march for the National Championship. He has the chance to close out his collegiate career with the ultimate prize — a title.

"When I first came here it was a lot harder than what I expected," Bright said. "I just tried to learn from the other players and tried to contribute to the team the best way I can."

This year the co-captain was named a pre-season All- Atlantic 10 second team selection. All season long he has backed up those early-season expectations with definite numbers, and it resulted with membership on the All- Atlantic 10 first team.

Bright has brought his game up a notch to compliment All-America candidate Marcus Camby and fellow floor- leader Dana Dingle. He is averaging 14.8 points per game, the second highest average on the Minuteman roster. He has been the top shooter on the team hitting .500 from the floor and .789 from the line, lending credibility to the belief that he is indeed the best finisher in the game.

"I'm not worried about that [being labeled the best finisher]," Bright said. "I just want to do anything to help the team win."

But point totals aren't the only area where Bright has improved his game. He is currently third in rebounding on the UMass squad, pulling down 5.8 boards per game.

Bright measures up against A-10 opponents as well. He currently ranks third in the conference in free throw percentage and fifth in field goal percentage. He also is eighth in the conference in scoring.

Bright has been a key factor in several games this season, often overshadowed by the highlight reel that is Camby. Early in the season, he bolstered the team with his performances against Kentucky, Maryland, Wake Forest., Boston College, and Georgia Tech.

Against all five teams Bright logged double figure scoring marks. He led the team with 22 points against the Demon Deacons and 24 against BC He tallied a double-double against Maryland notching 14 points and 10 boards.

Bright was a major factor in pulling out the victory against Memphis, chipping in six straight buckets down the stretch to seal the win.

In a game pitting the Minutemen against Rhode Island, he scored a career high 32 points. At Virginia Tech, the senior scored 19 points and handed out 3 assists. In Freedom Hall against Louisville, Bright contributed with 12 points.

On Senior Night against St. Joseph's, Bright hit a huge jumper to send the game into overtime, capping his collegiate career in the William D. Mullins Center with 15 points and a career-high 15 rebounds.

And now as he is facing his collegiate curtain call, Bright wants one encore.

"Our main goal is to win the national championship, so basically I'm going to go out and give it 100 percent every time I go out on the court," Bright said.

While his basketball future is not solidified yet, Bright has not set his sights too far ahead.

"We just try to take it one practice at a time, one game at a time," he said.

When asked what he wanted to be his greatest basketball memory when he reminisced about his college years, Bright did not hesitate with his answer.

"The National Championship. That would be the greatest win."

> "We just try to take it one practice at a time, one game at a time."
>
> –Donta Bright

Emily Reily / Collegian

(Right) Senior forward Donta Bright, described as "the best finisher in college basketball" by coach Calipari, will combine with Camby to provide the offensive force for the Minutemen .

TOC
Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217

Featuring:
Microbrews,
Pub Style Menu
Big Screen TVs
& Great Drink
Specials

Mon-Sat 4:00pm-12:30am

HTC HADLEY TIRE CENTER
AMERICAN CAR CARE CENTERS
AT OUR NEW LOCATION! ROUTE 9 - AMHERST HADLEY LINE!
Expert Car Care Service with Nationwide Warranties!

AMERICAN BRONZE ALL SEASON
50,000 MILE WARRANTY

P155/80R13	$38.00	P205/75R14	$46.00
P185/80R13	$40.00	P205/75R15	$48.00
P175/80R13	$41.00	P215/75R15	$49.00
P185/80R13	$42.00	P225/75R15	$62.00
P195/75R14	$48.00	P235/75R15	$80.00
P175/70R13	$44.00	P185/70R14	$48.00
P185/70R13	$46.00	P205/70R14	$49.00
P185/70R14	$47.00	P215/70R15	$51.00

ALL SEASON - SBR
ECONOMY GRADE METRIC PRINTS

155/80R13	$28.00	185/70R13	$38.00
155/13R13	$29.00	185/70R14	$47.00
165/13R13	$30.00	195/70R14	$48.00
175/13R13	$33.00

ECONOMY GRADE STANDARD PRINTS

P205/75R14	$46.00	P205/75R15	$46.00
P215/75R15	$49.00	P225/75R15	$52.00
P235/75R15	$56.00	P195/70R14	$46.00
P205/70R14	$48.00	P215/70R15	$51.00

MARCH MADNESS
LUBE OIL & FILTER
$14.95 plus tax
* Up to 5 quarts premium grade oil
* Light Trucks Extra
* Offer valid on most cars

MONROE
SHOCKS & STRUTS
BUY 3, GET THE 4TH FREE!

AMERICAN RADIAL RIVER RAD TOURING
60,000 MILE WARRANTY

P155/80R13	$59.00	P205/75R14	$66.00
P165/80R13	$60.00	P205/75R15	$67.00
P175/80R13	$62.00	P215/75R15	$68.00
P185/80R13	$64.00	P225/75R15	$82.00
P185/75R14	$67.00	P235/75R15	$83.00
P195/75R14	$67.00	P185/70R14	$68.00
P205/75R14	$66.00	P205/70R14	$69.00
P205/75R15	$66.00	P215/70R15	$71.00

AMERICAN RADIAL AMERICAN GT
GRAND TURBO
RAISED WHITE LETTERS at extra

P215/60R14	$66.00	P225/60R15	$76.00
P245/60R15	$72.00	P195/70R14	$71.00
P245/60R15	$73.00	P205/70R14	$73.00
P275/60R14	$79.00	P275/60R15	$79.00

Transmission Tune-Up
Electronic Tune-Up
$49.00
4 cyl. $49
6 cyl. $59
8 cyl. $69
Install new plugs, set timing, reset on board computer, check belts, hoses, and other components. Additional parts & labor extra

ALIGNMENT
W/PURCHASE OF TIRES
Front End $35.00
Thrust Alignment $39.00
All Wheel $49.00
Light Trucks/ 4x4/Vans $55.00
Parts and labor extra

AMERICAN RADIAL AMERICAN GOLD 4000
75,000 MILE WARRANTY

P185/75R14	$73.00	P205/75R14	$76.00
P195/75R14	$76.00	P960/80R15	$78.00
P215/75R15	$81.00	P225/75R15	$86.00
P225/75R15	$88.00	P185/70R13	$72.00
P205/70R14	$84.00	P215/70R14	$82.00
P205/70R15	$83.00	P215/70R15	$84.00

COME SEE US AT OUR NEW LOCATION!
HTC HADLEY TIRE CENTER
ROUTE 9 - AMHERST HADLEY LINE
253-9011 or 253-8894

EAST REGIONAL

1 UMass
16 Cen. Flor.
8 Bradley
9 Stanford
5 Penn. State
12 Arkansas
4 Marquette
13 Monmouth
6 N. Carolina
11 New Orleans
3 Texas Tech.
14 N. Illinois
7 New Mexico
10 Kansas St.
2 Georgetown
15 Miss. Val. St.

WEST REGIONAL

1 Purdue
16 W. Carolina
8 Georgia
9 Clemson
5 Memphis
12 Drexel
4 Syracuse
13 Montana St.
6 Iowa
11 Geo. Wash.
3 Arizona
14 Valparaiso
7 Maryland
10 Santa Clara
2 Kansas
15 S. Caro. St.

1996 NCAA
Final Four

MIDWEST REGIONAL

1 Kentucky
16 San Jose St.
8 Wisc.-G.B.
9 Virginia Tech
5 Iowa State
12 California
4 Utah
13 Canisius
6 Louisville
11 Tulsa
3 Villanova
14 Portland
7 Michigan
10 Texas
2 Wake Forest
15 NE Louisiana

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL

1 UConn
16 Colgate
8 Duke
9 E. Michigan
5 Miss. St.
12 Vir. Comm.
4 UCLA
13 Princeton
6 Indiana
11 Bos. Coll.
3 Georgia Tech
14 Austin Peay
7 Temple
10 Oklahoma
2 Cincinnati
15 UNC-Greens.

OCMP
THE OFF CAMPUS MEAL PLAN
CURRENTLY FEATURING THESE FINE RESTAURANTS:
CUTTY'S
DELANO'S
d'angelo sandwich shops
ANTONIO'S F. SEMPRE BUONA
THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery
PRUDDY'S
EL ACUÑA TEX-MEX CANTINA
TOC RESTAURANT
Bueno Y Sano
DP DOUGH
Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SUBWAY
FOR MORE INFO:
(617) 246-7222

GO UMASS

Congratulations!
and Good Luck
UMASS
Men's & Women's Basketball Teams

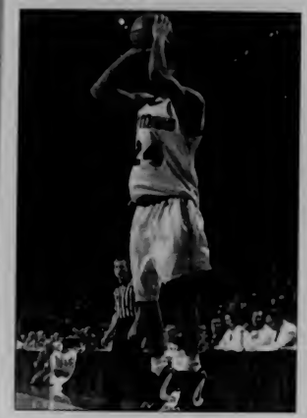
Big Y®
Where People
Come First™

Role of Padilla and Travieso magnified in tournament

Consistent guard play by Padilla and Travieso contribute to successful season



Emily Reilly / Collegian
Carmelo Travieso proved to be the outside shooter UMass could count on this year.

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Sports

Respect.

Ever since the start of the 1995-96 season, Massachusetts guards Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso have been looking for it. Entering the year, Padilla and Travieso weren't seen as one of the top backcourts in the country. They were seen as average players— one of the main question marks heading into the season.

Padilla was seen as a point guard who made too many mistakes while Travieso never got enough playing time in his first two years to make any kind of an impact.

That all started to change after the Minutemen beat Kentucky in their season opener. The two juniors played all but the last minute of the contest and were outstanding. Padilla was solid all-around scoring 14 points, grabbing seven boards and dishing out six assists while Travieso dropped in 10 points and pulled down six boards.

Following their impressive start against the preseason No. 1 Wildcats, Padilla and Travieso continued to perform to the highest level throughout the season helping the Minutemen to their 28-1 regular season record.

"Everybody's been counting [Carmelo and Edgar] out, [but] they've played real good," Donta Bright said. "They're one of the top backcourts [in the country] right now.

"The whole reason for our success has been the play of our guards. They've been great."

"I believe they are the best [backcourt] in the country," Dana Dingle said. "I enjoy playing with these two guys more than anybody [else] in my career."

Against Wake Forest (Dec. 6) Padilla had nine points and and a career-high eight boards while Travieso chipped in seven points.

"I don't know if they're the best or most talented [backcourt]," Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said after his team's loss to UMass. "But if you ask me who understands what their coach wants them to do, and is able to execute that better than any other pair I've seen this year, I think they do that. They bother opponents on every trip because they are feisty."

Six days later the tandem was at it again, as the two put a hurting on UNC-Wilmington to lead UMass to its sixth straight win at the time. Padilla had 17 points, five boards and six assists and Travieso finished with 14 points and six boards.

"They work really hard," UNC Wilmington coach Jerry Wainwright said. "I am just absolutely amazed at Carmelo's and Edgar's ability to dog and defend kids for 37-plus minutes a game. It is a true tribute to the character of those young men."

Perhaps Padilla and Travieso's importance to the team was finally noted when Marcus Camby went down with a knee injury early-on in the Minutemen's game against Southern Cal in the Rainbow Classic. Padilla led the way scoring a team-high 19 points and Travieso notched 16.

"Obviously, [UMass is] not just [Marcus] Camby. I think their guards are terrific. They play so hard and are fun to watch," LaSalle coach Speedy Morris said. "Their guard tandem is the best in the conference." Both guards have had their share of record setting performances as well.

In the Minutemen's game against St. Joseph's (Feb. 28) Padilla became UMass' all-time leader in steals passing Mike Williams (145). The Toa Alta, Puerto Rico native notched six steals on the night to bring his total to 150 at the time. Against Louisville, he increased his total to 155 after his five-steal performance against the Cardinal. He also set the record for most steals in a single season with 79. The previous record was held by Cary Herer (74 in 1989-90).

Padilla's solid and steady play throughout this unforgettable season by the Minutemen has impressed his coach.

"He's really done the things that he has needed to do and knows where the ball needs to go," UMass coach John Calipari said. "In my opinion, he's the best point guard I've ever coached — and he's only a junior."

Travieso has been setting records of the long distance nature. Although Padilla is a solid three-point threat in his own right, it is Travieso who is the go-to-guy when UMass needs a trey.

"When I'm beyond the three-point line, wherever I get the ball, I feel comfortable — anywhere on the court," Travieso said. "It's just a matter of letting the ball go. Coach believes I'm the best shooter on the floor wherever we go. Everybody on the team thinks I'm the best shooter and I just feed off of that. So my confidence is pretty high."

On three different occasions during the year, the Boston native has been in the "zone" from behind the arc, sinking seven treys twice (against Pittsburgh and Duquense) and eight once against Temple. The eight treys against the Owls tied a UMass record. He also became only the second player in UMass history to make over 70 treys in a season, Lorenzo Sutton being the other.

"He's shot the ball well all year," Calipari said.

The two have done it on the defensive end too as both players have made game-saving steals. Against Xavier Feb. 4, after nailing a trey with time running out to tie the ballgame, Padilla came up with a steal on the defensive end to thwart any chances of Xavier attempting a last-second shot. Then almost two weeks later against Rhode Island it was Travieso who saved the day with a last-second steal to preserve the victory for UMass.

"[Travieso and Padilla] play well together. They play hard, they pressure the ball well," Calipari said. "I've got the two best guards in the country."

If the Minutemen are to achieve their goal of going to the Final Four and winning the National Championship, they are going to need consistent play from Padilla and Travieso as in the last couple of games where the Minutemen have struggled, the two guards have struggled as well.

But if Padilla and Travieso play as they did for the majority of the season, NCAA tournament teams must watch out for Massachusetts.

Emily Reilly / Collegian
Edgar Padilla (above) has logged impressive minutes as the team's floor general.

Looking for valuable experience? Want to get involved? Interested in serving the community?

The Collegian Wants You!
Stop by the Collegian
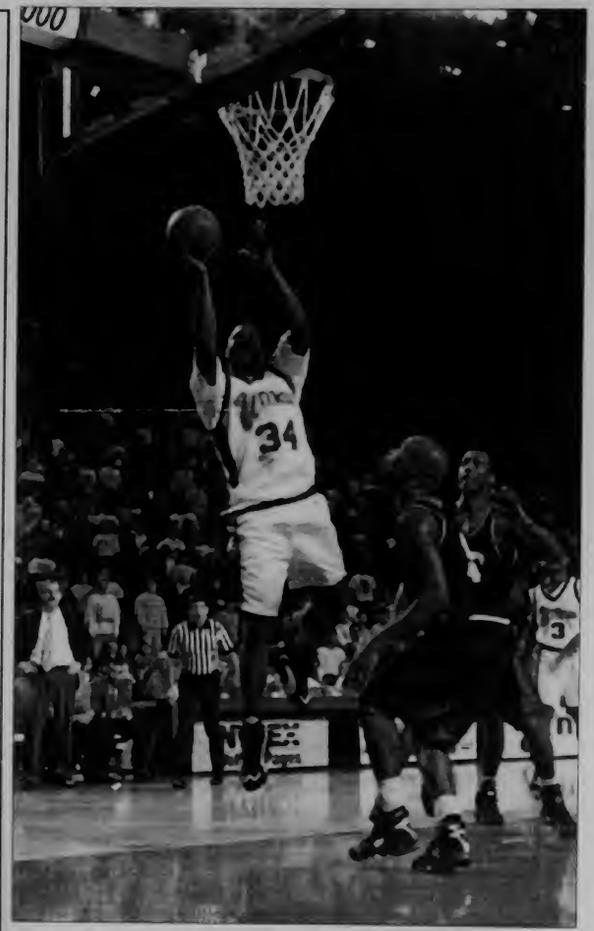
113 Campus Center
or call 545-3500
Experience, Involvement, & Service to the Community.
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
New England's Largest College Daily



Emily Reily / Collegian

Massachusetts big-man Tyrone Weeks (34) slashes inside to the basket. Weeks has played some crucial minutes in the closing half of the season providing muscle and rebounding skills under the basket for the Minutemen.

Consistent Weeks brings power to the paint for UM

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Sports

At the start of the 1995-96 season, junior forward Tyrone Weeks took an optimistic view of the upcoming season.

"This team can go as far as it wants to go," he said. If we want to lose in the first round of the NCAAs, we can. If we want to make the Final Four, we can do that too. It's up to us."

Now the time has come to see at which end of this prophecy Weeks and the Minutemen will conclude their season, as speculation ends and the NCAA Tournament begins.

Weeks brings 260 pounds of power and muscle to the Massachusetts line-up. His size enables him to bang the boards with the biggest power forwards in the NCAA, averaging 5.2 rebounds per game. However, even with such a hulking frame, Weeks has shown a nice touch close to the basket.

With numbers like this, it's no surprise that Weeks logs more minutes than any other reserve (17.9 minutes per game).

From the first tip-off of the season, Weeks has had some tough shoes to fill. With Lou Roe's graduation to the NBA, there was a large gap to be filled inside the paint of the William D. Mullins Center.

"I've tried to fill the shoes that Lou Roe had, but it was hard with the injuries I had," Weeks said. "But I'm doing my best and working real hard to do what I can."

As the sixth man off the bench, the Minutemen needed some big minutes from their big man and got them.

"My role on the team got a little more serious towards the end," Weeks said. "They used me to score and rebound more than they did in the beginning of the year. Every team needs some strength off the bench, and I guess that's what I am right now."

A perfect example of what Weeks can contribute to UMass was the Minutemen's final home game in the Mullins Center against St. Joseph's. In this game, which saw UMass pull off the overtime victory (68-66), Weeks earned his second double-double of the season earning 12 points while pulling down 11 boards. What's more, Weeks went 8-for-9 from the foul line, proving that he can produce when it comes down to the wire.

Yet this wasn't the first time this season that he proved to be an offensive leader in close games. On Feb. 20 in another game that was decided in the final minutes against Rhode Island, Weeks scored a career-high 16 points, grabbed nine boards and hit a solid 6-of-9 from the foul line.

Tyrone Weeks

Rewind a few weeks before that, one saw Weeks playing 31 minutes and earning a career-high 13 rebounds in UMass' 78-74 overtime win against Xavier.

Weeks' most impressive performance of the season came at a time when the Minutemen needed him the most. When Marcus Camby collapsed in Olean, N.Y. on Jan. 14 just minutes before a game against St. Bonaventure, Weeks needed to set up shop in the paint to insure a win. In response, he earned his first double-double of the season with 15 points, 12 rebounds and one block.

As a veteran of post-season play, the team will look to Weeks to bring the poise and experience he displays on the court into the locker room. In addition to seniors Donta Bright and Dana Dingle, Weeks will be a sense of emotional support for the team during tournament time.

"Last year, Lou and Derek [Kellogg] talked to me before the tournament and told me not to be anxious when I go out there and play, and to continue to play the way I was," Weeks said. "This year, I'm going to talk to Charlton [Clarke] and the other young guys, [and tell them] not to be anxious and to play the way they have been playing— not to go out there and try to do more."

As for personal goals, Weeks says he only has one in mind, but it is one that is shared by the whole squad.

"I don't have any personal goals, I just have a team goal," he said, "and that's to win the National Championship."

> "This team can go as far as it wants to go. If we want to lose in the first round of the NCAAs, we can. If we want to make the Final Four, we can do that too. It's up to us."
> –Tyrone Weeks

Limited Time!
MAKE YOUR OWN MEAL DEAL
Buy Any Sub, Receive Chips & Med. Drink for
$1.00 More!
Some restrictions may apply. Not valid with any other offer.
For A Limited Time Only
SUBWAY
4 Main St. • Amherst

!! AEROBICS !!
$89.00 $89.00
CARDIO
WALKING DISTANCE
$89.00 $89.00
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
FREE WEIGHTS

UM's success a family affair

The UMass squad has an off-court bond which gives its game on court chemistry

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Sports

On a dimly lit basketball court, two guys are imitating different college players they have seen play. Two of their friends sit on a bench watching them attempt to make impossible shots as they all laugh about the events as they happen.

They poke fun at each other and show how the player from Popcorn St. actually shoots his fall-away three-pointer. They act like brothers as they all range in age from 18 to 23. They care about each other like they are family and that may be the No. 1 reason for their success.

They are the 28-1 Massachusetts men's basketball team.

Freshman Charlton Clarke has been doing an interview with a reporter for about five minutes, which he does with his wide eyes and bright smile. Senior Rigoberto Nunez walks behind him stops the interview for a moment and tells the reporter, "You don't need to ask anymore questions, because he is the best."

Everyone laughs and continues on with their on or off-court activities. Later on the father walks into the room.. coach John Calipari, and gets everyone together for a family meeting — practice.

This unit which was ranked No. 1 in the country for nine consecutive weeks earlier this season, now comes together with one goal— to become National Champions. The hopes and dreams of this group of young men are a reality because of the bond that they all share and they know where they all stand in the family.

"Everybody on this team accepts their roles," Marcus Camby said about his teammates. "Guys know that they have to lean on each other a little bit to get the job done collectively. There are no egos or anyone getting jealous about when I get a lot of publicity. We play hard and we play together."

Camby would probably be considered the big brother as his teammates seem to look to him in the clutch. When the chips are down, he wants to take control.

In the first game of the season, the Minutemen were in a back-and-forth battle against top-ranked Kentucky. As a second half 10-point lead began to slip away, his coach and the father of this team began to get a case of the parental nerves. His eldest son came up to him and assured him that they would not lose. UMass prevailed, 92-82.

Like most families, it pulls together in times of tragedy. On Jan. 14 shortly before tip-off against St. Bonaventure, the big brother had fallen under circumstances that may never be understood. But nonetheless they had to press on as Dad took big brother to the hospital. Calipari is all of their fathers and would have taken any of his children to be taken care of.

While Camby, the leading National Player of the Year Candidate, was down, his siblings picked up the slack. Donta Bright increased his concentration as he had a 30- point game versus Rhode Island and broke the Atlantic 10 record for consecutive free-throws made at 41. Carmelo Travieso also came up big from behind three-point land on two occasions hitting seven treys in a game. And when Camby returned it was just like he never left, as the team continued to roll along.

When there are many children in a generation, they usually have a special talent that they use as their tool to get noticed. One of those role players is Nunez and his specialty is defense, and he almost single-handedly sent one game into overtime.

Against St. Joseph's, Nunez was inserted into the lineup to deny the ball. In filling his role, he frustrated Terrell Myers into an intentional foul, getting two shots and possession, enabling UMass to send the game into an extra session where the Minutemen prevailed.

Every family has its quiet child, and in this family that distinction can be given to Dana Dingle. There is very little, if any, flash to the Bronx native's game. Averaging a quiet 11 points and eight rebounds per game, he simply does his chores around the court. Dingle is also a co-captain and his leading by example is just another reason for the Minutemen's success.

"In this family we have group leaders and everyone is beneath them, and they accept their role," said Nunez, one of those role players. "As long as we don't get jealous of whoever is getting all the attention, we get closer and that's why we are special this year."

> "They act like brothers as they all range in age from 18 to 23. They care about each other like they are family and that may be the No. 1 reason for their success."

Emily Reily / Collegian

Carmelo Travieso (24), UMass' outside sharp shooter, takes the ball inside (bottom left) Floor general Edgar Padilla recieves some game time support from coach Calipari (above left) Senior Rigo Nuñez (above) soars to the basket in the Minutemen's victory over Temple in the William D. Mullins Center. In his four years at Massachusetts, Nuñez proved to be the epitome of UMass' "family atmosphere" firing up the team and fans alike.

CUTTY'S
Your UMass Basketball Connection!
OCMP MEMBER
Coming Soon . . . KENO
55 University Drive • Amherst
545-5700

NOTIONS VIDEO & MAGAZINE
XXX
Movies for Sale
$4.99 and up
FREE MEMBERSHIP
RENTALS
$2.99 per night
Videos, Magazines, Toys & More!
The Ultimate Adult Entertainment Center
73-A Cottage St., Easthampton, MA
(413) 527-5843

Guess what Johnny's bringing for Show and Tell today.
Every day, thousands of kids bring guns to school.
Find out how to help get guns out of the hands of children.
Call 1-800-WE-PREVENT for free information
Not one more kid life. Not one more grieving family. Not one more

Clarke steps up to give UM guards break

As freshman guard Charlton Clarke gives relief to Padilla and Travieso the Minutemen look to bounce their way to the Final Four

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Sports

In the beginning of the season, depth was a major question for the Massachusetts men's basketball team. Once the season began, questions remained as to how far the starting lineup could go with limited numbers on the bench.

No problem.

After 28 games, both senior forwards Donta Bright and Dana Dingle have started every game, while the two junior guards Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso have started every game except for Senior Night. That averages out to at least 30 minutes per game for each of the five starters. Combined, they have logged 80.5 percent of the team's total minutes while tallying 86.9 percent of its points.

• As the season progressed, the bench that had many fans swaying in the breeze, soon had them standing on their feet. The first example that comes to mind is Rigoberto Nunez's key performance which sent a near loss to St. Joseph's into OT for the win.

After taking a hard foul by Hawks guard Terrell Myers, Nunez sank one of two foul shots to bring the Minutemen to within two points setting up the deuce by Bright to tie the game. In tourney play, look for Nunez to step off the bench to pressure the inbounds pass if games come down to the wire.

• Not only is the number of minutes the starters have been logging impressive, but the teams they have been logging them against is even more impressive. In recent years, coach John Calipari has crafted some rigorous schedules for the Minutemen and this year was no exception.

During the season UMass defeated eight nationally ranked teams including: No. 1 Kentucky, No. 3 Memphis, No. 10 Virginia Tech, No. 10 Wake Forest, No. 13 Syracuse, No. 19 Maryland No. 21 Louisville, and No. 21 Georgia Tech.

• After missing the first 14 games due to a broken bone in his foot, freshman guard Charlton Clarke emerged as a key cog in the UMass game plan. A bold player who isn't afraid to take big shots or drive the lane, Clarke has adapted well to the style of NCAA play. Coaches and players have confidence in the young guard, and his ability to sub in and provide Padilla and Travieso with rest as needed.

"Right now I'm doing what I have to do to help this team win, doing what the coach wants me to do," Clarke said. "I take my time and try to take what's an open shot for me, just playing within the system."

Clarke is anxious to make his NCAA Tournament debut.

"It's more than a thrill right now. It's been a burning desire since I was small," Clarke said. "Last year I was watching the NCAAs on TV. This is a big thing for me."

• Massachusetts will be looking to sophomore Inus Norville to play a role similar to Clarke's in the front-court. Norville has had a hot-and-cold season thus far. Highlighting the current season was a four-game starting streak following Camby's fainting spell before facing St. Bonaventure.

"I'm just going to go out there and do what ever coach tells me to do," Norville said. "I'll play 30 minutes, 20 minutes, 10 minutes— whatever the team needs."

• Anyone who may have been taking note of the Minutemen's pre-game rituals have noticed something new this year. After the starting lineups are announced, UMass comes into the huddle in a big bouncing mass seeming to feed off the energy of the crowd. However, when asked which Minuteman was responsible for starting this new tradition, conflict arose.

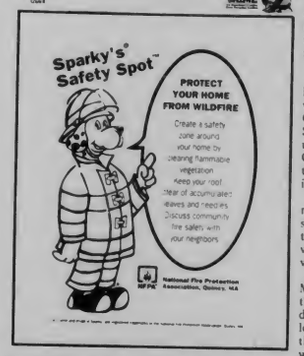
The logical source of the pre-game hype would be senior Nunez, who always provides an inspirational spark to the team and fans alike.

"Well, that was a combination of myself, Marcus and Carmelo," Nunez said. "When we were coming out in Kentucky they were getting all the cameras out in front of us, we had to do something, so we bounced."

However, there appears to be some dissention among the ranks as freshman Clarke feels he had a little something to do with the new-found tradition.

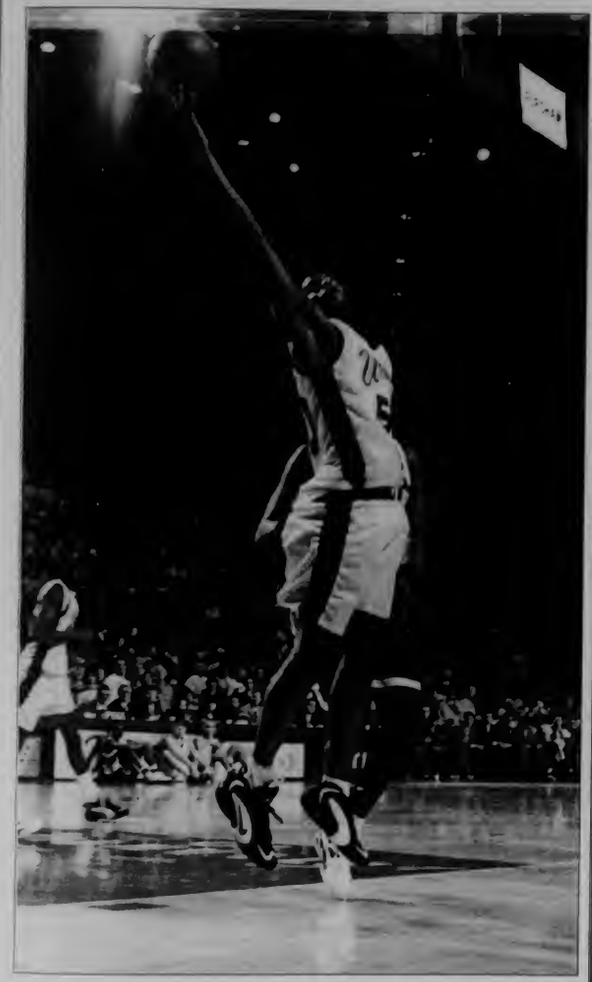
"I'd like to say I did because I did it in high school," Clarke said. "It was a tradition I started in high school so when I came here, I wanted to put a little rhythm to it, because we looked so dull out there. When other teams see us jumping up and down, they know we're all fired up, ready to go."

If the Minutemen continue to play with the intensity they have exhibited season-long, UMass could bounce its way to a National Championship.



Sparky's Safety Spot
PROTECT YOUR HOME FROM WILDFIRE
Create a safety zone around your home by clearing flammable vegetation
Keep your roof clear of accumulated leaves and needles
Discuss community fire safety with your neighbors
National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

Always in Bloom
Congratulations On Your Season, & Good Luck in the Tournament!
Full Service Florist
• Unique Flowers • Gifts and Plants
• FTD Wire Service • Daily Deliveries
220 North Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-5545 • Debbie Boyce Owner



Emily reily / Collegian

The Minutemen will expect some solid minutes from sophomore Inus Norville come tournament time. During the regular season, Norville has come off the bench adding power to the UMass front court.

HU KE LAU
RESTAURANT & DINNER THEATER
CHICOPEE, MA 01020
LET THE HU KE LAU HOST YOUR NEXT EVENT
Intimate Country Banquets • Birthday Parties • Dances • Luau
Come enjoy the food and great atmosphere. Dance the Hula, or be amazed by the spectacular fire dance.
Call Bonnie at 593-5222
A Total Polynesian Experience.

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
Corner of Bay Road & 116, South Amherst
(413) 253-9528
WHEN IT IS CRUNCH TIME . . . ATKINS is the place to go for the freshest, best quality, most delicious foods for the most reasonable cost.
EASY TO FIND AND WORTH THE DRIVE
FULL LINE, FROM SCRATCH, BAKERY
Basketball cakes and other seasonal or special occasion cakes.
Cookies Pies Donuts Muffins
Danish Tortes Tarts Pie Squares
Bagels Napoleons Fritters Coffee Cake
Breads traditional and whole grain
FRESH FRUITS & VEGETABLES
Find Out Just How Good Freshness Can Taste!
CANDIES
Atkins Own Homemade FUDGE
Also truffles, bulk chocolates, bars and assorted chocolates.
LUNCH FROM ATKINS DELI . . .
Fresh, made from scratch Salads & Prepared Foods
Over 100 varieties of CHEESE, Pate's and Spreads, Crackers & Specialty Foods
GRILL SPECIALS
or order from Atkins Orchard Menu
Fresh, the most enticing BREAKFAST SERVED daily! From eggs and toast, pancakes, french toast, omelettes and featured ethnic breakfasts . . . DAILY SPECIALS!
Served 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Ryan Tiezzi / Collegian

ESPN's Dick Vitale talks with his choice for College Basketball Player of the Year, Marcus Camby and coach John Calipari after the Minutemen defeated No. 10 Wake Forest at the Mullins Center Dec 6, 60-46.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Bringing you the latest in UMass men's and women's sports everyday. Scores and stats, highlights and rankings, and more opinions than you could ever want recap: A season of success

No. 2 Massachusetts 69 St. Bonaventure 56
Mar. 7th at the Philadelphia Civic Center

The first round of the Atlantic 10 tournament was a test for the Minutemen to be ready for anyone and after a sloppy start, UMass finished the first half with a 12–2 run to open up a 14 point lead heading to the locker room. Carmelo Travieso led the Minutemen with 21 points, but it was Inus Norville off of the bench which provided the spark on the offensive and defensive ends of the court with four points and three points. Donta Bright also stepped up his game as well with 15 points to lead the Minutemen's first half ending run.

No. 2 Massachusetts 74 George Washington 65
Mar 8th at the Philadelphia Civic Center

After losing to the Colonials four straight times, the Minutemen finally beat Mike Jarvis' club giving UMass a chance at its fifth consecutive A-10 Tourney title. Marcus Camby and Donta Bright led the way for the Minutemen with 19 points a piece.

Early foul trouble was a factor as Camby and Alexander Koul (game high 20 points) both had two fouls mid way through the first half. UMass coach Calipari gambled on keeping his National Player of the Year candidate in for a good portion of the half while Koul sat beside his coach. Koul never got back into the flow of the game as UMass pulled away with a late 13–1 run spearheaded by Bright's six points. GW failed to hit a field goal in the last nine minutes of the game.

No. 2 Massachusetts 75 Temple 61
Mar. 9th at the Philadelphia Civic Center

UMass became only the second team to win both regular seaosn and tournament titles in five consecutive years with a 14-point win over their archrivals, the Owls. Carmelo Travieso, named Most Outstanding Player of the tournament, hit 7-of-13 three-point attempts finishing with 21 points to lead all Minutemen.

Marcus Camby was also an all tournament team selection pouring in 12 points to go with his ? rebounds and ? blocks. Temple made things interesting leading by six after an 11-0 run, but UMass answered that with a 20-4 streak to put the game far out of reach and stake their claim to a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

Media experts give prophecy on UM success

Local print, radio and television celebrities give their views on the Minutemen's chance at a shot for the NCAA Championship title

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Sports

With the Minutemen's chances of going far in the tournament at their highest ever, reporters from Boston to Oakland give their thoughts on how far the 1995–1996 Massachusetts hoop team can go...

Steve Buckley, Boston Herald, WEEI, Former Collegian sports writer — National Champions. "I was worried, but the Louisville game showed me that they're going to be up for this."

Mike Ratte, WGGB News 40 — "I think they get to the Final Four and from there we'll see what happens. Just for fun I'll say UMass and UConn in the National Championship game."

Gene Lavanchy, WHDH TV–7 — "It all depends on the bracket, but I think they'll get to the Final Four. I think they're a lock for the round of 16 and probably the round of eight, but I'll stick to what I've said all along that they will get to the Final Four.

Emerson College will get special consideration from the committee and sneak into the tournament and get to the Final Four. It will be a proud day for all of us Emersonians."

Bob Lobel, WBZ TV 4 — "I don't think they'll leave the East Coast. They'll get a nice tour going from Providence to Atlanta to the Meadowlands. I think they'll make the Final Four and what happens after that is anybody's guess."

Joe Burris, Boston Globe — "If they can stay healthy and keep playing the way they're playing, they can win the National Championship."

Brian Perillo, WMUA Sports director — "Final Four. I think that until then no team will even be in UMass' league."

Rich Tettemer, WWLP TV–22 — "Final Four. I don't know if they can win it all. I think UMass will play Kentucky for the National Championship. Kentucky looks awesome, but it's the tournament and you never know..."

Monte Poole, Oakland Tribune — "I don't think that UMass can go all the way. Camby is a great player, but I don't think there guard play is strong enough to get them there."

Josh Jacobs, Host of UVC–19's Sports Talk — "I think they can go as far as their guard play can take them and I think that is the Final Four."

Arthur C. Stapleton Jr., Bridgewater (NJ) Courier News, Former Collegian Sports Editor — "As far as the shooting of Carmelo and Edgar can take them. UMass can play half court with anybody. I think they're going to go to the Final Four. There are six teams that can win it, and I think UMass is one of them."

Dave Nathan, Worcester Telegram and Gazette — "Final Eight. I don't think UMass has the depth or the outside shooting to be upset proof."

Andy Ayers, Daily Hampshire Gazette — "They can go all the way, but there are a lot of buts along the way. It's just about playing consistently well along the way. They have to play like they did against Kentucky all the way or an Oklahoma State will pop up."

Marc Vandermeer, WHMP — "I like the Minutemen to go to the Final Four. I think they have proven that they can beat any team on any floor in America. Once you get there you never know what will happen, but I think they have the talent to get that far."

Ron Chimelis, Springfield Union News — "I think they can win it, but at least to the Final Four. I think they obviously have to play good defense and get quality minutes off the bench."

Jim Clark, Fitchburg Sentinel, Former Collegian Sports Editor — "It's going to depend on the match-ups, but they have a chance of going as far as anybody. I think there are only about five teams good enough to win six straight games. I could definitely see them making the Final Four, if they do what they're capable of doing."

Graduating soon?
No job yet?

Ever considered working in sports?

For 8 years Sports Careers has provided products and services for sports industry job seekers, including The Insider newsletter (published twice a month with 60-75 currently available internships and jobs in sales, marketing, public relations, journalism and management each issue), an automated resume bank and more.

For subscription information call...

SPORTS CAREERS

1-800-SPORT-77

Any 2 Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax

2 Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax

Spring Specials
Save in 2s
256-6100

Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones

FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm • 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa

No Coupons Needed With These Specials
256-6100

Any 2 Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax

Any 2 Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk
Amherst
253-4000

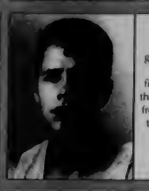
Free Salsa!
With Burrito Purchase

HOT MAMA'S Super Natural Foods

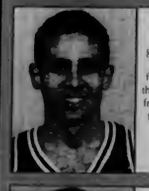
Dana Dingle
Senior / Forward
games played/started-29/29
average minutes-32.8
field goal percentage-.443
three-point percentage-.200
free throw percentage-.613
total/ave. rebounds-221/7.6
assists/steals-43/27
blocks-0
average points-10.2

Donta Bright
Senior / Forward
games played/started-29/29
average minutes-31.1
field goal percentage-.500
three-point percentage-.222
free throw percentage-.789
total/ave. rebounds-167/5.8
assists/steals-50/30
blocks-19
average points-14.8

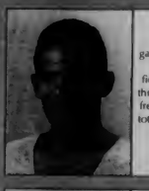
Charlton Clarke
Freshman / Guard
games played/started-15/0
average minutes-8.9
field goal percentage-.421
three-point percentage-.125
free throw percentage-.333
total/ave. rebounds-5/0.3
assists/steals-7/5
blocks-0
average points-1.4



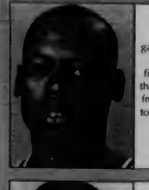
Ross Burns
Freshman / Guard
games played/started-13/0
average minutes-0.9
field goal percentage-.500
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.500
total/ave. rebounds-1/0.1
assists/steals-2/1
blocks-0
average points-0.4



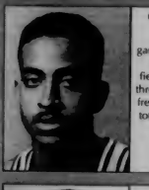
Giddel Padilla
Senior / Guard
games played/started-15/1
average minutes-1.7
field goal percentage-.222
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.750
total/ave. rebounds-6/0.4
assists/steals-5/3
blocks-0
average points-0.5



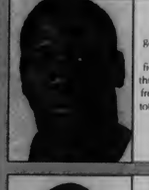
Edgar Padilla
Junior / Guard
games played/started-29/28
average minutes-36.9
field goal percentage-.412
three-point percentage-.333
free throw percentage-.707
total/ave. rebounds-106/3.7
assists/steals-183/79
blocks-13
average points-9.2



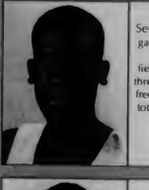
Marcus Camby
Junior / Center
games played/started-25/23
average minutes-31.4
field goal percentage-.488
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.710
total/ave. rebounds-205/8.2
assists/steals-48/25
blocks-97
average points-21.4



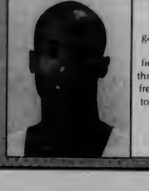
Carmelo Travieso
Junior / Guard
games played/started-29/28
average minutes-36.3
field goal percentage-.418
three-point percentage-.397
free throw percentage-.607
total/ave. rebounds-91/3.1
assists/steals-55/38
blocks-14
average points-11.5



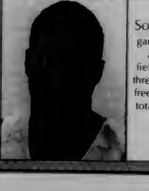
Tyrone Weeks
Junior / Forward
games played/started-28/0
average minutes-17.8
field goal percentage-.462
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.725
total/ave. rebounds-144/5.1
assists/steals-11/8
blocks-13
average points-5.3



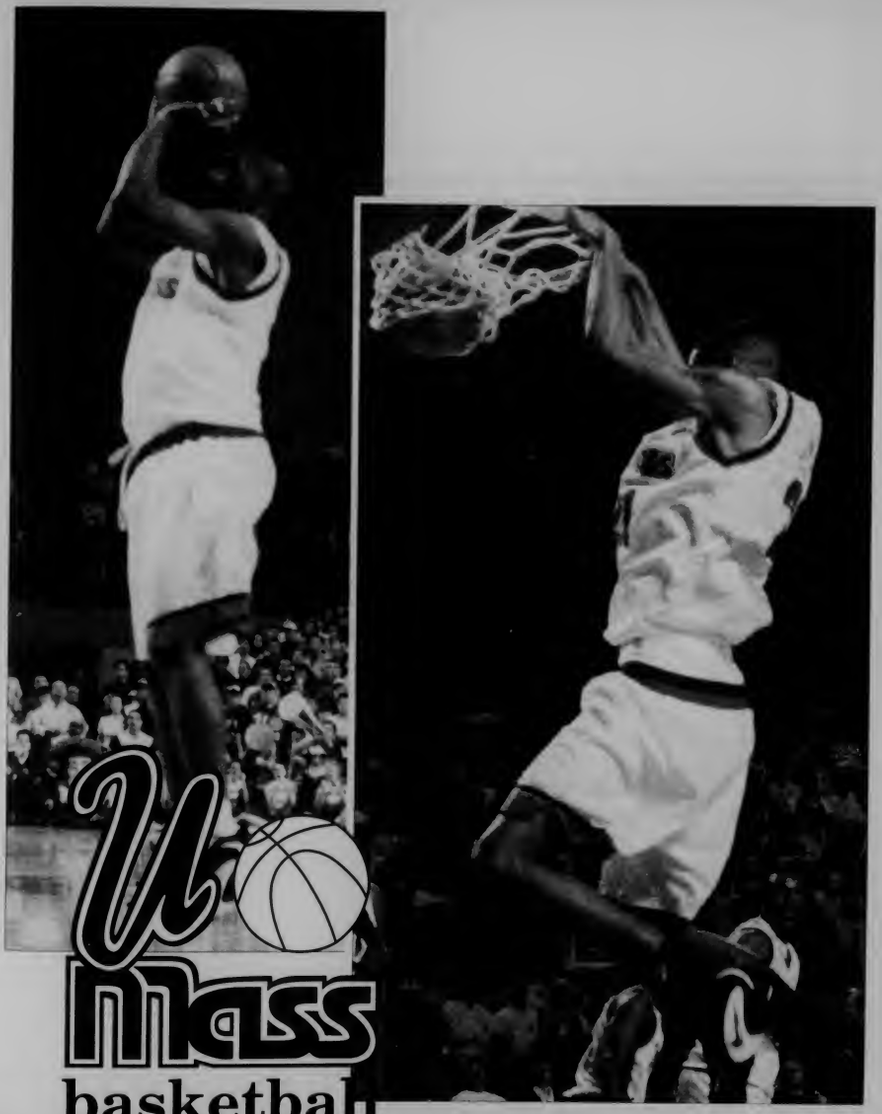
Ted Cottrell
Senior / Center•Forward
games played/started-18/1
average minutes-2.2
field goal percentage-.467
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.000
total/ave. rebounds-14/0.8
assists/steals-1/1
blocks-1
average points-0.8



Rigoberto Nuñez
Senior / Forward
games played/started-25/1
average minutes-5.2
field goal percentage-.200
three-point percentage-.000
free throw percentage-.417
total/ave. rebounds-26/1.0
assists/steals-8/1
blocks-3
average points-0.4



Inus Norville
Sophmore / Forward
games played/started-29/5
average minutes-10.1
field goal percentage-.481
three-point percentage-.333
free throw percentage-.568
total/ave. rebounds-65/2.2
assists/steals-1/8
blocks-19
average points-2.5



UMass basketball

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

You never know who you'll meet in our classifieds section.

We Accept...

VISA

MasterCard™

Quest for national title begins today

Marcus Camby and the Minutemen begin the NCAA tournament this afternoon in Providence with their first round matchup against Central Florida (See Sports, page 12)

Forbes to drop out of race

Millionaire Steve Forbes is set to announce that he will drop out of the presidential race, today, during a press conference (See story, page 3).

"And the Oscar goes to ..."

The 68th Annual Academy Awards are right around the corner. Take a look at the would-be winners and could-be losers (See Arts & Living, page 5)

Three Day Forecast

Spring feels as though it has finally sprung as temperatures reach the upper '50s today. Don't get too comfortable though. Temperatures will dip slightly over the week end, but remain comfortable.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 95 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, March 14, 1996

16 children murdered in Scotland shooting

By Robert Seely
Associated Press

DUNBLANE, Scotland — One child, sobbing, leaned heavily against a car door. Another, her eyes glazed, stumbled through the jostling crowd at the primary school gate.

In the main street nearby, a woman shrieked, "Victoria! Victoria!"

Dunblane, a tranquil cathedral town at the foot of the Scottish Highlands, roiled in grief and horror Wednesday after a disgraced former Boy Scout leader armed with four handguns killed or wounded all but one of 29 kindergartners playing in the school gymnasium, and killed their teacher.

The slaughter of the innocents was over in moments.

Just setting in is the shock, the devastation, the sheer sense of stunned disbelief in this beautiful country town, and throughout a nation with strict gun control laws and very few multiple slayings.

"Just now, to most people, this is a nightmare," said school board member Gerry McDermott. "But they will not wake up from it."

Frantic parents tried to get into the school while police and ambulance workers inside confronted unspeakable horror.

"I can only describe what I saw as a medieval vision of hell," paramedic John McEwan told The Sun, a London tabloid. "There were little bodies in piles, dotted around the room, and items of children's clothing like shoes and pumps around the floor."

The final toll was 16 dead children, 12 wounded children and two dead adults, one of them the gunman, who took his own life.

Dunblane is the sort of place people almost never leave, a place whose 9,000 residents clearly care about each other. Just 35 miles northwest of Edinburgh, it straddles the River Allan in the spectacular Perthshire countryside leading into the highlands.

Controversial topic fuels debate

By Humphrey brown III & Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Edwin Meese and Betty Shabazz debated last night on the Affirmative Action issue in the Fine Arts Center.

It could be said that University of Massachusetts alum Dr. Betty Shabazz had home court advantage last night as she squared off against former U.S. attorney general Edwin Meese in a debate on the highly controversial issue of affirmative action.

An audience of about 120 spectators came to the Fine Arts Center to see the former Ronald Reagan counselor engage in a discussion on the necessity on affirmative action in contemporary American society with the widow of slain black activist, Malcolm X.

Shabazz opened up the debate with a nod to the Preamble of the Constitution, including references to the 13th and 14th amendments and what those words mean.

Shabazz's main point of argument was that affirmative action was a form of reparation for the crimes and injustices committed by the United States upon African-American slaves in the past.

"Affirmative action is appropriate and should exist," she said. "Reparations were never paid to the slaves or the descendants of slaves."

Making several references to the levels of reparation that the United States is making to other races and nationalities, Shabazz raised the notion that affirmative action should be seen as reparation for African-Americans.

"America is America because it allows redress and to say that affirmative action should not exist is not what we should be about," she said.

Edwin Meese opened his argument by saying that the changes that occurred, with respect to the original concept of affirmative action, are in need of revision.

"Affirmative action has become a devicive force in U.S. society," he said. "Affirmative action perpetuates racism and sexism, because it says that certain groups can not compete equally with others, because of lack of certain abilities."

Meese drew support for his argument on the basis that, according to him, affirmative action encourages discrimination among whites.

"You can't stop discrimination with more discrimination," he said.

"Affirmative action, as currently practiced, is against the Civil Rights Act of 1964," Meese said in closing his opening remarks. "Affirmative action, as currently practiced, has given power to bureaucrats to discriminate against minorities."

Shabazz began her rebuttal by addressing the notion that blacks in America were treated preferentially.

"African-Americans do not have preference, because they aren't treated preferentially," she said.

She also remarked on the growing need and scarcity of leaders for the future if racism and prejudices persist.

"The world needs leaders and you cannot lead someone if you are biased," Shabazz said. "What we have to do is affirm the quality of life regardless of where we came from."

Although Meese claimed to be in accordance with much of what Shabazz had to say, his stance on the subject of reparation was adamant.

"I don't believe in reparation for descendants of people for those who have not been oppressed," he said.

In closing, Shabazz alluded to the possibility that a new generation of young people will continue to have to deal with the issue of affirmative action if there is not adequate change.

"If not affirmative action, then what? If not reparation, then what?" she said. "But don't tell me nothing."

The debate ended with a question & answer session where both Meese and Shabazz answered questions from the audience.

Speaker delivers talk on struggles with HIV

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

A poignant presentation about the dangers and problems about being exposed to HIV was discussed by Lisa Tiger, an HIV-positive Native American from Oklahoma, last night in Bowker Auditorium.

In her opening for the educational presentation, part of the Distinguished Visitor's Program, Tiger said she felt "AIDS wasn't in that part of the country."

"AIDS was something in cities like San Francisco and New York City," she said. "It can happen to you."

On July 5, 1992 Tiger learned of her HIV positive status after a three year monogamous relationship. Tiger said she thought she could detect a person with HIV simply by their appearance. She said she felt she didn't have to worry about sexually transmitted diseases [STDs] in a longterm relationship.

"I personally know of five people he infected," she said. Tiger went on to say that she didn't blame her ex-boyfriend, who knew he was HIV positive prior to their encounter.

"I am responsible for my own body," she said. "I am HIV positive because I didn't protect myself."

Shortly after learning she was HIV positive, she began working full-time in educating people about preventing getting AIDS.

"I never understood how or why I could keep this a secret," Tiger said.

She said she accepts the fate to which HIV may lead her, recalling the memory of her brother Chris, who was murdered at the age of 22.

"I am going to be with my brother someday," she said.

Tiger offered advice to prevent making the same mistake she had.

"If you have unprotected sex, you are going to get one [STD]," she said. If you have sex with anybody, assume they are HIV positive and protect yourself," said Tiger.

Use water-based lubricants with

Turn to TIGER, page 2

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Lisa Tiger, a Native American who contracted AIDS while in a monogamous relationship, spoke in Bowker Auditorium last night.

■ Shabazz speaks on legacy of a leader

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Last night, Betty Shabazz, University of Massachusetts alum and widow of Malcolm X, debated former Attorney General Edwin Meese on Affirmitave Action. Just prior to the debate Shabazz spoke about her experiences.

Shabazz talked of her life before she met and married Malcolm X. An adopted child, she came from a middle class home. Her parents just wanted her to be happy, she said.

"My parents called me the sunshine of their lives," she said. "Malcolm added more fuel and substance to my life — is there somebody else greater than the sunshine?"

Shabazz said that meeting Malcolm X. changed her life. He made her realize the responsibility she had to herself, to her community, and society, she said.

"I had a responsibility to be an upright person," Shabazz said. "I had a responsibility greater than all, to my ancestors who came to this country and who helped build this country. Who only wanted for their

Turn to SHABAZZ, page 3

■ Meese discusses U.S. policy, Malcolm X

By Shyamala Ivatury
Collegian Correspondent

Following his debate with Dr. Betty Shabazz, Edwin Meese gave several opinions on a variety of topics from Malcolm X to present American political issues.

Meese first offered his views on uniform, equal per-student funding for all schools in the United States, to balance resources between inner city and suburban schools.

"I am not sure that there is any necessary relationship between the amount of money that is spent and the quality of education," Meese said. "Inner city schools often spent more money per student than schools in the suburbs." He added that the problem of educational equality was very "complex."

He then spoke on his views on Malcolm X, former spokesperson for the Nation of Islam and the slain husband of his debate adversary.

"I really don't know. I don't know enough about Malcolm X," he said. "I have never done any studies." Meese did say he was a close friend of Shabazz.

Turn to MEESE, Page 3

SATF proposal announced; Scott to read plan today

EMILY BERY / COLLEGIAN

Dan Castellano, speaker of the SGA, gathered support for the Student Activity Trust Fund Wednesday afternoon on the steps of the Student Union.

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The 'Free Our Fee' coalition held a rally Wednesday on the steps of the Student Union Building to announce a proposal which would add approximately $525,000 into the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF).

The plan, agreed upon by students and administration officials, will be sent to the Chancellor today for final approval.

The $1.7 million SATF is the only fund on campus controlled by students. Financed through the student activities fee which appears on the semester bill, the money is allocated to all Registered Student Organizations (RSOs), support agencies and business.

Throughout the semester students representing the Student Government Association (SGA) and a wide array of RSOs have protested the $450,000 which the University removes from the trust to expend on transportation services and administrative taxes.

In the past weeks, students have been meeting with Vice- Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson and Vice- Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page, as recommended by Chancellor David K. Scott, to devise a settle-

Turn to SATF, page 2

SGA addresses sexual violence within University community

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) Senate passed two motions Wednesday night to address the problem of rape and sexually related violence on and off campus at the University of Massachusetts.

The motions, written in response to the recent reports of two alleged rapes inside the fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha (Pike) directed there attention both at the Greek community and the student population at-large.

In efforts to increase awareness about incidents of sexual assault, the Senate resolved that a newly formed task force of the Office of Greek Affairs will address these issues within their community and institute a mandatory rape awareness program to be attended by all fraternity members. There were fears within the Greek community after the motions first draft called for the University to revoke the charter of Pike, according to Sen. Brian Entler, who represents the Greek Area. That motion was sent to the Senate Administrative Affairs Committee during lasts weeks meeting.

Entler said that the first draft was overly "accusatory" towards fraternities. "The initial wording of the motion was unacceptable." However, he spoke in favor of the revised motion.

"This is not an attack on fraternity's at all," said Sen Rebecca Filman, one the motions co-sponsors. "This is one area we can look at because of the recent assaults, because they have the resources and because they are community leaders."

The motion also calls for the task force to produce at least one report each semester regarding incidents of sexual assault.

"We must recognize that violence on college campuses is a huge problem," said Filman.

The second motion, sponsored by Filman and Sen. Stacey Shackford, called for the annual report released by the University Sexual Assault Advisory Committee be made available to all students at the Whitmore Administration Building, Campus Center and the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. The report records on a monthly bases all reported incidents of sexual and physical abuse.

Furthermore, the motion calls for the increase allocation of funding towards the Counselor Advocacy and Educational Advocacy Programs of the Everywoman's Center, which provides support services to victims of sexual assault and educational mate-

Turn to SGA, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

Thursday, March 14

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be making a banner for protecting whales at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union for more information, call the ARC office at 545-0358.

Meeting — A mass meeting to form a day of action, coalition to mobilize a March rally for access to education, ending of attacks on affirmative action, abolishment of sexual and gender oppression and an end to corporate degradation of the environment will take place at 7 p.m. in Room 162-75 in the Campus Center Basement.

Music — The Magic Triangle Jazz Series presents The Dave Douglas Quartet at 8 p.m. in Hampden Theater. Admission is free for UMass students with valid ID. Tickets are $9 and $6 for the general public. For tickets or information call 545-2876.

Meeting — The Wildlife Society presents "Wetlands and Biodiversity," featuring Scott Jackson of the UMass Cooperative Extension System, at 6 p.m. in 203 Holdsworth.

Thursday, March 21

Lecture — Migraine sufferers are invited to attend Franklin Medical Center's "News About Migraine, Important Information for Sufferers," at 6:30 p.m. in Franklin Medical Center's conference rooms. Dr. Joseph Viadero will be the featured speaker. Fro registration and more information, contact The Professionals at (413) 773-8557.

Notices

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work-Study and Fedcral Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Support Program — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student run organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of someone important in their life. They will be forming support groups for meetings for seven to eight weeks, and holding two workshops focusing on grief. The workshops are open to any student, and will be held March 5 and March 12 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall. Call 586-5812 or 549-2671 ext. 316 for more information.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253-0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546-2363 or 546-5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10-11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

■ SATT

continued from page 1

The proposal, finalized Wednesday morning, is a four-year plan which will dramatically restructure the SATF.

"With this, we can double RSO budgets," said SGA Secretary of Finance Sean Carter.

In fiscal year 1997, the proposal calls for the University to take responsibility for funding four professional staff members to advise students at WMUA and University Productions and Concerts, for a savings of about $110,000.

The SATF will no longer be used to fund the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority or the Five-College Bus, as stipulated in the initial proposal by students. A separate "transportation fee" will be added to the semester bill, totalling $19. That same amount will be subtracted from the student activities fee.

This initial move simply reorganizes the SATF. It does not bring in any new money and will not require any additional financial contributions from students.

In fiscal year 1998, the University will fund three additional professional staff positions currently financed through the SATF for a savings of over $100,000.

In addition, the student activities fee will be increased by $3 to allow for new unrestricted resources to be made available. To off-set the cost to students, the curriculum fee will be reduced by the same amount.

By fiscal year 1999, the University will entirely fund the Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center and a professional staff position at the Student Union Craft Center, totalling $95,000 in savings.

The student activities fee will again be raised by $3, with the same reduction of the curriculum fee, bringing in a total of $51,000 of new money to the SATF.

In the final year of the proposal, the University will provide $110,000 for a newly-formed student coordinated Program Board, which will provide financial support for films, lectures and other planned events to RSOs.

"I am fully encouraged by the quality of this proposal," said SGA Speaker of the Senate Dan Castellano.

The rally included several students representing RSOs such as the Ski Club and the Student Union Art Gallery. The Student Union Art Gallery said this money will enhance the quality of life on campus tremendously.

"I think that these kind of experiences [offered by RSOs] are invaluable to the University," Outing Club Treasurer Chris Gasbarro said.

"It looks like we have freed our fee," said Michael Hass of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

SCERA is awaiting the final word from Scott on the proposal, which is expected to come after spring break.

Is Your Smoke Detector Working?

■ Tiger

continued from page 1

condoms from "beginning to end," Tiger advocated. These lubricants include KY jelly and lubricants containing Nonoxynol-9 spermicide.

"Ever since I tested HIV positive, I have been much healthier," she said. Her treatment routine includes eating right, getting plenty of rest, exercising and praying.

Attitude is what keeps you healthy, she said.

"I am really sad about people who worry about what other people will think" if they disclose their HIV status, she added.

"I chose not to do any ..estern medicines," said Tiger. She said they don't prolong life expectancy.

Tiger also spoke about HIV constantly being referred to as a gay disease. The reason for calling this the "gay cancer" is only because HIV showed up early on among the gay population, she said. This is especially true since anal sex is associated with the gay community, she added.

Receiving unprotected anal or vaginal sex will allow the HIV virus to enter your body, Tiger said. The body receives the virus through a break in the skin or through mucous membranes found in the eyes, vagina and on the tip of a man's penis, she said. Men who aren't circumcised are more at risk of getting the virus, she added.

"I hope something I will say will make a difference," Tiger said.

Come Enjoy our all new delicious

BUFFET

Over 20

Different Items To Choose

Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner

Lunch Buffet • $5.95

Dinner Buffet • $8.95

Soups • Entrees • Appetizers • Desserts

Regular Lunch and Dinner Menus Always Available • Full Liquor License

10% off PICK UP/TAKE OUT ORDERS

Cannot Combine With Other Offers • 1 Coupon Per Person

"Bringing The Tradition To You"

CHINA DYNASTY

RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE

Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077

Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst

256-8800

OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

STEVE MARTIN

A JONATHAN LYNN FILM

SGT. BILKO

IMAGINE ENTERTAINMENT PRESENTS A BRIAN GRAZER PRODUCTION

DAN AYKROYD PHIL HARTMAN "SGT. BILKO" GLENNE HEADLY MUSIC BY ALAN SILVESTRI PRODUCED BY MARY McLAGLEN

BASED ON THE CHARACTERS CREATED BY NAT HIKEN WRITTEN BY ANDY BECKMAN PRODUCED BY BRIAN GRAZER DIRECTED BY JONATHAN LYNN

IMAGINE PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED SOME MATERIAL MAY NOT BE SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN SPECIAL VISUAL EFFECTS BY DIGITAL DOMAIN A UNIVERSAL PICTURE UNIVERSAL

COMING SOON

WANTED

The Collegian is taking applications for:

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.

If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Pete or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement

REWARD Great resume builder! Great pay!

Student Affairs Special Services and Undergraduate Registrar

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR SENIORS COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM LISTINGS

The listing of seniors in the Undergraduate Commencement Program book represents an unofficial listing of degree candidates based on information provided by the Registrar's office.

To ensure that the list is as accurate as possible, your eligibility and major must be on record with the Undergraduate Registrar not later than Friday, March 22. Because of printing deadlines, changes made after that date are unlikely to be included in the Program. However, if you are otherwise eligible to graduate, graduation status is not affected by the absence of a listing.

If there was an error in the recent mailing from the Registrar's Office concerning your diploma name and/or graduation date, and you have not corrected it, please immediately see a member of the "Senior Staff", Undergraduate Registrar, 207 Whitmore.

If you did not receive the mailing and are expecting to have all degree requirements completed by the May graduation date, or by September 1, please also contact the "Senior Staff".

If you did not receive the Undergraduate Commencement information brochure mailed in February, copies are available at the Visitors Center.

Forbes to drop out, support Dole

By Richard Keil
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trounced by Bob Dole in the latest series of primaries, Steve Forbes decided today to abandon the Republican presidential race and throw his support to GOP front-runner Bob Dole, campaign aides said.

Forbes planned a Thursday afternoon withdrawal announcement in Washington, said campaign manager Bill Dal Col. A senior Forbes aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Forbes would endorse Dole and pledge his help in defeating President Clinton in the fall.

Dal Col said one reason Forbes put off the formal announcement for a day was so that his family could join him.

Forbes had vowed as recently as this morning to stay in the race through next Tuesday's Midwestern primaries.

But after spending much of the day closeted in a Washington hotel room with advisers, Forbes accepted their judgment that the chances for a victory in Illinois, Ohio, Michigan or Wisconsin were bleak, given Dole's big lead.

Given that, Forbes began considering quitting sooner and contacted several associates outside his senior campaign staff before making his decision, sources said.

Forbes' decision came after the euphoria of winning the Delaware and Arizona primaries evaporated in the face of a string of resounding defeats.

Since Arizona, Forbes has not spent much money on television advertising, a sign to campaign watchers that he had reached the limit of how deep he was willing to dig into his personal fortune to finance his campaign.

Overall, Forbes spent more than $25 million, nearly all his own money, to earn 901,000 votes during the primary season — 16 percent of those cast, putting him third behind Dole and Pat Buchanan.

His centerpiece issue was the flat tax — a pure 17 percent tax on income that would not tax investment income and would eliminate the popular deductions for mortgage interest and gifts to charity.

Forbes stubbornly, defiantly defended his plan in the face of stiff criticism from rivals who said it would allow the rich to keep millions from taxation while removing deductions treasured by the middle class.

Forbes said his approach was the only way to end the "legalized corruption" of politicians using the tax code to award contributors with loopholes. He also sold it as the way to dismantle the Internal Revenue Service, playing to the anti-government sentiments of many GOP primary voters.

Even after it became clear Dole was the presumptive nominee, Forbes had insisted that he would stay in the race to push his pro-growth message and flat-tax prescription.

"It's important to get the issues before the voters," the publishing heir said just one day before pulling the plug on his campaign.

After Forbes' Arizona win, the campaign shifted to South Carolina, where Dole's big win put the Senate majority leader back in the driver's seat. Forbes tried to slow Dole in New York by winning the eleventh-hour endorsement of former Housing Secretary Jack Kemp.

But the move backfired.

Dole went on to win New York easily, sweeping all 93 delegates.

And Kemp soon had the Forbes campaign mired in turmoil, after he talked publicly of being willing to broker peace between Forbes and Dole.

Forbes repudiated his longtime friend's remarks, but the controversy overshadowed Forbes' last ditch effort to revive his campaign with a strong showing in Florida.

Forbes had hoped the tax benefits the flat tax affords to the elderly — Social Security income would not be taxed under his plan — would win him converts in Florida as it did in Arizona. But Forbes got just 20 percent of the vote in placing a distant second to Dole.

EMILY BIRT / COLLEGIAN

Spring Cleaning

In anticipation of the long-awaited spring, Peter Patnaude of UMass Grounds Services pruned a crabtree outside of Leach residential area to make room for more growth.

Is Your Smoke Detector Working?

■ SGA

continued from page 1

rials to the University Community.

While the first motion specifically cites fraternities in relation to sexual violence, Shackford said that she did not intend to single-handily blame that particular community. "I targeted the entire University as a whole."

Jason Rose, the President of the Interfraternity Council, issued a statement at the meeting, in which he said that the Greek community is working hard to address these issues and should not be isolated disproportionally as the source of the problem.

Fraternities, Rose said, "will not tolerate or condone any form of sexually abusive behavior on the part of its members, whether physical, mental or emotional.

"Personally, I'm in support of the motions," said Rose, who emphasized that dealing with ways to reduce sexual abuse has become a primary goal of the body which he presides over.

"The problem fundamentally is that there is a lack of communication with people on this issue," said Rose.

Both Filman and Rose expressed interest in fostering a dialogue which will have beneficial effects on the problem of rape and incidents of violence within fraternities. Rose cited the work of the Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol Committee as a step forward within the larger spectrum of issues now facing fraternities.

The committee is seeking to prevent the consumption of alcohol by those under the age of 21 at their sponsored events, according to Rose. In addition, they are considering proposals to step up the level and effectiveness of security during Greek social gatherings.

In other matters, the Senate unanimously passed a motion which endorsed the 'Free our Fee' Coalitions proposal formulated in conjunction with Administration officials to restructure the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF).

Chancellor David K. Scott has 20 days to reply to the Senate. If approved, the plan would pour approximately $525,000 into the trust over a four year period.

Speaker of the Senate Dan Castellano said that he anticipates Scott to accept the proposal as is, considering Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson played a integral part in the negotiations with students.

"For the Chancellor to reject this plan would be a vote of no confidence in Vice-Chancellor Robinson," said Castellano.

■ Shabazz

continued from page 1

offspring to be educated and be able to get jobs and to live as human beings."

Shabazz said that Malcolm X helped to solidify and clarify things that people did not want to deal with. She said that for members of the African diaspora, Malcolm's message spoke of just being and loving yourself.

"Loving yourself is pretty simplistic, but when you understand how people were trying to be something else, and how hard people were trying to get other people to like them, rather than to develop their own qualities," Shabazz said.

Shabazz said that for white people, Malcolm X was shocking, but he brought out their insecurities.

"When he said black is beautiful, they were intimidated and frightened, thinking that that was a message of hate, but it was only a message that made people believe in themselves," she said. "Malcolm changed the thinking of the world. Very seldom something is discussed or said that he did not deal with. Had there not been a Malcolm X there would never have been a Martin Luther King."

Shabazz said that young people today have allowed the discussion and the creation of artificial crisis to prevent them from developing themselves to their highest potential

"There is plenty of money out there, there are plenty of resources, and here we are over here fighting about what color you are and why you cannot go here or there," she said. "[The youth need to] understand that the world is their stage, not the campus of umass, or not the street in this town or that town, but the world is their stage."

■ Meese

continued from page 1

On the topic of the Honorable Minister Farrakhan, the current leader of the Nation of Islam, Meese said that he felt actions such as the Million Man March were positive events.

Meese was critical of the alleged tactics of the federal bodies during the '60s, specifically the use of intelligence information obtained by the COINTELPRO to monitor "internal dissidents" such as the Black Panthers, CPUSA and Malcolm X. He said that he did not support government agencies abusing the rights of citizens by the use of intelligence information. Meese added that he did not know if such tactics were used then or at the present time.

Meese questioned the possible civil-rights violations upon the passage of the Omnibus Anti-Terrorism legislation, which allows the Secretary of State to arbitrarily designate any group as illegal.

"I have real concerns about the so-called Anti-Terrorism legislation," he said.

Also, Meese criticized the legislation as obsolete given the end of the Cold War.

Addressing the possibility of Communists returning to power in Russia, Meese, a member of the Reagan administration during the cold-war, admitted that Communism "was returning to Russia" but "under different auspices and not under the authoritarian structure of the communists."

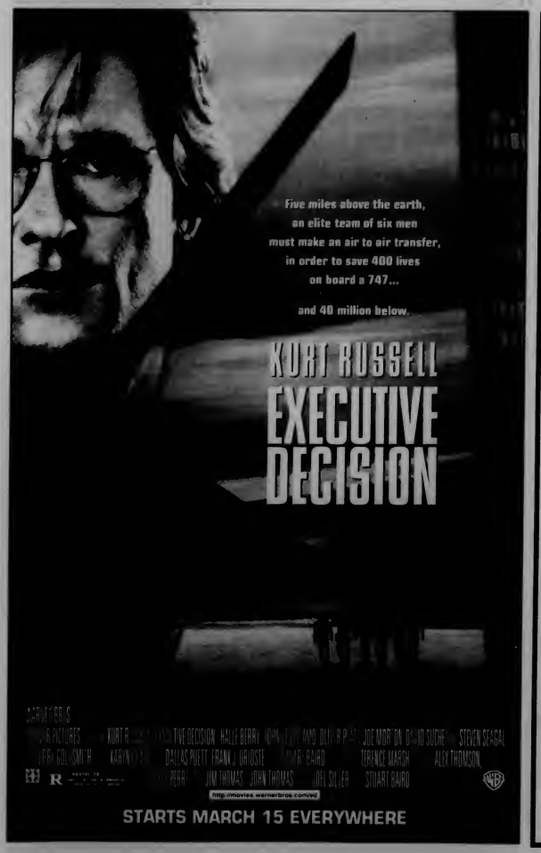
Meese said the United States policy of supporting both Iran and Iraq during the Iran-Iraq war did not favor either side.

"Our strategy was to end the war not to prolong it," he said. "It was our desire not to have Iran win a victory over Iraq. It was preferable to bring an end to the war with neither side winning."

Oh No! , I wouldn't give up my llama short up for all the clams in the litto veinous sea-ele littered seam. Hay Hay! the my truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! ##$!* the ;%&##$*! CLAMS!!

Collegian

Look... It's still all the same to the clam



Five miles above the earth,
an elite team of six men must make an air to air transfer, in order to save 400 lives
on board a 747...
and 40 million below.
KURT RUSSELL
EXECUTIVE DECISION
STARTS MARCH 15 EVERYWHERE

Since 1865

Hamm's BEER

UMass Fans . . . Bring The Bear Into Play!

Hamm's BEER

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphries-brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Olivera Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Ann Paradiso News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Linda Roth Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas I. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1944. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Chugging along

Henry J. Brier

Not entirely unlike the legendary and fabled "little engine that could," the Campus Center/Student Union Commission (CC/SUC) keeps chugging along these days, despite the fact that this once flourishing and prosperous student governance body is currently sustained by five members.

The mission of the CC/SUC, according to its vending officer and facilities officer (note: these two individuals account for 40 percent of the total force) is to represent the students' voice in regards to political decisions and formative policies that pertain to both — yes, you guessed it — our very own Campus Center and Student Union.

Both the vending officer, who oversees tables on the Campus Center concourse, and the facilities officer, who streamlines the building resources, looked as if they had been gutted after they were asked about two weeks ago how the Commission was operating.

Their long faces were perhaps due to the fact that, contrary to spring of 1995, the Commission currently enjoys "no publicity," according to the Commission chair.

The food services officer manages such entities as the Campus Center Hotel, the University Store and other Auxiliary Services subsets. The fifth member holds no position within the Commission, yet he consistently appears. Also, rumors abound that he holds high political aspirations.

Consequently, this means that five people now provide the answers to the administration on the behalf of some 23,000 apathetic students.

Gone are the days when upwards of 20 withstanding members would consistently trickle into the meetings on Thursday nights to voice their opinions. In the small room where they met on the eighth floor of the Campus Center that spring, there was heated competition for seating.

But not anymore, perhaps also because their meetings are no longer catered with tea, coffee and assorted cookies.

They think they can, they think they can...

Graduate students are welcome, and have served, on the Commission. The most outspoken (read: long-winded) graduate student is currently immersed in a completely full schedule; thus, he cannot spare the time.

His point of departure on the Commission was to assert for what was best for the graduate students and the graduate students only. He would open his mouth wide, say a whole lot and convey next to nothing.

The big issue that the Commission deals with is the Registered Student Organization (RSO) office space allocation procedure, where both undergraduate and graduate student groups apply (read: implore) the Commission for office space in the buildings where they attempt to meet their purposes.

Last year, as a result of some of the CC/SUC machine's actions (read: bureaucracy), different RSOs, such as the Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC), were displaced and handed the butt-end of the stick.

The CRC (read: pot smokers) really got the Commission moving when they lit a fire under the Commission (no pun intended) by browbeating and allegedly threatening to sue them for office space, according to chair.

The director of the Campus Center, who was one of the only University staff members who sat in on meetings, will be stepping down at the end of this month, according to the chair. A replacement administrator will take over the reigns, perhaps with their own personal and private scheme for the buildings.

If Commission membership continues to suffer and dwindle, they run the risk of being dismantled and eliminated.

The chair assumes some of the responsibility as the Commission power-player, yet he also believes that the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) bear some of the burden as they not only created the Commission but they also are responsible for its actions, and they appoint Commission members.

Evidently, in this last vein, the GSS and the SGA have not been very busy.

Anyone out there interested in partaking in the CC/SUC dialogue and decision making, you are in luck. Today being Thursday, they are meeting tonight. The time and exact place can be checked at the Campus Center information table.

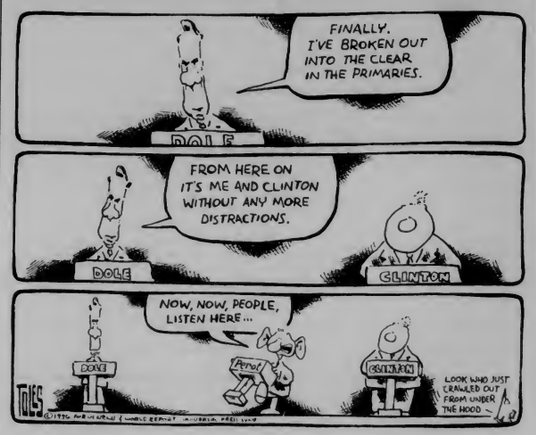
Do not worry about competition for seating, and do not expect to be served sweets and caffeine, but pride upon the fact that you are helping with formative decisions in regards to this campus' busiest and most active buildings.

By the way, the little engine, which succeeded, is legendary and fabled.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.



Working out the winter blahs

Andrew Bryce

My thoughts are juxtaposed. My feelings are truly disheveled. I plan to speak my mind on various topics, and hope you will bear with me. And if you don't, it's not the first time I've talked to myself.

• I started working out again.

Stop laughing for a second and let me speak. It wasn't something I had planned because, after all, why would I purposely make time to exercise as well as plan on eating right? That would almost make too much sense and solve too many inhibitions of mine. It would actually show a whole lot of discipline, a thing that's foreign to my usual health and fitness plan.

Something just took over my whole body, carted it over to a nearby fitness center (which will remain nameless due to the fact that I don't think they want me, of all people, as their poster boy) in my '81 Olds (which is still running, wise-ass) and sat me down on a stationary bike. I pumped my legs until sweat began to spew out from all pores on my body, then realizing I could actually get into it.

But I know this feeling. I'm familiar with it. Yes, it's the one that starts off with a bang and ends with a thud. It's a time of working out hard, before a skipped day turns into skipped days. That three month membership used up in a two week lifting period before a two month sabbatical takes place.

I haven't been the last few days. Here we go again.

• Speaking of the gym, if I do stay with it for a long while, don't be surprised to see T. Andrew Bodybuilding attire come to a fitness center near you.

• This past weekend, I spent one afternoon thawing out my hands after trying to find my car underneath a snow drift in the driveway for about 45 minutes. The frost seemingly bit my hand, chewed on it, dropped it back in the snow and continued to gnaw on it soon after. My nose was in eternal- running mode. My sneaker has a hole in the toe part, so a clump of snow was collected to accompany my foot. This weather has got to stop.

Oh, no it doesn't. I'm going away on spring break. Never mind.

• How 'bout that alternate juror in the Whitewater fraud trial dressing up in Star Trek garb each day? Yeah, I'm also wondering what the dismissed jurors were wearing.

• Endangered species — I have a sick child to take care of.

Enough already.

• I stood in the bar, looking around in borderline disgust. Seeing all of these students drinking at a bar on a Tuesday night, instead of being at home doing school work.

I shook my head and took a sip of my beer.

• I swear, my freshman year of college wasn't college. Like in some high school systems where ninth graders go to school with seventh and eighth graders, it seems like my first year here was spent at a middle school. It just seems like so long ago. Many of the people I hung out with back then have been in the workforce for three years already.

• The tires on my '81 Olds are so bald, Rugaine couldn't even help them.

• I have a reminder on the message board at my house that reads — "Opening other people's mail is a federal offense." My senior photo proofs are due any day now, and my housemate is getting psyched up about seeing them. He got his a couple of weeks back, and not thinking, I proceeded to hack on every flaw I felt there was in his pictures. So, he is eagerly awaiting my proofs.

They are going to be God-awful. I guess I shouldn't have gone uptown the night before taking them.

• Only three more days until I see my girlfriend who I haven't seen in some six months. Thank heavens.

• My housemate is addicted to scratch tickets and burritos. I'm trying to figure out which is worse.

• One of the great things about the NCAA Tournament is listening to the stools who talk about the brackets as if they know what the hell they're talking about.

Like me.

• Kerri H. and Beeg are not Collegian columnists.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Bringing the bombings closer to home

Henry J. Brier

I am writing to discuss the recent bombings that have ravaged the State of Israel. The human element of these attacks are sometimes lost and people may not realize that the victims were real people, and in some respects, just like us.

Many people our age perished in these attacks. The person closest to Amherst who was killed was Matthew Eisenfeld a 25 year old Hartford resident who was studying at the Jewish Theological Seminary in Israel. He graduated from Yale University in 1993 and was very excited at the prospect of going to Israel to study to become a Rabbi. He was looking forward to Passover because his family was going to spend the holiday in the Holy Land. He was a former counselor and Frisbee coach at Camp Ramah in the Berkshires, and was in a very serious relationship with Sarah Duker, also killed in the attack. He was on his way to visit Jordan when the bomb went off.

Sarah Duker was an American student from Teaneck, New Jersey who graduated Summa Cum Laude from Barnard College in 1995. She worked in a lab at Hebrew University and was excited to be living out her dream of studying medicine and living in Israel. She had also spent time studying at Pardes institute in Jerusalem, and was extremely involved in the Soviet Jewery movement. Her high school yearbook quote is a lyric by an Israeli singer, Noam Shemer: "Everybody travels down the road to its end, but I am walking alone." She was on the bus with Matti Eisenfeld when the bomb exploded.

These were young people with hopes and dreams whose lives were cut short because of senseless hatred. Instead of these four people, any student from UMass who has studied in Israel could have been on that bus when it exploded. The message of this story is that we must work to end the cycle of violence in the Middle East.

Alan Weinfeld

Young Israelis were also killed in the assaults. Elyah Ninyatyun, who was 18 years old, emigrated from Leningrad with his mother five years ago. When his mother, Amilyah Nimyatyun heard the news of her only son's death she said, "I've lost my only purpose for living."

Navon Shabu was considered one of the finest instructors in the Bnai Akivah movement and had volunteered to serve in a combat intelligence unit in the army. He had lost his father when he was 13. Navon Shabu was on his way to work when the bomb was ignited.

These were young people with hopes and dreams whose lives were cut short because of senseless hatred. Instead of these four people, any student from UMass who has studied in Israel could have been on that bus when it exploded. The message of this story is that we must work to end the cycle of violence in the Middle East.

We cannot let the aspirations of the Israeli and Arab people turn into bloodshed and tears. After these attacks, I hope that the representatives who come together at the peace table in Israel are genuinely committed to peace.

Yassir Arafat has a moral obligation to his people and to the Israeli people to make sincere efforts for peace and stop the bloodshed that has destroyed civilized life in Israel in the last few weeks.

Alan Weinfeld is a UMass student.

Two if by sea

David Chan

The e-mail message from my buddy, Will, was clear. "I'm scared, dude. Will anything happen when I go? Who knows what China is going to pull on Taiwan next?" He has a right to be scared. My long-time buddy, Will, is Taiwanese and he's planning to visit his homeland again this summer. All he intends to do is take a few fun classes, meet some people, and hang out all night in the city. He should also think about keeping his eyes on the western sky while he does that.

Last Friday, the People's Republic of China (PRC) launched three guided missiles within 30 miles of Taiwan's ports. On Saturday, it announced its live-ammunition war games in the strait. With Chinese missiles directed towards Taiwan, there is much reason for the Island's 21 million residents to be angry and scared. These "reckless military moves" as described by Secretary of State Warren Christopher, could eventually cause harm to the innocent people of Taiwan if continued. Although U.S. warships are covering the Taiwan Strait that separates the island from China, it seems as though China is still planning to continue its big-bully intimidation tactics. The scary thing is that thus far everything has only been a warning.

Because of the timing of these missile threats, it is no secret why the PRC is brewing trouble. March 23 will mark the first popular election of a head of state for the Chinese — and it's taking place in Taiwan. The PRC wants to intimidate Taiwanese voters and leaders, especially Taiwan President Lee Teng-hui, whom China has accused of preparing Taiwan for independence. Lee is not the only leader in this fight as there are opposition parties in Taiwan who are ready to "declare independence" if there should be an attack by the PRC.

If this situation sounds like something out of our old high school history books, it should. Remember reading about the American Revolution and the leaders who drafted The Declaration of Independence? Remember reading about how angry those Yankee Doodles were under British rule? Taiwan's situation is almost parallel. The point is, Taiwan has potential to be an independent country. It has its own dialect, its own armed forces, distinct borders and a globally competitive economy.

The recent threats have affected business in Taiwan as investors are nervous and its stock market has been unstable. Without actually attacking, the PRC has shown that it can cause damage to Taiwan's economy. But with the election less than two weeks away, enthusiasm is high. It is not surprising that the PRC has plans to further its coercion after March 23. China will make sure it will show its growing economic and political clout. Heeding to the protests of Taiwan would show weakness within the Chinese Communist Party.

Signs of weakness within the party are something Beijing officials would be looking to cover. Not too long ago in 1989, the Tiananmen massacre haunted China's officials as the world witnessed the militia's relentless crushing of the democratic protesters. If the 1.2 billion Chinese Mainlanders were to see Taiwan receive independence and establish democracy, Beijing officials may have to deal with a possible resurgence of revolutionaries. There's got to be some of them left.

The threatening actions taken by the PRC are only making relations worse. The missiles only show that China is hostile towards Taiwan. The PRC does not care about the damages done to the waters. The relish in the fears of Taiwan's residents. The feel it is a battle between them and the opposition leaders. These threats will only make the people resent China and ultimately severe whatever positive ties they may have. Beijing officials are acting out of desperation as they are scared of losing face. They are scared of losing their old wrinkled faces that were slapped by the leaders in Taiwan.

Pentagon officials are now wondering if China is making threats it can't keep, like a big barking dog with no bite. Probably not. They've rolled over people before and they will probably roll over them again. Maybe my buddy Will can be the next Paul Revere — but for Taiwan. "The Mainland is coming! The Mainland is coming!"

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

LOOK, KIM, BEFORE WE GO ANY FURTHER, I GOTTA ASK YOU -- YOU'RE NOT UNCOMFORTABLE WITH OUR AGE DIFFERENCE?
NOT AT ALL! WHY, WOULD I BE?
MIKE, I GREW UP IN A WORLD DOMINATED BY BOOMERS. YOUR CULTURE WAS INESCAPABLE AND LETTERMAN GAVE MY AGE GROUP THE TOOLS TO ASSIMILATE.
3-14
IT'S TRUE. I DIDN'T EXPERIENCE THE NUCLEAR FAMILY, DISCO AND 80'S TV FIRST-HAND, BUT BY THE TIME I WAS 15, I COULD REFER TO ALL OF THEM IN A HIP, KNOWING WAY.
AMAZING. I DIDN'T GO IRONIC UNTIL I WAS 30!
QUIZ ME ON GILLIGAN'S ISLAND." GO AHEAD. ASK ME ANYTHING!

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday, March 14, 1996

Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 95

The 68th Annual Academy Awards

This Year, with OSCAR Anything Goes...

BABE

SENSE & SENSIBILITY

APOLLO 13

THE POSTMAN (IL POSTINO)

BRAVEHEART

COURTESY SIDNEY BALDWIN

With such a variety of nominees, the Academy is leaving critics guessing

Laura Stock

What a refreshing change — an Academy Award ceremony that is virtually unpredictable. With Schindler's List and Forrest Gump being the obvious usurpers of the golden statuettes in recent years, Oscar night has become less than suspenseful lately. Not this year.

It is not just the variety and range of nominees that makes it difficult to guess who the winners will be, but the difference in the themes of each movie. Will the Academy take the moral highground and favor the historic and heroic Braveheart, the classy adaptation of Jane Austen's Sense and Sensibility or the barnyard family film Babe? Or will films like Leaving Las Vegas and Dead Man Walking with more daring topics get their kudos on the big night?

One could surmise from the Gump sweep of '94 that the Academy favors the conservative mode. Another minor influence could be the fact that it is an election year, and the Republicans are in the spotlight.

None of this year's grittiest movies made the Best Picture category — Apollo 13 holds a spot that either Leaving Las Vegas or Dead Man Walking should occupy, which indicates a hesitance towards the risqué.

This lack of predictability makes for a healthy anticipation towards Oscar night, which will undoubtedly have both viewers and nominees on the edge of their seats. It just may turnout that the event may be more entertaining to watch than some of the movies in contention.

As with any mystery, there must be an attempt to solve it. Therefore, with some knowledge, some intuition and some outright guessing, I have compiled my list of Oscar "could- be's" for next Monday night. Just remember, there are no safe bets in this race.

BEST PICTURE: Sense and Sensibility

I was one of the most emphatic Braveheart supporters until December, when Sense and Sensibility was released.

This lush period piece about the beautiful and whimsical Dashwood sisters trying to find love and propriety in marriage proved once again that Jane Austen novels have the stuff great movies are made of. Emma Thompson and Kate Winslet (both individually nominated) create energy and emotion, wrapped up in a delightful plot, tied with a dainty lace bow. An Oscar for this drama makes sense.

Braveheart garnered 10 nominations, and will not come close to being slighted. If Braveheart wins several other categories though, it helps Sense get votes for Best Picture. Apollo 13 would have been a contender (it's got that good ole' Tom Hanks and apple pie Americana element), but it the astronauts in space plot pales in comparison to the stories of its category mates.

Il Postino (The Postman) received its award by obtaining a nomination — the first foreign language nomination since Cries and Whispers in 1973. The Italian film about an insignificant postman becoming friends with an exiled Chilean poet was enjoyable, but not astounding.

A trophy for Babe would create a wonderful stir, but unfortunately the ignoramuses who have never seen the touching film have propelled the "oh, the talking pig movie" attitude so far, it will have a hard time winning. The computer-enhanced Babe is one of those movies that if you give it a chance, you will love it. The nomination was well deserved.

BEST DIRECTOR: Mel Gibson

Braveheart's big award will come in the form of a trophy for the directorial talents of Mel Gibson. He didn't get

Turn to OSCARS, page 8

Oscar hopeful still displays sense

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Kate Winslet's ripe impetuosity in Sense and Sensibility has made the young actress both an Academy Award nominee and a star.

As for the two traits of the title, she knows which one suits her. "I'm sensibility; I am, I am," Winslet said over lunch in north London, talking animatedly while she ate a green salad and smoked Marlboro Lights.

"My fundamental me, my real me, is much more sensibility," she said. "Otherwise, actually, why am I acting in all honesty? There's an element in all actors of getting to the root of certain emotions, digging around inside your soul and chucking things out."

Conversation tumbles out of the 20-year-old actress with an endearing fervor, unrestrained by caution or calculation, her open-faced enthusiasm — those lips! those eyes! — even more engaging face to face than on screen.

"I still don't understand why I have this thing about wanting to act so much. But it was always my drive, and if I say I'm going to do something, I do it. I am so incredibly stubborn."

Others use words like "radiant" and "passionate" to describe a far livelier screen presence than one sometimes gets from the reigning English rose.

Indeed, England hasn't seen anything like it since Julia Ormond forsook Hackney in east London for the vagaries of Hollywood, even if no single Ormond performance has yet to generate the buzz of Winslet's Marianne.

In her first film, Heavenly Creatures, Winslet drew audiences into the erotic fantasy-turned-murderous reality of an English teen-ager in '50s New Zealand. Based on a true story, the film was a critical success and got a 1995 Oscar nomination for best adapted screenplay.

The emotions in Sense and Sensibility — based on Jane Austen's first novel — are less lethal, if no less volatile. Playing the lovesick Marianne, middle sister of the financially squeezed Dashwood clan, Winslet fiercely embraces the dictates of the heart against the "prudence and honor and duty" extolled by older sister Elinor (Emma Thompson).

Kate Winslet

The movie has been the most honored to date of a spate of Austen adaptations for different media — film, TV, even the stage — that shows no sign of letting up.

The recipient already of the Golden Globe award for best drama, Sense and Sensibility is up for seven Oscars on March 25, including best film, best actress and adapted screenplay (both for Thompson) and Winslet's own mention. (Last month, the actress won the same award from the Screen Actors Guild.)

Winslet was talking at the end of a busy week in which she first flew to Los Angeles to test for a film about the Titanic to be directed by James Cameron (The Terminator). One of the high points of the trip? Eating Caesar Salad: "It's so good in California." She returned to London to continue filming her Ophelia in Kenneth Branagh's new screen version of Hamlet. Branagh is separated in real life from Thompson, Winslet's screen sister.

Uppermost in her mind this particular lunch were three grainy photos in The News of the World, Britain's top-selling Sunday tabloid, showing her kissing actor Rufus Sewell, who has a tiny part in Hamlet.

"When this stuff happens, it kind of makes your whole substance get thrown out the window," says Winslet, who, after several reads, stuffs the offending newspaper in her bag.

"Just going downstairs to use the bathroom and looking at myself in the mirror, you have to keep going. This is me; you're working at the moment and you're loving your work and you love acting and you know you do, and this is what it's about." The actress acknowledges she is at that point when anonymity starts to vanish. The restaurant staff offer proof of that, snapping into action to find a table once she walks in.

"It's not like it changes my behavior or anything like that," said Winslet, refusing either to be resentful of the recognition or to form some kind of attitude. "It's better to just ignore it and be who you are."

Winslet's identity seems rooted in growing up in a very strong, loving, secure environment. She is the second of four children born in Reading, west of London, to an actor-father for whom, Winslet says, "things never really completely kicked off." Her mother is a qualified nanny and older sister Anna, 23, is also an actress. Theater school in neighboring Maidenhead led to a Sugar Puffs commercial, a short-lived sitcom called "Get Back," and her role in Heavenly Creatures, which in turn landed Winslet a Hollywood agent — and Sense and Sensibility.

Viewers turn to stars for fashion

Isaac Mizrahi's creations score big with haute celebrities

COURTESY MARIO TESTINO

Isaac Mizrahi is one of the hottest Oscar night designers

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Last year the Oscars celebrated the return to glamour with simple yet chic designs by Vera Wang and Calvin Klein. Uma Thurman stunned the crowd with a lavender sheath and white chiffon stole. Winona Ryder wore a white beaded floor-length creation that bespoke the days of cocktail parties, operas and grand galas. Even host David Letterman managed to look suave in his tux.

Viewers of this year's pre-Oscar festivities may be in for a bit of a shock this year as rumors have hinted that this year's haute designer is none other than Isaac Mizrahi.

Maybe this is due to his film/documentary, Unzipped, or maybe it's because he has been hailed as one of the designers of the year. Mizrahi aired his first collection last year to less than rave reviews. In fact, it got such poor ratings that the creator scraped the entire deal and started again from scratch.

Persistence pays off as his spring collection dotted with soft pastels and wild splashes of reds and oranges earned him screaming accolades and hundreds of admirers both here and abroad. Madonna (who started off with Gaultier and then moved to Gucci) has been sighted in several Mizrahi concoctions. Supermodels Elle, Cindy and Christy have also been popular purchasers.

Mizrahi plays with notions and adds his own personal flair that is distinct and original. He has a way with colors, textures and shapes that accent the body and highlight the sensual. Mizrahi is anything but conservative which is why his being such a prominent Oscar designer comes as a shock. Perhaps with such controversial films like Leaving Las Vegas up for awards, Hollywood's finest has decided to take a chance on originality combining sophistication with neo-class — a definite Mizrahi trademark.

Of course there will always be the smattering of good taste and "old guard" staples like Lauren, Klein and Gucci. Oscar night just wouldn't be the same without Sharon Stone's impeccable taste, Mira Sorvino's quiet class or any other host of topnotch dressers, but it would be nice to change this up a bit and go for a little glitter without stepping into the "K-Mart special" area.

America and, indeed, the world counts on movie stars to set the trends and carry a certain mystique, and what better way to celebrate the merging and influence of fashion and film than at the Oscars? In fact it would be almost disappointing to see Hollywood's finest dressed in anything less than their very (and undoubtedly expensive) best.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Thursday Night Jams
D.J. Trigueño
Free Admission
Thursday March 28th 9:30pm-1:00am
At The Hatch
Male and female Go-Go dancers will teach you how to dance the Latin way
This performance is made possible by:
DAILY COLLEGIAN Classifieds
SEF, a grant from the Cultural Enrichment Fund, Food Services, and a grant from Greek Affairs.

Minuteman Volkswagen
Ask For First Time College Program!
Patricia Dolan
Sales Representative
TEL. 617-275-8000
39 North Road
Bedford, Mass. 01730

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

If You Are Driving Around With A Dirty Car...CUT it Out!
Save $5.50
Express Wash Reg. Price $4.50
Blue Coral Polish Reg. Price $4.00
Undercarriage Wash Reg. Price $1.50
Rust Inhibitor Reg. Price $1.50
Spot Free Finish Reg. Price $1.50
Total Reg. Price $13.00
Discount Coupon -$5.50
You Pay Only $7.50
Locations- F.L. Roberts
Amherst/Hadley 458 Russell next to BP
Chicopee 599 Montgomery St
Easthampton 194 Northampton St
East Longmeadow 141 North St
Ludlow 495 Center St
Springfield 1385 Boston Rd
Springfield 599 St. James St
Springfield 93 West Broad St
Westfield 90 South Maple St
West SPFLD. 518 Memorial Ave
West SPFLD 1085 Westfield St
West SPFLD. 908 Riverdale St
Not valid with any other coupons
Car Wash

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits and knowledgeable, professional service
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA
586-5302

NO BLARNEY ABOUT IT! WE'VE GOT THE BEST DEALS AROUND!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
GUINNESS STOUT 6 PK BOTTLE $6.49 + DEP
HARP LAGER CASE 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $18.49 + DEP
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED & BROWN ALE CASE OF 24-12 OZ BOTTLES SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 FINAL COST $11.99 + DEP
CATAMOUNT ALL FLAVORS 6 PK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
HEINEKEN & AMSTEL LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK BOTTLES $18.99 + DEP
Miller HIGH LIFE. 30 PACK 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.79 + DEP
O'DOUL'S NON-ALCOHOLIC CASE OF 2-12 PK CANS $12.49 + DEP
½ KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT., MICHELOB DARK, LITE, ICE HOUSE, RED DOG MILLER BEER $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
CARMEN VINEYARD'S IMPORTED FROM CHILE CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, SAUVIGNON BLANC 750 ML $4.99
FRANZIA 5 LT BAG IN A BOX CHABLIS, BLUSH, BURGUNDY, WHITE GRENACHE, CHENIN BLANC, FRENCH COLOMBARD, RHINE, CHILLABLE RED $6.99
CONCHA Y'TORO ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $4.99
KENDALL JACKSON SAUVIGNON BLANC 750ML $6.99
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ML $3.99
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $9.99
JACK DANIELS COUNTRY COCKTAILS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK $3.49
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $13.49
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L $14.49
BAILEY'S IRISH CREAM REGULAR & LIGHT 750ML $14.99
JAMESON IRISH WHISKEY 750 ML $13.99
BUSHMILL'S IRISH WHISKEY 750ML $14.49
JIM BEAM 1.75L $13.49
BURNETT'S GIN 1.75 $10.49
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/14/96 THRU WEDS. 3/20/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Celebrate St. Patty's Day Early with a New England Boiled Luncheon at the Bluewall
Today
11:30am-1:30pm

Cowboy Junkies lay it all down in latest release

Altan uses Irish roots; Bouncing Souls revive old--school punk with 'Maniacal Laughter'

COWBOY JUNKIES
Lay It Down
Geffen

It may seem redundant to call a Cowboy Junkies album "sparse," but with their latest release, Lay It Down, the Junkies have managed to strip down to an even more elemental sound, eschewing the diversity of arrangement and instrumentation used on their two previous studio releases, Pale Sun, Crescent Moon and Black Eyed Man.

Lay It Down's intensity is apparent right from the opening track — hushed electric guitar, low Moe Tucker style drums and the infinitely beautiful voice of Margo Timmins singing, "One foot stands before the crib, the other by the casket." The Cowboy Junkies are one of rock 'n roll's most resourceful bands — turning brilliant simplicity into immense emotional expression and gorgeous melody. Michael Timmins stands as a true heir to the songwriting throne of Townes Van Zandt, Gram Parsons and Butch Hancock — he works his way inside the hearts and souls of his characters, painting sad portraits that ring true in the equally sad whisper of singer Margo Timmins. The songwriting has solidified greatly on this album, with Timmins toning down the overuse of country and folk imagery he relied on so heavily in the past. The songs are more impressionistic — less tangible stories than relatable emotional experiences, although they succeed as both.

The rest of the band, however, is not to be ignored. The rhythm section of Peter Timmins and Alan Anton on drums and bass, respectively, has tightened up noticeably over the years, and they anchor the album with almost lyrical grace. At times, in fact, there is little else musically — guitar solos are often backed only by the accompaniment of Anton's fluid bass and Timmins' subtle drumming. Michael steps back up to the lead guitar this time around, and he, too, has developed into a guitar player of great depth and individual voice — he's on the same emotional plane as Neil Young and R.E.M.'s Peter Buck.

The intimate production (courtesy of John Keane) frames perfectly the Junkies hushed, country stylings — occasional steel guitar and strings sketch out the spooky and restrained power of the songs. Every instrumental arrangement is carefully executed; there is a true sense of musical craftsmanship in the album, a sense of meaning and honesty in every note. Even at its' most sparse, the album is rich with subtle emotion and layered meaning. Feedback moans gently underneath, and the smoky, sultry whisper of guitars and vocals weave in and out of the haunting melodies like ghosts. A brilliant, sexy, sad and spooky album — another masterpiece from the Cowboy Junkies that has them joining the ranks alongside the likes of Los Lobos and Alejandro Escovedo as great interpreters of American musical culture, bringing it alive and kicking into the '90s. A (Bradley Skaught)

BOUNCING SOULS
Maniacal Laughter
B.Y.O.

Yeah boy! One hundred percent two finger in the air punk rock! Remember when punk wasn't about fashion? When punk wasn't on MTV? When jocks didn't mosh at concerts? When it was uncool to be punk? The Bouncing Souls do.

Maniacal Laughter starts off with "Lamar Vannay," which incorporates an "ohh ahh" chorus (a la 7 Seconds) with an "oi oi oi" chorus. Songs like "No Rules" and "All of this Nothing" show off the Souls' hardcore side.

The band also has a sense of humor as demonstrated on "The BMX Song" boasting the lyrics, "We'll build a jump, do some tricks and try to impress some chicks then we'll put on some cool dark shades and run over all the dorks with rollerblades." They even cover the immortal Johnny Cash's "Born To Lose."

Unfortunately many of the songs on this album have been previously released on various 7-inch singles. The tune "The Ballad Of Johnny X" has already been released countless times. But most fans don't care since it is a great song.

This is truly a great punk rock album. It's full of energy and doesn't let up for a second. Plus you can sing along to every song. Furthermore the Bouncing Souls write intelligent lyrics without sounding trite or overplayed. So listen up all you wanna-be punks bands such as Waterdog — the Bouncing Souls bring back punk back the way it was meant to be: Fast and in-your-face. A- (Adam Dlugacz)

ALTAN
Blackwater
Virgin

The sounds of fiddles, tin whistles and accordions will be the life of many a party this weekend. St. Patrick's Day, which is this Sunday, is often the one day a year where the traditional Irish music scene receives a bit of attention. U2, Sinead O'Connor and the Cranberries own the other 364 days so it is only fair to allow the Chieftains and the Dublin City Ramblers a day of their own.

While still an unknown act outside of Europe, Altan is amongst the most talented and intriguing of the new breed of Irish bands. The opening two tracks, "Johnny Boyle's/ King of the Pipers" and "Dark Haired Lass/ Biddy From Muckross" are foot stomping instrumentals that vividly capture the deep roots of Irish music. While these upbeat numbers may serve as perfect pub music, the slower, more sensual songs like "Stor a Stor Ghra" engross the listener with breathy and moving undertones a la Enya.

The mixture of traditional Irish melodies, along side new age-ish songs sung in Gaelic, is a daring move that captures the whole essence of Irish music better than any release in recent memory. Imagine the best aspects of the Chieftains, Cranberries, Pogues and Enya all thrown together and you may begin to grasp the beauty and depth of Blackwater. A- (Mike Burke)

MARION
This World and Body
London

Imagine Gaz Coombes, the voice of the ace British pop band Supergrass, doing an imitation of Morrissey. Pretty scary, huh? Well all joking aside, that pretty much sums up the vocal talent of Jamie Harding, frontman of Marion. Now let the rest of the band steal a couple hackneyed guitar riffs from the Buzzcocks and Joy Division for every song, all sounding uncannily the same. Not a great combination.

Hailing from Manchester, England, home to many of the most glorified British acts — Oasis, Stone Roses, Happy Mondays and the Smiths — Marion is a weak successor to their forefathers.

"Sleep," the only song on the album that stands out, survives as a decent song due to a harmonic interlude which provides a pleasant alternative to Harding's melodramatic whine.

Unfortunately Marion will most likely enjoy the success of their British predecessors. In a recent interview with England's most prestigious music weekly, New Musical Express, Harding said, "We had a hard time with producers wanting to slow the songs down, and smooth them out, but we wanted the songs rough and raw." Well Jamie, a producer's job is to make songs more appealing — maybe you should have listened. D- (Marc Santo)

COURTESY GUZMAN

Margo Timmons

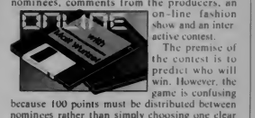
Web pages host Academy Award actors & news

In a little over a week, the Academy Awards will give Oscars to a deserving group of films and actors. But the hoopla of the event is no longer reserved for television and the press — it has found a home on-line.

The Envelope Please: An Interactive Guide to the Academy Awards at http://oscar2.guide.com

The Envelope Please is the official Academy Awards page, and as the name implies, it is interactive.

The page is full of information about the nomination and award process. It also includes lists of nominees, comments from the producers, an on-line fashion show and an interactive contest.



The premise of the contest is to predict who will win. However, the game is confusing because 100 points must be distributed between nominees rather than simply choosing one clear winner.

For any die hard film lover, this page is worth bookmarking.

The Academy Awards Protest Page at http://www.spectra.net/%7efunkinan/awards.html

Although the author says "this page was written with tongue firmly in place of cheek," it seems to be a very angry page over who was nominated.

This page is a firm argument against the nominees who the author feels were only nominated because they are popular. At the end of the page the author includes two lists of potential winners: those he hopes will win, and those he thinks will win. This page also gives readers the chance to submit their own votes for who they would like to see win.

CASINO at http://www.mca.com/universal_pictures/casino

This is a promotional page for Casino, the movie which helped Sharon Stone get nominated for best actress.

There is not much here to view. It includes a plot summary and character sketches of the three leading roles. The page includes Quicktime movie files to preview the film.

Most of the promotional pages for the nominated movies were deleted because the films are no longer in the theaters. However, there are too many pages dedicated to the actors who were nominated to possibly review.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Trax On Trax Off

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Specials . . .		For the Connoisseur . . .
New Miller Beer	$6.99 12-pack cans	Canadian Brewing Company	$4.99/six (Beaver Tail Ale, Black & Tan)
Bud Dry	$9.99 case bottles	Sea Dog (Blonde Brown) P.A.	$5.49/six
Rolling Rock 12-pack bottles	$6.99	Harpoon I.P.A.	$8.99 12-pack bottles
Boone's Wines 5 for	$9.99	Tanqueray Vodka 750 ml.	$12.99
Captain Morgan	$8.99 750ml	Jim Beam 750 ml.	$8.99
Cuervo Gold	$10.99 750ml	Half Keg Special Sam Adams Ale	$75.00

Good Luck to the Minutemen & Women on the road to the Final Four
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879
25 North Pleasant St.
(above McDonald's)
Apartment Rentals
CONGRATULATIONS!
Job Well Done

DANCE PARTY
18+
THURSDAY
March 29 LAVA
METRO
402 Pleasant St. Nohoo (413) 585-0686

Spring Breakin'.
Steve Madden
If you're gonna go out, ya gotta look good
Nine West
Free your toes, free your soul
Downtown Amherst

The CLADDAGH RING
The IRISH symbol of Love & Friendship
silverscape designs

Lighting, Sound Technicians & Seamstress
Riverside
• New England's Largest Amusement Park •
Equal Opportunity Employer
60 Positions Available
10a.m. to 2p.m.
SAT. MARCH 16th, 1996
Show Auditions
DANCERS • COMIC ACTORS • SINGER-DANCERS
Saturday, March 16th
Agawam, MA. Park Studios 1036 Suffield St.
Singers/Dancers 10am-2pm
Comic Actors & Specialty Performers 10am-1pm 1pm-2pm
DANCERS/SINGERS PREPARE UP-TEMPO & BALLAD BRING AUDIO OR SHEET MUSIC WITH PROPER KEY, CHOREOGRAPHER WILL TEACH DANCE ROUTINE. BRING PROPER CLOTHES. APPLICANTS MUST BE 16 OR OLDER - BRING PHOTO & RESUME - FOR MORE INFO CALL (413) 786-0790

■ Oscars

continued from page 5

an acting nod, and his competition is on a relative par in terms of popularity and experience.

Dead Man Walking's Tim Robbins is Gibson's toughest competitor, but the 13th century tale about triumphant Scottish warrior William Wallace is more upbeat than the death sentence. The fact that Gibson expertly crafted a film, starred in it and produced is sure to score him some brownie points.

Mike Figgis' Leaving Las Vegas also has a good shot, but it also has a macabre theme holding it back. Michael Radford's nomination for Il Postino and Chris Noonan's for Babe are polite considerations, but don't really pose a threat to blockbuster Braveheart.

BEST ACTRESS: Susan Sarandon

Susan Sarandon is a woman who has learned how to put on a happy face when another actress wins over her. No longer will she have to fake it. After four previous nominations, it is Sarandon's turn.

Nominated for the role of Sister Helen from Dead Man Walking, Sarandon should be poised behind the podium on Oscar night. Her spine-tingling portrayal of a nun trying to help a death row inmate in his last days of life is one of her best performances yet, and should propel her to the top of the list.

Sarandon does face some steep competition from Emma Thompson in Sense and Sensibility and Elizabeth Shue from Leaving Las Vegas, but neither performance is quite up to Sarandon's caliber. Meryl Streep's summertime performance in Bridges of Madison County, though wonderfully creative, is a movie too far forgotten to have enough strength behind it. Sharon Stone's performance in Casino as the alcoholic wife of Robert DeNiro is somewhat of a stretch for her, but not Oscar-worthy.

BEST ACTOR: Nicholas Cage

I'm hoping that Leaving Las Vegas will get its prize here, with an Oscar for Cage's harrowing portrayal of an alcoholic on a suicidal drinking binge who falls in love with a hooker. Personally, I was never a great fan of Cage, but Las Vegas changed my mindset. Ideally cast, a prize for Cage would be daring and deserved.

If the Academy has an ultra-conservative tendency, Richard Dreyfuss may get the prize for Mr. Holland's Opus. Anthony Hopkins' stony Richard Nixon was well praised, but Oliver Stone was not. Sean Penn was probably a bit too depressing in Dead Man Walking, and the only way Massimo Troisi will capture the category is with the sentimental vote (Troisi died just 12 hours after Il Postino's filming ended).

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS: Mira Sorvino

Mira Sorvino's charming hooker in Woody Allen's Mighty Aphrodite will probably beat Sense and Sensibility's Kate Winslet in a photo-finish. The two fresh faces are sure to be faves among Academy members.

Joan Allen did an excellent and chilling portrayal as Pat Nixon in Nixon, but again, that film won't be taking home any trophies. Mare Winningham was hardly acknowledged for her role in Georgia, and all I can say about Kathleen Quinlan's nomination for Jim Lovell's wife in Apollo 13 is — why?

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR: Kevin Spacey

If Spacey is snubbed this year, I will lose some faith in the Academy. His calculated persona as Verbal Kint in The Usual Suspects (and subsequent chilling role in Seven) should place him over Tim Roth in Rob Roy, Ed Harris in Apollo 13 and Brad Pitt in 12 Monkeys. James Cromwell's ability to interact (or just plain act) with an animatronic pig in Babe was acknowledged by the Academy, but is unlikely to be rewarded.

BEST ORIGINAL SCREENPLAY: Christopher McQuarrie

I'm hoping that The Usual Suspects' engrossing screenplay can beat out its big studio competition, which includes a potential win for Randall Wallace's Braveheart. Toy Story, though most captivating for its story, will get its rewards for animation. Nixon surprisingly made the list (I guess fabricating history takes a lot of hard work) and Mighty Aphrodite's screenplay was a let-down, even from Woody Allen.

BEST ADAPTED SCREENPLAY: Emma Thompson

Jane Austen fever hit hard this year, and Emma Thompson not only starred in the best adaptation, Sense and Sensibility, she adapted it too. Her nomination for screenplay marks the first for an actress, and it is highly likely she will triumph over Apollo 13, Babe and Il Postino. Thompson even has the edge over Leaving Las Vegas, based on a true story, in which the writer came to the selfsame demise as his alcoholic character.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $293
PARIS $179 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $254 $483
Roundtrip
TOKYO $762
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs, immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

PERFECT FOR THOSE WHO HAVE
plans for tonight.
And for losers who sit home alone and drink.
CIDER JACK HARD CIDER

Pearl Street Nightclub
THURSDAY MAR. 14
HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
THE VERVE PIPE
BABY JANE DOE
FRIDAY MAR 15
RETRO NIGHT
THE SCOFFLAWS
SATURDAY MAR 16
CLUB NIGHT
THE BIG BAD BOLLOCKS
MON MAR 18 8:00 PM
FRANK BLACK
WEDNESDAY MAR 20
GAY NIGHT
THURSDAY MAR 21
HI ENERGY DANCE PARTY
PRO-PAIN
FRIDAY MAR 22
RETRO NIGHT
KNUCKLE SANDWICH
SAT MAR 23 6:30 PM
THE OCTOBER PROJECT
CLUB NIGHT
COMING TO PEARL STREET...
3/28 THE MACHINE 18+
3/29 JOHN VALBY 18+ "Dr. Dirty"
3/30 THE RADIO KINGS
3/31 SAM BLACK CHURCH/ Trow/H120/Grimlock
4/2 SHOOTZ GROOVE/ DOG EAT DOG
4/4 FOI DOG PONDERING 18+
4/6 SPRING HEELED JACK
4/7 BROTHER CANE 18+
4/9 THE SUBDUDES Anders Osborne
4/11 THE DIRT MERCHANTS 18+
4/12 LISA LOEB (Upstairs)
4/12 LEFTOVER SALMON (Downs)
Moon Boot Lover 18+
4/13 IAN MOORE

UMass, UConn, Kansas and UK Final 4 favorites

The Massachusetts Minutemen's chances of going to the Final Four are as high as ever. Here's a look at what teams some Collegian staff members see making it to the Final Four.

Candice Flemming
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Justin Smith
Georgetown, Kansas, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Andrew Bryce
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Matt Vautour
UMass, Kansas, Cincinnati, Wake Forest
Casey Kane
UMass, Kansas, Cincinnati, Kentucky
Leigh Torbin
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
UMass, Syracuse, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Steve Grant
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Villanova
Tara Ruelle
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Laura Schmidt
UMass, Kansas, UCLA, Kentucky
Tim White
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Mark McGrath
Georgetown, Kansas, Cincinnati, Kentucky
Brian Perillo
UMass, Kansas, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Humphrey brown III
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Gregory Casimir
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Kentucky
Mazni Heffner
UMass, Kansas, Temple, Kentucky
Tara MK Connelly
UMass, Syracuse, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Laura Stock
UMass, Kansas, Cincinnati, Kentucky
Chris Conner
UMass, Drexel, Temple, Villanova
Jacob W. Michaels
UMass, Kansas, UConn, Wake Forest
Earl T. Martin
UMass, Kansas, Cincinnati, Wake Forest
Lyle A. Henry
Georgetown, Kansas, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Evan Young
Georgetown, Kansas, Georgia Tech, Kentucky
Luis Luna
UMass, Kansas, UCLA, Wake Forest
Tony Morse
UMass, Syracuse, UConn, Kentucky

Here are the answers to yesterday's Collegian NCAA tourney quiz.
1. Mississippi State, Georgia, and South Carolina State.
2. Kentucky, Arizona, Villanova, and Kansas State.
3. Connecticut and Northern Illinois.
4. The Central Florida Golden Knights, the Marquette Golden Eagles, the Tulsa Golden Hurricane, the California Golden Bears, and the Canisius Golden Griffins.
5. Princeton, Memphis, and Clemson.
6. California and UCLA (the Bruins).
7. The four Wildcats (question 2) the three Tigers (question 5) the Cincinnati Bearcats, the Penn State Nittany Lions, the Montana State Bobcats, and the Western Carolina Catamounts.
8. The team name comes from the Latin, Hoya Saxa. It refers to the stone wall outside of the football stadium that people used to sit on. Hoya Saxa, when translated, means What Rocks.
9. Duke Blue Devils, Mississippi Valley State Delta Devils, Drexel Dragons, and Wake Forest Demon Deacons.
10. The five Golden teams (question 4), the two Red Raiders (question 13) Syracuse (Orangemen), Duke (Blue Devils), and Georgia Tech (Yellow Jackets).
11. Penn State, Mississippi Valley State, and Kansas State in the East. Mississippi State in the Southeast. San Jose State and Iowa State in the Midwest. Montana State and South Carolina State in the West.
12. Marquette became the Golden Eagles instead of the Warriors and Eastern Michigan changed from the Hurons to the Eagles.
13. Texas Tech and Northern Illinois.
14. Marquette, Eastern Michigan, Boston College, and Temple.
15. San Jose State and UNC–Greensboro.
16. Stanford (Cardinal) and Louisville (Cardinals).
17. Marquette (Golden Eagles), Monmouth (Hawks), Eastern Michigan (Eagles), Boston College (Eagles), Georgia Tech (Yellow Jackets), Temple (Owls), Loulsville (Cardinals), Canisius (Golden Griffins), Wisconsin–Green Bay (Phoenix), Iowa (Hawkeyes), Kansas (Jayhawks), Drexel (Dragons), and Portland (Pilots).
18. The Cyclones are Iowa State, and the Golden Hurricane is Tulsa.
19. Oklahoma (Sooners), Valparaiso (Crusaders) and New Orleans (Privateers).
20. Massachusetts (Minutemen), George Washington (Colonials), and Austin Peay (Governors).
21. A mythological figure that was half lion, half eagle.
22. New Mexico (Lobos) and Michigan (Wolverines).
23. The Bradley Braves and the Northeast Louisiana Indians.
24. The Texas Longhorns and the Virginia Commonwealth Rams.
25. Maryland (Terrapins), Santa Clara (Broncos), and Arkansas (Razorbacks).
27. Indiana, Purdue, Virginia Tech, Utah, and North Carolina.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE EXHIBITION IN CYBERSPACE
International Air/Sea Freight Rates
Domestic Shipping Anywhere in U.S.A.
E-mail Address: http://www.trade-exhibit.com
Tel (Toll Free) 1-800-752-6773
Fax: 1-508-664-3722

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

■ goalie

continued from page 12

self and the Minuteman defense as a key. "They have confidence in me back there and I have confidence in them. It all comes together."

Despite the fact that he is only a sophomore, Cannella lauded Kasselakis' leadership.

"I think [leadership] is tough for sophomores," Cannella said. "In his position, the goalkeeper is the leader of the defense. I think with his background and what he did last year, he has a lot of respect."

■ Final Four

continued from page 12

game is going to be held in Tempe.

Today's words are "home-court advantage." Can you say "home-court advantage," boys and girls?

That means 'Zona will play GW in the second round. I think the Wildcats can advance.

What has this world come to when Arizona advances in the NCAAs?

Maryland will play Santa Clara in the opener for the two teams. LaRon Profit is hot for the Terrapins, and the Broncos just don't have the upset-minded chemistry they did when they knocked off Arizona a few years back. I'll take the Terps in the first, but not in the second.

South Carolina State coach Cy Alexander earned his NCAA berth with his 150th career win. His reward? His Spartans will face No. 2 seed Kansas in the first round.

Congratulations Cy. Good-bye Cy.

Kansas over Arizona in the Sweet 16.

Kansas' guard play will be the deciding factor in the West Regional final. Jacque Vaughn and Co. will be too much for the Tigers, and the Jayhawks will put in an appearance at the Meadowlands.

Southeast Regional

Connecticut won the Big East Conference tournament, thereby sealing its fate as a No. 1 seed. The Huskies, which have lost only four Big East games in the past two years, are set to tangle with Colgate in the first round. The Red Raiders are led by Adonal Foyle, who is only the 25th player in NCAA history to record over 300 blocks.

One man does not a team make, especially in the NCAA tourney, and Foyle won't be able to stop UConn.

Eastern Michigan and Duke are matched in the 8–9 game. The Blue Devils will have back senior Chris Collins, who was hobbled by an ankle sprain in the final game of the Blue Devils' season. With Collins back in the line-up, the Eagles are out-manned.

Which means that UConn will tangle with Duke in the second round. And what a tangle it will be. There is a lot of bad blood in this rivalry. The last time UConn won the Big East tourney was 1990, and the Huskies were knocked out of the tournament by — ta da — Duke.

Call it my hatred of Connecticut, or my love of Duke, but I'll pick Duke in the upset. It'll take one hell of an effort, but the Devils can do it again.

Mississippi State has played well lately, upsetting then top-ranked Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference final. Virginia Commonwealth has played well lately too, winning the Colonial conference. But VCU hasn't shown its face in the NCAAs since 1985, and that will hurt. No upset here, as the Bulldogs advance.

UCLA, which has no contributing senior on its squad, is matched up against Princeton in that opening round game. Tigers' coach Pete Carrill has announced he will retire at the close of the season, and he has said there is nothing he would rather do than go out with a win.

To do that Carrill must win it all, and that's not likely. But it is very possible to beat UCLA. With the emotion-factor, I'll take Princeton.

If things go according to plan, Mississippi State will be the most powerful team left in the top half of the Southeast. Put the Dawgs in your bracket to advance past the Tigers and Blue Devils, all the way into the Sweet 16.

Indiana will play Boston College in a rematch of a regional semifinal from two years ago. Indiana is not the same team it was in the '80s and early '90s, and Boston College has received a huge boost from Sconnie Penn. BC won that game two years ago, and as much as I hate to say it, the Eagles will probably prevail in this game as well.

Georgia Tech is slated to play Austin Peay in the first round. Georgia Tech hasn't been included in the tournament for the past two years, and it wouldn't be surprising if the Yellow Jackets feel they have something to prove to the selection committee.

Unfortunately for the Governors, whose last visit to the NCAA Tournament came in 1987, they are the first obstacle in Tech's path. And for Tech, Austin Peay is little more than a roadbump.

And (I really don't feel the least little bit of pity for BC fans in saying this) Boston College is another roadbump which just happens to be a little further down the path.

Temple has been in the NCAAs for 12 of John Chaney's 14 years at the school. This year the Owls have garnered the No. 7 seed in the Southeast, facing Oklahoma in the first round.

Ryan Minor was a pre-season All-American pick in many pre-season hoop publications, but now its post-season not pre-season. But Kelvin Sampson's squad is not a team of any power or substance, and may I remind you (like you don't already know) that Temple has beaten Kansas and Villanova this year.

Look for the Owls to bore the Sooners to death with their slow-down style. Cincinnati earned the No. 2 seed in the region, but unfortunately for everyone outside of the metropolitan Cincy area, that was not good enough for Bearcats' coach Bob Huggins.

Huggins, in a rare fit of complaint, has whined that his team deserved the final No. 1 seed instead of Purdue, and his team is better than Kansas, Wake Forest, ad nauseum.

I never look forward to the end of the basketball season, but if you have to look for the silver lining on the end-of-the-college-hoop-season cloud, it's that we won't hear Huggins for a few months.

But Cincy has a relatively easy first game, taking on the Spartans of UNC–Greensboro, who are making their first NCAA appearance since moving to Division I six years ago.

Cincy will advance to a second round game against Temple, and a Sweet 16 game against Georgia Tech...

Mississippi State and Cincinnati will meet with a trip to New Jersey at stake in the Southeast Regional final. Mississippi State used up its upset allotment in the SEC Tournament, and Danny Fortson will power Cincy to the Final Four.

Midwest Regional

"Always a bridesmaid, never a bride."

Kentucky has made two trips to the Final Four during the Rick Pitino regime, but has yet to hold the National Championship trophy aloft.

With the No. 1 seed in the Midwest, Kentucky has earned the right to play San Jose State in the first round. The Spartans are the 11th team ever in the tournament with a losing record. Kentucky steamrolled through a Southeastern Conference schedule full of easy opponents, and the Wildcats have had plenty of preparation for this game. It'll be UK in a rout, then UK in a good game, then UK in a close game.

Virginia Tech was ranked as high as 10th in the AP poll this year. The Hokies face first-round opponent Wisconsin–Green Bay. The Phoenix did oust a talented Jason Kidd and Lamond Murray-led Cal team in the first round in 1994, but this time they are the higher seed. Of course this is the 8–9 game. Look for V-Tech in a (mild) upset.

Iowa State will face Cal in the tourney opener for the two teams. Cal is ready, while Iowa State may be flat after the euphoria of winning its first-ever Big Eight tournament. Backed by super-freshman Shareef Abdur-Rahim, Cal will win.

Utah, which jumped as high as seventh in the country at one point in the season have gotten an exceptional season out of Keith Van Horn. And in a first round "Battle of the Weird Mascots," the Utes will face the Golden Griffins of Canisius. Canisius, which got into the tournament by winning the Metro-Atlantic Athletic Conference, should be happy just being in the tournament.

Utah should easily take Cal, and move on to face Kentucky in the Sweet 16.

Earlier in the year Louisville lost star center Samaki Walker for 10 games, because of alleged NCAA violations. Now Walker is back, and the Cardinals are poised for at least a first-round win in the NCAAs.

Opening opponent Tulsa has reached the Sweet 16 the last two years, but the Golden Hurricanes will not be so lucky, succumbing to Louisville.

Last year Villanova was a No. 3 seed. Last year the Wildcats lost to 14th seeded Old Dominion in the first round. This year Villanova is the No. 3 seed, and the Wildcats face No. 14 Portland in their opener. Portland is making its first appearance in the tournament since 1959, a decided disadvantage against a tourney-experienced 'Nova team.

Even though Villanova is 6–5 in NCAA tourney games since winning the 1985 title, the Wildcats are strong enough (now that they have Kerry Kittles back) to beat Tulsa and Louisville and advance to a Sweet 16 date.

It will be Michigan versus Texas in a first-round game in the bottom half of the Midwest bracket. Michigan suffered the loss of Robert Traylor, due to a broken arm, when five Wolverine players were in an early morning car accident.

In his eight years at Texas, coach Tom Penders has taken the Longhorns to seven NCAAs. My apologies, but Texas is football country and the Longhorns can have their glory in the fall. Take Michigan.

Wake Forest has been to the last three Sweet 16s. Northeast Louisiana will do its best to keep that from happening a fourth time. But the Indians, who are making their fifth appearance in the tournament in seven years, are engaging in an exercise in futility.

It'll be Wake and Michigan in the second round, and Wake and 'Nova in the Sweet 16. Taking it one step further, it'll be Wake and Kentucky in the regional final.

Tony Rutland may be held out of Wake Forest's first game because of a bruised knee, but he must be at full strength when Wake and Kentucky meet. But even with Rutland at his trey-shooting best, combined with Rusty LaRue to back Tim Duncan, Wake will be overwhelmed by the Wildcats (think back to Dec. 6, I believe the team Wake played was UMass...). So look for a sea of Kentucky Blue to be in the stands of Continental Air Arena.

And that leaves the East Regional

Massachusetts ended the regular season with the top ranking in the AP poll and the No. 1 seed in the East Regional. Marcus Camby, the leading vote-getter in the AP All-American polls, and Edgar Padilla, an All-American Honorable Mention, anchor the team's power at both ends of the court. That means for first-round opponent Central Florida, "Thank you for playing."

Bradley got into the tourney with an at-large bid, and will face an unhappy Stanford squad in the opener.

"I would say I'm less than thrilled about going to Providence," Stanford coach Mike Montgomery said.

An attitude like that won't get Montgomery far, so he can be happy about returning home to California with a win. And another second-round loss to UMass.

National Coach of the Year candidate Jerry Dunn will lead his Penn State Nittany Lions into a first round battle with Nolan Richardson's Arkansas Razorbacks. With two players out for NCAA violations, Arkansas' string of Final Four visits will stop at two.

Monmouth will face giant-killer Marquette in its NCAA Tournament debut. Too bad for the Hawks.

Marquette will prove its late season wins were not a fluke, advancing to the Sweet 16 to face the Minutemen. UMass will prove that not all giants fall hard, extinguishing the Golden Eagles' hopes.

It's NC and NO in a first-rounder between North Carolina and New Orleans. UNC has been to the Sweet 16 14 of the last 15 years. New Orleans last made the field of 64 in 1993. I think UNC has the advantage.

Texas Tech will tangle with Northern Illinois in an opener. I hope the Huskies enjoy their tourney experience, it'll make a great story to tell all the folks back home.

Texas Tech did finish the season with only one loss (to Eastern Michigan), but the quality of opponent was not as strong as UNC's and the Red Raiders will not stop the Tar Heels from reaching another Round of 16.

New Mexico and Kansas State. Last season the Lobos were kept out of the NCAAs for the first time in 12 years. This year they are in as the No. 7 seed in the East. I'll be surprised if anyone besides devout New Mex and K-State fans care about this one. I'll pick the Lobos.

Georgetown, the East No. 2 seed, will face Mississippi Valley State. Unfortunately for the Delta Devils, Jerry Rice will not be available for this one. Georgetown, no contest.

New Mexico–Georgetown. I'd hazard a guess that Allen Iverson alone could beat (or at least do serious damage to) New Mexico. G'town, no contest.

North Carolina–Georgetown. "It's called golf, Dean, and you'll be playing it soon." G'town, somewhat of a contest. It'll come down to Georgetown–UMass in the regional final, and local nay-sayers have been spouting off about Iverson's ability to carry the Hoyas. Hello, don't forget about Camby. I'll take a solid team unit over one stand-out any day.

UMass will head for Jersey.

Final Four

Kansas–Cincy is interesting, but the Bearcats will be sidetracked by Huggins complaining about something, and Vaughn and Co. will get the job done. Kansas will be in the title game. UMass–Kentucky. Rewind the tape to the Great Eight. Kentucky beat the Minutemen for a couple of years, now it's UMass' turn. Primo still won't take his 'Cats to the Promised Land.

Kansas–UMass in the Championship. The backcourts will match up well, the frontcourts will be interesting to watch.

I think I'll take...UMass.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist

Olympic & World Figure Skating Champions
KRISTI YAMAGUCHI SCOTT HAMILTON
KATARINA WITT PAUL WYLIE KURT BROWNING
AND BECHKE & PETROV ROSALYNN SUMNERS RAHKAMO & KOKKO HOUGH & LADRET
DISCOVER STARS ON ICE
DIRECTED AND CO-PRODUCED BY SANDRA BEZIC
FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1996 • 7:30 PM
Tickets: $22.50 & $17.50 at the Bluefire Center box office and Ticketmaster locations. PHONE CHARGE: 413/733-2500.

Summer Employment
BARNSTABLE RECREATION
SEASONAL OPENINGS AVAILABLE AS FOLLOWS:

POSITIONS	RATE	MUST HAVE
SUPERINTENDENTS	8.50	SFA, CPR
GATE ATTENDANTS	6.00	SFA, CPR
BATH ATTENDANTS	5.00	NOT REQUIRED
LIFEGUARDS	7.50	WSI
SWIM INSTRUCTORS	8.00	SFA, BLS/CPR, LGT, WSI
SAILING INSTRUCTORS	8.00	LGT, BLS/CPR

CALL (508) 790-6345 OR STOP BY FOR AN APPLICATION AND JOB DESCRIPTION.
OTHER POSITIONS AVAILABLE: CAMP COUNSELORS, GYMNASTIC INSTRUCTORS, TRACK COACHES, TENNIS INSTRUCTORS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Women do you worry

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time

Ka Che

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton one bedroom apt

Puffton Village

South Deerfield Cir

Moving off Campus?

AUTO FOR SALE

Mazda 323

1985 Ford Mustang LX

78 Buick Wagon

80 Toyota Celica AT

1986 Saab 900

AUTO FOR SALE

84 Saab 900 Turbo

1986 Dodge Colt

1987 Lynx L

86 Mustang

Honda Prelude S

For Spring Break

87 Acura Integra

Ford Escort 1991 LX

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs Martha's Vineyard

Production Manager Wanted $

$Cruise Ships Hiring!

FOR SALE

PowerBook 150

FOR SALE

RAM

Fully loaded 486 Compact Cavarra

Brother Word Processer

Live Concert Tapes

HOUSE FOR RENT

Cape Cod

Take over our lease!

LOST

Hello Kitty Reg Watch lost in Morrill I/II floor women's bathroom on 3/11/96 at 11:00am. Sentimental value. Please call and leave phone number & 4295.

Lost Zodiac divewatch! Have $75 for reward. Please call Eric at 665-3683

MUSICIANS

Funky rock band with label interest seeks bassist, vocals a plus. Call Andy 549-1016 or Jason 367-0159

PERSONALS

To the Guys

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for Rent

4 Bedroom

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?

Know Your Rights

Internet Access

TRAVEL

Spring Break '96

Panama City Beach from $129

Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369

Guaranteed lowest prices

Endless Summer Tours

1-800-234-7007

WANTED TO RENT

Three Bedroom Apt

to take over your lease. Call ASAP Rana 546-1157

WANTED

Unisex at Providence will pay Matt 253-

The UMASS Daily Collegian

A wealth of information at your fingertips everyday.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

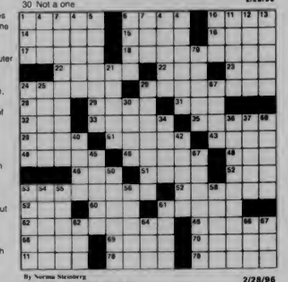
ACROSS
1 "Hi ya!"
6 Wharf
10 Target for Jordan
14 Sneeze sound
15 Land measurement
16 Mrs. Shakespeare
17 Callous
18 Well-dressed potentate?
20 Unfastened
22 John Law
23 Also
24 Spain and Portugal
26 Voice range
28 Japanese drama
29 Cloud —
31 Goddess, to Gaius
32 In favor of
33 — one's teeth
35 Cleans
39 Like Andersen's duckling
41 Cornered, as a cat
43 Grow weary
44 Copy Couples
46 Periods of time
48 Martini ingredient
49 —-top computer
51 Show appreciation
52 Cable choice, for short
53 The Sultan of Swat
57 —-of-fact
59 Actress MacGraw
60 Cycle lead-in
61 "American Appetites" author
62 Regrets about overealing?
65 Join
68 Frosts
69 Mammal with flippers
70 Water lily
71 Profits
72 Magi, for example
73 "And — I a woman?"

DOWN
1 Owns
2 Calendar abbr
3 Complete opening?
4 Blood —
5 Fluctuating
6 Stride
7 I, in Ulm
8 Susan Lucci role
9 Tape
10 Gotcha!
11 — a customer
12 Edible bulb
13 Tea blend
19 Worked undercover
21 Laurant or Lawrance
24 Computer fodder
25 Great Dane?
26 Implore
27 Stretched
30 Not a one
34 Get better
36 Niagara Falls?
37 Sioux
38 Mister, in Managua
40 Chinatmas
42 Theatrical production
45 Strap, another way
47 Chef's turner
50 Perfectionist
53 Kitchen sink
54 — B. Tokias
55 "Carmen" composer
56 Bengal —
58 See 26 Across
61 European capital
63 Curvy letter
64 "Bali —"
66 Large container
67 Self-help gp

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	A	S	S	O		L	A	N	D		A	T	S
A	C	T	O	R		A	L	E	E		T	H	E	E
T	H	U	M	B	S	D	O	W	N		H	U	P	A
H	E	B	E		W	E	T		A	R	O	M	A	S
			C	A	N		T	R	E	M	B	L	Y
O	A	I	M	O	N		G	U	I	N	E	A
A	L	C	A	N		M	A	R	I	E		R	S	V
T	O	Y	E	O		E	I	N		W	H	I	T	E
A	E	F		O	P	E	N	S		A	U	D	I	T
			S	L	E	E	T	S		A	L	T	E	R	S
C	A	N	C	E	S			L	L
A	N	G	O	R	A		E	E		S	A	L	T
P	I	E	R			G	O	L	D	F	I	N	G	E	R
E	T	R	E			T	I	P	S	E		C	O	R	F	U
	A	S	S			C	A	E	N			A	B	A	T	E

2/28/96



By Norma Steinberg
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Sparky's® Safety Spot™

PROTECT YOUR HOME FROM WILDFIRE

Create a safety zone around your home by clearing flammable vegetation. Keep your roof clear of accumulated leaves and needles. Discuss community fire safety with your neighbors.

NFPA National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year 1994
Free Every Day

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra) Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — Someone may pressure you to make a decision in record time. The information you have been given could be misleading. Better recheck the facts and figures! Attention to detail allows you to pull off a coup.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — Events taking place at a distance seem more pressing than they are. Refuse to be rushed into making a momentous decision. Inormation is available from people working behind the scenes.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — Former subordinates will help you out of respect. Call in an IOU. You need to put a business on a better footing. A partnership pays extra dividends thanks to your fine efforts.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Although you are in the driver's seat, you may not know your next move. Everyone benefits when you set a good example. Heed your conscience in affairs of the heart.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — Hide the irritation you feel toward a co-worker. This is no time to lose your cool. Answer as many messages and letters as you can. Organization is the answer to clutter at work or home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Maintain tighter control over expenses and a business will turn the corner. Romance looks more promising than in the recent past. Shared experiences will lead to a lasting love relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — Academic or legal matters capture your attention this morning. Later, someone will raise an important point. Lay your cards on the table. Be careful not to neglect your work when your social life accelerates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Good fortune comes through a tip from a stockbroker. Keep the happy news to yourself. A chance encounter could lead to a financial bonanza. Make full use of your social contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Your personal duties become more complex. Get better organized. You will make good financial progress once you gain partner's cooperation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Romance receives a welcome boost. A program for children benefits from your input. Try not to read too much into a brief note or call. Let things develop naturally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — Handle paperwork early in the day. Quick action is the key to moving up. Ignore gratuitous criticism. A look in the mirror will relieve any doubts you may have.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — A willingness to compromise helps you deal with an unreasonable business associate. An expert's appraisal of a property is essential before purchase.

Olimpius By Konrad Kubaska

ANOTHER DEATH.
YAWN
KID.
ALL THE DEATHS ARE VERY UNNATURAL.
ALL OF THE DECEASED...
...WE LEFT U A CATATONIC STATE.
HE CANNOT RELEASE THE ALIEN OF THIS DEATH!
IF THE INFORMATION ON ALL OF THESE DEATHS WERE RELEASED
I DON'T UNDERSTAND
...TO THE PUBLIC, EVERYONE MIGHT THINK WE'RE BEING ATTACKED BY A WELL FORM OF NERVE GAS, AND IRAQ WOULD BE BLAMED FOR THIS.
...AND UNDERSTAND PANIC I DON'T NEED.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Bastards By Matt & Greg

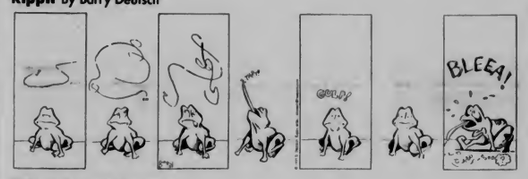
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I'M SICK OF BEIN' A NOBODY! I WANNA BE FAMOUS!
MAYBE HE'LL BE THE FIRST FAMOUS NOBODY!
DON'T LAUGH! I FEEL SORRY FOR HIM.
I MIGHT, TOO -- IF HE DIDN'T MAKE MY SPIDER SENSE TINGLE!

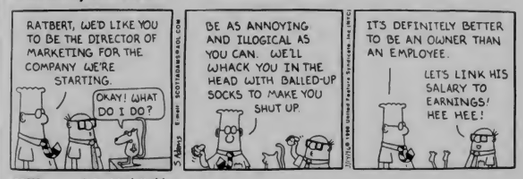
Jim's Journal By Jim

Steve came over today and we were looking at Mr. Peterson conked out and belly-up in the sun ray.
"The sun must be like some kind of cat drug," Steve said.
"Maybe you should get her some treatment," he said.
"Kitty rehab," he said. Then he laughed. Then he cleared his throat. Then there was an awkward pause in the conversation.

Kippil By Barry Deutsch



Dilbert By Scott Adams



RATBERT, WE'D LIKE YOU TO BE THE DIRECTOR OF MARKETING FOR THE COMPANY WE'RE STARTING.
OKAY! WHAT DO I DO?
BE AS ANNOYING AND ILLOGICAL AS YOU CAN. WE'LL WHACK YOU IN THE HEAD WITH BALLED-UP SOCKS TO MAKE YOU SHUT UP.
ITS DEFINITELY BETTER TO BE AN OWNER THAN AN EMPLOYEE.
LET'S LINK HIS SALARY TO EARNINGS! HEE HEE!

Milkweed By Neil Golden

I'M GOING TO THE STORE DO YOU NEED ANYTHING?
VALIDATION
ANY SORT OF REASON TO BELIEVE THAT WAKING UP EVERY DAY MAKES EVEN THE MOST INFINITESIMAL DIFFERENCE IN THE GRAND SCHEME OF THINGS WOULD BE NICE.
I MEANT AT THE STORE
OH, I'LL HAVE A PUDDSICKLE

Hannah's Crazy Coincidences II By Mo

Yesterday, I was going down one of the many staircases in Morrill, and I got to the door and saw two people on the other side.
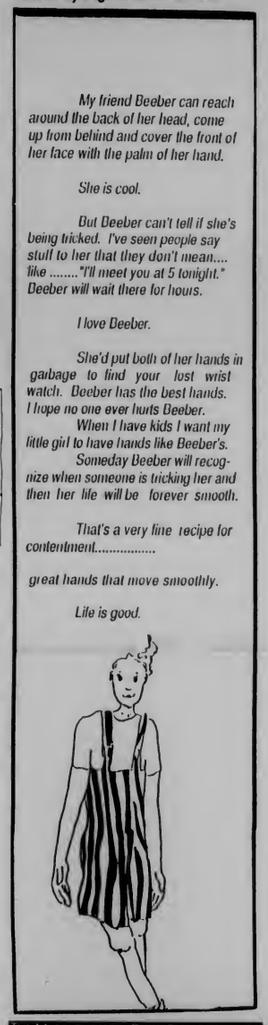
It was Tim and Leah! Crazy!

The Nuckle Buster By Dug

A Brief History of Time - According to Dogs
I DIE.
They Might be Giants is formed.
I am Born.
The Big Bang
Not necessarily in this order.

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom



My friend Beeber can reach around the back of her head, come up from behind and cover the front of her face with the palm of her hand.
She is cool.
But Beeber can't tell if she's being tricked. I've seen people say stuff to her that they don't mean.... like ....."I'll meet you at 5 tonight." Beeber will wait there for hours.
I love Beeber.
She'd put both of her hands in garbage to find your lost wrist watch. Beeber has the best hands. I hope no one ever hurts Beeber.
When I have kids I want my little girl to have hands like Beeber's.
Someday Beeber will recognize when someone is tricking her and then her life will be forever smooth.
That's a very fine recipe for contentment..... great hands that move smoothly.
Life is good.

Close to Home By John McPherson

WAAAA! WAAAA! WAAAA!
OH, DON'T MOVE! THE SLIGHTEST MOVEMENT AND HE'LL KNOW I'M AWAKE! I'LL ACT LIKE I'M IGNORING THE ITCH! I'M IGNORING THE ITCH!
COME ON! I WAS UP WITH THE BABY THREE TIMES LAST NIGHT! SHE'S GOT TO BE MARKET RESEARCH! COME ON, DAVE OLD BOY! LIE STILL! BREATHE STEADY...

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that you don't have much time left to live

10. Strange man dressed in a black robe wielding a scythe keeps following you around checking his watch.
9. In between cigarettes, you've begun to notice a sharp, piercing pain in the center of your chest, followed by a numbing sensation in your extremities.
8. At yearly physical, doctor looks you over, shrugs and promptly walks away muttering, "Why bother?"
7. You're the bad guy in a James Bond movie.
6. You're 700 years old.
5. Dr. Kevorkian gives you his card.
4. This list has been getting more and more fuzzy since number 8.
3. Breakfast, lunch and dinner? Bacon! Bacon! Bacon!
2. You just bought some self-care products without the Krusty seal of approval.
1. You just got the swan at the campus pond very, very angry.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Chris Connor
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reilly
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Kevin C. Farrar
Mike Troupe, Mike Krozy

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Sandwich
Bow Ties w/Sauce
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef
Szechuan Tofu
Pastabilities
Chicken Cacciatore

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Veal Sandwich
Chicken Stew

DINNER
Szechuan Beef
Baked Ziti
Chicken Tenders

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Veal Sandwich
Stone Willy's
Summit Subs
Grilled Chicken

DINNER
Szechuan Beef
Baked Ziti
Stone Willy's
Summit Subs

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Sandwich
Bow Ties w/Sauce
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef
Szechuan Tofu
Pastabilities
Chicken Cacciatore

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."
"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Quote of the Day

"Take it from me, Mr. T

–Mr. T"

Sports

Quest for national championship begins today

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team's quest for the national championship begins this afternoon, as the Minutemen face off against the team with the worst record in the tournament — Central Florida.

The Golden Knights enter today's first round matchup with an 11-18 record after gaining a tourney bid with their 86-77 win over Mercer in the Trans America Athletic Conference Championship. A No. 16 seed has never beaten a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament and UCF doesn't look like it will be the first to do so, although the Minutemen aren't taking them lightly.

"We better come and play. Central Florida's good enough to beat us, they are," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "They execute, have size inside and their guards can shoot the ball."

"They've been playing their best basketball lately," UMass point guard Edgar Padilla said. "We've got to take this game seriously."

The Golden Knights have four starters who average in double figures in points. Harry Kennedy has led the way for UCF scoring 17 a game while also setting the record for three pointers made (90) and attempted (225) this season. He also set a school record with eight treys in a game against Samford (Jan. 6).

Eric Riggs (11.1 ppg) is also a three-point threat for the Golden Knights as he as hit 61 on the season.

"Harry Kennedy can flat out shoot with anybody in the country," Calipari said. "It's scary when a team relies on three point shooting because what if they go 20-for-25? It can happen. This is the NCAA tournament."

No. 1 Massachusetts (31-1)
vs.
No. 16 Central Florida (11-18)
approximately 3:00 PM
at the Providence Civic Center

TV: CBS
Radio: WHMP 99.3 FM Mark Vandermeer, Jack Leaman, Tony Barbee
WMUA 91.1 FM Anthony Guido, Greg Corey

Howard Porter (13.3 ppg) and Stacey Castle (11.4 ppg) round out UCF's top scorers.

"They're in the tournament for a reason. I told our team, 'When you don't respect the opponent, you'll do poorly,'" Calipari said.

Central Florida made it to the NCAA tournament for the first time two years ago and lost to top-seeded Purdue 98-67.

"All we can hope for is us to be competitive," Porter said. "Two years ago we didn't, and if we do that again it will be a long plane ride home."

"Obviously it's a tremendous challenge. Only one team solved Massachusetts all season," Central Florida coach Kirk Speraw said. "It's a dream for these kids to play in this tournament."

Massachusetts enters with its tournament best 31-1 record. After suffering its first loss of the season against George Washington on Feb. 24, the Minutemen have rebounded, winning the last five games of the season to enter the tourney as the No. 1 team in the country.

"We're more focused and have a lot of confidence," forward Donta Bright said. "We know if we play UMass basketball we'll be victorious."

"I told the team we're good enough to win the championship," Calipari said. "I also know every way not to make it work, even though we've won seven games in the NCAA tournament in the last four years— which I think rates right up there."

Marcus Camby

Game Notes: The Daily Hampshire Gazette reported yesterday that UMass sophomore center Inus Norville sprained his right ankle in practice Tuesday and was to be evaluated late yesterday.

Material from the Associated Press was used in this story.

Office–poolsters take note, here are your winning teams

Sixty-four teams are dancing, but only one will win the big prize. Here's a breakdown of each bracket.

West Regional

It's far the easiest region to get out of.

Purdue was granted the No. 1 seed after winning its third straight Big 10 title. With no stand-out star player (perhaps the Boilermakers' biggest name is Brandon Brantley) the team doesn't have the necessary tools to even make it to the Final Four.

Hey if they couldn't do it with the Big Dog Glenn Robinson, do you really think they can do it now? Look for the Boilermakers to win two before bowing out.

Western Carolina is making its first tourney appearance ever. Well, at least the Catamounts can say they played in the NCAAs.

Georgia and Clemson are matched up in the 8-9 game. Many people felt that Clemson deserved a post-season bid — in the NIT? Georgia will win one and then fall to Purdue.

Drexel is making its third straight trip to the tournament, but don't expect the Dragons to make it a memorable one. The Lorenzen Wright-led Memphis Tigers will prevail in the first round, second round and Sweet 16.

Syracuse and Montana State are pitted against each other in an opening game. Mick Durham, the Bobcats' coach, says that, "I really don't know much about Syracuse, but I'm sure I'm more familiar with them than they are with us." Unfortunately that little advantage will not help the Bobcats' cause. Cuse will advance.

George Washington will face Iowa in the first round. This is an interesting match up. GW beat UMass at home when the Minutemen were the No. 1 team in the nation. Iowa has played consistently through the Big 10 season. But if Alexander Koni plays up to the level he's capable of, GW will take that one.

Bryce Drew will lead Mid-Continent champ Valparaiso into battle against Arizona. This to the FINAL FOUR page 9

Casey Kane

Young pitchers help UMass during tough schedule

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The middle of February isn't exactly the ideal time to start a softball campaign that you hope lands you in the NCAA tournament and the College World Series ... unless you're stopping by the plate in Phoenix, AZ.

The Minutewomen led off the season with a daunting six- game tilt at the Coca-Cola Classic, squaring off against the Ducks of Oregon in their first action of '96.

Massachusetts jumped out to a quick two run lead in the home half of the first inning. Chris Martens came to bat with Stephanie Marcina on third and Kim Gutridge on second with two outs, and dropped a single into the outfield. Martens' hit, the only one in the inning, gave the Minutewomen a short-lived advantage.

Oregon came back with a four run rally in the top of the third capped by a two run triple off the bat of Kathy Stohl (2 for 4, four RBI and three runs scored).

The Ducks would add two more in the top of the fourth to build a seemingly comfortable 6-2 lead with the bottom four hitters in the UMass batting order coming up.

Freshman right fielder Amanda Galas started the frame with her first collegiate hit, and was advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Ashlie Hayes. Galas was driven in by a single from Amy Powell who consequently scored on an RBI double from Sam Cardenas to pull Massachusetts within two.

The Minutewomen crossed the plate once in the fifth to bring the score to 6-5. The teams traded a pair of runs in the sixth inning to set the score at 8-7, and set the stage for the bottom of the order to come up big in the final frame.

Galas again reached first, this time via a free pass from reliever Jennifer Cook, and was subsequently sacrificed to second by Hayes. Powell grounded to short for the second out of the inning, dampening the hopes of a UMass rally. But the next batter, sophomore speedster Tracey Osier, collected her second hit of the game, moving Galas to third and keeping the rally alive.

With Cardenas at the plate, Cook unleashed a wild pitch scoring Galas and knotting the game at eight. Oregon starter Kim Kampfer came back to the mound to pitch to the top Minutewoman slugger, and immediately unleashed a wild pitch, moving Osier to third. Cardenas won the battle, plating Osier with her second run-scoring base-hit of the game, which proved to be the game-winner.

"That was a great opening game for us, for a lot of reasons," UMass coach Elaine Sortino said. "More than anything it showed our ability to come back. If we're down a run or two or three... don't count us out."

"[Despite our record], the kids are realistically looking at each other and saying to each other 'We can stand in with the best,'" associate coach Mona Stevens said.

Sortino has assembled a schedule that forces the Minutewomen to stand in with the best teams in the country, as they ran into No. 2 Arizona in the fourth game of the season. UMass played well against the Wildcats, playing a tight 4-2 contest, bolstered by a tremendous mound effort of Liz Wagner.

Wagner went the distance, giving up just two earned runs on seven hits, walking two and striking out four. Her effort was overshadowed by that of Arizona ace Nancy Evans who, in addition to striking out nine Minutewomen, had two hits, knocked home a run and scored another, accounting for the winning margin.

In the Minutewomen's most recent affair, UMass disposed of rival UConn, 5-0, giving freshman hurler Danielle Henderson her first collegiate victory. After losing multiple record holder Kelly Daut to graduation, Henderson will be counted on to mature quickly.

"Our pitching is absolutely neophyte. Neither one of them [Wagner and Henderson] have any collegiate experience," Sortino said. "[Henderson] really got baptized in fire out there."

"What is amazing to us is... that kid grew a year in experience in two weeks," Stevens said.

Expectations for sophomore keeper are high

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

There are a lot of factors that go into an upset, but the one constant... one essential that is absolutely necessary for an underdog to surprise a team is an outstanding performance from the goaltender.

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team plays No. 1 Virginia on Saturday, and sophomore John Kasselakis has his chance to be that goalie.

It's a tall order to ask of the Manhasset, N.Y. native, who had just two career starts coming into this season. After an impressive fall season, the former high school All-American feels he is up to the task.

"I'm ready for it. I played against some of those guys over the summer," he said. "Those are three of the top six attackmen in the country. I'd love nothing better than to beat those guys. I'd feel great."

Stepping into the crease at Richard F. Garber Field immediately puts Kasselakis into some impressive company. Some great goaltenders, including Ted Kellerman, Sal LoCascio, John Rutledge, and most recently, Tom LoPresti have guarded the UMass net.

LoPresti's cleats will be big ones to fill. The three–year starter closed out his career being named the MVP of the North–South senior All–Star game.

"For a goalie, it's great to just have a year to settle in," said Massachusetts coach Greg Cannella. "It gives you a chance to get used to college shooting and the tempo of the game. It's tough to throw a goalie right into the mix as a freshman. But as a sophomore, you're a little more mature."

John Kasselakis

But while LoPresti was fiery, Kasselakis' style is more of a quiet determination that has been mixed with new confidence this season.

"I have a lot more confidence. I have confidence in myself to make that save every time," said Kasselakis, who pointed to the mutual confidence between him-

Turn to GOALIE, page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 96 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, March 15, 1996

Heading to the Big Dance
All A-10 women's basketball player Melissa Gunle will lead UMass vs. Michigan State in NCAA Women's Tourn. first round action tomorrow night (See Sports, page 8).

From yoga to stress management
Maggie Wynne, workshop director at Cooley Dickinson Hospital, helps women recover from addictions. (See story, page 3).

Looking for Something to do?
For non-basketball fans, there are plenty of concerts in the local area, including Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
Today will be increasingly cloudy, with rain likely and snow possible in the afternoon. Saturday's and Sunday's weather will be nicer, especially for those going to tropical places.

	Today	Saturday	Sunday
	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30

Association accuses chancellor of reverse discrimination, quotas

AMHERST (AP) — Faced with an accusation of reverse discrimination, the leader of the main University of Massachusetts campus says the school has been living up to its historic mission by expanding minority admissions.

Chancellor David Scott was responding to a report to be released today by a statewide professors' association. The group contends that the campus discriminates against whites in seeking to boost minority admissions.

"It was imposed on them by student protesters," said Gary Crosby Brasor, author of a report on the issue for the Massachusetts Association of Scholars. "I think the multiculturalists want... critical mass."

Scott said the campus has already reached its current numerical goal for minority admissions. But he strongly defended the pursuit of such a goal in recent years.

"The general philosophy was then — as it is now — based on demographics and this land grant institution's philosophy that our entering class should reflect the diversity of the graduating seniors from the high schools."

The state Association of Scholars, a Cambridge-based group with about 150 members, released a 53-page update to its 1994 report, "Turmoil and Tension at the University of Massachusetts." The association took up the studies in reaction to a series of student protests that culminated in a 1992 administration vow to lift minority admissions to 20 percent of incoming freshmen.

In the updated report, the association says the University should "abandon its 20 percent minority freshmen quota as discriminatory and not in the best interests of all students." The report also contends:

Expanded minority admissions have allowed lower minority SAT scores and fostered higher University dropout rates among minority students.

Administrators may be boosting minority admissions by depending more heavily on out-of-state recruitment.

Administrators should abolish a Special Opportunity Fund that has helped hire more female and minority professors.

Brasor contends that campus advocates of "multiculturalism" are really trying to "redistribute power within the University" to give greater sway to minorities. He said opportunities should be expanded for everyone and power in the hierarchy accorded on the basis of merit.

The chancellor said it is the report's author who is guilty of a "focus and obsession with race."

He said the campus has in recent years lifted minority admissions to 16 percent of freshmen — about the level of minorities among graduating seniors in this state. He said graduating seniors were closer to 20 percent minority when administrators agreed to that figure in 1992. He said the numerical goal could change in the future with such fluctuations.

Several University officials said, however, there has been no binding quota — just a "goal."

"I never feel like someone is saying, 'Count up your minority students,'" said Arlene Cash, admissions director. But she said she had not read the professors' report and could not respond in an official capacity.

Some students voiced skepticism about the report's numbers and views. "Are they kidding?" said Thea Nong, a 21-year-old Asian student. "Every face I see is a white face."

Lounge TV recovered in time for tournament

Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

The second season for the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team began yesterday with their win over Central Florida. If the team has one bad game within the next three weeks, the season is finished.

Watching the remaining games during the NCAA tournament is crucial since no one knows when the Minutemen will run out of magic. UMass fans will follow the team in their quest to reach the Final Four in the Meadowlands, N.J.

Residents of Van Meter Residence Hall were victims of thieves who almost took away their opportunity to watch the team. A television was recovered after being allegedly stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.

On Feb. 19, University Police stopped Eddie Larence Montalvo, 19, of 65 Lawrence Ave., DuMont, N.J. and Keith W. Babino, 19, of 14 Beverly Rd., DuMont, N.J. for larceny over $250, possession of burglarious instruments and malicious destruction of property.

Montalvo submitted to the court on the day of his arraignment. He was assessed to make restitution of $400 to UMass Housing. The judge put Montalvo on probation and will not give him a guilty charge on his record if he remains out of trouble for a year, according to Phil Cavanaugh, associate director of the UMass Police Department. He said Babino is scheduled for a jury hearing in May.

The television was held in evidence and was in need of repair from damages. According to Cavanaugh, the direct response in finding the alleged perpetrators enabled the television to be recovered.

Van Meter Residence Hall received another TV Wednesday.

"We want to have the television available before the basketball team is playing," Ted Mone, Housing Services Orchard Hills' Central operations manager, said last week.

"Many people were asking where it was," said Vivian Ostrowski, resident director of Van Meter/ Butterfield cluster. "People who don't have televisions are mostly affected with the loss."

"My goal is to have a television for Van Meter before spring break," said Mone. "It will definitely be in after spring break."

The security of televisions will be upgraded, said Mone. The University buys the same televisions with remote controls that are on the market. However, the remote is easily lost and buttons break off since it is not meant to be used so frequently, said Mone.

"It would have taken four or five months down the line to replace, but because we got restoration money we are able to replace it right away," said Mone. "When people help us and we get replacement money, we are able to purchase new televisions much quicker."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Students gathered in front of the Hatch yesterday afternoon to watch the Minutemen win their game against Central Florida.

Calipari bends rule by using letterhead

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari may have broken a University rule by using team stationery for a letter he wrote backing a businessman's bid to open a sports bar.

But a school spokeswoman said yesterday that administrators may not follow up with any investigation.

Calipari used UMass basketball letterhead endorsing the proposed sports bar of Michael Konvelski, of Amherst. The stationery carried a UMass basketball logo, with an address for the Mullins Center arena, where Calipari has his office. It listed the names of Calipari, three assistant coaches and some team championships. Reports on the letter were published Thursday by the Union-News of Springfield and Daily Hampshire Gazette of Northampton. A copy was also obtained by The Associated Press.

In the Jan. 24 letter, Calipari wrote to town selectmen that he had come to know Konvelski through Konvelski's work in promoting organized sports for children. "Having known Mike for about six years, and after inquiring about his business reputation, I have no reservations about recommending him ... for licensing for a new business," Calipari wrote.

Konvelski's bid was rejected after residents complained the business would be too close to a residential neighborhood and a school.

He did not answer messages left yesterday at a cafe he owns in Montague.

Campus spokeswoman Kay Scanlan said yesterday she knew nothing of the letter.

However, she said, "In general, it's inappropriate for University employees to use university stationery for non-University purposes." She said such an act would violate school policy.

Scanlan said school policy lays out no specific penalties when University stationery is used for personal business. She added, "As far as I know, no one is checking into this. I don't think they would, unless there was a complaint."

Calipari, who has lifted the team in recent years from a perennial loser to the top of the rankings, is probably the most popular figure at the Amherst campus and one of the most highly regarded coaches in college basketball.

Powerful new AIDS drug quickly approved by FDA

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Merck & Co.'s powerful new AIDS drug, a medicine that wipes out much of the deadly virus in patients' blood, won government approval Thursday.

Indinavir was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in a record 42 days — and just two weeks after Abbott Laboratories' competing ritonavir was cleared.

But indinavir's rush to the market may pose a dilemma for some patients. Merck is controlling prescriptions for the first six months to ensure it has enough supply, and AIDS patients wonder which of the new medicines will give them the best chance for survival.

"There's not enough data right now to make a real reasoned choice," said Gary Rose of the AIDS Action Council.

Also Thursday, the FDA moved to strengthen the safety of the nation's blood supply, approving a new test to help find blood donors newly infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Donors now are tested for an immune reaction to HIV, but it can take up to 25 days after HIV infection for that reaction to occur. Miami-based Coulter Corp.'s antigen test detects the virus itself about six days earlier.

Although getting HIV from a blood transfusion today is extremely rare — about 40 cases from some 14 million units of blood — closing the testing "window" will prevent five to 10 such infections a year, the FDA said.

Blood banks must use the new test by mid-June.

But the test has a drawback: It could label several thousand healthy donors a year as infected when they're not, so blood banks must push proper follow-up testing, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention warned.

Meanwhile, studies show indinavir, to be sold as the brand Crixivan, can virtually obliterate HIV from the blood cells of many patients.

That's not a cure or even proof that patients will live longer — HIV lurks elsewhere in the body and the small amounts left in the blood can rebound. But studies have shown that the less HIV in the bloodstream, the better the prognosis.

Call 800 927 8888 beginning Monday for indinavir information

Scottish gunman known to be misfit

By Robert Seely
Associated Press

DUNBLANE, Scotland — Around gun clubs, Thomas Hamilton had a reputation for being unstable. Yet police licensed the firearms he used to kill 16 kindergarten children, their teacher and then himself.

And around this small central Scottish town, the balding, unemployed misfit obsessed with guns and running boys' groups was suspected of being a pedophile.

Yet when the local council barred him in 1984 from using the high school for his weekly boys' club meetings, Hamilton protested so effectively that Edinburgh authorities overruled the council — and admonished it not to act on gossip.

Hamilton's reputation as an unstable, unsavory loner grew. Five weeks ago, a shooting range at nearby Callander refused him membership. And in the final days of his life, Hamilton strove to defend his image.

On the eve of Wednesday's massacre, Hamilton mailed packages to Scottish radio and television stations and The Scotsman newspaper; they contained copies of letters he had written declaring he was "not a pervert" and accusing the police and others of spreading rumors.

The bundles of seven letters included one that the 43-year-old Hamilton had sent last week to Queen Elizabeth II, Buckingham Palace said the queen had not answered.

Hamilton complained of being banned from the Boy Scouts 22 years ago, about the attempts in the mid-1980s by the Stirling District Council to stop his boys' clubs and, most of all, the suspicions. "I know that no child has ever made any complaint of a sinister or sexual nature against me," Hamilton wrote to the queen, who is the scouts' patron. "... I cannot even walk the streets for fear of embarrassing ridicule."

Local council members and police were worried. Boys reported having to strip off their shirts and puff up their chests while Hamilton photographed them in the gym.

Yet no one could prove suspicions that Hamilton — who had no criminal record — was a pedophile.

And no one dreamed a mass murderer lurked behind the argumentative, overweight and unpopular loner, who resented the dwindling turnout at the boys' club meetings he held every Thursday at 6 p.m.

"Any one of us who met him was instantly alarmed," said Anne Dickson, a member of Stirling council.

"But I just cannot imagine anything that anyone would legislate," she said. "This man appeared normal. Our reservation was not that he was going to flip his lid or get violent."

Throughout the day, flowers piled up outside the empty Dunblane Primary School. There was talk of tearing down the whole school, or at least bulldozing the gymnasium where Hamilton massacred the 5-year-olds–11 girls and five boys.

Three of the 12 wounded children were in serious condition, hospital authorities said.

In London, government and opposition leaders joined in solemn tributes. "Sometimes the political disputes that we have... can seem very petty besides human matters," Prime Minister John Major told a silent House of Commons.

Ron Taylor, headmaster of the Dunblane Primary School, described to reporters in a shaking voice the scene when he rushed in after calling the police. "We did what we could. We tried to stem the blood," he said. "The children were traumatized. The ones injured were conscious but distressed."

The letters Hamilton mailed were part of the relentless campaign he waged from the row house where he lived alone in Stirling, 5 miles south of Dunblane.

He petitioned top politicians, wrote to parents and local authorities and recently printed leaflets — all protesting slurs on his reputation. It was all so unfair, he said.

True, the Boy Scouts did expel him — for a disorganized trip when boys were exposed to extreme cold, not for anything connected with sex, association spokesman John Fogg said Thursday.

Radicals plan a Day of Action

5 College group organizes non-violent response to social ills

Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

Organizations from the Five College Area met yesterday to plan a day of action, culminating in a rally to reveal social problems. Various student organizations will meet on April 4 outside the University of Massachusetts Student Union.

The day will be based on the anti–violence efforts of Martin Luther King. Violence against the poor, women, people of color, the environment and other issues will be highlighted at the day–long presentation by the Day of Action Coalition.

"The biggest criticism of the left in the past is that it has been very disorganized compared to big corporations," said Yuri Kasimsky, a senior social thought and political economy (STPEC) major. "We want to provide groups and means for people to join to do something."

Members of the discussion hope to establish a strong diverse coalition to enable ways to create change, said Brian Conley, a senior history and STPEC major.

The meeting provided an open forum for people to discuss ideas and ways to provide resources to continue the movement. Members agreed a dramatic visual effect is essential to grab people's attention.

"It is important that on this day we do something pro–active," Kasimsky said.

People suggested presenting films, poetry readings and lectures to inform the community. Pictures of endangered animals on gravestones were suggested to show people the environment in the future if change is not implemented.

The event hopes to inform people about the Republican candidates for the presidency and the political process.

"I want to have teach–ins about the GOP candidates, about how they are threatening higher education, environmental issues and other programs," said Walton Burns of Amherst. "A lot of people don't know about the candidates. I want to pull people from Amherst in with the day of action."

Disinterest and feelings of not being represented is a theme the day of action hopes to address, said Craig O'Connor, a junior history major.

"A political alienation feeling is deep," O'Connor said. "The key issue is to get mass numbers of people, but it doesn't work because people don't believe in the system.

"The idea is to create consciousness and awareness," O'Connor said. "Nothing is going to change within the system until a massive action is take."

Smith College students will use grass–roots publicity to attract classmates to the rally.

"A Color Coalition was recently formed reacting to blatant and subtle racism at Smith," said Amy Frost, a sophomore environmental studies major.

"There is a lot of apathy at Smith," Frost said. "We hope to get ideas, build support on campus and get support from the Five Colleges."

The Day of Action Coalition is continuing a nationwide bipartisan assault from Washington D.C. on social programs, said Burns.

Past events have failed due to poor organization after scheduled events, said Kasimsky. He wants people to leave the event with a feeling of disgust about current policies, yet have a means to enforce change.

"We want to bring ideas, information to people and sustain them in the future," O'Connor said.

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, March 21

Lecture — Migraine sufferers are invited to attend Franklin Medical Center's "News About Migraine, Important Information for Sufferers," at 6:30 p.m. in Franklin Medical Center's conference rooms. Dr. Joseph Viadero will be the featured speaker. For registration and more information, contact The Professionals at (413) 773-8557.

Saturday, March 23

Workshop — The Amherst Family Center presents "Alternatives to Watching TV," with facilitator Sarah Elston, from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m. in the Amherst Family Center. For more information call 549-4969.

Monday, March 25

Workshop — Learn to play the piano overnight in a three- hour evening Pop Piano workshop at Westfield State College. To learn to play the piano the way the pros do — with chords, contact Holly at 572-8053.

Tuesday, March 26

Class — Bread & Circus will be sponsoring a cooking-class and fundraiser called "Nourishing the Whole Person in Recovery" from 6-8 p.m. in the Dakin Conference Room of Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The class costs $20 and pre-registration is required. Registration forms are available at the The Dickinson Programs of Cooley Dickinson Hospital, 76 Pleasant Street, Northampton and from Bread & Circus. Proceeds will benefit Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Notices

Grant deadlines — The UMass Arts Council single project/event grant applications deadlines for Spring 1996 are today, March 15, for events after April 3 and April 19 for events after May 8 including summer and fall 1996 projects/events.

Mail Service — During the summer, magazine subscriptions will not be forwarded due to the high volume of first class mail and the large amount of magazine subscriptions Mail Services receives. Now is the time to contact magazine companies to change addresses for the summer, June through August. September magazines are held in Mail services and will be delivered when school opens in September.

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work-Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbalah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chasidic philosophy.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545-2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOtherrongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Religious — Rides are being provided to any students who would like to attend worship services at the Alliance Church on Sunday mornings. For information contact Mark at 253-0361.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Meeting — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546-2363 or 546-5562.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Merrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10-11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8-10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549-6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323-6330.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1-800-696-7752.

Skiing — Cross country skiing guides for the visually impaired are needed. Guide training is provided. You must have your own equipment and advanced skiing ability. Contact Chris at 584-0807.

Health — The Breast Health Project, a program of the Family Planning Council of Western Mass., provides physical exams, breast and pelvic exams, Pap smears and referrals for mammograms and colposcopies at sites in Northampton and Amherst. For more information on these services call Ellen or Anne at 1-800-696-7752.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association, holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., in the Campus Center. For information call Kamran at 256-8482.

Religious — The Muslim Students Association holds daily Iftar every day in the Campus Center. Weekly prayer service is also held in the Campus Center every Friday at 12 p.m. Check at the information desk for the room. Call Kamran at 546-0619 for mort information.

Exemption Tests — There will be a Tier 1 Basic Math Skills Test on Tuesday, April 2 at 6:30 p.m. in Marcus Hall, Rm 131. Students taking the test should bring an ID and a #2 pencil. Contact the Math Dept. for information.

Financial Assistance — The Five College Coastal & Marine Sciences Program offers financial assistance to students for research and/or internship positions through the Summer Subsidy Fund. The funds are awarded on a competitive basis; students may apply once they have secured their positions. The deadline is April 12 and applications are available in Burton 211.

Campus Police Log

Burglary/ breaking & entering
March 11
A vending machine was broken into over the weekend in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Drug law offenses
March 12
Keith M. Haroutunian, 20, of 465 Chamberlain St., Holliston, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.
Justin M. Lavelle, 18, of 24 Duvall Ln., Holyoke, was arrested for possession and distribution of Class D and C substances.
Jeffrey S. Zuccalo, 21, of 438 Elm St., Pittsfield, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Accident
March 11
After a two-vehicle accident on Massachusetts Avenue, one vehicle left the scene.
March 12
A vehicle backed into another vehicle in Parking Lot 45.
There was a two-vehicle accident on Commonwealth Avenue. Owners exchanged paperwork.
A vehicle was damaged in Parking Lot 11.
A vehicle was damaged in Parking Lot 62.

Alarm
March 11
There was a wastebasket fire in a second floor Thoreau Residence Hall office.

Traffic stop
March 11
Kimpa L. Barnes, 29, of 100 Constitution Ave., Worcester was arrested for failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk, the unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and for having a child under age six without a car seat or seat belt.

Recovered stolen motor vehicle
March 11
Chelsea Police recovered a vehicle stolen from the University of Massachusetts.

Medical emergency
March 11
An individual in John Adams Residence Hall fell and injured his shoulder. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Larceny
March 11
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 32.
March 12
Staff reported a cassette player and a camcorder stolen from an office in Boyden Building.

Vandalism
March 11
There was damage to a locking device in Emerson Residence Hall. Housing was notified.

Disturbance
March 13
A domestic incident was resolved in Brown Residence Hall.

Suspicious vehicle
March 13
Michael A. Sintoni, 27, of 64 Union St., Easthampton, was arrested for a second offense of operating a motor vehicle under the influence, having an open container of alcohol, a lights violation and for operating a motor vehicle in violation.

Annoying vehicle
March 12
An unauthorized individual was reported to be in Flint Laboratory.

Assault & battery
March 11
A past assault and battery report was filed.

Taiwan rules out sending envoy to Beijing

By Joe McDonald
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Despite signs that China may be expanding its war games to a new area near Taiwanese waters, Taiwan's president has ruled out sending an envoy to Beijing to appeal for a halt to the exercises, his office confirmed Friday.

President Lee Teng-hui has rejected the idea out of concern that conciliatory gestures would only fuel China's belligerence, his office said.

On Thursday, Lee flew to islands near the military exercises and said Chinese leaders are "scared to death" of Taiwanese democracy.

Chinese warplanes held a third day of mock attacks southwest of Taiwan, and also conducted "preliminary exercises" near Fuzhou, a Chinese coastal city 100 miles west of Taiwan's northern tip, the Taiwanese Defense Ministry reported.

Taiwan had warned that China may be planning even bigger exercises before the island's presidential election March 23 in an attempt to discourage Taiwan from declaring independence.

Lee, who is running for another term, was smiling and looked relaxed as he addressed a crowd in the Pescadores archipelago, 45 miles from where Chinese ships and planes were staging mock attacks.

Wearing a tan windbreaker and sneakers, the 73-year-old Lee appealed for unity and reminded the islanders of his efforts to democratize Taiwan politics.

"These are the things the Chinese Communists dare not do: political liberalization, freedom and democracy," he said. "They see freedom and democracy and they are scared to death."

The Nationalist government fled to Taiwan in 1949 after losing a civil war on the mainland to the Communists. China accuses Lee of now discarding the doctrine of reunification Beijing and Taipei had shared.

Meanwhile, an article in a state-run Chinese newspaper on Thursday suggested an effort to rally the citizenry behind the cause of quashing pro-independence sentiment in Taiwan.

"The reunification of the country is of vital importance to the Chinese people. To accomplish it, any cost might have to be justified," said the article in China Daily.

Despite the confrontational words from Beijing, U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry said it was unlikely the maneuvers would escalate into war.

"I believe the Chinese military exercises in the Taiwan Straits probably will not lead to a military conflict," Perry said at a press conference in Caracas, Venezuela, which he was visiting. "I believe they are trying to intimidate the Taiwanese before the elections."

The war games started Tuesday, and have pushed tensions between the two sides to their worst level since the late 1950s, when Taiwan traded artillery barrages with China from islands near the mainland coast.

Schoolchildren at some Taiwanese schools held annual air raid drills Thursday, timed to coincide with China's eight days of missile tests near Taiwan.

China test-fired three missiles Friday and a fourth on Wednesday. There were no reports of missiles fired Thursday, a day before the launches were due to end.

At the Nanmen School in central Taipei, children were led to a ground-floor corridor and shown how to crouch and cover their faces. Schools that have bomb shelters are using them in drills. Despite reassurances the government can repel any Chinese attack, many Taiwanese have been hoarding food and buying U.S. dollars to move their money out of the country.

Up to $4 billion has left Taiwan, Central Bank governor Shea Yuan-dong said in a television interview from New York, where he is visiting the Federal Reserve Bank.

Shea urged Taiwanese to slow their rush to convert savings into U.S. dollars, but promised to supply as much currency as they wanted.

Stores report brisk sales of rice, toilet paper and other basics.

The government, trying to dampen fears of war, denied rumors it would bar draft-age men from leaving. Ou Chen-wen, a Defense Ministry official, said Taiwan's 3.6 million reservists are enough to back up the 400,000-member armed forces.

But Yen Chin-fu, an opposition lawmaker, claimed he personally knew of many businessmen and professionals sending their sons abroad to avoid conscription.

Taiwanese men are drafted at age 20 for two years and must do reserve duty until 45.

"There would have been an exodus if it were not for the strict restraints foreign governments imposed on immigration or even on the brief visits of Taiwanese," Yen said in an interview. A senior official accused shareholders in one government fund of profiteering. The fund has spent $1.5 billion over the past two weeks to buy blue-chip stocks to prop up the Taipei stock market. Tsai Mao-hsin, head of a team managing the fund, said the shareholders were selling stocks and "making a fortune from the national catastrophe."

He said authorities will investigate whether any irregularities occurred.

The American Institute in Taiwan, the unofficial U.S. mission, said it had no plans to evacuate any of Taiwan's 30,000 Americans. "We are not packing our bags. We are not doing anything," said spokeswoman Jennifer Galt. "We do not deem that the current situation poses an immediate threat to the security of Taiwan." Lynn Murray Sien, an official of the American Chamber of Commerce in Taiwan, said she knew of "a couple of families" considering moving out, and a few who were planning vacations abroad. But for the Chamber of Commerce, it was "business as usual," she said.

Govt. Delivers Two Notes to Farrakhan

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan said Thursday he is not an agent of Libya or any other foreign government and sees no need to register as such with the American government.

"I am an agent of God," Farrakhan said at a news conference, "and if the government requests that I should register as an agent of God, I will be happy to do so."

Farrakhan made the comments after Justice Department officials said government agents had hand-delivered two letters to him about his recent trip to Libya and were watching to see if he acts as a Libyan agent.

The department's foreign agent registration section originally sent Farrakhan a letter in early February noting press reports of the visit and advising he might have to register with the government as a foreign agent.

The Treasury Department's Foreign Assets Control Office also sent a letter last month advising Farrakhan that presidential orders under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act prohibit U.S. citizens from spending U.S. currency in several countries, including Libya and Iran among those visited by Farrakhan.

Farrakhan said Libyan president Muammar Ghadafi has been "tried and convicted at the insistence of the government of the United States" of not releasing two men accused of blowing up an American airliner with a heavy loss of life.

"If I go to Libya on the basis of atonement and reconciliation to talk to Ghadafi about the problems of Africa and our people; if I go to Iran or to Iraq with whom you have had difficulty..., it is thrown in my face that Iran held American citizens hostage of over 400 days," he said.

"I would welcome a congressional investigation," he told reporters at the National Press Club. "I would welcome a chance to defend myself against the false charge."

Farrakhan was in Washington to receive the 1995 Newsmaker of the Year Award from the National Newspaper Publishers Association at the National Press Club on Thursday evening.

At her news weekly news conference Thursday, Attorney General Janet Reno declined to provide details of the department's inquiry into Farrakhan because it is a "pending matter." But she said she had just heard about the award he was receiving "and I didn't quite understand it."

The association, representing about 200 black-owned newspapers, said Farrakhan was selected primarily for the vision he showed in putting together his Million Man March on the Washington Mall last year.

On other subjects, Farrakhan said:

• He believes someone accused of a crime and then acquitted, such as O.J. Simpson, should have his legal expenses paid by the accuser. Farrakhan said Ghadafi and Libya fall in the same category.

• That Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf, suspended by the National Basketball Association, until he said he was willing to stand during the playing of the National Anthem "should be left alone." "If this young man obeys his conscience and the command of God..., we should respect that choice and not punish him for that choice," Farrakhan said of the Denver Nuggets star.

The Justice Department letter was sent by certified mail with a return receipt requested. Farrakhan was not required to answer the letter, but the department never even got the return receipt confirming delivery. The same thing happened with Treasury's letter, an administration official said Thursday.

So, on Wednesday, a Treasury agent hand-delivered copies of both letters to one of Farrakhan's aides in Chicago, according to Justice Department officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Now, Justice officials are watching and checking to see if Farrakhan performs any functions that would require his registration, one Justice official said.

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
We Are Now On OCMP!
10% DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

Lighting, Sound Technicians & Seamstress
Riverside
• New England's Largest Amusement Park •
Equal Opportunity Employer
60 Positions Available
10a.m. to 2p.m.
SAT. MARCH 16th, 1996
Show Auditions
DANCERS • COMIC ACTORS • SINGER-DANCERS
Saturday, March 16th 10am-2pm
Agawam, MA. Park Studios 1036 Suffield St.
Singers/Dancers 10am-1pm
Comic Actors & Specialty Performers 1pm-2pm
DANCERS/SINGERS PREPARE UP-TEMPO & BALLAD BRING AUDIO OR SHEET MUSIC WITH PROPER KEY, CHOREOGRAPHER WILL TEACH DANCE ROUTINE. BRING PROPER CLOTHES. APPLICANTS MUST BE 16 OR OLDER - BRING PHOTO & RESUME - FOR MORE INFO CALL (413) 786-0790

If You Are Driving Around With A Dirty Car...CUT it Out!
Save $5.50
Express Wash Reg. Price $4.50
Blue Coral Polish Reg. Price $4.00
Undercarriage Wash Reg. Price $1.50
Rust Inhibitor Reg. Price $1.50
Spot Free Finish Reg. Price $1.50
Total Reg. Price $13.00
Discount Coupon $5.50
You Pay Only $7.50
Golden Hands Car Wash
Not valid with any other coupons
Locations- F.L. Roberts
Amherst/Hadley 456 Russell next to BP
Chicopee 580 Montgomery St
Easthampton 104 Northampton St
East Longmeadow 141 North St
Ludlow 495 Center St
Springfield 1365 Boston Rd
Springfield 599 St. James St
Springfield 93 West Broad St
Westfield 90 South Maple St
West SPFLD. 538 Memorial Ave
West SPFLD. 3685 Westfield St
West SPFLD. 998 Riverdale St

Women with addictions learn to nurture themselves in workshop

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

In celebration of Women's Alcohol and Drug Awareness Week last week, Cooley Dickinson hospital offered a workshop for woman with addictions.

"Embracing the power within is kind of like a mind, body, and spiritual awakening," said Maggie Wynne, workshop developer and Dual Diagnosis coordinator for CDH's Behavioral Health Department.

As coordinator of the department, Wynne focuses on the mentally ill, and those with addictions to substances such as food, alcohol and drugs.

Last week's clinic was entitled "Nurturing the Self in Recovery: A Workshop for Women." The term recovery means that at one time the addiction was a problem, Wynne said. By the virtue of coming to the workshop, the person is already choosing to learn new ways to nurture oneself, she explained.

With addiction, your life stops to some degree and your inner growth and development is dampened, she said. While struggling with an addiction, women have a hard time nurturing themselves. But by learning different ways to cope with the addiction, addicts can chose not to resort to old methods of "getting high," Wynne said.

Women speak of the challenge of staying off the substance, but they also mention the life experience that began their addiction, said Clinical Services Manager Art Freedman. Some women have had trauma and emotional scarring from sexual abuse, violence, or mental abuse, he said.

The substances these women are addicted to anesthetize their painful experiences and provide an alternate way to dealing with it, said Freedman. The scary part of getting clean is that all those feelings may come back, he said.

Wynne described nurturing as a continuum that goes on forever. The purpose of this program was to assist women in exploring alternative ways to nurture themselves through recovery, she said.

The workshop allowed participants to learn about taking care of themselves through several alternative ways. The methods included meditation, nutrition and yoga, movement therapy, stress management, relaxation training, self-massage therapy and dance therapy.

Some of the tools the workshop offered came in the form of extensive handouts explaining each alternative way in aid of recovery, according to Wynne.

Child care and lunch were provided. One goal of the workshop was to attract women who might not be otherwise available to come, whether they be disabled, impoverished, or single mothers, said Wynne. Only recently have programs acknowledged women's special needs, especially when it comes to child care, according to Wynne.

Whether the addiction be to alcohol, food, or drugs, it affects the family, Wynne said. In a way, the family members are also going through the recovery from an addiction, she said. Therefore, family members were welcome to attend.

It was the first time that this workshop has been offered during Women's Alcohol and Drug Awareness Week, said Wynne. "I hope [the nurturing workshop] will be annual because CDH is committed to responding to community needs and promoting wellness in our community," she added.

The people who presented the alternative ways to nurture oneself through recovery also benefit since "we learn from each other," Wynne said.

"Taking good care of yourself... is healthy and nurturing," Freedman said.

JOKER
SPRING BREAK
Guys everywhere. Girls everywhere. Insanity everywhere
Mom and Dad were right. It is a madhouse. You call them up Tell them you're safe. And sound. They're relieved. And proud. You hang up. Then you continue playing strip poker

Clinton to support Israeli terrorist relief with $100 million

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Grieving with the Israeli people, President Clinton pledged $100 million on Thursday to the fight against terrorism. But he acknowledged that no one — not presidents or princes or prime ministers — can guarantee "a risk-free world." In an emotional trip that coupled meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres with a visit to the grave of Peres' slain predecessor, Yitzhak Rabin, Clinton imagined aloud how Americans would react to the terrorism that confronts Israel.

"Our people would be off the wall. They would be angry. They would be furious. They would want action," he said.

To that end, Clinton pledged the $100 million over two years to pay for anti-terrorism initiatives, including training, bomb-detection scanners, X-ray systems and robotics for handling suspect packages.

Israeli officials said they envisioned using much of the U.S. aid to help establish a separation zone with the West Bank to try to prevent terrorist infiltration. The idea of the zone, which would include electronic fences, guard towers and bomb-sniffing dogs, was first proposed by Rabin and was approved by the Israeli Cabinet March 3.

In Washington, however, a State Department official said, "The United States does not intend for any of its aid to be used in any kind of permanent separation zone."

Clinton intends to use $50 million already approved by Congress, and is asking for another $50 million for the fiscal year that begins in October.

"Fear must be conquered, security must be restored and peace must be pursued," Clinton said.

Shlomo Dror, spokesman for the Israel army liaison with the Palestinians, said the U.S. government was being asked to provide special training for bomb-sniffing dog units and for electronic equipment to be used along the separation line. Israel also needs helicopters and all-terrain vehicles to help patrol the zone, he said.

The proposal has been denounced by Palestinian leaders. Clinton left Israel last night, leaving behind a team of U.S. officials including CIA Director John Deutch and Secretary of State Warren Christopher to work on an anti-terrorism accord. The aim is to complete an agreement before Peres visits Washington late next month.

At a joint news conference with Clinton, Peres promised that the peace process would continue, although he said the terrorist attacks on Israel made it more complicated. "It's not black and white. It's like climbing a mountain. It is difficult, it takes time. You don't reach the peak in one jump," he said.

Clinton's visit came a day after the Red Sea summit, which saw Israelis, Arabs and other world leaders gathered together in an unprecedented joint stand against terrorism. "The foundation was laid down... to go ahead with peace and reject terror," Peres said.

Said Clinton, "Can we create a risk-free world here in Israel? No. Can we reduce the risks and do much better? Yes."

He brought with him a stone from the White House lawn, where Rabin had sealed with a handshake a landmark peace agreement with Yasser Arafat, now head of the Palestinian Authority.

Wearing a black skullcap, Clinton placed the stone on the slain prime minister's tombstone at Mt. Herzl Cemetery, in accordance with Jewish tradition. Rabin's widow, Leah, looked on, and afterward joined hands with Clinton. Rabin was killed Nov. 4 by a Jewish militant opposed to relinquishing Gaza and most of the West Bank to the Palestinians.

Clinton stopped, as well, at Beit Hinuch, a Jerusalem high school that lost three graduates in the four suicide bombings that have rocked Israel since Feb. 25. Outside, he told reporters: "If you want to be free and safe, you have to stand against terror. It doesn't matter whether you're Israelis or Palestinians."

By all appearances, Clinton's message was well-received by a country whose confidence in U.S.-backed land-for-peace deals with the Arabs was shaken by the bombings. All open societies are vulnerable to violence, he said.

In Tel Aviv, he said terrorism had its roots in "the grip of that ancient fear that life can only be lived if you're looking down on someone else."

"We know your pain is unimaginable, and in some extent unsharable, but America grieves with you," he said.

1-800-COLLECT
Save The People You Call Up To 44%.

Graduates
Wishing everyone a fun and safe Spring Break.
Three men on a lone quest to publish Friday's paper.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Viautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mc Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Cassimy Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphries Brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dutro Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Tina M. Ghosh Co-Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradise News Editor Maureen Mayerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Kelly Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist Casey Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life and changed its name to The Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then to The Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967. Second class postage paid at Amherst, MA 01004. Publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Erin go home

There's no point, in my mind, for heading out to a bar on Sunday night, whether it be here, my native Boston or anywhere else in this green-beer obsessed nation of ours. Even though the vast majority of students will be gone on break when St. Patrick's Day rolls around, this holiday joins New Year's Eve as the biggest amateur night in any bar considered the least bit hip.

Aside from "Is it okay to tip a quarter on the six drinks he just mixed us?", the most common phrases heard in bars this night are "I can't believe my fake ID worked" and "Let's go start a fight."

Dave Copeland

For some reason, every derelict and pompous brat goes out on St. Patrick's Day. People who are content to sit at home in their underwear 364 nights of the year while sucking on a Bud 30-pack and watching Beavis and Butthead re-runs, go out on St. Patrick's Day. People who normally stay put in the meat market bars which play Van Morrison's "Brown Eyed Girl" again and again spill over into the formerly best kept secrets of the area. While everybody may be Irish for the night, that doesn't stop everybody from being an asshole.

Any bartender or bouncer worth his salt will tell you the St. Paddy's shift is no fun. "Generally speaking, it's an okay night tip wise, but that's because of the quantity of people. The headaches these kids cause doesn't really make it worth it," said my friend Mary, who has worked off and on as a waitress at a popular Boston bar for the past five years.

"Everybody wants to be a champ on St. Patrick's Day," said a local bartender whose tour of duty has included McLean Via, Boston, New York and now Northampton. "It not as bad out here because of Spring Break, but it's not that good, either."

Indeed. Last St. Patrick's Day I spent the night in a hotel bar in Andover, which, to say the least, was making a bad situation worse. Andover is a town for the ridiculously rich and the incredibly vain — a fact that is only accented when you spend the night in a Marriott Hotel bar. Aside from a group of people from a darts convention (who spent most of the night hunkered by the pool tables wondering how their blue-collar gig got booked in this white-collar hell hole), everyone in the bar was a self-centered, Teva-wearing bastard.

At the bar I made the mistake of meeting a couple of guys who were also UMass students. After trying to sell me a fake ID that I obviously didn't need, they made small talk about what bars I liked to hang out at in Amherst.

"You go to Time Out?" I think I've seen you at Time Out."

"No," I said.

"Delano's? You must go to Delano's."

"No. Not usually."

"Then the Pub. You look like a Pub man."

"No," I said again, wondering exactly how a Pub man should look. I proceeded to enlighten them that there were, in fact, other places in the Amherst area that did have liquor licenses, and indeed these were good drinking establishments.

By the time last call rolled around, they were wise to the fact that we still had a virgin bottle of Tanquerey and a half case of beer in our room. The two hopeless dupes invited themselves up to our room for an after-hours.

"Sure," I said. "We're in room 521." The fact that we were in 221 didn't deter me from flagrantly lying.

Was it cruel of me to send these two drunks up to bang on some stranger's door, an episode that could have resulted in anything from them getting beat up to arrested? I suppose so. After all, their only crime was an inability to appreciate anything more complex than draft beer in a plastic cup. But anybody who wanders through their four years here saying things like, "I love Time Out" as they try to cop a cheap feel in a crowded bar deserves whatever happens to them in life.

Dave Copeland is a Collegian columnist

How to be a leprechaun

Why do millions of people celebrate St. Patrick's Day when the closest association they have to Ireland is Darby O'Gill and the Little People? Darby is a drunkard searching for mythological leprechauns and a pot of gold.

The holiday for leprechauns and the leprechaun-loving public is approaching. March 17 is more — not by much — than grabbing a drink and swaying to music. The holiday means dressing in green, forgetting difficulties and sticking a gaudy button reading "Kiss Me, I'm Irish" to a body part. Trying to trace the origin of the holiday is futile, but it is an interesting story.

In the early 20th century, St. Patrick's Day had its humble beginnings. Though many Irish people were receiving negative reactions to their massive emigration to America, the people needed a way to celebrate their heritage. Unfortunately, the start of this holiday did not begin with such a noble cause.

Patrick McNamara was trying to show off to his pub mates about how he could eat a raw potato. Though he refused to eat it that day, he agreed to do it the next day when he had an appetite.

Naturally, the next day was March 17 and every Irish person in the area went to the pub to watch Patrick look like a fool.

He did not finish even half of the potato when he became sick. The day was instantly legendary and celebrated annually in honor of Patrick. However, as most Irish stories go, the facts changed through the years. Somehow, March 17 became a celebration for St. Patrick, the man who brought Catholicism to the Irish. Today, the holiday is simply meant to have fun.

It is irrelevant whether or not your ancestry comes from leprechaun land. To celebrate the holiday, one must either be Irish, know someone who is Irish, or be able to lie about the first two criteria.

Another purpose of St. Patrick's Day is to transform oneself into a proud Irishman — most people prefer to become a leprechaun. The difference is being able to say "Top of the mornin'" without laughing and having a pot. People do not understand the responsibility of a leprechaun. They need to be jovial constantly and spread plenty of blarney. Blarney is more than a fictitious stone created to entice tourists to lay upside-down overhanging a 50-foot castle to kiss a urine slab. It means making sarcastic comments with a straight face and having people laugh either at you or with you.

Blarney is more than a fictitious stone created to entice tourists to lay upside-down overhanging a 50-foot castle to kiss a urine slab. It means making sarcastic comments with a straight face and having people laugh either at you or with you.

Daniel Sullivan

Though few are chosen many can achieve a suitable imitation. Red hair and an ability to have a matching face on request is essential. One will make the hair and thinking about your father in his kilt will color the cheeks. Attire must include at least one green garment. All leprechauns sport green each day of the year. They have a responsibility to continue the memory of millions of leprechauns.

Having the remotest ability to play a musical instrument is beneficial. However most people fall back on having a relative who can play the fiddle or bang a drum really loud. Family members who can play the bagpipes are instantly accepted as one-day leprechauns.

A leprechaun's vocabulary is distinct. They speak really quietly and quickly. It is better for people to think you said something witty than for them to actually hear you. Pint replaces any reference to measurement size. Also, time has not made it into their speech pattern. If a leprechaun knows what day it is, then he is in good shape. Laid-back is not a state of mind — it is a permanent condition.

Rainbows are chosen as the designated hiding place of the pot of gold since it always rains in Ireland. Leprechauns are not allowed in sunshine except when a rainbow is present. They are faithful keepers of the pot who seldom lie, but are tricky when captured. Do not forget to get your three wishes and remember that asking more times loses any claim to gold.

Leprechauns welcome new members. Do not be confused by a them. They smile because they can not find a reason not to. If you are fortunate, a leprechaun will teach you how to dance the jig. Leprechauns like to smile and are very nice, just do not steal their pots of gold.

Daniel Sullivan is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SEE, MIKE, EVEN WITH THE ACE DISPARITY, WE'RE NOT THAT DIFFERENT. SURE, YOU COME BY YOUR CYNICISM THROUGH YEARS OF DISILLUSIONMENT, WHEREAS I SIMPLY GREW UP CYNICAL...
BUT ON PLANET WARNSVILLE, RANDOM DESPAIR BECOMES THE DEFAULT PARADIGM FOR ALL. WORKER DIES? IT'S WHERE'S THE GENERATIONS — YOUR TRIBE AND MINE — NOW CONVERGE!
I WANT ME TO SCROLL THAT BY YOU AGAIN?
PLEASE. AND COULD I HAVE A HARD COPY?

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Making the choice

Remember those Spring Break flyers on all those bulletin boards that had women in bikinis on them? This year, they changed them, so they weren't the soft-core pornography they had been. For a while, my friends and I were calling their 800 numbers and asking them not to use women's bodies as a selling point for their trips, and I guess it might have made a difference.

Ben Zeman

A few years ago, I was between classes in the School of Management building. I was spending my time going to the classrooms and happily ripping down the flyers that were the most pornographic. When I got to one classroom, there was a guy studying, and as I was ripping them down he asked me what I was doing. I got a little nervous, but started to explain to him why.

"Well, Catherine MacKinnon says that if you turn a human being into a thing, violence is inevitable. I think these ads are using women's bodies to sell these vacations to guys like you and me," I said.

After arguing with me for a few minutes, the guy (call him Jack) proceeded to tell me about his Spring Break experiences in Florida.

"It's exactly like that! The women get into wet T-shirt contests, and us guys try to pick them up. But the guys who work out more always get the girls, and guys who look like we do, never do. It makes me feel bad sometimes," he said.

I thought about male socialization to be the "perfect man," not showing feelings, always in control, never being close to other men and so forth, and the pain that socialization had caused me as a boy. "So why did you go, Jack?"

"Well, a guy's gotta relax somehow! We work so hard here as students. Spring Break is the only time we have to blow off steam. What do you want to do, take that away from us?" he said.

"So are you saying that the women provide the relaxation for the men? Doesn't that make them into objects?" I asked.

"Naw, 'cuz they love it, too. They wouldn't be there in the wet T-shirt contests if they didn't want to," he said.

I thought about the women I knew who had become obsessed with thinness, and the throat infections because of throwing-up so much. I thought about their "choice" to be heterosexual in a society where that was what they only saw. I thought about an exotic dancer I knew and her "choice" to become that in a society where she got paid more for taking off her clothes than for using her brain.

In Europe, according to the locally-based Coalition Against Trafficking in Women, travel agents send European and American men to countries like Thailand, where prostitution is the number one contributor to the country's gross national product. Twelve-year-old girls are brought into the cities from Cambodia and promised good jobs, only to be pimped into prostitution. I thought about the Philippines, and their sex industry employing millions of women that only started when our naval base came there. The advertisements for these sex tours look an awful lot like these Spring Break ads.

What is the responsibility of men who think of women as objects to use, in the name of "relaxing" after a long, hard semester? What is the responsibility of women who work at Hooters or pose for Playboy? Is it a "choice" when women are still paid less than men in virtually all fields, and when out of the Fortune 500 companies there is only one female CEO? How can men not contribute to a "rape culture" where women are seen as the property of men, to be owned, looked at, beaten, raped and put on pedestals at a man's whim? Whose Spring Break is it, anyway?

I asked Jack a much less articulate version of these questions, and he agreed that men have a responsibility to stop the systemic objectification of women. I asked him what would happen if, this year on Spring Break, he organized some men to stand outside the wet T-shirt contests with signs saying "This Objectifies Women" and "Real Men Listen to Women." He laughed and said that if I came with him, maybe he would.

Jack, have a great Spring Break this year, too. Maybe you'll see me down there with my sign.

Ben Zeman is a UMass student

Letters to the Editor

Nirenstein's facts not straight

To the Editor:

I am writing this to respond to "Freedom to get obliterated" (Collegian, March 13) by one Ms. Leslie Nirenstein. I address this letter directly to the article written by Ms. Nirenstein and to no other persons or groups with which she may be affiliated. I find this article crude, inaccurate, uninformed and personally offensive. It is not an opinion or editorial piece at all, but merely a malicious and unfounded attack on the collective character of the Greek area. It had no place on the Op/Ed page and I am angered and disappointed that it was even published in the Collegian.

Ms. Nirenstein's graphic characterizations of fraternity brothers as "the people who toilet paper trees and tip cows" are completely inappropriate. I can only wonder what would happen if I, a UMass student and fraternity brother, were to even attempt publishing an equally insulting commentary about women on this campus. I have no doubt that I would be lectured by both the administration and the student body about how "politically incorrect" and wrong it is to degrade anyone. Apparently Ms. Nirenstein and the [Op/Ed] editor of the Collegian believe it is acceptable for people other than themselves to be publicly denigrated and humiliated.

I would also like to bring to Ms. Nirenstein's attention the inaccuracy of her characterizations of fraternity brothers as being serial rapists. To say, "Rape will continue as long as these fraternities continue to disrespect and degrade women" is to imply that fraternity members are single-handedly responsible for the committing of rape on this campus.

However, the truth, as it always does, has borne itself out in the form of the Sexual Assault Advisory Committee's quarterly report entitled, "Sexual Assault Centralized Report Form." This little-known report compiled by the Everywoman's Center indicates that for the '94–'95 school year, of the 145 separate reports of sexual assault on this campus, three were associated with the Greek area. That makes for 1.9 percent; according to this report women are safer in a fraternity house than in their own dorm room, or even the library (7.2 percent). Ms. Nirenstein, I am an "ignorant, misogynist, homophobic bastard," but I still took the time to learn something about the problem before I started writing propagandistic newspaper articles. I strongly suggest you do the same.

I will conclude by questioning the objectivity of Ms. Nirenstein and the Collegian staff's objectivity in this manner. None of this public outrage surfaced until the Greek area was implicated. No less than 142 women were assaulted by non-fraternity members last year; what did you ever do for them? No one I have spoken to or contacted in the writing [of] this letter can recall any similar public outcry. Sexual assault is commonplace within the dorms, a fact the administration has long concealed, but it takes the implication of a Greek house to trigger public demonstration. As an American I am disgusted by the total disregard for due process shown here.

Brian Entler
Theta Chi

Stewart's comments inappropriate

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article entitled "Officials look at rape awareness" (Collegian, March 7). More specifically, I would like to address the comments made by the Assistant Dean of Students Eileen Stewart. She was quoted saying, "Women should not be with people who are excessively drinking or drugging, and they should not drink to the point where they seem vulnerable."

I found her comments disturbing and typical of the common "boys will be boys, so girls must beware" attitude. Another quote read, "Women should not be without transportation or with people they do not know." By telling women they should not do this, and to avoid that, they become further victims, more restricted and dominated by a rape society.

We need to shift the emphasis from "what she can do" to "what he can do." We need to stop saying, "Well, what was she doing there in the first place?", or "Well, why was she walking alone anyway?" Instead we need to yell, "Why does he rape?" "Why isn't he prosecuted?" "Why is he allowed to continue?"

Men rape. Women do not. Women, whether they go to fraternity parties, walk alone at night or "avoid dangerous situations" (as Stewart suggests) cannot stop men from raping. Only men can stop themselves from raping.

So until we begin to place more emphasis on the actions of men, the present idea that women must "take care" will continue to breed the rape culture of which we are all victims.

Katie Shepard
Amherst

Arts & Living

Spring break concert schedule

Performances include Pete Seeger, Joan Baez & Knuckle Sandwich

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Spring break is finally here. After six weeks of homework, exams, roommates and lack of sleep we have a week to relax and enjoy the real world. If you are one of the disillusioned who don't realize that the NCAA basketball tournament are the three most-exciting weeks of the year, there are several worthwhile concerts taking place in the area.

Folk fans get ready for an all star week. The legendary Pete Seeger takes the stage at the Union High School Auditorium in Brattleboro, Vt. on Saturday. Then Woodstock alumnus Joan Baez performs at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College on Tuesday. Finally June Tabor, an up-and-coming British folkie, appears at the Iron Horse on March 24.

For a more rockin' event look no further than Frank Black at Pearl Street. The former leader of the Pixies returns to the area once more in support of his new album, The Cult of Ray. Opening up Sunday's show will be Jonny Polonsky and Reid Paley.

For more Irishy ways to spend St. Patrick's Day the Iron Horse hosts Christine Lavin and Don White. Pearl Street welcomes the Big Bad Bollocks. Finally, the Grotto hosts a St. Patrick's Day party.

The blues will be alive and swinging at the Iron Horse. Sixteen-year-old Derek Trucks shows off his stuff tonight. Luther Guitar Johnson Jr. returns again tomorrow nigh. Finally on Monday night, blues master John Mayall will shine bright.

As for local bands there are several worthwhile shows over spring break. The University of Massachusetts' own Knuckle Sandwich headlines Pearl Street alongside The Marshes, Accidental Birth, Wasted Time and Mad Happy. The five band showcase happens March 22. The Grotto hosts several local shows over the next week. First Cameron's Way, Slush and Star Ghost Dog will share the stage Saturday night. Next on Thursday Soup, The Coyotes and JABA take the Grotto stage.

Arguably the hottest venue of the week is the brand new Webster Theatre in Hartford which is celebrating their grand opening this weekend. Tonight reggae stars Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers bring their hot steamy act to Connecticut. Tomorrow night Ladysmith Black Mambazo performs. Finally Joan Jett and the Blackhearts will rock the house down with all their classic punk hits Saturday, March 23.

COURTESY MELANIE NISSEN

Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers will be among those performing in the area over spring break.

Oscar countdown: sometimes sentiment dominates awards

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If the Motion Picture Academy selects Massimo Troisi of The Postman as the best actor of 1995, it will mark the second time an actor has received the Oscar posthumously. It could also confirm what many locals believe: Sentiment plays a role in the awards.

So far the only posthumous award for an actor went to Peter Finch for his mad TV anchorman Howard Beale in Network in 1976.

Would he have won anyway? Possibly so, but he faced strong competition from William Holden in the same film, as well as Robert De Niro in Taxi Driver and Sylvester Stallone in Rocky.

Posthumous Academy Awards are not uncommon. Sidney Howard was voted one for the script of Gone With the Wind in 1939 (though several others contributed to the writing). Douglas Fairbanks Sr. (1939) and Robert Benjamin (1979) were given honorary awards after their deaths. Audrey Hepburn was voted another in 1992; she died before it could be presented.

Several composers, art directors and technicians have been honored posthumously. Howard Ashman won for his lyrics of Beauty and the Beast (1991) after he had died of AIDS.

The Oscars are often given a year late," William Holden once remarked.

That appears to have been true for Bette Davis when she won for a B picture, Dangerous, in 1935. Critics thought she deserved it for Of Human Bondage the year before. But 1934 was the year of the It Happened One Night sweep.

Joan Fontaine took the prize for Suspicion in 1941, though her more impressive role came in Rebecca, 1940.

James Stewart was unforgettable as the crusading senator in Mr. Smith Goes to Washington (1939). He won the following year for the comedy The Philadelphia Story. Voters may also have been swayed by the fact that Stewart was one of the first stars to enlist in the armed services.

Marlon Brando delivered a classic performance in On the Waterfront (1954), his first Oscar. But shouldn't he have won three years earlier for his signature role in A Streetcar Named Desire?

Holden himself gave an Oscar-worthy performance in Sunset Boulevard in 1950. Three years later he got the big prize for Stalag 17.

A study of Academy history reveals other examples of awards that might have been influenced by sentiment.

James Cagney could have been honored for one of his powerful dramatic roles. Instead, the Academy chose him for the wartime musical, Yankee Doodle Dandy (1942).

Overlooked for his most memorable role in Casablanca (1943), Humphrey Bogart finally was rewarded for The African Queen in 1951.

Some performers are honored for their body of work, rather than a specific performance. John Wayne, for example, took home an Oscar in 1969 for playing a scratchy outlaw-turned-federal marshal in True Grit. Don Ameche at the age of 77 received his first nomination and won for his role in Ron Howard's Cocoon in 1985.

Besides Wayne and Ameche, other performers appear to have been honored for their body of work rather than individual performances.

Among them: Henry Fonda, On Golden Pond (1982); Paul Newman, The Color of Money (1986); Katharine Hepburn, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner (1968).

Handicaps may also play a role, as with the handless war veteran Harold Russell (The Best Years of Our Lives, 1946) and the hearing impaired Marlee Matlin (Children of a Lesser God, 1986), though both performances were impressive.

And did Elizabeth Taylor really deserve the Oscar for Butterfield 8 (1960) which she herself denounced? Or did she win because of the headlined illness that reportedly threatened her life?

Jazz concert showcases skills of University groups

By Joyce Yang
Collegian Correspondent

ANNUAL JAZZ SHOWCASE
Bowker Auditorium
March 12

Despite the specter of mid-terms breathing down their necks, a near-capacity crowd found themselves at Bowker Auditorium Tuesday night in happy expectation for the 15th Annual Jazz Showcase. This year's theme was simply "Our Favorite Things," leaving the route clearly open for a wide range of diverse playing.

The University Jazz Ensemble, led by David Spurny, opened the show with two standard tunes, "Lady Bird" and "Blue Moon," sliding into a swing beat after discordant beginnings. Appropriately, this segment contained the seeds of what was to come later in the evening.

Following their act, a half circle of singers known as the Vocal Jazz Ensemble, directed by Dr. Horace D. Boyer, wooed the audience with their rendition of "At Last," a bluesy tune of happy melancholy that also featured a sweet vocal, compelling bass and exquisitely lyrical piano solo. They reappeared again after intermission with a more upbeat tune,"Jumpin' with Symphony Sid," that featured a three- way call and response scatting sequence.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The University Jazz Ensemble performed Tuesday night at Bowker Auditorium.

The evening was interspersed with selections by smaller student groups such as The Jazz Bones, who played a ripping version of "Killer Joe."

One of the tightest sounding ensembles was the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, conducted by Chris Mertz. The sound was brighter and the solos were noticeably more mature as was evident in their piece, "What's New."

"Third Degree Moon Burn," an original piece by one of their own, Adam Scott, started off with a "Birdlandish" feel, then grew in volume with muted trumpets and brass until it finally broke into a syncopated rhythm of an Arabian/Mexican genre. One could almost envision a sweaty Antonio Banderas about to fold in on a heated game of poker. At any rate, the solos grew heavier and more sustained— then they became combined as the saxes, trombones and trumpet played individual solos simultaneously in an eerie, futuristic Dixieland. The ever- insistent rhythm section managed to hold the tension of the piece even through stop-time solos.

"Another Day Another Chance" began with sophisticated, lilting piano lines that built with the horns to a state of eventual dissonance. This turned out to be a fairly unpredictable piece that moved from a deep blue reverie to fast, punching lines to a bouncing swing.

The Sax Quintet then gave a new twist to Monk's "Round Midnight" with their "After Hours" — a smooth sounding, ebbing piece with a plaintive cry.

Ready to experiment with breaking traditional structure, the Jazz Lab Ensemble nevertheless opened with a traditional rendering of a classic; "Flight of the Foo Birds," (complete with sinewy solos and a typical Count Basie closure), before dashing off an unconventional run of "My Funny Valentine." With a jazz-rock rhythmic pattern, this Rodgers and Hart staple evolved into a staggered, almost brutally pulsing end.

Exit 19 then fed the audience some "Corn Bread," an interestingly bright tune that began with an R&B feel but definitely grew into and faded with a cha-cha groove.

Finally, the University Jazz Ensemble returned with "Hip Bones," featuring the often unrecognized trombone solo. In this very swingy piece, all the soloists proved their proficiency as they incessantly played together. A particularly impressive section was between two trombone players as they exchanged a rather daring call and response sequence.

"Time Check," their final performance, was truly happening. The guitarist scatted along with his solo, the drummer rode his cymbals and crashed like there was no tomorrow, and all the while, the brass punched and ran incredibly tight lines in unison. At its climatic finish, one almost expected Spurny to introduce Conan O'Brian.

Joshua Wolloff, a bass sax in the University Jazz Ensemble enthusiastically chimed, "It was great to see so many people show up."

On the concert itself, Joe Oneschuk said, "I think that this a direct reflection of the overall strength of the music department— especially the jazz department; it really shows the character of the students here."

Hollywood stunt artists fight for recognition at Oscars

By John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The studios roll the dice for millions every time the cameras roll. Actors gamble future paychecks whenever they take on a tough role. But stunt performers actually risk their lives — not simply livelihoods — in jaw-dropping action scenes.

The Oscar voters recognize — and reward — the accomplishments of the studios and actors. But the essential and more dangerous work of stunt players is shunned by the Academy Awards.

"There's no recognition. The industry doesn't know how to deal with us," says Mike Ryan, a 20-year stunt driver whose credits include Terminator 2: Judgment Day.

Only in the last three years have stunt coordinators been invited to join the Oscar voting ranks. Some of the newcomer stunt members predict there will be a stunt sequence trophy presented by the decade's end. Others are skeptical, noting that stunt players only get attention when something goes wrong.

More important, perhaps, is that a stunt Oscar might even be dangerous: An Academy Award may encourage an unsafe can-you-top-this mindset. Says Ryan: "They're afraid if they hang the brass ring up there, somebody will die jumping for it."

As the action film has emerged as the world's most popular genre, stunt performers and coordinators have become one of Hollywood's most sought-after (but unheralded) specialists. Good stunts — such as the 700-foot bungee jump off a dam in the 1995 James Bond movie Goldeneye — can distinguish a movie from its bombs-and-bullets brethren, creating powerful audience interest and huge ticket sales.

Stunts are a perfect distillation of the make-believe behind moviemaking. Special effects can put Tom Hanks in John Kennedy's White House, but only stunt players can make Sylvester Stallone look like a rock climber in Cliffhanger and Chris O'Donnell appear to be a gymnast in Batman Forever.

The demand for stunts is not entirely good news. Veteran stunt coordinators say the thirst for more and more stunts comes just as the studios are trying to hold production budgets down.

Consequently, stunts are going wrong and people are being hurt — or worse.

Stuntwoman Sonja Davis was killed in a stunt sequence in Eddie Murphy's 1995 movie Vampire in Brooklyn and Janet Wilder, a member of a respected Hollywood stunt family, was killed when a boat jump backfired in the upcoming Gone Fishin'.

"There's no penalty for doing things wrong and there's no reward for doing things right," says Scott, whose stunt work appeared in Free Willy and The Indian in the Cupboard.

Producers are so eager to film the unfilmable that when one stunt performer says a scene can't be done the producers will go out and hire somebody else who says it can. "I can go out there today and find somebody who will land on their head," Scott says. "No one will care — or stop you."

That largely unregulated system hints at the strange limbo in which stunt performers and coordinators find themselves. "The reputation is we're daredevils and idiots. You don't get any press for doing your job right," Scott says.

Twenty-five stunt experts have been added to the Academy's rosters since, but the membership is still disproportionately low considering some 2,500 members of the Screen Actors Guild claim to be stunt performers. Visual effects members have their own branch (as do actors, directors, and so on) within the Academy, but stunt performers have not yet been granted branch status.

"The long-range plan is to try to get some recognition," says David Ellis, one of the first Academy stunt members, whose work on 50 films includes Waterworld and Clear and Present Danger.

"But the best way to handle business is to tread lightly. We've been making some gains and I think (an Oscar) is going to happen. The Academy is open to change."

Competing for awards, Ellis says, won't make stunts any more dangerous. "There's competition in all aspects of filmmaking," he says. "And visual effects have allowed us to do things more safely than ever before."

Furthermore, Ellis says, a stunt Oscar — and the attending film clips— could enliven the International Academy Awards broadcast.

"For production value, it would be exciting for the viewer," he says. "You could have a stunt award instead of another dance number."

WANTED
The Collegian is taking applications for:
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
Paid Position! Flexible Hours! No Telemarketing!
We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.
If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Pete or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement
REWARD great resume builder! Great pay!

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10. 25 a. passant at amherst 256-0733 145 main st. northampton 586-0155
... AT A TIME.
...ONE BOX...

Roger B. Talbot
Licensed Massage Therapist
Deep Muscle Therapy
Reduce Stress...Tension
Nervousness...Improve Muscle Tone
Circulation...Relaxation
Swedish & Sports Massage
Call For Appointment
598-8416
1-800-929-8416
MEMBER AMTA
Roger B. Talbot

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY UNTIL 6 PM TO BEATRICE
MT. FARMS 4
Call Theatre For Showtimes
HAMPSHIRE 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes

Sports

hoop

continued from page 8

said. "He and Carmelo played great basketball. [They] did their thing."

Even though the Minutemen's 12-0 run put the game out of reach, the Golden Knights wouldn't go away quietly. UCF came into the game with the reputation as a good three-point shooting team and they didn't disappoint. As a whole, the team shot 29 treys, with Eric Riggs leading the way with six on the night, including four in a row. Harry Kennedy, who came into the game as UCF's leading three- point threat, finished with four on the night.

"I told their coach they really did a nice job. They were fearless out there, trying to figure out ways of winning. If we gave them more open threes, they would have made them," Calipari said.

Weeks played a solid 28 minutes off the bench finishing with 13 points and seven boards. Camby, who had to leave the game midway through the second half because of a cut suffered on his forehead that required four stitches, finished with 14 points and a career-high 17 boards.

rematch

continued from page 8

looks so I shoot them, and they were going in for me today."

Knight will be Padilla's counterpart tomorrow, and just as the Minutemen point guard was the spark for his team, Knight was also the catalyst for Stanford in its first round win.

"They give me the freedom that if I feel I can create something, go ahead and create," Knight said of his role on the team. "I was just trying to get myself open or someone else open. Taking charge doesn't mean I have to shoot the ball, taking charge just means getting the team under control and getting the ball to the right people at the right time."

Overall, Calipari isn't pleased with the renewal of last year's tourney game because of the Cardinal's familiarity with his squad.

"We're not looking forward to it," Calipari said. "They're a good basketball team, and Brevin is as good as there is in the country. They'll be better prepared because they know us. It will be a very difficult game for us to win."

softball

...continued from page 8

three outings. First year program Florida Atlantic and Bradley, playing its first game of the year, round out UMass' opening round docket.

The top two teams from each of the four pools will advance to a single-elimination championship round.

"We feel good going down to Florida and want to come back with a winning record," coach Elaine Sortino said. "We're in the toughest pool in that tournament. Usually there aren't two ranked teams in the same pool, but we have them and Western Illinois who's on a streak."

After the tournament the team will face No. 9 Florida State in a double-header on Monday at 9 a.m. UMass dropped its earlier meeting with the Lady Seminoles this year, 4-1, at the NSCA Head-Off Classic in Columbus, Georgia. The Minutewomen were strong in that game, maintaining the close score despite making nine errors.

UMass and Florida State generally produce unexpected results. Last year UMass blanked the Lady Seminoles 8-0 in Amherst on May 13 in the Diamond Classic, becoming the only team to beat then-No. 11 Florida State by mercy rule in the regular season. Last March the Minutewomen played a pair of one-run games at Tallahassee, losing 5-4 and 4-3.

The Minutewomen will have to contend with Renee Espinoza, Florida State's star pitcher, and this week's national Player of the Week. Espinoza, who pitched in the Lady Seminoles' triumph over UMass earlier this year, posted a 4-1 record and 0.64 ERA this past week, only losing to UCLA. Espinoza threw four complete games, allowed just three earned runs, seven total, and struck out 44 batters in 33 innings.

The Minutewomen will face Drake and Eastern Illinois on Tuesday and Wednesday in Tallahassee.

Minutewomen Notes: A highlight to this weekend is the possibility of Sortino winning the 500th game of her illustrious coaching career while in Florida. Sortino currently has 495.

Sortino, who has averaged 33 wins for each of her 15 years at UMass, has the 19th most wins among active Division I coaches and the most of any in the northeast region. Her .681 career winning percentage ranks 17th nationally.

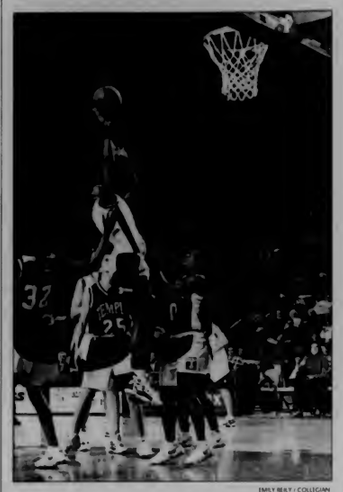
"It's a huge milestone," associate coach Mona Stevens said. "There are not a lot of coaches who have achieved that milestone. It's quite an accomplishment for her to reach that, especially with the time frame, being in an area [the snowy Northeast region] that's difficult to build [a program] in, and playing top teams. It's one heck of an accomplishment."

women's hoop

continued from page 8

quicker and I think we have to utilize our speed to win."

If the Minutewomen roll over the Spartans, they take to the floor of Gampel Pavilion once again to face the winner of Saturday's UConn/Howard game on Monday. Perhaps Minutewomen fans will finally get the UMass/UConn matchup they've been dreaming of.



EMILY BEAT / COLLEGIAN

Octavia Thomas and the UMass women's basketball team will make their NCAA debut in first-round action against Michigan State Saturday.

NBA

continued from page 8

debut to the lowly Philadelphia 76ers. Most notably, the Knicks 32-point shellacking of the Chicago Bulls Sunday was one of the truly great performances given by any team this season.

As impressive as the 104-72 final score was, there was a difference in this game that did not show up on the stat sheet. Watching the game, seeing Van Gundy enthusiastically pace the sidelines, calling out defenses with unbridled enthusiasm, was refreshing. In the mere span of a week, Madison Square Garden was transformed from living the death of denial only to play to the peak of perfection. To quote the marvelous one, Marv Albert, "the Garden was rockin."

Although Van Gundy has not officially been given an "interim" title, it is unlikely that his term will carry over to next season. Potential candidates already being considered and a "short list" should arise come season's end. Viable candidates include current NBA coaches Mike Fratello (Cleveland), Larry Brown (Pacers) as well as Chicago's Phil Jackson. While it is awfully early to break down the candidates that management will interview, several names are worthy of mention.

Fratello, a New Jersey native, would be a natural fit in the big city. In Cleveland he had made something out of virtually nothing for several years and countless times has proved he can triumph through adversity. DC's odds 3-1.

Brown, a proven winner, would love nothing more than to come home to the tri-state area. However, in order for valid consideration to be given, Knick management would have to clear up any doubts about Brown's personal long term plans. DC's odds 7-1.

As reports continue to be generated, one may read names such as Pitino, John Thompson, Chris Ford and even John Calipari. However, when push comes to shove the choices virtually narrow themselves. Pitino and Thompson would make fine additions to New York but have pledged allegiance to their respective programs. Ford is, well, Lou Nelson-like and Calipari's key to Amherst would be way to small for the gates of Gotham.

Overall, whoever is coaching in New Yurk will have to recruit a "big-time" free agent. After all, that is essentially the reason why Nelson was dumped now, not later. Management was aware that their players did not want to play for Nellie, so why should Juwan Howard, Alonzo Mourning or any other free agent. This situation should heat up again at the conclusion of the playoffs... so stay tuned.

Spanning the "Globe"

• A Big Mac in the desert? New from the rumor mill is a report that proclaims current Notre Dame head coach John MacLeod will replace current Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. For those who have forgotten, MacLeod spent 13 consecutive years in the Valley of the Sun, second in NBA history to the great Red Auerbach.

• The Chicago Bulls recently signed ex-Piston John Salley to a 10-day contract. The move came after Salley received a strong recommendation from another ex-Piston Dennis Rodman. Hmm...who will Rodman request next, Fennis Dembo, Ozzy Osbourne?

Where are they now?

1) Walter Berry
2) Stuart Gray
3) Jaren Jackson
4) Kurk Lee
5) Rich Manning

Darren Cohen is a Collegian sports columnist.

lax

continued from page 8

off pre-season No. 1 Syracuse, No. 2 Princeton and No. 6 Brown.

UMass goalie John Kasselakis knows he is in for a real challenge tomorrow.

"Coach gave me the nod [as the starting keeper] and this is my team," Kasselakis said. "I'm ready for Virginia, I've played against some of those guys over the summer. Those are three of the top six attackers in the country and I'd love nothing better than to beat them."

CASEY KANE / COLLEGIAN

Brendan Glass, who scored four goals in UMass' opener Tuesday, will lead the Minutemen attack against Virginia Saturday.

Collegian Graphics

"we come from the land of the ice and snow..."

But who wants to think about snow? Have a great Spring Break!!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
For a good time ... call us on the web ... www ... umass.edu/~umx or umass.edu/~umx/personal.html
Kai Chi - Delivering Sunday thru Thursday 11-1pm and every Friday and Saturday 11am-3am 586-7774

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton one bedroom apt take over the lease 549-6700
Moving off Campus? Spacious 2 bed room apartment. Heat hot water gas included on bus route 5 minutes to campus call 549-6779

AUTO FOR SALE

Mazda 323 86 Automatic just inspected 85k PSB
1985 Ford Mustang LX 59 K miles very well maintained smooth ride 1800/BO 413-863-8616
78 Buick Wagon new tires runs great looking $900 Call 549-9118
89 Toyota Celica AT A/C Sony CD player many new parts 91,600 miles $1000 546-0763
1986 Saab 900 Excellent condition 153K miles $2500 / B.O. 253-4132
1986 Dodge Colt Good solid transportation low miles Call 253-4012
1987 Lynx 4 door at $1200 bo 323-4161
Honda Prelude S 1988 5 speed snow tires moon roof radio $3800 549-6149
For Spring Break Toyota 1980 Station Wagon snow tires only $900 Needs to sell! 584-8273

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Escort 1991 LX The best in town Marcello 549-7326 $5000

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $1,000's weekly stuffing envelopes at home For free information send a S.A.S.E. to Investment Distributors P.O. Box 3219 Cora Bay, OR 97420
Summer Jobs - Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is seeking seasonal warehouse/delivery personnel Housing assistance for exceptional candidates send resume or letter of interest to Brian K. Smith, Operations Manager, Island Food Products PO Box 4068 Vineyard Haven, MA 02568
Productive Manager Wanted $7-$10/hour South Shore of Boston to Bourne area Call now Space limited John Trudeau 800 829 4777

FOR SALE

PowerBook 150 8MG RAM 250 HD Excel Word, Claris, Beefcase, More! Only 2 Weeks of $1000/BO 546 6867
Fully loaded 486 Compact Gateway lap top with detachable screen Electronic pen Trans script into text 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot) Bubble jet printer $1,000 546-4736
Brother Word Processor with spread sheets, business letter, and thesaurus software Originally bought for $300 and valued at $400 resale price $150 or best offer Call 549 3774 for more information!
Live Concert Tapes. Nirvana, Bruce, Dead, Phish, Pearl Jam, Ton, Many More 256-1590

FOUND

Gold Bracelet near Police Station Call Joe at (413) 467-2738

PERSONALS

Romeo O la pasen cabron en Cancun Proximo Jamaica
To the Guys in the Blue Pontiac 703 WEB Thank you for helping us out of E-lot on 3/8 afternoon From the girls in the blue Buick

ROOM FOR RENT

Amherst 2BR $766 67 each/mo (heat, cable incl.) Josh or Gabe 253-1404
Room for Rent. Belchertown, beautiful house. For info call Justin 323-7560
4 Bedroom house need immediately For more info call Pam 253-4633

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906
Internet Access. $25 monthly Account includes your own websites Contact TIAC at (800)644-4606

TRAVEL

Spring Break 96
Panama City Beach from $129
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas from $369
Guaranteed lowest prices
Endless Summer Tours
1 800 234 7007

WANTED TO RENT

Three Bedroom Apt. In Puffton. Willing to take over your lease Call ASAP Rena 546-3167

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Dilbert By Scott Adams

THE BUSINESS PLAN FOR YOUR START-UP IS IDIOTIC BUT I'M GOING TO PROVIDE THE VENTURE CAPITAL FUNDING ANYWAY.
WE'LL GENERATE LOTS OF MEDIA HYPE, GO PUBLIC AND MAKE MILLIONS BY SHAFTING GREEDY AND IGNORANT INVESTORS.
THE LATIN WORD FOR "CLOSE YOUR EYES AND OPEN YOUR MOUTH" IS "PROSPECTUS."
THIS IS EXACTLY WHY I'M AFRAID OF DOGS

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WALLY AND I STARTED OUR OWN COMPANY. WE'RE SELLING THE PRODUCT THAT YOU SAID NOBODY WANTS.
SOON WE WILL BE RICH
WE DO OUR VICTORY JIG IN YOUR FACE.
BA BUM
WHEN HE SHOWED YOU YOUR EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT - WHERE YOU GAVE ALL PATENT RIGHTS TO THIS COMPANY - WHAT PART OF THE JIG WERE YOU DOING?
TURBO MOONING

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I CAN'T GET BOB GOODE OUT OF MY MIND!
YOU'RE NODDING! HE'S THE MOST FORGETTABLE GUY I EVER MET!
HE SO DESPERATELY WANTED TO BE FAMOUS!
JUST LIKE I DESPERATELY WANNA HIT THE NAY!
AT THAT MOMENT...
I'VE BEEN STUDYING FOR MONTHS! WHEN DO I GET TO ACT?
CALM DOWN, MR GOODE!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

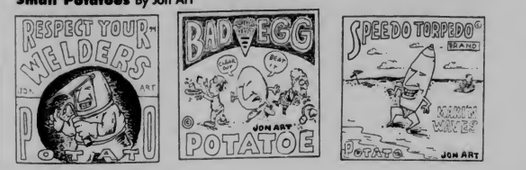
I... BE HONEST WITH YOU, MR GOODE! YOU'VE NO ACTING TALENT! NO CHARISMA!
YOU'RE TOO COLORLESS! YOU--
NO! STOP! YOU CAN'T--!!
TOO COLORLESS, AM I? I'LL SHOW HIM! I'LL SHOW THEM ALL!
EXIT

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Harry, the store butcher, showed me how the beef grinder works.
He put in fat trimmings, steaks that were brown, lots of things.
When it came out it looked perfectly good.
"Behold, Jim," he said. "I've taken something you might throw away and I've made it beautiful."

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Milkweed By Neil Golden

CAN WE GO WITH YOU, STUART?
WE'VE NEVER BEEN TO A GROCERY STORE BEFORE
YEAH WHATEVER, LET'S GO
CAN I RIDE IN THE CARRIAGE?
WHATEVER. LET'S GO
CAN I SPILL COKEN OIL IN THE AISLE?
AND RUN REALLY FAST AND SLIDE ON MY HEINIE?

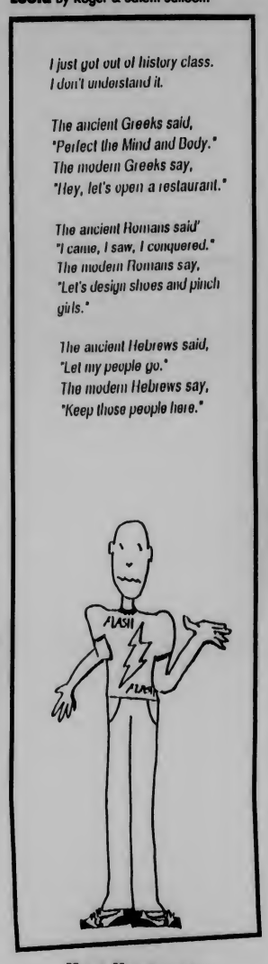
Puddington Bear By Sean, Mike, and Ilya

Well...
AND WHAT'S THE PROBLEM OF THE SAILOR OVER THE LOUNGE AND THE BATHROOM?
WE'RE NOT STICKING ON TOILETS, AND WE WON'T GET KILLED BY PEOPLE WHO THINK WE'RE GUARDING LOUNGE FURNITURE
RECEIVER DOES IT
THAT WAS JUST STUPID.
YOU SAY THAT I SAY "NUH."
WE WAS JUST STUPID THATS VERY GOOD!

Kippi By Barry Deutsch

WHY DO I HAVE A CAT?
HELLO! YOU MUST BE JO'S CRAZY-ASS ROOMMATE.
UH, I'M ZACK. MY ROOMMATE TURNED ME INTO A FROG.
STORIES THAT'S JUST THE SORT OF INANE, "LIKE-Y" THING THAT HAPPENS IN STUPID COMICS. LIKE, ALL THE TIME.
YOU MEAN... YOU THINK WE'RE IN A COMIC STRIP?
LOOKED IN A MIRROR LATELY?

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



I just got out of history class.
I don't understand it.
The ancient Greeks said,
"Perfect the Mind and Body."
The modern Greeks say,
"Hey, let's open a restaurant."
The ancient Romans said
"I came, I saw, I conquered."
The modern Romans say,
"Let's design shoes and pinch girls."
The ancient Hebrews said,
"Let my people go."
The modern Hebrews say,
"Keep those people here."
FLASH!

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Hi, Mrs. Franconi! We just stopped by to show you the check you would have received had you returned our envelope that said, 'You Are A Winner!' But since you had better things to do than fill out our silly old prize form ..."

Q: Why did the chicken cross the road?
A: To read the Collegian Comics.

Your Horoscope
By Joane Dixon

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — Your work day is subject to interruptions. Be ready to jump in any direction, unconventional ideas hold new appeal. Think twice before you betray a confidence.
TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — Surprising developments are linked to your mate or partner. Others may call your reaction unusual, but you know better. Get a handle on the facts before making an important presentation.
GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — Take a new approach to your work, cutting through red tape wherever possible. Listening to music proves soothing. Seek an older person's available before making a tough career decision.
CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — Big changes lie ahead. A famile member may decide to go out on their own. Give yourself time to get your bearings. Sprucing up your living quarters will boost your spirits. Choose soft colors.
LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — A light bulb goes off in your head. Yuo stop worrying about being accepted by someone with impossibly high standards. If you want to travel, do so.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Joint financial assets need bettere management. A conservative approach will further your cause. An older person shows romantic inclinations. You have regrets later on if you rush into a commitment.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — An unusual investment opportunity attracts your attention. Follow-upis essential for success. Your love life is better than expected. Children may occasionally rebel against authority.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — You enjoy a greater degree of freedom now. A special individual could grreatly influence your professional goals. Sharing a spiritual experience with a favorite companion will draw you closer together.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Stay in the background today. Your efforts could be seen as interference. Having two source of income is a blessing. Be discreet if romantically involved with a business associate.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Go ahead and play second liddle to your partner. Later on, your roles will be reversed. Think carefully before dipping into savings. Although "money talks" with certain people, you may not like what it says.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — Your skillful intervention could turn a difficult situation around. Help children find hobbies they will enjoy. Be on your best behavior around higher-ups. Co-workers are relying on your leadership. Keep a pledge.
PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — Keep your word to loved ones. Flexible working hours with an occasional rest break would be best for your health. Financial security depends on your talents. Tend to paperwork. Read instead of watching TV tonight.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Copy Editor ..... Laura Stock
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor ..... David X. Voldan
Production ..... Leon Latino
William M. Darby

Today's D.C. Menu

Berkshire

LUNCH: Grilled Sneeze, Sloppy Joe, Pizza, Spaghetti
DINNER: Chicken Tenders, Tri Bean Casserole, Pastabilities

Franklin

LUNCH: Chicken Cutlet, Philly Cheese Steak, Pizza
DINNER: 16 oz Steaks, Lobster, Wine and Cheese, JUST KIDDING FRANKLIN IS CLOSED

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamboogers, Chicken Cutlet, Sloppy Joe, Spaghetti
DINNER: HAMPHISRE IS CLOSED, Why do you want to stay around here any longer anyway?

Worcester

LUNCH: Grilled Sneeze, Sloppy Joe, Spaghetti
DINNER: Chicken Tenders, Tri bean Casserole, Pastabilities, Half time Deli

Quote of the Day

"Learn from the mistakes of others - you can never live long enough to make them all yourself.

- John Luther

Sports

Minutemen cruise over UCF behind Padilla's play

DAILY BEST / COLLEGIAN

Edgar Padilla was a driving force behind Massachusetts' 92–70 victory over Central Florida in NCAA Tournament first–round action.

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Everybody was waiting for it to happen — one decisive run by No. 1 seeded Massachusetts that would put the game out of reach.

No. 16 Central Florida, the team with the worst record in the entire NCAA Tournament, was actually making the first round match–up a ballgame, and the Golden Knights entered the second half down by just four points.

But that decisive run that the Minutemen needed came quick. Before the Golden Knights could even blink an eye, UMass guard Edgar Padilla had come up with five steals, and Dana Dingle (12 points) had swiped another, as the Minutemen turned a four–point edge into a 16–point cushion on a 12–0 run.

UMass' run effectively put to rest any thoughts of a Central Florida upset bid and advanced the Minutemen to the second round where they will face Stanford, which defeated Bradley 66–58 in the 8–9 game. UMass and Stanford will meet in the second round for the second year in a row. The Minutemen defeated the Cardinals 75–53 last year in Albany, N.Y.

"We needed to get stung a little bit and we did," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "In the second half we did the things we needed to do."

Padilla's first two steals came 12 seconds apart (the first coming 18 seconds into the second stanza) and both led to lay–ups, while Dingle's steal came 10 seconds later leading to a Carmelo Travieso trey, giving UMass a 50–39 lead. Padilla then came up with two more steals, the second leading to a breakaway layup in which he was fouled. The 6–foot–1–inch junior sank his one foul shot to complete the three–point play and give UMass a 14–point edge.

Marcus Camby ended the run with a layup off of a Tyrone Weeks miss after Padilla had come up with his fifth steal in the opening two minutes.

"I started pressing the ball more, tried to get in good position to steal the ball and I was able to get a couple of steals that led to a couple of layups," Padilla said. "After we got a couple of steals, we got them thinking and we were able to get fast breaks."

"We got it down under 10 points and they came out in the second half with a lot more intensity on defense and came up with a lot of turnovers," UCF senior Howard Porter said.

After Brad Traina scored his only two points of the game on a driving layup to stop the Minutemen's run, UMass ran away with the game, increasing its lead to as much as 26.

Travieso's 12 points in the second half helped the Minutemen pull away. The junior continued his solid play of late as he finished with a team–high 21 points on 7–of–12 shooting, 6–of–10 from three–point land. He also came up with two steals and two assists of his own while pulling down five boards. Padilla finished the game with an unbelievable line of 15 points, eight assists, seven steals, one block, three boards and only one turnover.

"Padilla was outstanding," Calipari

Turn to HOOP, page 6

Guards again key victory; Stanford next for UMass

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — When the Massachusetts men's basketball team takes the court tomorrow for the second round of the NCAA tournament, the Minutemen may experience a bit of deja vu. PAC–10 member Stanford, just as it did a year ago in the first round, knocked off a higher seed in order to face the Minutemen. Stanford coach Mike Montgomery says this is different year and it will be a different story.

"Last year we were excited just to be in the tournament and win our first ever tournament game," Montgomery said, after his team methodically beat 8th seeded Bradley, 66–58. "This time we're here to win as many as we can. We're excited about having the chance to exact some revenge from last year. We'll see what we can do."

What the Cardinal did last year was lose a 75–53 decision when UMass ran roughshod over them. It is something members of that team have not forgotten.

"I remember us getting our butts kicked," Brevin Knight said of last year's season ending loss. "This time we have to come out with everything we have. We would have to play a great game to beat them and it would definitely be a revenge thing."

Knight, the junior point guard, and his backcourt–mate Dion Cross will have to match up against the UMass tandem of Edgar Padilla and Carmello Travieso. It was Padilla who stole any chance Central Florida had of becoming the first No. 16 to upset a top–seeded team.

The Minutemen led by four at half–time, but Padilla made four steals in the opening two minutes of the second half as the UMass lead ballooned to 16 before the Golden Knights got the ball over half court at the 17:35 mark of the period.

The all–time steal leader at UMass, with 172 over his career, felt turning up the pressure on the Central Florida backcourt was key in the second stanza.

"We had to pick the defense up a little bit in the second half," Padilla said. "I put a little more pressure on the ball. I just wanted to make it a little harder for them to bring the ball up. I started looking for steals and got some layups."

Padilla's stat line for the game of 15 points, seven steals with eight assists to only one turnover was the spark UMass needed to help pull away. Many of those Padilla–helpers went to Travieso who had a game high 21 points. That drew them both praise from the Golden Knights' coach.

"Everyone talks about Marcus Camby, and he's a great player," Central Florida coach Kirk Speraw said. "But Padilla and Travieso are as good a guard tandem as there is in the country, and they make this team run."

Travieso gives much of the credit of his success to Padilla.

"He just keeps giving me the ball," Travieso said. "Coach keeps telling him to give it to other people, but he still gives it to me. I'm getting good

Turn to REMATCH, age 6

Minutewomen set for NCAA debut

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

This weekend the Massachusetts women's basketball team will be doing something the men's team has yet to accomplish: take to the court of the Gampel Pavilion at the University of Connecticut. On Saturday at 6 p.m. the Minutewomen will be in Storrs to face the Spartans of Michigan State in the first round of the Mideast Region of the NCAA Women's Basketball Tournament. UMass earned the No. 8 seed in the region.

This is a milestone for UMass as it is the first time in school history the women's basketball squad has made the national tournament. En route to their landmark season, the Minutewomen finished with a school–best 20–9 record. The 20 regular–season wins break the school record for wins in a season, as the nine losses tie the record for fewest losses in a season. The growth rate of this program is nothing short of outstanding.

Just five years ago, before coach Jonie O'Brien took the reigns for UMass, the team finished with a dismal 0–27 mark. In just five years, O'Brien has taken the program from the bottom of despair to the highest ranks.

Postseason is nothing new for UMass. Last season the Minutewomen competed in the National Women's Invitational Tournament in Amarillo, Texas. Finishing in the semifinal round of the Championship bracket, this was the best outing of an Atlantic 10 team in NWIT history. Both George Washington and Temple competed in years past, but fell in the opening round. UMass is joined in the national tournament this year with last year's NWIT veterans Notre Dame, Clemson and Texas Tech.

There are two other teams representing the A–10 in the Big Dance this year. By virtue of winning the conference tournament, George Washington obtained the automatic bid into the tournament and the No. 6 seed in the East Region. The Lady Colonials are followed by Rhode Island, who received an at–large bid good for the No. 10 seed in the Midwest Region.

The Spartans, who claim the No. 9 seed in the Mideast should provide some tough competition for UMass. Michigan State finished the season with a 17–10 record overall, 9–7 in the Big 10, good enough for a fifth place conference finish. Forward/center Nicole Cushing (13.4 ppg and 5.7 rpg), the Big 10 Freshman of the Year, leads the Spartan offense. She combines with sophomore forward Bella Engen (11.6 ppg) for a potent frontcourt.

It will be up to UMass' frontcourt threat of senior center Melissa Gurile (15 ppg, 6.8 rpg) and junior forward Crystal Carroll (12.3 ppg, 5.8 rpg) to keep the play of Cushing and Engen in check.

"The last part of the season, especially February, we went from worrying about who we were playing to worrying about ourselves," said O'Brien. "That's what we'll do this week. Play good defense, rebound the ball, and take care of the ball on offense. In the last month, we've done a great job doing those things, we're not going to change now."

Being in the Big Ten, the Minutewomen do not know much about Michigan State. "They're going to have to prepare for us the same way we prepare for them. They're not going to know a heck of a lot about us and vice versa," said O'Brien. "The winner is going to be the team that can key in on their strengths the best."

O'Brien characterizes the Spartans as a physical and aggressive squad, but that doesn't scare the Minutewomen.

"We're really not going to go out there to be physical with them," Thomas said. "We're not a physical team. We're just going out there to do what we've been doing all season."

"We've played against some physical players," Gurile said, "we're just going to have to utilize our strengths. Our post players are

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 6

No. 1 Massachusetts (32-1)
vs.
No. 9 Stanford (20-8)
12:15 pm Saturday
at the Providence Civic Center

TV: CBS

Radio:
WHMP 99.3 FM Mark Vandermeer, Jack Leaman, Tony Barbee
WMUA 91.1 FM Brian Perillo, Greg Corey

Softball flies south for FSU Tourney

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Much like many other college students, the members of the Massachusetts softball team will spend their spring break in Florida. But while many will be lounging on a beach, the Minutewomen will be hard at work in the Sunshine State.

The team, 5–7 in the early going this year, will participate in the Lady Seminole Invitational today through Sunday, and play a trio of double–headers Monday through Wednesday. All the games will be played in Tallahassee, hosted by Florida State.

The Minutewomen drew a brutal bracket for the initial round–robin segment of the tournament. UMass, 10th in the also–receiving–votes category of the latest NSCA/USA Today Poll, will have to face No. 22 South Florida and No. 24 Notre Dame in its pool.

UMass will also face off against a tough Western Illinois squad in pool play. The Westerwinds swept No. 20 Illinois–Chicago and fell 5–1 to No. 1 UCLA in their last

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 6

Knicks clean up by removing Nelson; Salley's in Chicago

Friday morning, the New York Knick hierarchy admitted it had made a mistake. As team president Ernie Grunfeld stepped to the podium in the scheduled press conference, the hoop world knew what to expect — Don Nelson had been given the axe. Nelson was finally dismissed after 59 long, uninspiring games. John Starks quietly cheered, Patrick Ewing smiled and Derek Harper was able to breathe again.

Having been in New York during the announcement, it was impossible to avoid hearing the cheers and finally seeing signs of life in Madison Square Garden, the world's most famous arena. For those unfamiliar with the business of basketball, Nelson's dismissal is not just another coach being fired. Here, a coach with 850+ wins, tried to change the unchangeable. The result, he now has to watch one team, one city, fight to take back its identity.

"Today's player" is an expression used to divide a league now stricken with an uncommon ailment, youth vs. experience. "Today's player" is one that puts I before we, has limited long range focus and tends to speak his mind without considering what he is saying. Nelson's biggest self– criticism was that his inability to "properly" deal with such an athlete would accelerate his downfall.

Chris Webber and Starks are two very well publicized examples of this fatal flaw. While this was not the only factor in the Knicks change, it was clear Nelson had no desire to coach the Knicks and publicly stated, "he was not unhappy with being fired."

Taking over for Nellie is Jeff Van Gundy, a long time Knick assistant under Rick Pitino, Pat Riley and Nelson. Van Gundy, 34, lives and breathes basketball and is well respected by the Knick players. Van Gundy has no prior head–coaching experience, with the minor exception of a high school team years ago. Regardless, the Knicks have responded well to the change, despite a loss in Van Gundy's

Turn to NBA, page 6

Darren Cohen on the NBA

Baseball in action over break

The Massachusetts baseball team will travel to Florida for a six–game set at Terry Park in Fort Meyers.

The Minutemen are slated to play a two–game series with Bucknell, a two–game set with Northwestern and single games against Millersville and Niagra.

Lacrosse ready for UVA

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

As the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team prepares to meet top–ranked Virginia, the Minutemen have already taken steps to prepare for the contest.

Playing the Cavaliers is normally the opening game on the Minutemen's schedule, but this year coach Greg Cannella scheduled a matchup with Hartford, which his team won 14–9 Tuesday, in hopes it would help his team fare better against such a highly–touted opponent.

"We scheduled the Hartford game to get those first game jitters out of the way," Cannella said. "Normally Virginia is our first game, but maybe if we have one under our belt we'll be more comfortable."

"I think it was much more helpful," Buddy Hoffman said. "Instead of going into Virginia not knowing what we're doing, we're going where we can patch up some of the things we did bad and change them."

It's not that UMass, currently ranked 11th nationally, hasn't played Virginia tough. Last year's loss to the Cavaliers at Virginia's Klockner Stadium was a close 13–11. This year's early–season tilt will be held at a neutral site in Baltimore, Md. Opening face–off is scheduled for noon.

The first game was a bright spot for the Minutemen as Hoffman, who has been given the crease position vacated by Jeremy Murphy, notched four goals. Brendan Glass added deft passing to his offensive prowess, tallying three assists to go along with his four goals. Glass' season–high for assists is six.

"In years past, I'd have 36 goals and 6 assists," Glass said. "I think to be ranked as one of the top attackers, I have to pass. To be one of the top, my goal is 40 [goals] and at least 20 assists. When you don't have assists they collapse on you, but now they know I can pass."

The Minutemen will also get a boost from the return of tri–captain Dennis Kelly. Matt Tholander and three others who will return from one–game suspensions for breaking team rules.

Virginia coach Dom Starsia returns all three starting attackers from last season's Final Four squad. Senior Tim Whitely (20 goals, 42 assists, 62 points in 1995 season) is joined up front by juniors Doug Knight (52–14–66) and Michael Watson (30–23–53). Virginia has already knocked

Turn to LAX, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 97 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, March 25, 1996

FINAL FOUR BOUND!

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Marcus Camby (above) is all alone near the basket as he finishes this second half alley–oop at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta Saturday during UMass' 86–62 victory over Georgetown. The win advanced the Minutemen to their first ever Final Four.

Camby and basketball coach John Calipari (far left) also added to their postseason honors yesterday, as they were awarded the Boost–Naismith Player of the Year and Coach of the Year awards respectively.

Minutemen to face 'Cats; just two wins away from National Championship

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

ATLANTA — For the first time in school history, the Massachusetts men's basketball team received a No. 1 seed into the NCAA Tournament. This implied the Minutemen were picked to be one of four teams likely to compete during the final weekend of the season for the National Championship.

John Calipari and crew fulfilled those expectations by winning four straight contests, earning the school's first trip to the Final Four. The remaining games will be held this weekend at the Continental Airlines Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

The berth, in perhaps the most prestigious college championship, is a dream come true for the 35–1 Minutemen's coach who was chosen yesterday as the Boost/Naismith National Coach of the Year.

"I dreamed about being in the situation we're in," Calipari said when asked if he thought he would ever attain the Final Four when building this team. "I dreamed about playing North Carolina or Duke in the championship game. Then I would wake up and say, 'Oh geez, we're getting ready for [UMass–]Lowell.'"

This is the first time a team from the Atlantic 10 Conference will participate in the culmination of what is known as "March Madness."

The National Semifinals commence Saturday night at 5:42 p.m. against a familiar opponent to the Minutemen, second–ranked Kentucky. UMass took on the pre–season No. 1 Wildcats (32–2) in their season opener on Nov. 28 and scored a surprising 92–82 upset in the Great Eight Tournament.

The rematch comes almost exactly four months after the Minutemen vic–

Turn to FINAL FOUR, page 6

Georgetown star Iverson stopped by UMass guards

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

ATLANTA — Most expected No. 1 Massachusetts to make it the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament for the second year in a row. However, many didn't expect the Minutemen to get by their likely East Regional Final opponent — Georgetown.

Before the Minutemen even played their Sweet Sixteen opponent (Arkansas, who they defeated 79–63), Georgetown was on the player's minds.

"As for this bracket, no one pictures us to get out of here over Georgetown," Marcus Camby said. "We need to go out and play UMass basketball."

The two teams did meet in the East Regional Final at the Georgia Dome on Saturday, but the Minutemen proved all the so–called experts wrong with their relatively easy 86–62 victory over the Hoyas, advancing them to the first Final Four in school and Atlantic 10 history.

The backcourt matchup was looked upon the same way as the game — Georgetown was favored.

The Hoyas' talented tandem of All–American Allen Iverson and Big East All–Rookie team member Victor Page, also named the Most Outstanding Player of the Big East Tournament, was supposed to be too tough for UMass' backcourt duo of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso.

Although Padilla and Travieso had come up big against other top backcourts in the country such as Kentucky's, Maryland's, Georgia Tech's and Stanford's, they still weren't getting any respect from Iverson before the game.

"I don't feel anybody can play me one–on–one without handchecking me," Iverson said. "That's the type of person I am. I'm confident. We feel like we have the talent to get [to the Final Four]. As long as we play good, strong defense, we'll be okay."

Travieso and the Minutemen entered the game knowing how good the Hoya backcourt was, particularly Iverson.

"Allen's going to take 25–30 shots. That's what he's going to do. He's a scoring point guard, he creates off the dribble," Calipari said.

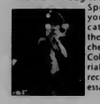
"I know he's a great player and a great scorer," Travieso said. "I'm just going to try and make the game as difficult as possible for him. Make him play the whole length of the floor."

And that's just what Travieso did.

The 6–foot–2–inch guard frustrated Iverson into taking bad shot after bad shot as the sophomore ended up with just six second half points while also committing four turnovers — five for the game. As for Page, the freshman was never able to get it going, finishing with no points and four turnovers, his worst performance of the season.

Turn to GUARDS, page 6

The sweet sight of music



The Magic Triangle Jazz Concert series presented a performance by the Dave Douglas Sextet before Spring Break. If you couldn't catch the show the first time, try checking out the Collegian's pictorial spread for a recap (See photo essay, page 3).

Rock and Roll All Nite

Getting ready for their "reunion" tour this summer, Kiss released a new MTV Unplugged CD, complete with popular hits and classic cuts. Check out the Collegian's review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

NATION

Congress disagrees on Puerto Rico's future

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A congressional subcommittee meeting here Saturday failed to agree on a bill forcing Puerto Ricans to choose between independence and statehood.

But the sponsor of the bill said the issue is not dead. "It was the first step," Rep. Don Young (R–Alaska) said at the end of the hearing.

"Definitely you will see more hearings if it possible to get a consensus," said Young, adding that there's still time in the current session of Congress to approve the bill. Others have expressed doubts of its passage this session.

Earlier this month, Young filed the bill, which calls for holding a ballot before the end of 1998 asking Puerto Ricans to choose between sovereignty or becoming the 51st U.S. state. As written, the bill would eliminate the island's current status as a self–governing commonwealth.

WORLD

McDonald's switches to non–British beef due to fear of disease

LONDON (AP) — Worried Britons sitting down to their Sunday roasts were likely to be eating pork, lamb or even ostrich instead of their traditional beef.

Fears of the deadly mad cow disease have driven beef off many menus in Britain and badly damaged the export market. At least 20 countries have banned British beef, including the two biggest markets — France and Italy.

McDonald's fast–food chain, which spends $37.5 million a year on British beef, dealt the industry a severe blow yesterday with its decision to switch to foreign beef.

The chain, worried about customer confidence, stopped serving hamburgers in its 660 British restaurants and said it wouldn't sell them again until Thursday, when new supplies of beef could be imported.

McDonald's main rival in the United Kingdom, Burger King, said it would continue offering hamburgers made from British beef.

The government announced Wednesday that scientists believe the cattle disease, formally known as bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), is the "most likely" source of a new strain of a similar brain disease that struck 10 young Britons. At least eight have died.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tues.	Wed.
HIGH: 55 LOW: 45	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 45 LOW: 25

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
On The Issues.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

Officer candidates to debate before election

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

A candidates' forum featuring students running for the office of Student Government Association (SGA) President and Student Trustee will be held tonight. The event will be a prelude to Wednesday's and Thursday's SGA elections.

The forum will consist of a question–answer session with the candidates. A panel of three students, representing WMUA, UVC and the Collegian, will moderate the event.

The event will begin at 7 p.m. in the UVC–TV 19 room, located in the Student Union Building basement next to the University Outlet Store.

The event is open to the public.

The Presidential candidates include Larry Plano and Maurice Caston. Joseph Fountain, Neil Collins and Sean Carter are running for Student Trustee.

While official tickets will not appear on the ballot, Plano and Collins are running as a tandem, as are Caston and Carter. Fountain is running independently of a presidential candidate supporter.

The public will be able to address the candidates during the final segment of the forum.

Voting will begin Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. Polls will remain open until 2 p.m., close, and then re–open between 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday will follow the same schedule.

Students living in the Sylvan Residential Area and the Northeast Residential Area must vote in the Worcester Hillside Dining Hall.

Polling stations for Orchard Hill Residential Area and Central Residential Area students will be located in the Franklin Dining Hall.

Students living in the Southwest Residential Area have the option of voting in either Hampshire Dining Hall or Berkshire Dining Hall.

A ballot box will be made available to commuter students in the basement of the Student Union Building adjacent the Hatch.

Greek Area residents are required to vote in the Newman Center.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

"Wind beneath my wings"

Steven Mars prepares his kite for flight at the Quabbin reservoir in Belchertown, during yesterday's fine weather.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous.

Monday, March 25

Workshop — Learn to play the piano overnight in a three- hour evening Pop Piano workshop at Westfield State College. To learn to play the piano the way the pros do — with chords, contact Holly at 572-8033.

Film — Film on Film Screenings presents: Living in Oblivion, directed by Tom DiCillo about a harassed director tries to make a low-budget film in New York and suffers a plague of glitches. The film is free and begins at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 227.

Tuesday, March 26

Workshop — There will be a free tutor training workshop on the tutor-tutee relationship offered by the Learning Resources Center from 3 to 5 p.m. in Room 1038 of the W.E.B. Du Bois Tower Library. Call 545-5334 by Tuesday, Mar. 12 to register.

Class — Bread & Circus will be sponsoring a cooking- class and fundraiser called "Nourishing the Whole Person in Recovery" from 6–8 p.m. in the Dakin Conference Room of Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The class costs $20 and preregistration is required. Registration forms are available at the Dickinson Programs of Cooley Dickinson Hospital, 76 Pleasant Street, Northampton and from Bread & Circus. Proceeds will benefit Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Wednesday, March 27

Election '96 — Voting for SGA President, Student Trustee and Area Government will be held from 11 a.m. – 2 p.m. in Franklin, Worcester, Hampshire and Berkshire Dining Halls. Student Union (for commuters) and the Newman Center (for Greeks).

Lecture — Professor Emanuel Rubin presents: "Orientalism and Orientalizing in Jewish Culture since 1800," sponsored by the Center for Jewish Studies. The lecture is free and open to the public, and begins at 4 p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 601.

Theater — A Little Night Music, a musical by Sondheim, about love triangles, infidelity, love and hate will take place at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6 and $4. Call 545-0415 for more information.

Thursday, March 28

Election '96 — Voting for SGA President, Student Trustee and Area Government will be held from 4:30–7 p.m. in Franklin, Worcester, Hampshire and Berkshire Dining Halls. Student Union (for commuters) and the Newman Center (for Greeks).

Friday, March 29

Forum — A Community Action Forum will be held from 3–5 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 804–808. The topic: "Men are the predominant perpetrators of sexual violence on campus. What campus resources are directed towards men in addressing this important issue? and Are they adequate?" Students, faculty and staff will be present for this discussion. Call 546–5143 for more information.

Film — As part of the Multicultural Film Festival, Maria Novaro's Dan_on will be shown at 7 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, Room 231

Tuesday, April 2

Information Session — An information session on all master's and doctoral programs in Applied Psychology, Clinical Psychology, Education, Environmental Studies and Management offered by Antioch New England Graduate School will be held at 5:30 p.m. in Holyoke at the Mt. Marie Conference Center on Lower Westfield Road. Faculty will present the range of programs in their departments and be available to speak with individuals. For more information, call (603) 657–6265.

Fair — The UMass Majors Fair will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 6–8 p.m. More than 60 majors will be represented. The fair is sponsored by the University Advising Center and the University Career Center.

Readings, Performances — "Self Expressions II: An Evening of Queer Five College Undergraduate Readings and Performances" will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 904–908. The event is free and is part of the monthly GLBT Café Series. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Film — As part of the Multicultural Film Festival, Idrissa Ouedraogo's Tilai will be shown at 4 p.m. in Herter Auditorium, Room 231.

Wednesday, April 3

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association will conduct a Free Public Observing of the Total Lunar Eclipse at 6 p.m. at Mt. Pollux in Amherst. Telescopes and binoculars will be set up for the public to view the eclipse. For more information, call Tom Whitney at 256–6234.

Film — As part of the Multicultural Film Festival, Milcho Manchevski's Before the Rain will be shown at 7 p.m. in Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College.

Thursday, April 4

Lecture — Paola Bacchata, Professor of Sociology at Sarah Lawrence University, will be speaking on the topic: "Gays, Lesbians and Hijras — Sexual Minorities in India." The event is free and will begin at noon in the Campus Center, Room 803. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Notices

Special Olympics — North Valley Special Olympics is actively seeking athletes and volunteers for the upcoming track and field, aquatics, gymnastics, ten-pin bowling and volleyball seasons. There are slots available for special athletes of all ages and abilities. Newcomers are strongly encouraged to join. Registration is due on April 3. Parents are encouraged to call with any questions. For more information, call North Valley Olympics at 256–1622

Music — Jimmy Connors, UMass graduate and student of world renowned musicians Archie Shepp and Yusef Lateef will be teaching four music classes this spring through Amherst Leisure Services and Supplemental Education. Two performance seminars, a World Music Class and America's Classical Music "Daze" begin the week of April 8. For more information, call LSSE at 256–4065.

Dance — New beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are offered Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. Cajun is a style of dance from Louisiana with arm movements similar to those used in the Texas two-step. Clog dancing is a traditional American folk dance that originated in the 1800's in the Appalachian Mountains. Partners are not needed and all ages are welcome. No prior dance experience is necessary. Classes are instructed by Maple Run, a non- profit dance group that performs at fairs and community functions. The classes are held at Betty Champion's Dance Studio, 132 Elm Street, Westfield. For more information, contact Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Mail Service — During the summer magazine subscriptions will not be forwarded due to the high volume of first class mail and the large amount of magazine subscriptions Mail Services receives. Now is th. time to contact magazine companies to change addresses for the summer, June through August. September magazines are held in Mail services and will be delivered when school opens in September.

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work-Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on–site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545–2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

Rep. Gauch doubts budget will be cut

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

WESTBOROUGH — State Representative Ronald Gauch met with members of the University of Massachusetts Ambassadors Network at the Westborough Marriot March 20 to discuss support for the UMass budget for Fiscal Year 1997.

"Within the Senate and the Ways and Means Committee we realize that UMass is a world class institution," said Gauch. "I doubt that the budget will receive any cuts."

The University budget request is presently being discussed by the Ways and Means Committee. It will be voted on in the House of Representatives during the first week of April and then will go to the Senate.

"President Bulger is a great ally for UMass. Along with Stan Rosenberg, the chair of the Ways and Means Committee, there will be plenty of support for education," Gauch said.

Nora Mackay, the director of the Ambassadors Network, was present in order to inform the local Ambassadors about the budget.

"UMass at Amherst places so many alumni within the local area," said Mackay. "It is important for Gauch's constituents to support the UMass budget."

Gauch reminded the Ambassadors that although there is a lot of support for education within the State House, the national budget remains vital.

"It must be remembered that [the Ways and Means Committee] are very dependent on what is dispersed to us from the national budget," Gauch said.

Gauch said it will be very important for UMass to reach a point of fiscal stability in order to bring important programs back to the University.

"Over the last few years it appears that we have let the University fall apart, now the challenge is building it back up," Gauch said.

Gauch also addressed the Capitol Outlay Bill. This bill authorizes the state to borrow money strictly for state construction and building needs. The governor's office can then float bonds in order to fund the work.

According to the FY97 Budget Briefing by the Office of State Government Relations, the University needs $300 million due to deferred maintenance and the upgrading of buildings.

"The Capitol Outlay Bill is a wonderful opportunity for the University to attain more funds for infrastructure costs," said Gauch. "It appears that some of the money should go to help UMass."

Countdown to the '96 Presidential Primaries

Editor's Note: As part of an effort to improve our coverage of the presidential primaries, the Collegian is running this feature everyday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — And then there were two.

Breaking clear in a contest once crowded and tangled, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has secured the Republican presidential nomination and won the right to engage President Clinton in the fall.

Neither man at this point has a comprehensive platform. But what they do have, after Clinton's three years in the White House and Dole's 27 years in the Senate, are records. And since January they've answered questions on a variety of subjects put to them by The Associated Press.

Here are their answers, plus summaries of their words and actions on a variety of issues. Positions may change, and Ross Perot may yet jump in again to mix everything up.

But as of now, this is where they stand and what they've said.

ABORTION:

Bill Clinton

"The decision to have an abortion should be between a woman, her doctor and her faith. Abortions should be safe, legal and rare. We can lower the number of abortions by emphasizing education, prevention and personal responsibility to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies."

Bob Dole

"Since 1974, I have opposed the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion on demand. In 1983, I voted for a constitutional amendment overturning this decision. I support a constitutional amendment to restrict abortion, subject to the exceptions of life of the mother, rape and incest.

Earn what you deserve.

Not what they decide.

It's nearing graduation and the companies come courting. Promising glory. And tempting you with the glamour of the big-time. Well, Sprint is here to tell you why success begins with us!

If you're an energetic, aggressive graduate who is ready to earn what you deserve, instead of settling for only a base salary, you need to find out more about becoming a part of our Inside or Field Sales teams.

Come meet our representatives. Network like never before. See a cool video and get a handle on what the job is all about. Learn what it's like to receive the best training in the business, a full range of benefits, and all the tools you need to succeed. Plan to attend our Sprint Night or contact your Placement Office to schedule an interview.

For more information, call: 1-800-BST-REPS or fax your resume to (913) 624-6417. Find us on the Internet at: http://www.sprint.com

SPRINT NIGHT
Wednesday, March 27
7 pm
Campus Center
Room 803

We're Calling On You

Sprint.

We are proud to be an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V
Also, we maintain a drug-free workplace and perform pre-employment substance abuse testing.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

STILL TIME TO ENTER

Softball (M/W/C) .....A.S.A.P.
Co-Rec Soccer (M/W/C).....A.S.A.P.
Co-Rec Volleyball (M/W) .....A.S.A.P.

Don't Miss The ACTION

For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR SOFTBALL, SOCCER & VOLLEYBALL. CALL FOR CLINIC DATES.

The UMASS Daily Collegian

A wealth of information at your finger tips everyday.

Joseph Fountain for Student Trustee

As Student Trustee, Joseph will work toward:

- More call boxes around campus, better escort services and an education program to prevent violent crimes.
- Revisions of the harassment policy, so that it is fair to all students.
- Subsidizing of child care for undergrads with children and expansion of the present child care program.
- A better, more affordable, meal plan that is fair for all students.
- More University aid and grants for undergraduates and with my salary as Student Trustee I will set up book grants for students who demonstrate financial need.

"On March 27 and 28, please give me your vote for Student Trustee. I will be a vocal and strong student advocate and I'll get the job done."

HE'LL GET THE JOB DONE.

Book's second edition earns local praise, details UM resources

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

A second edition of We Mean Business contains a complete list of services offered by the University of Massachusetts to state-wide businesses.

The directory lists University resources ranging from the best foreign markets, ways to creating a satellite uplink for worldwide information broadcasting, arrangements for a professional management training program for employees and how to translate company brochures, according to Jaymie Chernoff, the director of the University's Office of Economic Development.

"This is the first and only complete directory of all economic outreach programs at the University," said Chernoff.

The outreach services are offered from the UMass campus to neighboring communities, said Chernoff.

"My business is only two miles from the University campus, yet I first learned about a number of useful services in looking through We Mean Business," said Richard P. Kretschmann, president of Amerinex Applied Imaging Incorporated of Amherst, and chairman of the Western Massachusetts Software Association. "I plan to distribute it to my top managers as well as to members of the association."

One of the services offered includes the Food Science Pilot Plant. This test facility is responsible for the manufacturing of a new experimental project.

The Center for Manufacturing and Productivity serves as a means of understanding an industry's problems in order to recommend solutions by working with actual manufacturing companies, according to Chernoff.

Students should be involved in the directory not only for the job opportunities with these services but also to understand what is going on at the University with faculty and staff, said Chernoff.

"The services are applications of academic knowledge," said Chernoff. "These are knowledge resources that may be useful to your business."

Another example of this application includes the Scientific Glass Blowing Laboratory which makes custom size glassware for University science professors, research work and outside companies, according to Chernoff.

"We do research, we teach and we do public service," said Chernoff in reference to the three part mission of UMass.

"We teach students on campus but we also have a responsibility to share our knowledge with the rest of the state," said Chernoff.

"We Mean Business is an important piece of the recruitment package we put together to describe our region's business resources when we meet with companies considering relocation or expansion," said John Gallup, senior vice president for economic development at the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce.

"It's invaluable to have UMass 'summed up' in this compact format," he added.

The 1996 directory is one publication of University services available to company audiences, said Chernoff.

The $10,000 cost to print the publication was funded by Western Massachusetts Electric Company.

The directory information was compiled last summer by writing a letter to each service provider where they would critique a paragraph describing their services and what they did, said Chernoff. Fifty University programs were looking for clients that have developed expertise from their research, she added.

The return of UNSOLD TEXTBOOKS will begin on Monday, March 25, 1996.

Though it takes several weeks to complete the process, we can not guarantee to have the book you need, in stock, after this date.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Faculty members who want to hold books later in the semester should call 545-3570.

Go Anywhere For Spring Break*?

* 9 days, 216 hours, 432 episodes of Seinfeld

Thousands of Pictures

Enter the best picture of Spring Break '96 Contest!!

Grand Prize
Dinner for two at Carmelina's &
Free Enlargement of the Winning Photo

Processing must be done at Advanced Video & Photo • Entries must be received by 4/5/96

Advanced Video Photo

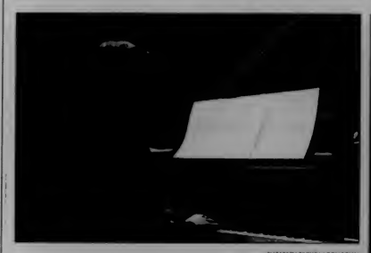
328 College St	26 N. King St	136 College St
Amherst	Northampton	So. Hadley
253-2222	586-6501	536-8863

The 1996 Magic Triangle Jazz concert series

Photo Essay by Thang Vo and Elizabeth Brown.

The 1996 Magic Triangle Jazz concert series second presentation featured The Dave Douglas Sextet on March 14. Members of the band shown here are Dave Douglas, trumpet, Chris Potter, reeds, Josh Roseman, trombone, and Ethan Iverson, piano. Look for the last edition in the series on April 25th at Hampden Theatre.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN



ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is looking for a

DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR

Applicants must be full–time undergraduate students with an interest in covering a wide range of events within the community.

Applications and job descriptions are available from Marni Helfner, managing editor, in the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center.

The deadline for applications is Monday, April 1, 1996 at 4 p.m.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Cusume Co-Black Affairs Editor Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey Brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lisa M. Olivera Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Amy Paradyst News Editor Maureen Magnuszski Assistant Operations Manager
Emily Reily Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Sean Gibson Staff Artist Cases Kane Librarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1900, the Weekly Collegian in 1914, and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Cruising along

Humans like to move.

It's a fact.

As a species we have found more ways to propel ourselves around using various degrees of energy than perhaps any other living thing on the planet. When it came to birds we had wing envy and built airplanes. Jaguars and Cheetahs: we built cars. What's on the moon? Build a space ship! Want to race with the dolphins? Hop on a Jet-Ski.

But somewhere along the way, our fascination with motion became a fixation on speed.

In less than 100 years, air travel evolved from Crop Dusters to the Concorde. Model-T's have become Ferraris. Rockets became Space Shuttles.

But when you stop to think about it, it could easily be argued that speed is highly overrated. The faster you move, the more you miss. It's hard to appreciate anything except seat belts when you're barreling down the highway going 93 miles per hour.

But when you stop to think about it, it could easily be argued that speed is highly overrated. The faster you move, the more you miss. It's hard to appreciate anything except seat belts when you're barreling down the highway going 93 miles per hour.

Daniel E. Levenson

I'd like to think that something very important was forgotten when we made this horrible transition — that it wasn't the desire to move quickly that humanity has lusted over, but the grace and beauty with which many things in nature move, that speed is secondary.

If you ask someone why they want to fly like a bird, I doubt you'll get the answer "Well, it would be totally cool 'cause I could fly 100 mph and crash into school buses. I'd fly to France in 10 seconds and get to class on time and never taker another bus again." What you probably will hear is that individuals envy the grace and style of a bird in flight. To many, they symbolize the ability to soar above the world and its problems, and look down at the Earth.

I'll admit that there is a part of me that hungers for accelerated motion. It's been months since I've had my mountain bike out on a trail and I'm practically drooling over the thought of a steep, rocky down-hill slope. Mountain biking is a perfect example of how disastrous things can get when speed is the main objective. Going fast is one thing, being dialed in is quite another.

Somewhere along the way, the word "progress" got muddled up with the idea of rapidity. We now seem to have it in our heads that if something goes quickly, that it is progressing. In almost every area of our culture we have injected an untraceable catalyst. So we put the emphasis on getting people to do things as fast as they can. Children start school at a younger age, graduate early, get jobs, have children of their own and then it starts all over again. Workers are fired and replaced with machines in the name of some mystical idealogy whose mantra embraces "efficiency, expediency and progress."

Speed without control is like a drunk child wielding a loaded gun. Society has become that child, drunk with the power to create speed. The gun could be any number of things: education, industry, the family. All of these things are used as tools to fill our society with the lead that makes our hearts heavy.

It's so strange to think that we hurry so much to get everything done, that we often don't take the time to stop and appreciate where we are and how far we have come, as a society and as individuals.

There's nothing wrong with going fast some of the time, but when we lose sight of our humanity in the name of progress and speed, then something is wrong. Finding a balance between the two is the most valuable thing anyone can to do in their life. But before you hop into your race car or run to your next class remember one last little piece of advice.

The faster you go, the harder you crash.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

A guide to responsible living

Confusion seems to be running rampant in our society today. There are a lot of lost sheep running around in need of a shepherd. Actually, we all need to be our own shepherds, but people often do not know where to start. Enter this editorial. This is being written as a basic, bare- bones guide to sensible living.

We all need to assess our relationship to our environment. There is a bumper sticker which says, "Save the earth, kill yourself." This is actually the viewpoint of some of us, but such extremism is unnecessary. Instead, we should all try to be more frugal. This will alleviate some of the stress that is placed on our resources while still allowing us to remain alive.

Jed Curtis

What is the best way to get one's feet wet in the realm of frugality? Making a habit out of peering into trash cans and rescuing any salvageable items. By doing this you become aghast at the amount of things people throw away.

If you chance upon a morsel of food in the trash, by all means eat it. Every time I go to Amber Waves, I examine the receptacle where people put their bowls and plates when they have finished eating. More often than not there are unfinished meals which I promptly eat. Often, it is not even necessary for me to place an order since the contents of these left-overs are a meal in itself.

When I am in the library I always remember to rummage through the trash cans and recycling bins. Herein I find perfectly useable paper which I write my academic assignments on. Moreover, I am rescuing paper from landfills. It can be argued that by taking paper out of recycling bins I am discouraging recycling but this is not true; recycling programs often only recycle about 40 percent of a product, whereas my program yields a 100 percent turnover rate.

We should all shower far less than we do. Showering more than once a week is a waste of time and water. Some argue that if this were the case we would all smell too foul to tolerate each other's company, if not our own. But this is a weak argument: if we all cut down on showering, the change in body odor would be relative.

Deodorant and anti-perspirant need to be thrown out the window. We should all relish our natural scent and proudly flaunt any sweat rings under our armpits. Heavy under-arm sweating is a sign of accelerated mental activity and brilliance. Every time I write a column like this I walk away drenched in sweat. Rather than cower in shame or change my shirt I do a brief set of jumping jacks to call attention to my condition.

Never under any condition throw anything away. Be sure to feel ashamed and pathetic if you ever use a paper plate or plastic utensil and throw it away. The point is not that we should collect such trivial items but rather abstain from their use altogether. I find it helpful to travel around with a durable all purpose bowl and a fork and spoon in my back pack. Whenever I happen upon a free buffet or pizza party I always remember to fill my bowl since it is inevitable I will be hungry in the future. This bowl has a sealable cover which prevents leakage. Many people eat at places such as Earthfoods where food is served on paper plates. This provides the perfect opportunity to refuse paper utensils in favor of your bowl.

I must confess that in certain situations it is necessary to throw away paper. I am referring to toilet paper. It causes me unconveyable pain to use toilet paper, not physical pain but moral, spiritual and psychological pain. In fact I experimented with bypassing toilet paper altogether but this proved ineffective. We can learn a lot about bathroom hygiene from Europeans who shoot water into their nether regions after bowel movements, eliminating the need for toilet paper. I imagine this is also somewhat sexually stimulating.

This editorial has merely touched the surface of effective, responsible living. There is a lot of ground to cover on this important subject, and future columns will certainly be needed. I will remain poised with pen in hand and promptly respond when the time is right for more columns of this nature.

Jed Curtis is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IT WAS, BY ALL ACCOUNTS, ONE OF THE TOUGHEST WEEKS IN THE HISTORY OF THE TOBACCO BUSINESS...
LORETTA'S DECISION TO SETTLE A MIKE CLOSS ACTION LAWSUIT HAS SENT SHOCKWAVES THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE INDUSTRY!
BIG TOBACCO IS NOW BRUISED, BLOODY, ON THE ROPES! I WANTTO ITS NEXT MOVE! SURGERY. DOES IT GO FROM HERE?
MR. BUTTS TAKES A VACATION
RUDOLPH THAT BE SMOKING OR NON-SMOKING SIR?
SWEDONE'S A LOSER!

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

I'M STAYING IN THE FIGHT NOT BECAUSE I THINK I CAN WIN, BUT TO INFLUENCE THE DISCUSSION OF ISSUES IN MY OPPONENT'S LOCKER ROOM CELEBRATION.
If sports were like politics
TOLES

Personal Jesus

I was born and raised Catholic. However, I am almost ashamed to say, I have somewhat — er — how do I say this? Ahem. I have missed a few Masses here and there (as in between each of my three trips home). In fact, I do believe I have only stepped foot inside the Newman Center once. My parents are cringing. I can feel it.

It's not like church doesn't do anything for me. It's a nice, quiet, solemn place, a great place to think. I sometimes plan out entire stories, papers and weeks of activities in my head as I sit during Mass, sometimes wandering to a place far, far beyond where the priests are trying to take me. They would probably argue that I am being "inspired by God" during that time but — whatever. In addition, all those stained glass windows, candles and incense are beautiful. "People- watching" is always good. Believe you me, there is certainly quite a collection of interesting people that attend Mass every Sunday (and while I lived at home we attended Mass every Sunday.)

Stacey Shackford

I was home one weekend during Spring break and when Sunday came around we were woken up early and fed a hearty breakfast (wait, isn't there a rule about eating one hour before Mass? hmm...) and taken to church. While sitting during the children's homily and listening to six and seven-year-olds proudly recite the 10 commandments in reply to "How can you show God you love him?" I began to ponder my entire belief system.

I had long ago realized that I did not share all of the doctrines of my church. Thirteen years of Catholic school, including a few sit-downs with a nun or two about the literal translations of the Bible, pretty much made that point clear. I do not agree with the patriarchal structure and meanings which prevail. I often wonder about the administrative side of church affairs as well.

Perhaps the most disturbing thought, however, is one I gathered from many Mass musings. While people-watching, I wonder how many people actually believe what they recite? How many of them understand the words? How many took them to heart and practiced what they preached? How many were brainwashed and/or felt like they had to live up to some obligation they signed onto as children?

I am not trying to dismiss the Catholic Church altogether, but as Salman Rushdie once told me (and an audience of a few hundred others) any serious writer "must reckon with religion and make a serious encounter." The ritual and teachings of Catholicism were important to me when growing up. They have shaped what I am today.

I learned a great deal about the Church in those 13 years I spoke of earlier. The education I received went beyond the literal meanings of stories in the Bible. I think it was important that I learned all I could about the religion before I formed my own beliefs. It scared me, however, when I sat at Mass this past Sunday and looked at all the elderly women clutching their rosaries in hand and praying like there's no tomorrow (okay, they probably were, and that's a good thing I suppose but...).

It scared me when I thought that they probably had not even received the level of religious education that I had and that they were devoting the rest of their lives clinging blindly to a faith instilled by a work of literature written mostly in narrative form by simple men, no matter how God-inspired they might have been. I suppose their faith should have inspired me, but instead I questioned a religion which had that type of effect on people.

Sometimes, while kneeling in front of the image of an innocent man being executed on the electric chair of his time, I think that a single human rights activist is doing more to promote the cause of Jesus than a handful of his faithful followers. Sometimes I think that when he introduced the concept of the Holy Spirit he was simply talking about the spirit of the divine which resides in each one of us.

What is prayer but a way to deal with your deepest rooted desires, hopes, and worries? It is very healthy and healing simply because you are aware of what you feel and once you are aware, you are more likely to recognize the presence of those things which you may not have been consciously looking for.

Who needs an idol to worship and place all their faith and devotion in when each one of us holds the same power within? Obviously, a lot of people do. I am not one of them. It took me almost 20 years to figure this out and I thought it was an important enough discovery to share with all of you.

What I believe is certainly not what everyone else does (if I have learned anything at all yet, it is that) and may not even be right for some people, but as a wise man once summed up perfectly, "be your own personal Jesus." And, another, "Be what you're like, be like yourself."

If there is one thing you believe in, believe in yourself.

Stacey Shackford is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

What to do (not say) today

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Evan Young's "What to say today" (Collegian, 3/13/96) article.

Evan, so you think you are funny insulting fat people and making fun of the DC food? Your column goes a lot deeper than how to make the campus laugh. The sad thing is that people do listen. They actually believe what you are saying and agree with it.

Do you have any convictions at all? Well, I am challenging you to stop complaining about everyone else's life and start living your's, regardless of what other people believe in.

The organizations you wrote about mean a lot more than your means of mocking them. Women protest rape because millions of women have been raped by men who, like you, do not feel comfortable with themselves and who they are as men. The reason why people do not eat meat is because they choose to protect their environment instead of being a passive organism destroying it. Who are you to judge how fat people are, whether or not men should have beards or how one chooses to express his or herself?

Do you have less superficial things to worry about? Bob Dole has a chance at becoming President. That is far scarier than an overweight man taking up two seats on the bus. I am wondering what the point of your column was.

To all the writers of the Collegian, if you are going to complain, complain about something that will save the world. We are at University of Massachusetts to learn to be different. Why do you insist on throwing hot air around instead of saying something really important?

Write because you mean it; not just to be "cool." There are other ways to get attention. This University needs strong leaders. The Collegian gets more students to pay attention than any other medium on campus. Unfortunately, it isn't where the leaders are. I challenge you to stop complaining and take action!

Cheri Ehrlich
Amherst

Ibish's message getting stale

To the editor:

Bombs away! What an unexpected surprise— yet another voluminous attack on Israel and Zionism from Hussein Ibish (Collegian, 3/6/96). Will wonders never cease?

I can't help wondering: Doesn't Ibish care about anything else? After all, it takes a lot of time to write ten-page treatises attacking Jewish nationalism. I've been eagerly awaiting Ibish's attacks on Palestinian, Arab and Black nationalism, or the Arab regimes which he privately condemns, but he just doesn't seem to have found the time. Too busy attacking Jews, I guess.

I have to give him credit for the clever (if transparent) strategy he has employed. By attacking Zionism through the words of its Jewish critics, he's nearly managed to camouflage his own motives. Nearly, but not entirely.

Yes, it's true that there are anti-Zionist Jews— more so in the early days of the Zionist movement, when the future of the Jewish people was being actively debated by European Jews, who were torn between the desire to assimilate, on one hand, and the painful realization that anti-Semitism was still very much a part of European society (a realization that was dramatized by the lynching of a French-Jewish army officer, Captain Alfred Dreyfus, in 1894, three years before the first Zionist Congress).

But it seems clear that Ibish is not concerned with the survival of the Jewish people. Quite the contrary. So the Jewish voices which he cites sound a bit disingenuous in Ibish's hands.

Come on, Hussein, won't you please write just one vitriolic piece about Syria, or Iraq, or Egypt? or better yet, turn your cannons loose on Yassir Arafat. I know that he really gets you down, especially when he shakes hands with Zionist "monsters" like Yitzhak Rabin.

Larry Goldbaum
Office of Jewish Affairs

Arts & Living

And the Nominees Are...

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR
- ❑ Ed Harris Apollo 13
- ❑ James cromwell Babe
- ❑ Tim Roth Rob Roy
- ❑ Brad Pitt 12 Monkeys
- ❑ Kevin Spacey The Usual Suspects

The 68th annual Academy Awards will air tonight at 9:00pm on ABC

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS
- ❑ Kathleen Quinn Apollo 13
- ❑ Mare Winningham Georgia
- ❑ Mira Sorvino Mighty Aphrodite
- ❑ Joan Allen Nixon
- ❑ Kate Winslet Sense & Sensability

BEST ORIGINAL SCREENPLAY
- ❑ Braveheart
- ❑ Mighty Aphrodite
- ❑ Nixon
- ❑ Toy Story
- ❑ The Usual Suspects

BEST PICTURE
- ❑ Apollo 13
- ❑ Babe
- ❑ Braveheart
- ❑ Il Postino
- ❑ Sense & Sensability

BEST ADAPTED SCREENPLAY
- ❑ Apollo 13
- ❑ Babe
- ❑ Il Postino
- ❑ Leaving Las Vegas
- ❑ Sense & Sensability

Kiss pulls out plug on latest release

COURTESY MERCURY RECORDS

Kiss revives some old classics on their new MTV Unplugged CD.

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

KISS
MTV Unplugged
Mercury Records

The Gods of Rock must really, really, really like Kiss. For the past 20 years the band has essentially been utilizing the same formula: standard rock riff + lame-brained, totally sexist lyrics (with the occasional tune about getting wasted) + rock n' roll classic after rock n' roll classic. Yet, for some strange reason, while other contemporaries and disciples have long been pronounced dead, Kiss still perseveres. Someone is definitely watching over them.

Okay, true that at one time they did wear super-cool make-up, breathed fire, spit blood, blew things up on stage and epitomized all that is indulgent about rock music, but those days are long gone (although the band is gearing up for a summer "reunion" tour — complete with all of the above), so why the hell are these guys still around, nevermind finding a resurgence in popularity?

Well, believe it or not, the answer may lie in the band's most recent effort — the latest in the usually dreadful "MTV Unplugged" series. While "MTV Unplugged" must commonly tries to revive stale and aging artists' careers (Eric Clapton, Rod Stewart) or prove that today's most popular rockers indeed have a tender side (Pearl Jam, Stone Temple Pilots), it is very rarely interesting or worthwhile (sans Nirvana's attempt).

This is why Kiss' stab at pulling out the plugs is so intriguing — it hardly breaks any ground, but it is surprisingly not embarrassing in the least, and in a few rare moments, even shows glimpses of what a great band they actually were. As hard as it may be for some to believe — Kiss wrote some damn good songs — and on MTV Unplugged the band proves it again and again.

First things first, this record marks the group's reuniting with all four original members. Yes, the other two new guys are still in tow, but nobody ever really cared about them anyways. Ace Frehley and Peter Criss may not have the chops they once had (new drummer Eric Singer actually has to carry Criss along on drums during "Rock And Roll All Nite"), but it doesn't really matter, does it? Gene Simmons and Paul Stanley were always the creative force behind Kiss and, thankfully, both haven't lost their touch. Stanley still sings just as good as he did back in the band's heyday, and while Simmons' voice hasn't aged quite as gracefully, it is hardly shot.

But what ultimately makes Unplugged so enjoyable is not in the fact that the group isn't quite ready for the geriatric ward yet, but rather in the choice of songs they put on the album. Like Nirvana, Kiss has opted not to just make their Unplugged a rehash of their greatest hits, but rather digs a little deeper into the vaults and pulls out some gems such as "Sure Know Something" off of their album Dynasty and Ace Frehley's rendition of the Rolling Stones' "2000 Man" (also from Dynasty).

Of course, fans of the "hits" won't be disappointed. Peter Criss steps away from the drums to warble his way through "Beth." (Criss is the member of the band who time has most definitely been the cruelest to) and the group performs a lackluster version of "Do You Love Me" that, while hardly bad, never really gains the momentum of the original. But, besides those and the aforementioned "Rock And Roll All Nite," most of the group's more notable tunes are absent, which, if you come to think of it, is a pretty brave move for a band which isn't exactly known for its "risk taking."

Many people, as well as fans, will undoubtedly see MTV Unplugged as nothing more than a primer for the band's summer reunion tour, which, while probably true, is pretty unfortunate. While it cannot exactly be considered a work of art, it is testament that rock n' roll, even at its most moronic, can age gracefully. B+

Term Papers, Science Labs, Senior Projects. There's a lot to get done in your college years. Don't you want some time for the fun stuff? OS/2® Warp and Warp Connect can help.

Because ... every professor thinks his is your only class, OS/2 Warp is 32-bit and gives you true Multitasking to run programs simultaneously. Now you can calculate those chemical equations while your term paper is printing.

Because ... you don't want to look like a computer geek, OS/2 Warp's intuitive, graphical interface uses 3-D animated icons to make computing easy and fun! Customize the desktop by placing your favorite applications on the launch pad.

Because ... there's a world outside the campus, surf the Internet with IBM's Internet Connection and Web Explorer.

Because ... if you know someone who has lost a term paper when she's almost finished, you know they're never quite the same again. OS/2 Warp enhances the stability and performance of your system with Crash Protection.

Because ... a college budget is tight, use the free OS/2 BonusPak for OS/2 Warp -- a set of full-function applications and utilities, or run your own DOS, OS/2 or Windows applications in a single environment.

AND

Because ... group projects mean group projects, OS/2 Warp Connect gives you all the advantages of OS/2 Warp, plus the ability to directly communicate and share resources with others on the LAN without the need of a dedicated server. OS/2 Warp Connect provides peer access, internet access, mobile users access to the office LAN, Lotus Notes Express and the BonusPak --all in a single package!

hot off the press!
ask for our new 88-page catalog!
1-800-776-8284
WEB SITE: http://www.indelible-blue.com/ib
"Your Single Source for OS/2 Solutions" ACD396
INDELIBLE BLUE Inc.
OS/2 and IBM are registered trademarks of IBM Corporation. All other registered trademarks belong to their respective owners. Prices subject to change. This ad designed at Indelible Blue on a PC running fast and crash free under OS/2 Warp.

Minuteman Volkswagon
Ask For First time College Program!
Patricia Doian
Sales Representative
TEL. 617-275-8000
39 North Road
Bedford, Mass. 01730

Graduating soon? No job yet?
Ever considered working in sports?
For 8 years Sports Careers has provided products and services for sports industry job seekers, including The Insider newsletter (published twice a month with 60-75 currently available internships and jobs in sales, marketing, public relations, journalism and management each issue), an automated resume bank and more.
For subscription information call
SPORTS CAREERS
1-800-SPORT-77

Judie's
Munchie Madness
Monday - Friday 3-6
1/2 Price Munchie Menu
Basket of Sweet Potato Fries $4.99 $2.50
Fried Cheese & Onion Rings $5.95 $2.98
Shrimp Tempura $6.25 $3.13
And More!
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

■ hoops

continued from page 10

Thompson felt it was the Minutemen's ability to stay composed that showed how tough a team they are to beat.

"Them holding us off at the end, on their run, is a sign of greatness," Thompson said of the UMass run to start the second half. "We go at people. UMass is poised, they don't panic, they spread out. You don't rattle them, they don't beat themselves, you've got to beat them."

Massachusetts 79, Arkansas 63.

UMass scored the opening 13 points of the game and never looked back as the Minutemen led wire to wire setting up the showdown with the Hoyas. The Minutemen defense was suffocating once again as Arkansas shot only 18.5 percent in the first half.

Tyrone Weeks made the most of his unexpected start in the Regional semifinals, notching a game high 16 points as the Minutemen easily dispatched of the upstart Razorbacks. Weeks got the start over Camby because UMass' usual starting center was late arriving for the team bus due to the Atlanta rush hour traffic.

The Boost-Naismith National Player of the Year responded off of the bench with 15 points on 5-for-8 shooting from the field, plus grabbing seven rebounds and swatting away three Razorback shots.

■ Camby

continued from page 10

Just as Camby swatted away a Harrington shot to start off the second half, he had smacked away any Hoya chance for victory — all while playing the final 12 minutes of the game with four fouls.

"He can play with foul trouble because he's a very smart young man," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "He knows what he can and can't do."

"[Camby's] good. The thing about this damn kid is he shows very little emotion. He hides it within his personality yet he's aggressive as a player," Georgetown coach John Thompson said. "He can face, he can post and he passes, so that creates a problem. He has a great temperament which is similar to the team's. He stays calm and he does what he has to do. I think he's a hell of a player."

Harrington had praise for Camby as well.

"His teammates did a good job of passing the ball around and he was able to get some easy baskets. He is a great player," Harrington said.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Not even sophomore superman Allen Iverson could stop UMass' drive toward the Meadowlands and the Final Four.

EMILY BEKY / COLLEGIAN

Edgar Padilla combined with Carmelo Travieso to contain the much-hyped Georgetown backcourt of Allen Iverson and Victor Page.

■ Final Four

continued from page 1

tory. Unlike the previous meeting, the loser's season ends while the winner will advance to the Championship game.

Kentucky enters the Final Four for the 11th time in school history. They emerged from the Midwest region where they were the No. 1 seeded team.

In the 1992 NCAA Tournament, the Minutemen found themselves pitted against Rick Pitino's Wildcats in the Sweet Sixteen, where UMass succumbed to Kentucky, 87– 77.

Calipari is content to have his team enjoy their accomplishment of making it to the Final Four before preparing for the team's ultimate goal, the National Championship.

"They are going to celebrate [the Georgetown win]," Calipari said. "But we want everyone to know this is one step towards our final goal."

Senior co-captain Dana Dingle is looking to have his last season of basketball at UMass finish with the team on top of the college basketball world.

"This is the last go around for the seniors," Dingle said. "We want to go out with a bang. We're going to try and do all we can to get a National Championship. This is the best team I've been on in four years and we all play well together."

■ guards

continued from page 1

Iverson did have a solid first half, scoring half of his team's points (17) and helped the Hoyas back from a 14– point deficit to enter the half down just four. Two of his 17 points came in spectacular fashion after Iverson burned Travieso at the top of the key and drove in for the dunk.

A Travieso trey gave the Minutemen a 31–17 lead, but Iverson answered with two trifectas in the next minute to pull the Hoyas to within 10 with just under five minutes left in the half. Iverson would go on to score five more points in the half but wasn't able to do anything in the stretch as Travieso and the rest of his mates turned on the defensive pressure in the second half.

"It wasn't just me who stopped him today. [My teammates] helped me make it hard for him. I take pride in my defense, we all do," Travieso said. "[I just tried to] play him honest, to try not to go for steals, contesting every shot, be aggressive, try not to take chances. He was a little frustrated. I kept playing him the way he didn't want to play. I got a lot of help from Edgar and the rest of the team. I picked up my level of intensity and just kept attacking him."

The two–time Big East Defensive Player of the Year finished with a game–high 23 points but shot just 6–for–21 from the field and dished out only one assist to his five turnovers.

"Their guards did a good job. They played a great all– around game. They shut us down defensively at times when we needed to score," Iverson said. "I was putting up good shots, but unfortunately they just weren't falling down for me. I think they just did a good defensive job. I know on my penetration other people were stepping up and contesting my shots. They had a good plan coming in."

Massachusetts 86, Georgetown 62

Georgetown (29-8)
Aw 1-2 0-0 2, Williams 4-7 1-2 9, Harrington 4-9 5-8 13, Iverson 6-21 7-10 23, Page 0-5 0-0 0, White 0-1 2-4 2, Touomou 2-4 1-1 5, Dia 1-3 0-0 2, Nichols 0-2 0-1 0, Jackson 2-2 2-2 6, Owinje 0-0 0-0 0, Berry 0-1 0-0 0, Reed 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 20-57 13-28 62.

Massachusetts (35-1)
Dingle 2-4 6-10 10, Bright 5-14 7-9 17, Camby 9-19 4-5 22, E.Padilla 1-4 5-6 8, Travieso 6-14 2-2 20, Weeks 2-5 0-1 4, Clarke 0-0 1-2 1, Norville 0-1 0-0 0, Nunez 0-1 0-0 0, Cottrell 0-0 0-0 0, Maclay 0-0 0-0 0, C.Padilla 1-2 0-0 2, Burns 1-1 0-0 2. Totals 27-65 25-35 86.

Halftime— Massachusetts 38, Georgetown 34. 3-Point goals— Georgetown 4-15 (Iverson 4-9, Williams 0-1, Page 0-1, Touomou 0-1, Berry 0-1, Nichols 0-2), Massachusetts 7-16 (Travieso 6-13, E.Padilla 1-2, G.Padilla 0-1). Fouled out— None. Rebounds— Georgetown 51 (Williams 8), Massachusetts 43 (Weeks 8). Assists— Georgetown 8 (Williams, Harrington, Touomou 2), Massachusetts 18 (Travieso 6). Total fouls— Georgetown 24, Massachusetts 22.

Player of the Game

Carmelo Travieso – 20 points, 6 assists, 6-13 three pointshooting

Highlights...

The first half was a neck and neck battle between the Minutemen and the Hoyas. Georgetown took an early 3–2 lead... UMass countered with a 5–2 run, with all five points coming from Dingle... Georgetown tied the game at 10 on a Jerome Williams dunk ... Travieso led the team offensive and defensively to its biggest run of the game to give UMass a 20–13 lead... The second half was all UMass as Marcus Camby came out of the locker room to score the first six unanswered points... The Minuteman defense held Georgetown star Victor Page to a whopping 0 points on the evening... Tyrone Weeks continued to play his strong role as sixth man combatting Georgetown's big man Jahidi White in the paint and holding him to two points.

Massachusetts 79, Arkansas 63

Arkansas (26-13)
Hood 1-6 3-4 5, Robinson 3-6 0-0 6, Reid 3-11 6-6 12, Towns 0-6 0-0 0, Bradley 6-10 0-0 15, Wilson 3-7 6-6 12, Williams 1-4 0-0 2, Davis 1-4 0-0 2, Thompson 4-9 1-2 9, Hall 0-1 0-0 0, Engskov 0-0 0-0 0, Whitney 0-0 0-0 0, Merritt 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 22-64 16-18 63.

Massachusetts (34-1)
Dingle 4-9 4-7 12, Bright 5-14 1-1 11, Weeks 5-9 6-8 16, Travieso 5-14 1-1 14, E.Padilla 2-5 0-0 5, Camby 5-8 5-10 15, Norville 0-0 1-2 1, Clarke 0-4 1-2 1, Nunez 1-3 0-0 2, Cottrell 0-1 2-2 2, C.Padilla 0-0 0-0 0, Maclay 0-0 0-0 0, Burns 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 27-67 21-33 79.

Halftime-Massachusetts 39, Kansas 38. 3-Point goals-Kansas 3-11 (Vaughn 1-1, Thomas 1-2, Haase 1-5, Pearson 0-1, B.J.Williams 0-1, Gurley 0-1), Massachusetts 5-16 (Kellogg 3-6, M.Williams 2-5, Bright 0-1, Roe 0-1, Padilla 0-3). Fouled out-Ostertag, M.Williams. Rebounds-Kansas 43 (LaFrentz 9), Massachusetts 37 (Roe 10). Assists-Kansas 21 (Vaughn 11), Massachusetts 16 (Padilla 5). Total fouls-Kansas 17, Massachusetts 23. A-18,300.

Player of the Game

Tyrone Weeks – 16 points, 7 rebounds

Highlights...

The game opened with a 13–0 UMass run in the first two minutes of the game... Tyrone Weeks established himself in the paint to lead the Minutemen in scoring with 16 points. He started in place of Marcus Camby who was not on the floor for the opening due to team rules violations... The Minutemen held the Razorbacks to just 18.5 percent shooting in the first half as Arkansas hit just five field goals in the first half... After falling off of the press conference platform, Carmelo Travieso fought off a sore back to hit three three–pointers and finish with 14 points... Arkansas' leading point scorer with 15 was Everett native Pat Bradley.

Massachusetts 79, Stanford 74

Massachusetts (33-10
Dingle 5-6, 2-2 13, Bright 5–13, 4–4 14, Camby 9–15, 2–4 20, E. Padilla 2–5, 0–0 6, Travieso 5–12, 1–3 14, Clarke 1–2, 0–0 2, Weeks 5–6 0–0 10, Nunez 0–0, 0–0 0, Norville 0–0, 0– 0 0, G. Padilla DNP, Burns DNP, Cottrell DNP, Maclay DNP, Totals 32–59, 9–13, 79.

Stanford (20-9)
Harbour 1–6, 0-0 2, Poppink 3–13, 3–6 9, Allaway 2–2, 0–0 4, Cross 6–16, 2–2 16, Knight 8–17, 10–13 27, Weems 2–2 0– 0 5, Sauer 5–7, 0–0 11, Lee 0–1, 0–0 0, Seaton 0–0, 0–0 0, Wente DNP, Tshionyi DNP, Thompson DNP, Totals 27–64, 15–21, 74.

Halftime— Massachusetts 33, Stanford 31. Three–point— Massachusetts 3-9 (Dingle 1–1, E. Padilla 2–3, Camby 0–2, Travieso 3–10, Clarke 0–1) Stanford 5–20 (Harbour 0–1, Poppink 0–1, Cross 2–9, Knight 1–5, Weems 1–1, Sauer 1–3). Fouled out— none. Rebounds— Massachusetts 35 (Dingle, Camby 8) Stanford 31 (Sauer 7). Assists— 23 (E. Padilla 12) Stanford 13 (Knight 9). Total fouls— Massachusetts 16, Stanford 12. Attendence— 11, 931.

Player of the Game

Marcus Camby – 20 points, 7 blocks

Highlights...

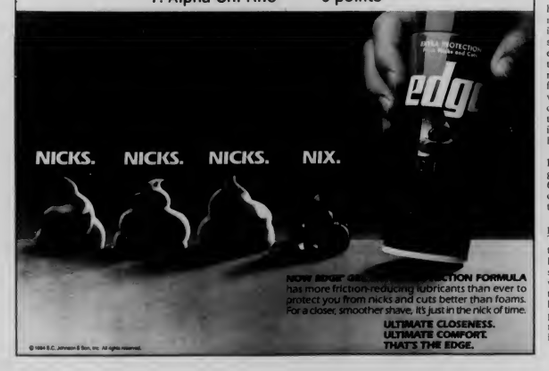
Marcus Camby led the Minutemen in scoring with 20 points on 9–15 shooting from the field... Edgar Padilla was the assist man once again with 12 on the evening... UMass came out of the box first, as Camby grabbed the tip then scored the first six points of the game off an unassisted layup, slam (from Travieso), and a jumper (from Padilla) to give the Minutemen an early 6–0 lead... The Cardinal tied it up with 5:56 to go in the half when Camby fouled Knight who made both buckets of a one–and–one... Stanford brought it within one with :54 to go in the game, but Bright iced a jumper from the top of the key prompting a Stanford TO... Camby made a one–and–one for the win.

edge
EDGE SALUTES INTRAMURAL EXCELLENCE
Delta Chi Captures Wrestling Team Championship
Individual Order of Finish

Weight Class	Champion/Runner-up	Team	Weight Class	Champion/Runner-up	Team
116.5-117.5 lbs.	1. Eric Connolly	Independent	161.5-164 lbs.	1. Ryan Calsse	Independent
	2. Wilson Lee	Alpha Chi Rho		2. Andrew Garland	Independent
125-134 lbs.	1. Brad Duffy	Independent	165-169 lbs.	1. Paul Shvartsman	We Ain't Greek
	2. David Landau	Independent		2. Kyle Lindholm	Independent
134.5-140.5 lbs.	1. Lamar Gore	Independent	170-180 lbs.	1. Larry Feinberg	Delta Chi
	2. Loula Schoolcraft	We Ain't Greek		2. Chaz Allla	Sigma Phi Epsilon
141-145 lbs.	1. Justin Cotter	Independent	182-189 lbs.	1. Karl Barkei	Independent
	2. Mark Alvea	Independent		2. Adam Truelove	Delta Chi
146-149 lbs.	1. Bryan Meehan	Independent	193-213.5 lbs.	1. Jeremy Fiset	Sigma Tau Gamma
	2. Al Tiber	Delta Chi		2. Keith Gamble	Sigma Phi Epsilon
151.5-154 lbs.	1. Pere Berkowitz	Independent	223.5-230 lbs.	1. John Tzouganatos	Pi Kappa Alpha
	2. Chris Clark	Delta Chi		2. Charles Trujillo	We Ain't Greek
155-158.5 lbs.	1. Aaron Polansky	Independent
	2. Willard MacDonald	Independent

Team Order of Finish

1. Delta Chi	43 points
2. We Ain't Greek	27 points
3. Sigma Phi Epsilon	18 points
4. Sigma Tau Gamma	13 points
5. Pi Kappa Alpha	9 points
6. DuPont's	4 points
7. Alpha Chi Rho	3 points



■ UMass

continued from page 10

Thomas' push set up domination by UMass for the next five minutes, and a meeting of the UConn/Howard game seemed within reach.

However, the Spartans didn't plan on returning to East Lansing just yet.

With 2:22 to go in regulation, UMass sat atop a flimsy 49– 47 lead prompting a time out. In the final minutes, Crystal Carroll fouled Zareth Gray who sank two from the charity stripe to tie it up. With seconds remaining, Gurile stepped up with a monster block that protected the tie and sent the game to overtime.

It was more of the same in the extra se, with both squads exchanging baskets. Again, the Minutewomen looked as though a return to Gampel was in their future as the definitive moment would come in the final seconds of the game.

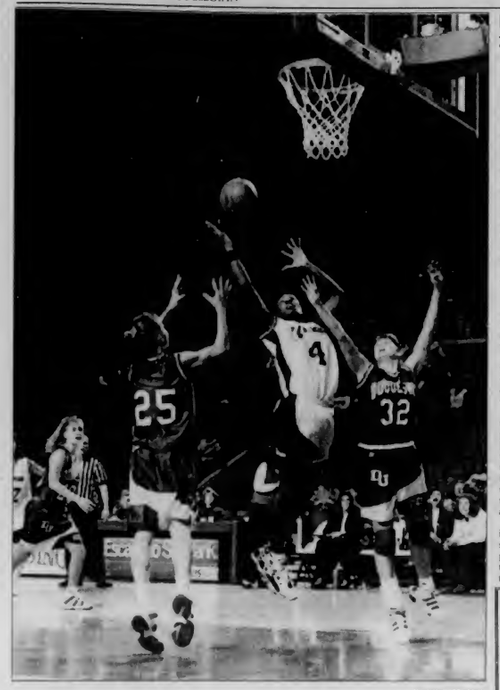
With 1:05 to go, the Spartan's Cheri Euler drove the lane for two putting her squad up 56–55.

"Cheri stepped up defensively," Langeland said. "She denied Thomas the ball, we knew that is who they wanted to go to. [Thomas] is an outstanding player and Cheri just kept her from penetrating."

The Minutewomen would fail to convert on their remaining possessions except for a Nicole Carter layup with 4.8 seconds left, but it wasn't enough as Michigan State rolled to the 60–57 victory.

"It was the kind of game that we had opportunities, but we didn't step up and make the plays when we had to," said UMass coach Joanie O'Brien. "The experience of playing in this tournament is something every kid on the team will take with them, the seniors will take it with them when they leave, and hopefully the underclassmen will take the experience and think about it every day this summer when they are working."

"The experience of coming to the tournament is one I won't forget for next year," Carroll said. "It's a good experience for the younger players also, to let them know what standards they have to play to and what's expected of them."



EMILY BEKY / COLLEGIAN

Octavia Thomas led UMass in scoring with 21 points on 8–for–18 shooting from the field while pulling down eight boards.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

and the Minutewomen, who posted the first 20-win season in the team's history, now stand surrounded by the greatest achievements in the program's history.

For the duration of the year, UMass was led by the senior co–captain duo of Melissa Gurile and Octavia Thomas. During the season, Thomas became Massachusetts' all–time leader in rebounds (895), free throws made (437), and free throws attempted (591), while positioning herself second in scoring (1770) and fourth in field goal attempts (1254). Gurile claimed the top honor in blocks (178), while ranking second in all–time free throws made (405), second in free– throws attempted (520), third in scoring (1667), third in rebounds (817), and third in field goals attempted (1336).

Thomas was named to the Atlantic 10 first–team, while Gurile was named to the second–team. Junior forward Crystal Carroll, who was a consistent force in the paint for the Minutewomen all season, received a place on the third team and the All A-10 Championship team. Both Gurile and Thomas are All–America candidates.

Backcourt leaders Sabriya Mitchell and Beth Kuzmeski also recorded impressive season numbers. Mitchell led the team with 128 assists at the end of the regular season, ranking fifth in the A–10 in assists. Kuzmeski had the highest free throw percentage on the team at 83 percent.

As a whole, the UMass team ranked fifth in the nation in foul shot percentage, with an accuracy rate of 75.2 percent. The Minutewomen were ninth in the nation in field goal percentage defense, holding opponents to just 36.1 percent from the field. In addition, the team was rated ninth in field goal percentage (48.4 percent).

The effort given in the tournament game was no different from the rest of the season. The Minutewomen infused the game with their emotion, while turning in quality numbers.

"We put a lot of energy, a lot of effort into [the game]," Kuzmeski said.

Thomas led the team with 21 points, while Gurile chipped in for 12 and Kuzmeski 11. Gurile recorded four blocks, Mitchell dished out four assists and Thomas had four steals. Gurile grabbed 13 rebounds and Carroll pulled down 11. As a team the UMass squad shot 34.8 percent, 81.8 percent from the line and totaled 46 rebounds.

"One thing I said to them was, 'I can't fault you for your effort.' They gave me everything they had to give, and as a coach that's all you ask from your team," O'Brien said. "They can walk off that floor with their heads held high."

But neither O'Brien nor the Minutewomen are resting on this season's laurels. Visions of next season are already in the minds of coach and players alike.

"I think the experience of playing in the [NCAA tournament] game is something every kid will take with them," O'Brien said. "The seniors will take it with them when they leave, and hopefully the underclassmen will take the experience and think about it every day this summer when they're working."

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Miss. St downs Bearcats

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — An incredible two–week run has Mississippi State in its first Final Four. Now all the Bulldogs have to do is keep it going.

They added to their impressive close of the season yesterday with a 73-63 victory over Cincinnati in the championship game of the Southeast Regional.

The Bearcats were only the latest high–profile team to fall to a school that suddenly has grabbed everybody's attention.

Mississippi State beat then-No. 1 Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference tournament championship game 14 days ago and knocked out top-seeded Connecticut on Friday night in the regional semifinals. In the weekend wins over the region's top two seeds, the Bulldogs never trailed.

Next up for fifth-seeded Mississippi State (26-7), which has won seven straight, will be Syracuse, which beat Kansas 60-57 in the West Regional final, in yesterday's semifinals at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

"Dreams are coming true for us," said Dontae' Jones, who led the Bulldogs with 23 points and 13 rebounds.

Mississippi State played its usual tight defense against Cincinnati (28-5), which was looking for its second Final Four appearance in the 1990's, and was able to hold off the one big run the Bearcats made at them.

Jones, the unanimous selection as regional MVP, had 28 points in the 84-73 victory over Kentucky, only the Wildcats' second loss of the season. Yesterday, he had 15 points in the game's opening 7:19, making six of his first seven shots.

"Those are the shots I usually take and I guess the adrenaline was little more pumped than usual," the junior forward said. "They were falling for me, and when they fall, I keep shooting and it gets the team pumped up."

The Bulldogs shot 56 percent and held the Bearcats to 36 percent in taking a 37-29 halftime lead.

"We knew it would be a war from the tipoff, but Dontae' made some big shots early and then we all gave that team effort that we need to win games like we've been winning," Mississippi State guard Darryl Wilson said.

Cincinnati opened the second half looking more like the team known for its defensive intensity. The Bearcats forced five turnovers in the opening 3:27 of the second half after the Bulldogs committed only five in the entire first half.

'Cuse pulls off the upset

By Tim Dohlberg
Associated Press

DENVER— All along, it figured a Big East team would be in the Final Four. Of the conference's five tournament teams, though, Syracuse didn't figure to be the one.

The Orangemen succeeded where Connecticut and Georgetown failed, upsetting Kansas 60-57 Sunday to win the West Regional and earn a berth in the Final Four for the first time since 1987. Syracuse will face Mississippi State, a 73-63 winner over Cincinnati, in the semifinals Saturday at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

The victory wasn't pretty, but it didn't need to be. The Jayhawks were frustrated by miserable shooting and a tight 2-3 zone that Syracuse packed inside to shut down the Kansas big men. When Jacque Vaughn's last 3-point attempt clanged off the rim as time ran out, Syracuse players mobbed each other on the floor in celebration of their improbable run into the Final Four.

"Meadowlands, baby!" screamed Jason Cipolla, who made a free throw with 12.5 seconds to give fourth-seeded Syracuse its final margin.

GET YOUR FIRST ORDER OF CHECKS FREE!
ECONOMICS 101
It's simple. BayBank gives you the best value for your banking buck.
And no matter which account you choose, you get the BayBank Card with access to over 1000 BayBank X-Press 24® machines.
Check out your options - starting with two of our most popular student accounts.

BASIC ECONOMICS
For $2.50 per month[1] or $1.50 with direct deposit - not a lot of cash either way - our Basic Checking includes:
- Four BayBank X-Press 24 withdrawals a month
- Up to eight checks a month
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection
- X-Press Check,® to pay for purchases anywhere MasterCard® is accepted

ECONOMIES OF SCALE
Just $6.00 a month[1] gets you our Student Value Package[2], designed just for students, it includes:
- Unlimited BayBank X-Press 24 transactions
- Up to eight checks a month
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection
- X-Press Check, to pay for purchases anywhere MasterCard is accepted
- The option[2] for a BayBank Visa® or MasterCard

It's economics made easy. So if you want to open a new account or just find out more about BayBank, come see us - or call 1-800-BAY-FAST® anytime - and mention this ad.
Check out our Web site at http://www.BayBank.com
BayBank®
1 Other fees, such as charges for transactions at X-Press 24 CASH,® non-BayBank ATMs, and designated point-of-sale terminals, are additional.
2 Credit products are for qualified applicants who are 18 years of age or older. Annual fee for credit card is extra.
Member FDIC Equal Opportunity Lender

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
For a good time — SEF is on the web
h t t p : / / w w w
umn.bt.umass.edu/~umt.bt.umass.edu/~jolston/jolston_html

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office: 922 Campus Center; 545-1995.

For Spring Break Toyota 1980 Stein-on wagon, snow tires only $900. Needs to go fast! 584-9273

EMPLOYMENT

Town of Amherst Leisure Services summer jobs
Camp/office/maintenance/pool Positions: Pool managers, lifeguards, swim instructors, cashiers, concessions supervisors, camp directors, counsellors with teaching experience, special needs counselors, art director, assistant directors, camp managers, office registration clerk and ball field maintenance worker. Applications available at Human Resources Office and Amherst Leisure Services Office, Bangs Community Center, 70 Bethwood Walk, Amherst. Preferred application deadline 3/29/96. Equal Opportunity-Affirmative Action employer.

$40,000/year Income Potential. Home typists/PC users. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 ext. T-1732 for listings.

$25,000/year Income Potential. Reading books. Toll-free 1-800-898-9778 ext. R-1102 for details.

Earn $1,000's weekly stuffing envelopes at home. For free information send a S.A.S.E. to: Investment Distributors, P.O. Box 3219, Coos Bay, OR 97420

Summer Jobs. Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is seeking seasonal warehouse/delivery personnel. Housing assistance for exceptional candidates send resume or letter of interest to: Brian K. Smith, Operations Manager, Island Food Products, PO. BOx 4068, Vineyard Haven, MA. 02568

Full/Part Time - Tupperware
The most fun you'll have making serious money. Call Danielle at 256-8863.

National Parks Hiring— Positions are now available at National Parks, forests and wildlife preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1 206-971-3620 ext N50014

FOR SALE

Moving-Furniture for sale. Call 253-4218. All wood convertible lyston bed frames. $80 Call Rick 256-1350

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trans. script into text. 2 speed attachable CDROM (PCMCIA slot) Bubble jet printer. $2,000 546-4728.

Brother Word Processor with spread sheets, business letter, and thesaurus software. Originally bought for $300, and valued at $400- resale price $150 or best offer. Call 549-3774 for more information!

FOUND

Found: Texas Instrument TI-85 in Hasbrouck on 3/11. Call 6-5701

Gold Bracelet - near Police Station. Call Joe at (413) 467-2738.

ROOM FOR RENT

Amherst: 2BR $268.67 each/mo. (heat, cable incl.) Josh or Gabe 253-1404

Room for Rent, Belchertown, beautiful house. For info call Justin 323-7560

4 Bedroom house need immediately. For more info call Pam 253-4633

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

Internet Access $25 monthly. Account includes your own websites. Contact TIAC at (800)644-4605.

SUMMER SUBLET

Fulltron 3 bedroom apartment. Cheap! Call 549-5751

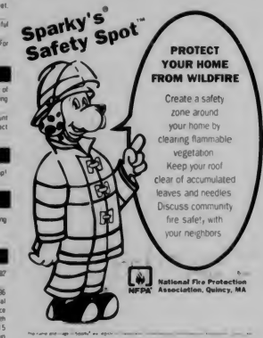
WANTED TO RENT

Three Bedroom Apt. In Pulfton. Willing to take over your lease. Call ASAP. Rena 546-3167

TRAVEL

Cash$$$ for your magic cards. 585-9387 After 5 p.m.

Legal Assistants Wanted. FALL 1996 INTERNSHIPS with the Student Legal Services Office: get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is April 15, 1996.—contact Student Legal Services today: 545-1995. 922 Campus Center.



Sparky's Safety Spot™
PROTECT YOUR HOME FROM WILDFIRE
Create a safety zone around your home by clearing flammable vegetation
Keep your roof clear of accumulated leaves and needles
Discuss community fire safety with your neighbors
NFPA
National Fire Protection Association, Quincy, MA

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

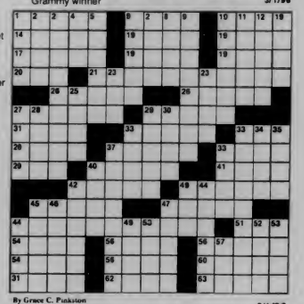
ACROSS
1 Domesticated
6 Brouhaha
10 Actor Dillon
14 Emulate Romeo and Juliet
15 Turner
16 Doer' Suffix
17 Overindulge
18 Atlanta arena
19 Predicament
20 Half a score
21 5th Dimension's Grammy winner
24 Codicil
26 Inferior
27 Daddy longlegs relative
29 Apollo — "Rocky" role
31 It's abuzz
32 Certain South Africans
33 Put the lid on
36 Actor Leon
37 "— Theme" from "Doctor Zhivago"
38 Young Guthrie
39 Dent
40 Trail user
41 Armed excursion
42 Thin cookie
43 Donnybrook
45 Famous Memphis street
47 In —: furious
48 Simon and Garfunkel's Grammy winner
51 Degree for Darrow
54 — -tat
55 Yemen's neighbor
56 Word with coach or craft
58 In a tie
59 Minnesota Governor Carlson
60 Had
61 Legal document
62 Sign of sorrow
63 Techniques

DOWN
1 Kind of pilot
2 Mont Blanc, to the French
3 Henry Mancini's Grammy winner
4 Steeple ornament
5 Mislead
6 Roux necessity
7 Light source
8 Sewell, Seward or Sten
9 Wyeth and Whistler
10 "A — His Music": Sinatra winner
11 "— Like Alice" Shule
12 Now
13 Low card
22 — se: intrinsically
23 — faustus: lucky day
25 Caesar's fateful time
27 Hoax
28 Fine cotton cloth
29 Kitchen tool
30 Rare anagram
32 Recipe direction
33 Paul Simon's Grammy winner
34 Other, to Ovid
35 "— Favonte" Simon play
37 Hitchcock film
38 Berlin's "He's — Picker"
40 Symbol of innocence
42 Wouk's "— Remembrance"
43 To's traveling companion?
44 Rescue from captivity
45 Courageous Native American
46 Queen of cream
47 Moore TV co-star
48 Palomino of TV
49 Nagy of Hungary
50 Darling pet
52 Posthumous Pulitzer prize winner
53 Ties the knot
57 Word with faced or fisted

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

V	I	G	O	R		A	L	A	S		E	G	O
E	D	E	M	A		P	A	C	T		C	E	L	L
T	E	L	A	W	R	E	N	C	E		A	C	A	D
O	A	T	H		A	G	O	R	A		P	U	R	E
			A	R	P		S	A	L	E	S	M	E	N
A	L	J		E	T	T	E			L	U	M
N	E	D		C	U	E		T	S	E	L	I	O	T
E	A	S	T	E	R	N		R	E	V	E	N	G	E
W	H	A	U	D	E	N		O	V	A		G	E	M
			E				O	N	E	T		S	E	A
G	L	I	S	S	A	D	E		R	E	F
R	I	N	D		N	U	R	S	E		O	S	S	O
A	L	G	A		J	P	M	A	R	Q	U	A	N	D
S	L	E	Y		O	L	A	N		U	N	D	I	D
P	E	R			U	E	L	E		O	D	E	T	S

3/1/96



By Grace C. Pinkston
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

3/1/96

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
TRY THEM
THEY WORK!!!!!
113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
545- 3500

OR

AT A TABLE AT THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X _____ Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) — Do not be shy about taking on a leadership role at work. A lucrative-sounding offer merits further investigation. A neighbor may intrude on your privacy, making you feel uncomfortable.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) — A new beginning makes you feel more optimistic about the future. A small gift from an old friend holds great significance. This person cares for you deeply but may not be good at verbalizing affection.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) — Be kind, but refuse to let others impose on you. Set limits on what you are willing to do. A speculative venture finally gets off the ground. Keep your fingers crossed.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) — The business outlook is favorable for making investments. Buy or sell real estate, jewelry or heirlooms. Someone you meet today for the first time may stick like glue if given the slightest encouragement.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — A good day to purchase things to improve your home. Look for items on sale. A generous host, you sometimes wish that your guests were better about reciprocating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Donating time and effort to a charity campaign or community project will prove very fulfilling. A hobby may have commercial potential. Consult marketing specialists after getting a copyright or patent on your ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — A good day for financial moves of almost any kind. The purchase or sale of real estate should go well. Seek legal assistance when needed. Romantic opportunities abound; you feel highly desirable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) — Work will help you recover from a personal disappointment. Tend to unfinished business before launching a major new project. Friends prove their loyalty in wonderful ways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) — Feel your creative power! Others sense that you are on the right track and want to share your good fortune. Only give to the deserving. Your heart opens to someone new.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) — Put your best foot forward at work. Go ahead and express admiration for someone's achievement. Ignoring a recent triumph could create bruised feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) — You have more charisma than you think. Talk to new acquaintances with quiet confidence. Someone you meet today could play a major role in your future.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) — A sarcastic remark could turn off a potential ally. Avoid sounding bitter. Loved ones need to know they can always count on you. Keeping your distance from an irritating co-worker will avert a confrontation.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I DON'T BELIEVE MEN HAVE A SPECIAL CHROMOSOME TO TELL THEM WHICH ASSIGNMENTS ARE A WASTE OF TIME.
WE DO
I WILL TEST THE THEORY ON YOUNG ASOK THE INTERN
MMM...THE SWEET SMELL OF UNNECESSARY WORK.
MAYBE MEN ARE MORE PERCEPTIVE THAN YOU'D THINK.
SHE'S AROUSED I'LL MAKE MY MOVE.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

AT LONG LAST OUR PRODUCT IS COMPLETE. IT SHIPS TOMORROW.
THAT'S TERRIFIC. I ONLY HAVE A FEW ADDITIONAL FEATURES TO ADD AND THE MARKETING DEPARTMENT WILL BE HAPPY.
OKAY
I BELIEVE THAT OUR CUSTOMERS WANT HARDWARE, NOT SOFTWARE.
IT'S TIMES LIKE THIS I WISH I WERE A PSYCHOPATH.
YOU'RE NOT!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SOME NIGHTS EVEN A SUPERHERO CAN TAKE A BREAK...
WHY HOME SO EARLY, HONEY?
I JUST REALIZED HOW MUCH I MISS YOU!
THAT, AND THE FACT THAT THINGS ARE QUIET OUT THERE?
O, YE OF LITTLE FAITH!
MEANWHILE...
I'M TOO OBLIVIOUS TO BE AN ACTOR, AM I?
THEY'LL EAT THOSE WORDS WHEN I'M DONE!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

IN HIS CLUTTERED GARAGE, A FRUSTRATED ACTOR IS FEVERISHLY AT WORK...
I'LL SHOW THEM WHETHER I CAN ACT OR NOT! I'LL PROVE I HAVE CHARISMA!
LATER...
AND NOW FOR ACT ONE!
JEWELRY!

Jim's Journal By Jim

I got a post card from my grandma today.
She's visiting Arizona.
She said she's having a good time.
"Maybe next time you can come along," she said.

Monkey Socials By Boogaloo Shrimp (Greg Shea)

GUS GETS ON SINGLED OUT
Oh, Jeanny, let's meet some contestants
Hi Sally, You're gonna Meet A REAL MAN!!!
Hey Honey, CHAD Here's the butcher, AND I'M Gonna Bring Home the Beef!!!
Hello, I'M GUS... AND I HAVE Anal Warts.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England
Daily College
Free

Kippi By Barry Deutsch

YOU'RE BLOGGING, RIGHT?
THINK ABOUT IT? NOTHING HERE MAKES SENSE UNLESS WE'RE IN A COMIC STRIP.
LIKE WHAT?
LIKE LOOK AT YOURSELF! YOU'RE A FROG!
SO WHAT'S YOUR POINT?
SLURP
COUGH! SQUAWK! WHAT IS THIS SLIME?
CATCH! YOU TOLD IT AT NEXT, SILLY

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My girlfriend said to me:
I don't want you to just clean my bedroom,
wash my dishes,
watch my little sister when I go to the movies,
pick me up and take me shopping,
give me money,
and buy me stuff....
I also want you to love me completely and only have me on your mind every single moment we're together...attend! attend to me!
I said,"O.K. honey. I can do that....but first I have to go out for a loaf of bread and never come back."
10 11 12 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
10 11 12 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

Close to Home By John McPherson

ARE YOU PLAGUED BY EXCESSIVE BODY ODOR? TIRED OF DRIVING AWAY YOUR FRIENDS? TRY NEW STINK-AWAY DEODORANT! STINK-AWAY'S POWERFUL ANTI-ODOR FORMULA STOPS B.O. DEAD AND LETS YOUR FRIENDS BREATHE EASY!
JMcPherson

Another first date is ruined by an embarrassing commercial.

Close to Home By John McPherson

HAVE YOU BEEN FEELING LEFT OUT AT WORK OR SCHOOL? PERHAPS YOUR BREATH IS OFFENSIVE TO COLOGNE-WEARING PEOPLE. CALL TODAY FOR FREE SAMPLES OF OUR NEW MOUTHWASH!
JMcPherson

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Mike Burke
Photo Technician.....Elizabeth Brown
Production Supervisor.....Kathryn Gracia
Production.....Matt Audette
.....Ray Keenan

Today's D.C. Menu
Sorry,
No Menu Today
Please Call
545-2626

Ever Think of writing for Sports!
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

Collegian Comics, so funny we forgot to laugh.

Ponser By Darling

Quote of the Day

"There is only one place better to be than right here, and that's Jim Calhoun's living room.

–Marty Dobrow of the Daily Hampshire Gazzete while watching UMass beat Georgetown"

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- The men's basketball team earned its first ever NCAA Final Four berth after defeating Georgetown on Saturday (See page 10).
- The men's lacrosse team dropped a game to No. 1 Virginia and defeated Yale over break. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The Massachusetts baseball team was in action over the break, winning four games and dropping one to Northwestern See tomorrow's Collegian for the wrap up.
- The UMass softball team downed Bradley 10–5 and swept a double header with Eastern Illinois and Drake over the break. See tomorrow's Collegian for the details.
- The men's and women's gymnastic squads each picked up a win over the break. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The women's water polo squad fell to the University of the Redlands over break, 15–11. See tomorrow's Collegian for the scoop.

Collegian Sports • Monday, March 25, 1996

UMass defeats Hoyas, earns first Final Four berth

Minutemen thrash Arkansas, Camby named Tourney MOP

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

ATLANTA — Two wins to the title.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team justified their top seed in the East ten-fold by steam-rolling all opponents on the way to clinching a spot where they have never been before, the Final Four.

Saturday was supposed to be the humbling of the Minutemen against All-America selection Allen Iverson and the fourth-ranked Georgetown Hoyas. It turned out to be a typical day at the office as UMass whipped John Thompson's squad 86-62. The win sets up a rematch of the season opener for the Minutemen, No. 2 Kentucky in the National Semifinals.

UMass' own All-American Marcus Camby, voted Most Outstanding Player of the East Regional, led the Minutemen with 22 points, but it was UMass dedication to defense that was the key factor in the game.

"What's great is our team walked in, picked up the stat sheet and you know what they were looking at," Calipari said. "They were looking at what their guy scored and Edgar [Padilla] came over to me and said 'Check out No. 44' and I said 'he got 18,' he said 'no that's 18 minutes he got a goose egg.'"

No. 44 was the Big East Tournament's Most Outstanding Player, Hoya guard Victor Page, the man Padilla guarded all game. Page had been averaging 13 points per game, second on the team, before the UMass point guard held him scoreless.

The Minutemen led at the break 38-34, but came out of the locker room with a vengeance to start the second half. Camby had eight of UMass' 15 points before Hoya guard Daymond Jackson hit Georgetown's first field goal nearly six minutes into the half, an off-balance jumper in the lane.

By that point the Minutemen lead had grown to 53-36 and would never fall below 13 the rest of the way.

The Hoyas never got on track after the half, as they shot only 26 percent in the final 20 minutes. That includes Iverson's 1-for-10 second half performance. Carmelo Travieso, who was matched up man-on-man with the super sophomore most of the game, shared the credit of containing Iverson with his teammates.

"What we were trying to do is to spread him out," Calipari said. "He's going to get his 20. He might get 35 but we can still win if we make it difficult on him because he has to take more and more and more shots. Coming off the screens we talked about really stepping out and double teaming him, which means our whole team is playing him."

Travieso's offensive output was just as important a factor in the outcome, as the Minutemen shooting guard nearly matched Iverson's 23 points with 20 of his own, including six three-pointers. Both players joined Camby, Donta Bright and Texas Tech's Jason Sasser as All-East Region selections.

The first 7:20 of the contest saw the lead change six times, with three of them occurring before the Minutemen went on a 21-6 run to claim their largest lead in the first half. Georgetown then turned up its full court press, chipping away at the Minutemen lead until it was down to four before the first half buzzer.

UMass was able to collect itself during halftime and

Turn to HOOPS, page 6

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Marcus Camby and UMass swatted Georgetown's Final four hopes in a 24-point blow-out in Atlanta.

Camby controls Harrington, stops Hoyas' comeback hope

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

ATLANTA — Already this season Massachusetts' Marcus Camby has gone up against some of the best centers in all of college basketball— Tim Duncan, Lorenzen Wright and Samaki Walker, just to name a few.

And in each matchup, the 6-foot-11-inch Hartford native has come out on top.

So when Massachusetts prepared to face Georgetown in the NCAA East Regional Final on Saturday at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta, Camby prepared to face another excellent center — this time the Hoyas' Othella Harrington.

"He is a great low post player. I have a lot of respect for him," Camby said before Saturday's matchup. "I have played against a lot of great players this year. Hopefully that will help me."

Harrington took the same approach as Camby in preparing for the matchup.

"Marcus is a good player," Harrington said. "I'm just going to approach this game like any other game."

Harrington, a co-captain, came into the contest on a high after scoring 23 points (10-of-13 from the field, 3-of-4 from the free throw line), grabbing six boards and blocking two shots in 27 minutes against Texas Tech in the Hoya's 98-90 victory. The senior had struggled in Georgetown's second round victory over New Mexico with just five points and seven rebounds.

Camby was coming off of a so-so performance against Arkansas in which he scored 15 points and grabbed seven boards. He wasn't really needed against the Razorbacks but against the Hoyas he knew he would have to do more.

So just as the National Player of the Year has done in every other game in which the Minutemen were pitted against a top center, Camby stepped up — although it wasn't immediately.

The first half saw Camby finish with nine points, four boards, two blocks, an assist and a steal but he wasn't shooting particularly well (3-of-10 from the field). Harrington, on the other hand, was unable to continue his impressive play from the game before, finishing with just two points in the first stanza.

After the Hoyas had cut the Minutemen's 14-point lead to four at the half, Camby decided it was time for him to go to work, while Harrington did his best to try to help his team complete the comeback.

In the first two minutes of the half, Camby set the tone for the rest of the game. He tipped in a Donta Bright miss, scored on a drive in the paint and then sank an 11-foot jumper on the baseline to put UMass up by 10.

"Last year we were in the same position," said Camby, referring to last year's 68-54 loss to Oklahoma State in the 1995 East Region Championship game. "We came out kind of flat in the second half of that game and ended up losing. So, I took it upon myself to make something happen. The [Bright] tip-in got me into a rhythm and I started knocking down some shots."

And in the process, Camby knocked down any Hoya chance for a comeback as Camby's own 6-0 run spurred a 15-2 Minuteman run that effectively put the game out of reach. Harrington came up with 11 second-half points and six second-half boards, but it was not enough as the Hoyas failed to get the UMass lead under 13 the rest of the way.

Turn to CAMBY, page 6

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Melissa Gurile and the Minutewomen lost 60-57 to Michigan State in their first-ever NCAA Tournament appearance.

Women's hoop suffers Tourney loss to Spartans

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — Amidst a sold out crowd of some 8,000 fans packed into the Harry A. Gampell Pavilion, the Massachusetts women's basketball team earned its spot in the UMass record books. With a school best regular season record of 20-9, the Minutewomen earned a first-ever NCAA Tournament berth, and came just three points away from turning record book pages by advancing to the second round.

No. 8 UMass lost 60-57 in an overtime battle with a tough No. 9 Michigan State squad. With all the excitement of the Big Dance, Massachusetts played its closest fought game of the season, as both teams breathed down each other's necks with the hope of advancing to the next round.

The Minutewomen came out strong when junior Beth Kuzmeski (11 points) sank a 10-foot jumper a minute into the game drawing a foul from the Spartan's Jamie Wesley (17 points). Kuzmeski sank the foul shot putting the Minutewomen up an early 3-0, but this was UMass' largest lead of an opening stanza that saw the lead change hands three times.

With 12:17 remaining in the half, senior Melissa Gurile sank the layup inside, assisted by Tricia Hopson, chopping the Spartans' early lead to one (8-7). Michigan State turned up the heat, going on a 10-2 run sparked by a Cheri Euler (8 points, 5 rebounds) layup with 11:46 to go, giving the Spartans' the largest lead of the game, 18-9. UMass attempted a surge, but found themselves down by nine again on a Paula Sanders (12 points, 16 rebounds) jumper in the paint making the score 20-11. But the Minutewomen were not ready to extinguish their postseason fire.

Octavia Thomas led UMass on a 6-0 run of its own, scoring all six points in just over two minutes, cutting the deficit to three (22-17). Thomas proved to be the offensive power for UMass tallying 21 points on 8—for-18 shooting from the field. Gurile finished the evening with a double- double tallying 12 points while pulling down 13 boards. Combined, the senior co-captain duo earned 15 of UMass' 21 first-half points.

It was Thomas again who would keep the game close hitting two from the foul line on a Nicole Cushing foul bringing the Minutewomen within three at halftime (24-21).

The key component that kept UMass on the Spartans' heels was its suffocating defense which kept the opposing guard tandem of Wesley and Tamika Matlock rushing to pass the ball.

"UMass played a great defensive game. They did a super job in their press, slowing us down and taking us out of our running game," said Michigan State coach Karen Langeland. "We really struggled with their press, not so much that we turned the ball over, but that we didn't like to play at their pace."

It was UMass who came out of the half swinging as Gurile swished one from the top of the key 15 seconds into the second stanza, kicking off a 6-2 run which ended on a 15- foot pull up by Kuzmeski that put UMass up 29-26 with 16:26 remaining in regulation.

The Spartans countered with an 8-0 run putting them ahead of UMass 35-29. That's when the Minutewomen got going.

With less than a 10 minutes to go, UMass was down a bucket when Thomas made good on a drive from the baseline knotting the game at 37.

Turn to UMASS, page 7

Record year for UMass finishes in tournament

Casey Kane

STORRS, Conn. — When the members of the Massachusetts women's basketball team walked off the court at the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion March 16, their expressions said it all.

Their faces showed a mixture of pride and exhaustion. Their tears showed how much of themselves they left on the court.

But even after the team's 60-57 loss to Michigan State in the first round of the NCAA Women's Tournament, the Minutewomen had nothing to hang their heads about.

The women achieved what no other UMass women's hoop team has. They produced the greatest year in Minutewomen basketball history.

The game against Michigan State marked the first time the women's basketball team reached the NCAAs. With a 20-9 record (11-5 in the Atlantic 10) heading into the tourney, the UMass squad garnered the No. 8 seed in the Mideast Region. The Minutewomen joined other A-10 member schools Rhode Island and George Washington in the NCAAs.

The tournament trip capped off a season that saw the Minutewomen defeat then No. 8 Stanford at the William D. Mullins Center. It was the crowning home win for the team which went undefeated on its home Mullins floor.

Five years ago the Minutewomen posted a record of 0-27. Enter coach Joanie O'Brien. Fast forward to the present day.

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

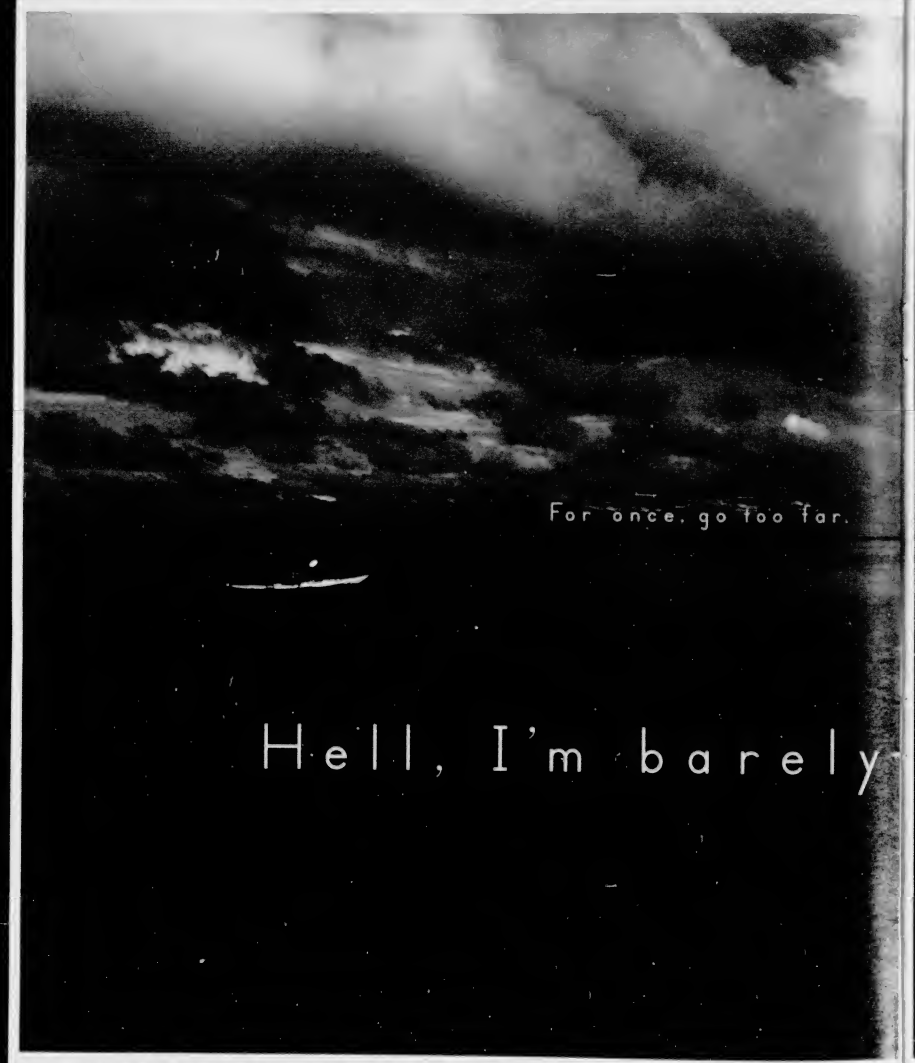
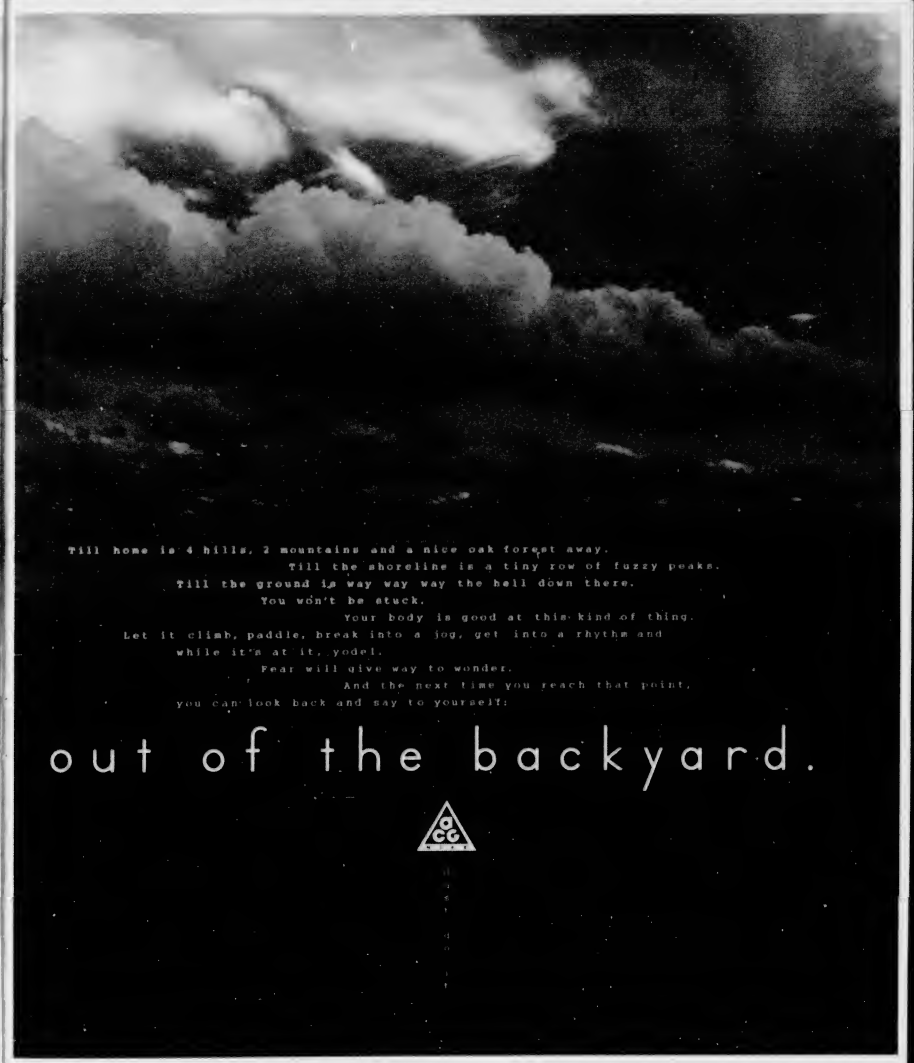
1,550,000 CIRCULATION
APRIL 1996
MUSIC TELEVISION
DD YOU STILL WANT IT?
THIS MONTH'S MUSICAL MÉNAGE À TROIS: KURT COBAIN, COURTNEY LOVE AND...WEIRD AL?





Till home is 4 hills, 2 mountains and a nice oak forest away.
Till the shoreline is a tiny row of fuzzy peaks.
Till the ground is way way way the hell down there.
You won't be stuck.
Your body is good at this kind of thing.
Let it climb, paddle, break into a jog, get into a rhythm and while it's at it, yodel.
Fear will give way to wonder.
And the next time you reach that point,
you can look back and say to yourself:

Hell, I'm barely out of the backyard.

U. VIEWS

Keg Stand

Thanks to associate director of student development Steve Brown, students at Mercer U., Georgia, must really enjoy chaperoned dances with cookie and milk refreshments. Mr. Brown took umbrage at your campus photo of a person drinking directly from a keg [November 1995]. This supposedly condones "potentially abusive behavior."

I think the students should be commended for being creative — they eliminated one step in consumer consumpsion while conserving natural resources. Think of the wasted energy and pollution from producing glass mugs. Hasn't Mr. Brown heard of "deSANDization" of the world's beaches by glass manufacturers?

I suppose Mr. Brown has a squad of keg police on campus montoring the proper steps in the consumption of beer. At least he did solve a social problem by implying that beer can only be abused if consumed directly from the keg. What is Mr. Brown doing about a more significant social ill — milk abuse (drinking milk directly from the carton)?

Tom Powell, adjunct faculty, Kansas State U.

Mourning Calvin & Hobbes

Regarding your story on Calvin and Hobbes [March 1996] — don't limit the appeal of this ex-comic strip to college students. Many of us are well past the age, but loved this strip anyway. I think the strip's universal appeal is what made it so popular. It truly is sorely missed.

Dewnia D. Gaunt, Dept. of Microbiology, U. of Iowa

I miss Calvin terribly. Please make him come back. Even C & H reruns would be OK with me.

Elaine Harper, junior, West Georgia College

Stogie Stink

For about eight months now, I have been reading your magazine. The features you've run on student athletes, grad students, etc. have been entertaining. But to stay current with the latest trends that are of interest to students across the country, I think you should do a feature on young cigar aficionados. As a representative of the U. of Iowa Cigar Society, I invite you to observe and partake in our organization with hopes that it may be featured in your magazine.

Chad J. Nuess, junior, U. of Iowa

Hey, Chad! Guess you don't read too closely, eh? Flip through your file o' U. Mags (or better yet, look up our back issues on the Web at http://www.umagazine.com) and feast your eyes on our oh-so-timely cigar story in the Jan./Feb. 1996 issue. — ed.

Fightin' Irish

Join the rest of the free world in ranking the U. of Notre Dame women's basketball team in the Top 25. [You'll find the U. Magazine NCAA Top 25 list on our web site at http://www.umagazine.com/u/sports/.

] They have crushed every Big East team except for U. of Connecticut (#1 in your poll). As the third seed in the conference (ranked behind only UConn and Villanova U. whom they crushed) the Irish are probably a top 20 or 25 team. They have improved over the year and should be one of the most powerful teams in the tourney. Put 'em in the Top 25 next week — especially after they beat UConn in the tournament.

Dan Tully, sophomore, U. of Notre Dame

OK, OK. You win. Next time, send your gripe with a wad of small unmarked bills and we'll see what we can do. — ed.

BGSU OK

I was offended by the comments made about Bowling Green State U. in your March issue [Quickies]. I have heard of those things happening, but outrageous things happen at other universities, too! Whoever wrote those comments portrayed BGSU as a place where sickos go to play pranks on people. I just want to say that BGSU is a respectable institution, and although these things happen occasionally, things are pretty good around here.

Stephen Ekanbo, senior, Bowling Green State U.

Cal State Who?

In the story "Desert Waterfare" [March 1996], you mention the U. of California, Sacramento. There is no U of California . Sacramento.

Peter Hays, professor of English, U. of California, Davis

Well, there is now buster! Er, just kidding. We meant California State U., Sacramento. — ed.

She's Not Amused

I am writing in regards to the article "Amusement Parks Unmasked" [March 1996] in which I was grossly misquoted. One can only imagine my astonishment when I read the article and found words put into my mouth.

Let's start with the petty details first. Six Flags never restricted its employees from dating one another except in-costume characters. Since there were only 10 of us in-costume characters who spent eight hours a day in a small room, Six Flags felt the environment necessitated a strict dating policy to avoid potentially explosive break-up situations. This rule was later retracted and a few situations arose but it did not go "haywire."

Secondly, I have never witnessed any "carnal acts" (except kissing) at Six Flags, so how could I say that it was a sex haven? This misquotation, though in a small article, brought me embarrassment as well as being potentially embarrassing to a family theme park such as Six Flags.

Jennifer Flinn, senior, U. of Texas, Austin

U. Magazine regrets the error. — ed.

ILLUSTRATION BY DAVID GREEN, U. OF MONTANA

Do you expect to get a job in your major?

Yes: 73%
No: 27%

In this day and age, it'll be amazing if I get a job at McDonald's. Even if I get a Ph.D, there's no way in hell I'll get a job in my major (political science). All of the good jobs are taken. Elizabeth Lawrence, junior, Barnard College, New York • I don't even want to get a job in my major (home economics education) after studying it for four years. Kelly Sheppard, senior, U. of Indiana at Pennsylvania • I expect to get a job in my major because I plan on going to graduate school. There are many opportunities. Students just don't seek them out and find them. They don't work very hard. They just say, "Oh, I guess I'll have to get a job at Burger King." Jennifer Campobasso, junior, Florida State U. • I worked at the Marriott for almost three years. The director of catering was an art studio major; the director of marketing was a geology major; and our resident manager was a political science major — so I don't expect to get a job in my major (family and consumer studies). Ginger Sullivan, senior, Middle Tennessee State U. • I definitely expect to get a job in my major. Business is the major of the '90s. Dan Jevinsky, junior, California State U., Northridge • The more classes I've taken, the more I've decided that I do not want to get a job in my major (education). I hope I'll be able to get a master's in computers. Mia Chine, senior, Ball State U. • I'm a political theory and constitutional democracy major. Basically I study a bunch of philosophical dead guys. I don't know what kind of job I would get in that major. If I weren't going to go to law school, I'd have serious career placement problems. Michelle Rydberg, senior, Michigan State U. • I'm a nursing major. One of the reasons I chose my major is because there will always be a need for nurses. Adriana Tabulara, junior, Chico State U., Calif. • Even if I do get a job in my major (theatre), it'll probably be one that doesn't pay very much. Whether or not I get a job in my major is separate from the fact that I'll have to keep a second job throughout much of my career. Diana Taylor, junior, Northeastern U., Boston • I'm a physical therapy major and the placement rate is about 99 percent. They're in great demand. Kate Wagner, junior, Ithaca College, NY • I'm hoping that my undergraduate degree in political science will help me get into graduate school and find a degree in something I'm really interested in, which is teaching English as a second language. John Hogg, junior, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln

For poll results from "Do you still want your MTV?" turn to page 18.

U. Polls

Do you consider yourself gay, straight or bisexual?

Sick of Friends?

800/6U-VIEWS (688-4397)

More polls at http://www.umagazine.com

Garfunkels and Humperdincks

Ever catch a gander at your parents' music collection? Worse yet, did you ever give that stuff a listen? The horror! That moment — the time you realized your parents were once your age, that they once thought they were cool, that they once had a Garfunkel and chose not to have it surgically removed. Ick!

I remember the first time I rifled through my folks' old albums. I was a regular musical aficionado. I mean, my discerning, 10-year-old ears knew the soothing tones of Culture Club and Quarterflash. Who needed The King when I had The King of Pop and Prince?

"What the hell's an Engelbert Humperdinck?" I asked myself. "There's no way my friends can find out we have one of these in the house! No way!"

I remember stories of a wailing Jennings, too. Now, I never saw it, but if it looked anything like it sounded, I count myself fortunate.

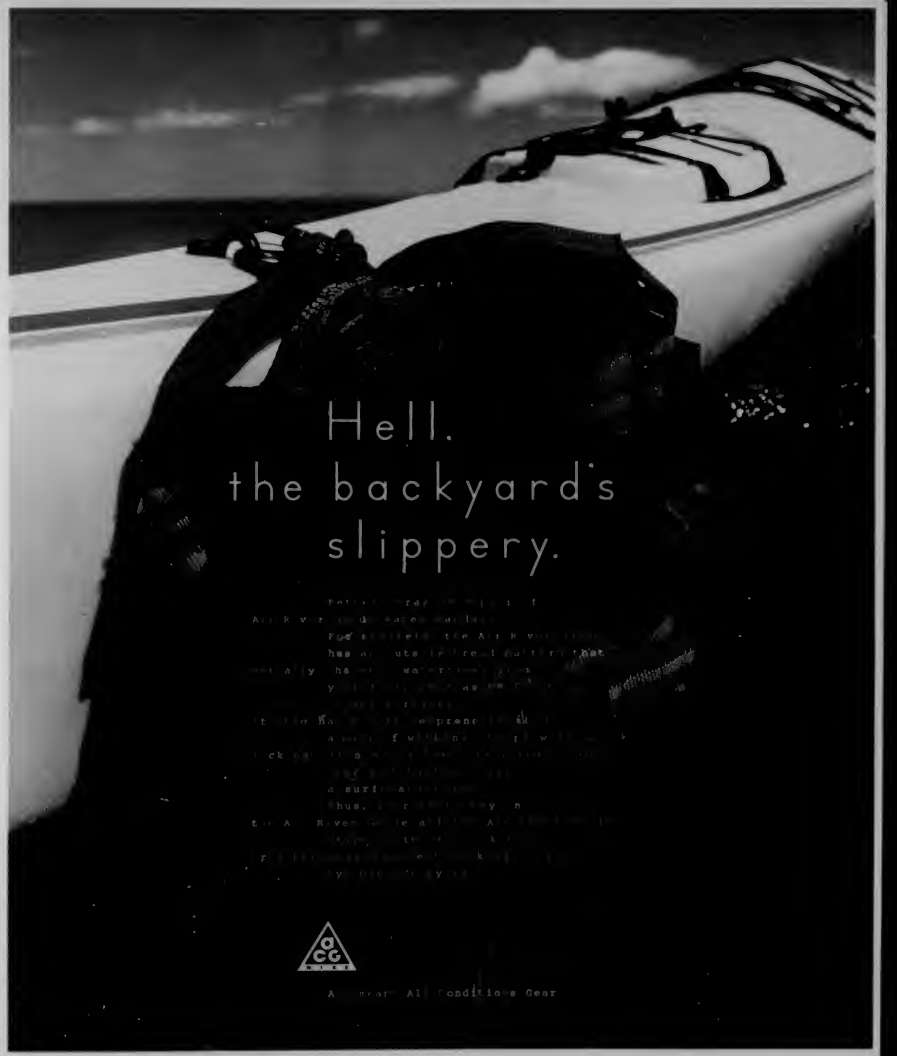
I guess it was part of growing up, but at the time, I felt more like throwing up.

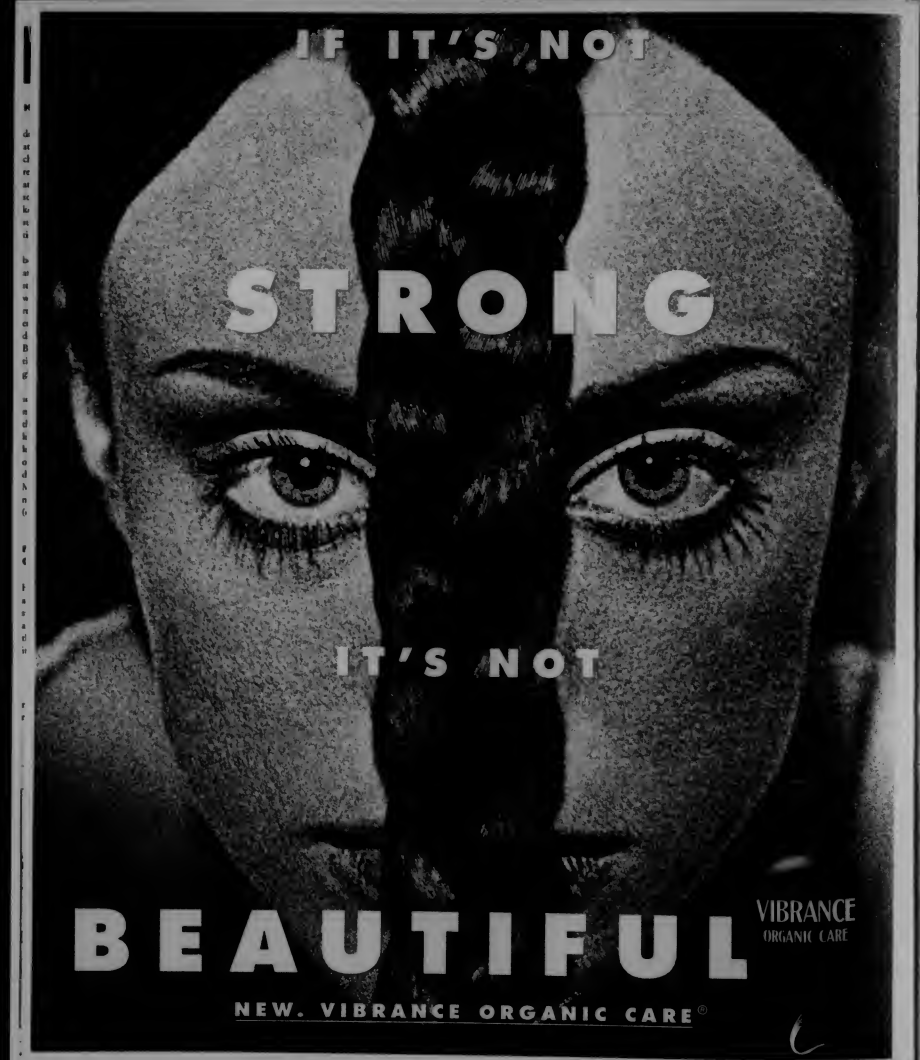
John Denver? Neil Sedaka? Paul Anka? Turtles and Beatles? Mamas and Papas? Dylan and Joplin? Who would buy that stuff?

Of course, that was many years ago. Alzheimer's has now set in with the folks, and I've begun to call my own previous listening tastes into question. What will my kids think of their dad 15 or 20 years from now when they find that old Milli Vanilli cassette? Better yet, will they even know what a cassette is?

Oh well. Time marches on. At least they'll be spared the Humperdinck experience. But as it turns out, seems Garfunkels run in the family. Who knew?

Robert Manker, Assistant Editor





U Magazine

U MAGAZINE is the most widely read lifestyle and entertainment magazine among 18- to 34-year-old college-educated young adults. Editorial content focuses on the diverse interests, activities, attitudes and concerns of students around the four-year college and universities. U's assistant editors, selected each year from top graduating seniors, read campus newspapers, commissions original articles and photographs by the best student journalists, and maintain an ongoing dialogue via the Internet and Views 200 with students at hundreds of campuses nationwide.

PUBLISHER & EDITORIAL DIRECTOR
GAYLE MORRIS SWEETLAND

EDITOR
FRANCES HUFFMAN

ASSISTANT EDITORS
TERESA LAPSI COLORADO STATE U '95
ROBERT MANDER EASTERN ILLINOIS U '95
SHARI POSPECH MICHIGAN STATE U '95
COLLEEN RYAN BUCKNELL U '95

ART DIRECTOR
DAVE DIMEV

ADVISORY COUNCIL
DR. DAVID L. ADAMS INDIANA U
W.B. CASEY U OF IOWA
DR. JAN T. CHRLESBOIS TEXAS TECH U
MONA CRAVENS U OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
MARA GOODMAN STUDENT PRESS LAW CENTER
DR. LES HITER EASTERN ILLINOIS U
KATHY LAWRENCE U OF TEXAS, AUSTIN
RICHARD C. LITTLE SOUTHERN METHODIST U
LESLEY MASCIELLO NEW HALL STATE U
DR. FRANK RAGUSO OREGON STATE U
DR. J. DAVID REED EASTERN ILLINOIS U
TOM ROSINSKI ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS
RICHARD SCHEFFE PAST PRESIDENT, CMA
MARTHA SPERA MICHIGAN STATE U
CAROL STONE U OF NORTH CAROLINA
LAURA WITHER NORTHWEST MISSOURI ST. U

ADVERTISING SALES OFFICES

Main Office
1800 CENTURY PARK EAST, SUITE 820
LOS ANGELES, CA 90067
TEL: (310) 551-1301
FAX (310) 551-1659 OR 552-0836

WEBSITE: HTTP://WWW.UMAGAZINE.COM
E-MAIL: EDITORIAL: EDIT@PUMAGAZINE.COM
ADVERTISING: ADSALES@PUMAGAZINE.COM
CONTESTS: CONTEST@PUMAGAZINE.COM
GENERAL INQUIRIES: UMAG@PUMAGAZINE.COM
UMAGAZINE@AOL.COM

PUBLISHER GAYLE MORRIS SWEETLAND
VICE PRESIDENT THOMAS J. MITCHELL
MARKETING SERVICES DIRECTOR MELISSA F. ALGATE
OPERATIONS DIRECTOR KEVALEEN RYAN
CIRCULATION MANAGER TROY MATTHEWS-HUGHEY
ENTERTAINMENT AD DIRECTOR PETTRAS GOTTLER
CLASSIFIED AD SALES MELISSA F. ALGATE
ASSISTANT TO PUBLISHER MARIETTE MORALES
RECEPTIONIST RHEA SINGH

New York
U MAGAZINE, 170 E. 61ST ST., SUITE 400
NEW YORK, NY 10021
TEL. (212) 980-2800 FAX (212) 980-2811
CAROLE RUNSTEIN EASTERN MKTG. SERVICES MGR.

Midwest & Detroit
JOE GUENTHER, PETER GUENTHER
TEL: (312) 335-9001 FAX (312) 335-9578

Dallas
PAM GANZ, NANCY WILLIS
TEL: (214) 991-4994 FAX (214) 991-4995

San Francisco/Pacific Northwest
PATRICK DOYLE
TEL: (415) 777-4345 FAX (415) 777-4345

AMERICAN COLLEGIATE NETWORK INC.
CHAIRMAN & PRESIDENT GAYLE MORRIS SWEETLAND
CONTROLLER LYNN SCOTVOLD

U® is published nine times a year and printed in the U.S.A. on recyclable paper. Subscriptions are $18. Copyright© 1996, U. Magazine and U® The National College Magazine are registered trademarks of American Collegiate Network, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

PLEASE RECYCLE U.

ABC

April 1996

U. VIEWS / The Campus Dialogue
4 U. Mail, editorial cartoon and major malfunctions.

QUICKIES / Our Concession to Your Attention Span
10 Don't miss this year's U. Magazine Ultimate Quickie award winner.

U. NEWS / A, E, I, O, U and sometimes Y
12 15 Minutes, The Buzz and a Love story — Courtney Love that is. U. Lose, Byte Me, a planetary birthday and some loud voices.

U. LIFE / I before E except after C
14 Etc. / An IV for PC
Political correctness has pretty much become mandatory, sorry, persondatory on college campuses these days. Everyone wants to be PC, but it's hard to keep up with the changing vernacular.

14 Class / The Cool, The Confused and The Kiss-ass
What type of student are you? You may not know, but your professor always knows. U. Magazine picks profs' brains to see what they know and how they know it.

16 Trippin' / R-O-C-K in the U.S.A.
There's a Hall of Fame in Ohio, and we ain't talkin' football. At the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland, students are flocking to see the glittering glove of Michael Jackson, the guitar of Jimi Hendrix and the hot-dog selling ability of Michael Bolton.

16 Pop/ Lights, Camera, Campus!
College campuses often provide the backdrop for your favorite movies and TV shows, which can be good or bad. Good: "Hey, isn't that Tori Spelling sitting at the desk next to you?" Bad: "Hey, isn't that Urkel sitting at the desk next to you?"

FEATURES / When two vowels go awalking the first one does the talking
17 B.C. (Before Condoms)
After reading some of the birth control methods of yesteryear, no student can ever complain about the hindrance of condoms. Can you say, "worm-filled spider's egg attached to your body with deer skin?" Pliny the Elder could. These contraceptive devices are pretty hard to conceive.

COVER STORY
18 My So-Called MTV
Where are the videos? Where's Martha Quinn? The first 25 minutes of every hour aren't even used up by Michael Jackson's Thriller video anymore. Disgruntled college students are adamant about Adam Ant and other brilliant musicians being overshadowed by Beavis and Puck and Jenny McCarthy.

20 Title What?
The enigma that is Title IX continues to be more confusing than it is helpful. Should the NCAA eighty-six Title IX? Is Title IX heading for chapter 11? Only a magic-8 ball knows for sure, but U. Magazine does its best to give you the straight 4-1-1 on the current state of Title IX.

25 Jumping on the Bandwagon
Many of today's hottest bands start out in the coldest places — beer-stained college basements. R.E.M., The Dave Matthews Band and the like all started playing "Louie, Louie" in the dark dregs of the Alpha house.

R+R / Rock 'n' Reel
22 Rock
You can't spell music without U. so enjoy the music reviews, plus Pocket Band, Our Picks and the U. radio chart.

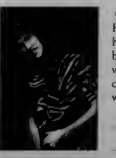
24 Reel
Winona Ryder hangs out with the boys, as well as a high-cholesterol Screen Saver and Reel Deal.

WRAP / The Final Countdown
26 Zen and the Art of Cramming
The big test is tomorrow, you just bought the textbook yesterday, now what? Don't worry, read about the ins and outs of cramming: the latest strategies and rationalization tips. Good news, someone has already highlighted the important parts.

27 Contests
Wanna win big money? Turn to the contests page right now!



GUEST EXPERT / Weird Al Yankovic
He's baaaaaaack! And he's weirder than ever. Like a surgeon, Weird Al Yankovic has cut his 10th studio album, appropriately named Bad Hair Day, which has been in stores since March 12. Al and his hair have been busy producing music videos, but he took time out to share some of his trademark wit. The cryptic crooner has a degree in architecture of all things, of course that was back when he was using his old nickname: Flying Buttress Al Yankovic.

COVER PHOTO COURTESY OF MARTIN LYON

"Excuse me, while I kiss the sky."
Page 16

Back to the daily MTV grind.
Page 18

Which came first? R.E.M. or college rock?
Page 25

Campus Shots

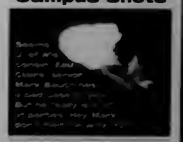


PHOTO BY BEN JONES, U. OF WISCONSIN, EAU CLAIRE

GET TO KNOW

Geo

metro

*$9,360 M.S.R.P. of Metro LS Coupe as shown, including optional rear-window wiper/washer and rear-window defogger. M.S.R.P. includes dealer prep and destination charge. Tax, license and optional equipment additional. Chevrolet and Geo are registered trademarks and Metro is a trademark of the GM Corp. ©1995 GM Corp. All Rights Reserved. Buckle up, America! ■

What "steel safety cage," "side-guard door beams" and "substantial roof structure" really mean.

◆ Every Geo Metro comes with big safety ideas like a steel safety cage and crush zones. ◆

◆ The side-impact protection meets Uncle Sam's safety standards for 1997. ◆

◆ And just in case, we structured the roof to help reduce roof crush. ◆

◆ If you want anti-lock brakes, you can get those, too. ◆

◆ And if you're looking for an air bag, every Metro has two. ◆

◆ In other words, all around, Geo Metro is a lot tougher than you might think. ◆

◆ Get to know Geo Metro. Only at your Chevrolet/Geo dealer. ◆

◆ Any questions? Give us a call. 1-800-Get-2-Kno. ◆

Geo Metro from $8,695*

QUICKIES

ILLUSTRATIONS BY GERARD ARANTOWICZ / PENNSYLVANIA STATE U

Reader beware: You're about to read the Quickie of the year. This kind of story only comes around once in 35 blue moons, and we're here to exploit and sensationalize it. In fact, this one is so good, we're not even going to end it with a smarmy walk-off. So, sit back and enjoy the winner of the first annual U. Magazine Ultimate Quickie award (the UMUQ for short).

REAL WORLD, PT. 42

Colgate U., New York

As if there weren't enough Real World wannabes, take-offs and spin-offs, Colgate's gotta go and add another one. Sheesh. Move over Puck, graduates from the class of 1996 will be the first to receive a crash course on living in the real world: a three-day fiesta featuring classes on auto purchasing, real estate, insurance and personal finance. Gee. . . and we thought the real world was all about who can chug the most without puking.

CARPE IOWAM

U. of Iowa

Little Eddie Allen and Henry D. would be proud: a handful of Iowa students are making poetry hip again, although you can't accuse them of being all that original. Copping off of the movie, two students have created their own "Dead Poet's Society" for poetry-heads and kids who just like to hang out in caves. So far, the meetings have consisted solely of dirty limericks, but the society is trying to branch out into some raunchy Haiku. Note to lawyers of the Dead Poet's Society: The preceding sentence is not true and has been inserted purely for comedic effect.

DATELESS, NOT HOPELESS

Brown U.

The student government at Brown is taking the dateless majority under it's wing. It began a new program for the socially stunted called HUGS (Helping Undergraduates Socialize) — a friendly acronym for computer dating service. For $2-3 — depending on how extensive the search is — students can obtain a computer printout of the 10 people they are most compatible with at Brown. Now that's getting your student fees' worth! Another program that hasn't hit campuses yet is called HUGE (Helping Undergraduates Eat) — look for it.

BUG-TOOTHED

U. of Iowa

An Iowa graduate from Hong Kong is suing the U.S. government for $100 million, claiming the feds are controlling his mind. In a writ filed with Hong Kong's High Court, Huang Siming alleges that the government inserted two mind controlling devices in his teeth when he had dental work done in Iowa between 1988 and 1991. Siming, who graduated from Iowa in 1992 with a doctorate in business, says he has suffered from memory loss, sleeplessness and poor concentration since his stay in the U.S. He is suing for invasion of privacy, physical and mental damage, damage to his reputation and what he termed "intellectual property" because the government can steal whatever he is thinking. So far, some pretty important stuff has been stolen from Siming's thoughts. Apparently, the U.S. government now knows that Siming prefers puffy Chee-tos to crunchy, Natalie is his favorite Faces of Life girl and the dent in the family car was actually his fault — not his brother's like he told his parents. "It sounds like he is mentally disturbed," says Iowa Dean William Hines. Ya think?

SHINY HAPPY STUDENTS

College of the Atlantic, Maine

You know those grumpy, groggy days when you just wanna smack anyone that's even remotely cheery? You'd have a field day at College of the Atlantic, Maine. The students have just earned the distinction of "Happiest Students" by Princeton Review's Student Access Guide to the Best 309 Colleges. What makes these students so happy? The 230 students live in former summer oceanfront mansions, they like the food in the dining hall and they call the president by his first name. Barney would be proud. I love you, you love me…

TOUGH SALE

California State U., Long Beach

A subscription to the Los Angeles Times is apparently worth a punch in the nose. Well, vendor Lester Phillips thought so, anyway. Phillips and his partner, Eric Reynolds, could not agree how to split their profits from hawking the subscriptions on campus. A supervisor had told them to divide the sales evenly, but when Phillips returned from a break, he wanted to claim all the sales as his, including one that Reynolds sold in his absence. When Reynolds rejected this idea, Phillips responded by punching him in the nose. Extra! Extra! Newspaper vendor arrested, charged with battery! Read all about it!

$50 FINAL

U. of Texas A&M, Kingsville

Let's say your aunt gave you $50 for your birthday. Cool — you get a couple of CDs, maybe a new pair of shoes, go see a movie and get a small popcorn, or, you can get an "A" in professor Jose Martinez' art class. Martinez told Christopher Cruz he could get an "A" on his final project, if Cruz gave the prof $100. He then lowered the price to $50. Hold on, don't go rushing to sign up for Martinez' class. Cruz turned down the offer and turned in Martinez. Martinez was fired from the school and arrested and jailed for bribery. He was later released on his own recognizance, and we all know how painful that can be.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

Everycollege, Anystate

This just in… students at almost every college or university in the United States complain about parking. The fines are too high; there aren't enough spaces for students; there are too many spaces for faculty — the list goes on and on and on. Yet for some reason, this recurring phenomenon manages to make front page news in student newspapers across the country at least three times a year. Do us a favor, friends, STOP!

SHARING SHOWERS

Northern Colorado U.

Two Northern Colorado students were caught participating in the latest campus craze: co-ed naked showering. Two students were attempting the late-night cleansing process in a men's community bathroom, when a man using a stall busted them. The man called the police and made the shower pals get dressed and come with him to the lobby until the police arrived. Thus completely ruining their Rocky Mountain high. The showering man's explanation just didn't hold water. He said it was not actually a naked woman accompanying him in the shower, but a very elaborate and lifelike shower caddie. Nice try.

MIS-STASHED CASH

U. of Montana

We've all lost money before — maybe $5 or $20, or even the whole wallet. But did you ever lose $2,300? Kim McKelvey did. Just minutes after receiving 23 $100 bills — 75 percent of her student loan — from the cashier's office, McKelvey reported losing her wallet containing the entire $2,300. The last place she remembered having the wallet was in the women's bathroom. Unfortunately for McKelvey, the cash was never returned. Even worse, school policy requires her to pay back the entire loan even though the cash was lost/stolen. Talk about throwing your money down the drain.

SO WHAT IF YOU SLEPT THROUGH ECONOMICS? YOU STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF A DOLLAR.

Which means you realize how important it is to save. So get a MasterCard® Card and use these two sets of exclusive College MasterValues® coupons. One for savings from 20% to 50% off. And one for free shipping on catalog purchases. All of which leads to an inspiring economics lesson. A dollar saved is a dollar earned.

MasterCard. It's more than a credit card. It's smart money.™

MasterCard

INSTANT SAVINGS

Save 20% to 50% off when you use your MasterCard Card with these merchants.

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL — 49% OFF A SPECIAL 12-WEEK SUBSCRIPTION

WORDEXPRESS for Windows — SAVE 40% ON AWARD WINNING SOFTWARE

ARTCARVED — SAVE UP TO $140

PHOTOPHOTO — 50% OFF FILM PROCESSING

TIME WARNER Viewer's Edge — GET ONE VIDEO FREE WHEN YOU BUY THREE

Pier 1 imports for a change — SAVE 20% ON YOUR NEXT PURCHASE

FREE SHIPPING

Call 1-800-501-VALUE for these catalogs and have your order delivered for free when you use your MasterCard Card and mention the code #.*

1-800-PRO-TEAM — Code: MC1

TWEEDS — Code: D2BA

INTERNATIONAL MALE — Code: IMM636

LENS EXPRESS — 1-800-USA-LENS — Code: 101

Eastbay — Code: FREESHIP

VICTORIA'S SECRET LONDON — Code: K162579

http://www.mastercard.com/college

*For Lens Express catalogs, call 1-800-USA-LENS (Code: 101)

© 1996 MasterCard International Incorporated

U. NEWS

Of Love and Monks

LIKE OTHER COLLEGE STUDENTS MANY AT CORNELL U., N.Y., mourned the April 1994 death of Nirvana frontman Kurt Cobain the only way they could — in front of the TV. They learned a little too late that they had the opportunity to express their grief in person. For 18 months, Cobain's ashes sat a mile from campus at the Nyamgal Monastery.

It sounds like an urban myth, but it's true. On July 4, 1994, Cobain's widow Courtney Love came to Ithaca, bringing her husband with her. She stayed 10 days, but he left only months ago — mixed with clay and baked into 12 tiny cone-shaped sculptures. Buddhists call them tsatsas.

Love, a follower of Buddhism who was worried about the effect suicide — which Buddhists frown upon — would have on his soul's reincarnation. Her decision to have his ashes blessed according to Buddhist traditions led her to the tiny monastery.

Few Ithacans even know the monastery exists, so when Love began making a spectacle of herself last summer no one guessed the true purpose of her visit. In any case, residents say her behavior was enough to distract them from speculation.

Doug Robinson, a salesperson at Ithaca Guitar Works, says that Love, clad in a baby-doll dress, threw a tantrum when the store refused her credit card. As she screamed at her bankers by telephone Love sprawled across a set of speakers, nearly spreading her legs and flashing more than her plastic.

Love left behind only a purple lipstick-stained cigarette that today reigns over the store's shelf of celebrity memorabilia.

Only slightly more shocking than Love's now infamous behavior is the fact that students in town even knew their grunge idol was blocks away from campus.

"I think I would have gone there," says Marie Rodriguez, a Cornell senior who had her own shrine to Cobain. "I don't know why Ithaca was chosen. It sound[s] like fate."

Other students weren't so impressed.

"Cobain left a kid behind who he supposedly loved so much," says senior Krista Jacobsen. "He's not the John Lennon of our generation. He killed himself — that's hardly something you'd respect. Why should I care where his ashes are?"

Cobain's ashes were back in Love's custody in December 1995. The tsatsas containing the ashes are being made into a stupa, an ornate Tibetan version of an urn. It was an Ithaca monk who first suggested putting Cobain to rest in the stupa, the same kind that holds the ashes of Buddha himself. For 16 centuries, this type of stupa has been called nirvana.

Coincidence? We think not.

Love left more than a cigarette butt in Ithaca, N.Y.

By Brian Hiatt and Courtney Rubin, Cornell U., N.Y./Photo by Gadi Reinhorn, Cornell U., N.Y.

Raising Their Voices

SIZE THIS UP: THE NEW YORK VILLAGE VOICE, distributed weekly to 138,636 readers in Manhattan, bawled out the Bloomsburg U., Penn., student newspaper, circulated weekly to 5,000 readers, for dubbing itself The Voice.

The Voice staff received a letter from Village Voice lawyers in November warning them to change the name or face litigation.

Village Voice attorney Alexandra Nicholson alleged that The Voice "usurped our client's exact federally registered mark and deliberately mimicked the typeface and graphic design."

"That's impossible because we hardly knew they existed," says the editor in chief of The Voice, junior Hank Domin.

The student-run newspaper changed its name in 1983 from The Campus Voice to The Voice and did not encounter rebuffs from any other Voices worldwide until Bloomsburg's Voice went online.

The student publication's current name embodies its purpose, staff members say.

"In changing our name to The Voice, our style kind of changed, and we became a newspapet that wanted to reflect the community," says managing editor John Kaschak, a sophomore.

The experience has given fledgling journalists at The Voice a real-world lesson, Domin says. "It's definitely been an education in media law."

Nicholson, who says the entire conflict has been blown way out of proportion, says her letter was intended to initiate a query, nothing more.

"There is no lawsuit," she says. "There are a number of things that can be done to remedy a potential conflict."

Staffers of The Voice have refused Village Voice's request that they change the paper's name and are waiting to hear if any action will be taken.

"We're standing firm and we're not going to back down," Domin says.

By Julie Pendleton, U. of California, Davis

Letters of the Law

HE'S A 20-YEAR-OLD LAW STUDENT WHO reads and writes at a fourth-grade level but has a 4.0 at Yale U. and dreams of a political career.

Not it's not the latest after-school special or more evidence that America's education is full of loopholes. It is in fact the real-life story of Benjamin Bodger, who is among the 10% to 15 percent of Americans with dyslexia.

I was diagnosed in preschool," Bodger says. "Teachers would tell my mom I wasn't trying hard enough, but no one wanted to read as much as I did. It was frustrating, but this frustration built a level of perseverance and commitment."

At age 13, Bodger's will to succeed took him on an intense educational journey from home schooling to studying social inequity at the U. of Michigan. He decided to pursue law because he wanted to make it work for people not against them.

I see a great need for people with passion and empathy for others," he says. "We need a new generation of lawyers who will sacrifice materialism for people."

To combat his dyslexia, which he likens to being in a foreign country where you can speak and understand the language, but can't read it — he tapes lectures, dictates tests and papers and requests extensions, note-takers and textbook readers.

Bodger has started campus support groups and talks to various groups to increase dyslexia awareness.

"Ben bears the norm by showing people dyslexics aren't lazy and stupid," says Laura Coon, the Dyslexia Association of America's communication director. "I can't count how many parents have told me Ben's picture is hanging on their wall. Kids look up to him."

By Carrie Bell, Humboldt State U., Calif./Photo by Caitlin Cleary, Yale U

Snow scholar.

The Buzz

• Four white U. of Texas students are suing the university after they were denied admission to the U. of Texas Law School. In what could prove a landmark case with national legal precedent, the four claim they were victims of the school's affirmative action policy. School officials defend their actions and say their position should hold up under review, even if the case reaches the U.S. Supreme Court.

• Secretary of Education Richard Riley announced that the student loan default rate has dropped sharply and government collection efforts have cut net default costs by more than two-thirds since 1992. The rate of borrowers defaulting dropped to 11.6 percent, its lowest point since 1988 when data began being gathered.

• Copy shops can still sell coursepacks and students can still get them for a fair price. A Feb. 12 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit declared that Michigan Document Services, a copy shop at the U. of Michigan, need not seek permission nor pay fees for the right to prepare and sell the packets of information assembled by professors and sold in lieu of textbooks. The ruling sided with Michigan Document Services on the basis of fair use and against Princeton University Press, the publishing house that brought the suit.

• The Board of Trustees of California State U. voted to phase out most remedial classes over an 11-year period, rather than a five-year period as originally proposed.

Byte me

Playing With Yourself

COLLEGE HOOP PLAYERS HAVE IT ALL — THE SCHOLARSHIPS, the fame, the adulation. And as if all this isn't enough, they get to be in video games, too.

Some Division I players now exist in reality and virtual reality, thanks to games like Coach K's College Basketball for Sega, the new College Slam for the 32 bit Sega Saturn and Sony Playstation and an upcoming CD-ROM program.

The NCAA prohibits use of their names, but the players on the cybercourt are identifiable by number, height, skin color and even undergarments.

"I wear a T-shirt underneath my uniform, and in the video game, I wear a T-shirt," explains Villanova U. guard Eric Eberz.

So what's it like to fire up the old Zenith and be yourself in a game of roundball?

"It's weird," says U. of Louisville guard Delsan Wheat. "In real life, you don't hit every shot, but on the Sega game you get real mad when you miss a free throw or something."

Having a controller in hand instead of a basketball can be a performance enhancer. Wheat says his video self can do 360 degree dunks, run and gun dribbles and crazy threes.

Wheat admits he gets carried away. "I look at the final stats and see myself with 40 points and everybody else with two or three."

Eberz also allows himself to rack up as many as 45 to 50 points in the video game because in real life, teammate and high-scoring player Kerry Kittles often does most of the scoring.

But it's not all fun and games for newer players who were not included in video form.

"Two of the walk-ons were not on the game, so they were pretty mad," Eberz says.

Well, now they know how the rest of us feel.

By Pat Riley, Boston College

Live or Memorex?

Bits & Bytes

Calling All Xers

Do you think you are the voice of our generation? Then you may be the person Taylor Subscription Talk is looking for. TST (http://www.tstradio.com) is conducting the first ever Internet audio Cyberhost contest and is searching for someone from the next generation to speak for the next generation. Just send in a tape explaining why you should be that person, and who knows? You could own the Internet in no time and have Bill Gates kissing your shoes. For info, check the Web site or call (800) 789-4506; deadline is May 15.

Wheels on the Web

Isn't car shopping a drag? Well, now it can be just you, thousands of beautiful cars and a mouse. Welcome to online car shopping, made possible through a merger of Microsoft and Auto-By-Tel. Any adequate surfer can get info on nearly every model of car and truck sold in the United States, including retail price, specs, safety features, fuel efficiency, options and whether or not you should get a Garfield window ornament. Vroom on over to http://www.autobytel.com. Happy hunting.

Phone home page

Imagine a world with gumdrop mountains, chocolate streams and a phone card that could be used to pay for World Wild Web browsing minutes. Well, thanks to Interactive Media Works (http://www.imworks.com) and its new sampleNET CARD (patent pending), one of the three is possible. It takes a couple of calls and some software installation, but then the convenience kicks in.

Love your mother...

Happy Birthday, Earth Day

THERE'S GOING TO BE A KICK-grass party this month, and the guest of honor is about 4.5 billion years old.

Student environmental organizations nationwide are gearing up for Earth Day on April 22, and you can bet there will be no Styrofoam cups.

Conceived by Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin in 1970, Earth Day's mission is to educate people about the environment. This year's theme, Give Earth a Chance, will pay special attention to air, water and the living environment.

But planning a bash for a planet takes time. Nick Keller, director of Campus Ecology — a college outreach program of the National Wildlife Foundation — says his group works with more than 200 universities to develop Earth Day activities and year-round environmental programs.

"We incorporate Earth Day into our program, but what we do is work for the year," Keller says. "We use [Earth Day] as a tool rather than an end in itself."

Marcy Null, general coordinator for Students for Environmental Concerns at the U. of Illinois, says her group has been working since December on Earth Day activities.

"We go out and try to educate people about the environment," Null says. "I think that a lot of people are concerned about the environment. But I think that the number of people who go out and do something is small. I hope something we do is interesting or eye-catching."

At Pennsylvania State U., the focus of Earth Day is teaching people to use natural resources. This year, students are building a straw meeting house with a clay roof.

"We try to do without power tools and petroleum products," says Ryan Kremp, co-director of Earth Day activities. "It's an alternative way to build houses and more environmentally friendly than what is out there today."

In addition, Penn State will focus on educating people about sustainability. "Basically, it is zero or no waste ... using natural organic products," Kremp says.

Penn State's activities will also include poetry readings, an Earth "Mass" and a variety of musical acts. "It's a celebration of things we've done for the Earth and what it has done for us," Kremp says.

Yeah, but how will they fit 4.5 million candles on the cake?

Jeremy Kirk, Eastern Illinois U./ Illustration by Steve Blackard, Ball State U., Ind.

U. LOSE

Radio Daze

"WUSC–FM 90.5 — Just a bunch of kids playing records."

Or was it? The answer is not as cut-and-dried as the U. of South Carolina student radio station's slogan.

The U. of South Carolina administration shut the station down in December after 17 years of broadcasting progressive/educational music. Then, in a January meeting, the board of student publications and communications dismissed the WUSC student executive board.

Students say Chris Carroll, director of student media, and Jerry Brewster, director of student life, took action after WUSC played songs by Pansy Division, an openly gay rock group. Administrators say there's more to it than that — including possible violations of Federal Communications Commission regulations. But students say the allegations are bogus, and the FCC confirms that WUSC's license was renewed with no unusual investigation.

Administrators cite sexual harassment, abuse of facility policies, poor record-keeping and overall mismanagement of the station as additional factors in their decision to shut it down and clean house.

"[The administration] said that we had created a culture of irresponsibility," says dismissed board member Michael McClellan, a senior. "I personally believe that [Carroll] had an agenda for at least two years to take over and reformat the station."

Carroll could not be reached for comment.

It all comes down to one thing, says Rob Wilcox, associate professor of law and faculty chair of the student publications board. "Who are you going to believe? Either one side's right or the other," he says. "We just disagree on what the facts are."

WUSC went back on the air at the end of January with Carroll and a graduate assistant in charge of a group of newly trained student DJs. A new executive board was elected from that group, and Wilcox says DJs now have much greater freedom in picking what they want to play.

But all's not well that ends well, says one former WUSC employee.

"We were one of the top college stations in the country," says junior Kerry Mitchell, WUSC's former promotions director. "We reported to [two national college music tracking services], and we were very respected in the industry. Now they won't acknowledge us because we aren't who we were a few months ago."

Karen Obrzut, John Carroll U., Ohio

U.LIFE

An IV for PC?

THE 90s PHENOMENON known as political correctness is as trendy as coffeehouses and grunge. But PC, friends and countrypersons, is here to stay. Although the media fervor is dying down on campuses across the nation, the movement is alive and kicking.

Davis Strou, a senior at Arizona State U. and editor in chief of the State Press, says that PC is not dying — it's just so entrenched now that it's not in the media spotlight.

ETC.

Last spring, a cartoon titled "Dead Prophets" appeared in the State Press and ignited a serious controversy, Strou recalls. The cartoon depicted the resurrection of Christ and included Mohammed wearing a turban and brandishing a bloody sword. The Islamic community took offense to the cartoon and made its outrage public.

Incidents like this raise awareness and teach us to be more careful about speech, Strou says.

Last May at the U. of Delaware, a black woman wrote an editorial in the Review, the student newspaper, to protest a confederate flag hanging outside a fraternity house. After the student received death threats, she formed an activist group that claimed that campus security didn't take the threats seriously and needed racial-sensitivity training.

Jim Miller, a senior at the U. of Delaware and editor in chief of the Review, says that such incidents are occurring more often and are provoking the "anti-PC cry."

"On campus, PC protesters are getting louder than in years past," Miller says.

This battle cry is sounding from such groups as the National Association of Scholars, an organization of professors, administrators and graduate students who want to reform higher education.

"There's way too much politics and ideology in the classroom," says Glenn Ricketts, a research director at the NAS. "PC has had a negative impact on college course curricula, and the obsession with 'correctness' has had the insidious effect of self-censorship on the part of professors."

Not so, says Juan Chacon-Quiros, a senior at the U. of Massachusetts, Amherst.

"[Diverse curricula] have made life better by moving away from a Eurocentric view of the world," Chacon-Quiros says.

New PC curricula are not a threat to the "classics" and Western thinking, he says. Rather, Latino, Asian, African-American and women's studies are enriching the traditional curricula.

Minority and gender studies have developed because universities recognize the growing number of minority students on campus, not because of the PC movement, Chacon-Quiros says.

"PC has been very successful in changing names but unsuccessful in changing people's attitudes," he says. "The success of the movement lies in raising awareness of offensive words and actions, but the real issues are being glossed over — the prejudices are still fresh."

Lisa Ziccardi, Boston U./Illustration by Stacy Curtis, Western Kentucky U.

The Cool, the Confused and the Kiss-ass

IT'S AN AVERAGE DAY DURING the semester and you're headed to class. You're the kind of student who:

a) Strolls in right on the hour and makes a beeline for the back row of seats so the professor won't notice you dozing off during lecture.

CLASS

b) Shows up 15 minutes late wearing mismatched sweats and last night's hairdo, clutching coffee and a newspaper.

c) Wakes up two hours early to read the first week's assignments and takes a seat in the front row.

Whether you're a) too cool for school, b) dazed and confused, c) a brown-noser or somewhere in-between, teachers can tell. Where you sit and the image you project has a strong correlation to the type of student you are and your performance in a course, says Monica Cyrino, an assistant professor of classics at the U. of New Mexico.

The Velcro students — students who arrive late and stick to seats along the walls — are so eager to get a quick release from class that their grades inevitably suffer, Cyrino says.

Likewise, the eager beavers who populate the front row have a high probability of bringing home "A"s, says Jim Frey, chair of the sociology department at the U. of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Cyrino's most perplexing students are the ones she calls "the psychics." She says they're the ones who come to class — minus notebook, pens or a tape recorder — and still manage to pass.

"It's really unsettling to have someone just stare at you while you're lecturing, not taking down a word," she says.

Frank Fox, an American history professor at Brigham Young U., is irked by the "wannabes" — students in his 1,000-person lectures who just want to be chosen as teaching assistants for the next semester.

These students approach him every day after class to share their insights and frequently drop in unannounced during office hours.

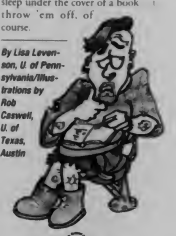
And don't even get him started on the [illegible] hounds who sit through lectures shuffling through the paper, or the frat [illegible] who wear tutus to class as an initiation.

"I have to rise to these occasions; I can't just be ticked off," Fox says. "I have to turn this into something of greater humor, usually at a cost to them."

But professors caution against making assumptions about a student based on appearance or performance without individual evaluations.

"Everybody learns differently," says Joyce Swarzman, an education professor at the U. of South Florida.

Bottom line: You can't judge a book by its cover, but you sure can sleep under the cover of a book and throw 'em off, of course.



By Lisa Levenson, U. of Pennsylvania/Illustrations by Rob Caswell, U. of Texas, Austin

Grads, for your $400 certificate and program information, return the postage-paid reply card enclosed in this publication or call:

1-800-964-GRAD

CHEVROLET. Geo. PONTIAC GMAC FINANCIAL SERVICES

See your participating Chevrolet/Geo or Pontiac Dealer for details.

R-O-C-K in the U.S.A.

Crowds and students have been rolling into the city since the September opening of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum.

During opening weekend, droves of college students from around the globe traded their university logos for R&RHF T-shirts and paraphernalia. Many slept on the cool, green grass surrounding the shores of Lake Erie, awaiting the announcement of their museum tour time. Tickets are sold in time segments, so although you may arrive at the 10 a.m. opening, you may not tour until sunset.

TRIPPIN'

Is it worth the wait?

"The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is something you could visit three times and walk away not seeing everything," says Kelly Gionti, a sophomore at the U. of Akron. "Everything about it was worth the trip."

Well, maybe not everything. "The gift shop was a disappointment," Gionti says.

And students are saying that Cleveland will be the newest hot spot on college road-tripper maps.

"I won't mind the drive to get to see any institution that pays homage to the Beatles," says Mike Gillen, a sophomore at Pennsylvania State U.

"I thought it was pretty cool," says Jacob Showalter, a sophomore at Case Western Reserve U. in Cleveland. "I had reservations about it looking so space-age and funky, but it was great."

Showalter says the reconstruction of Pink Floyd's wall is well worth any amount of driving.

"I would definitely do a road trip," he says. "It could be within a day's drive, possibly two. Just drive 'til we run out of beer."

Whether you're into seeing Jimi Hendrix's signed Fender stratocaster or Michael Jackson's first glittering glove, the museum has a little piece of rock and roll history for everyone.

"I never realized that new singers — people I listen to every day — would be represented in this museum," says Beth Stewart, a sophomore at Michigan State U. "I thought it would be for older people, but this is for anybody who just loves music."

Joyce Dorbish, Youngstown State U./Photo courtesy Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum

Jimi's purple haze, 25 years later.

Lights, Camera, Campus

On the way to psych class, you're suddenly surrounded by Jason Priestley, Tori Spelling and Jennie Garth. No, it's not a dream come true. It's a typical day at Occidental College, Calif., the site of California U., the 90210 gang's fictional college.

POP

College campuses, with their academic look and ivy-covered buildings, serve as prime settings for major motion pictures and TV shows. Shot On This Site, by William Gordon, is a guidebook to many of the universities and colleges that have been featured on the silver screen.

"Many of the young screenwriters out in Hollywood are fresh out of school," Gordon says. "They write about their experiences in college and then go to their alma mater to film."

The U. of the Pacific, Calif., has been the setting for movies like The Sure Thing and Raiders of the Lost Ark.

"Many production companies don't want to travel to the East Coast to film," says R. Doyle Mindin, UOP's director of public relations. "So they come here because we have an Ivy League look to our campus. I think a lot of people identify with the college experience and that's what makes colleges attractive to directors. Like they say, 'Location, location, location.'"

Matt Dyste is the director of merchandising at the U. of Oregon, site of the most infamous college movie of all time, Animal House. Dyste says that although they market the school as a possible location, they are selective about who they allow to film there.

"We always consider whether the movie is fitting with our image," Dyste says. "One of our rules is that we don't allow the university's name to be mentioned in the movie. With Animal House, they were looking for an Ivy League look, and since we're not that far away from the major studios, the company came to us."

However, don't expect to find the Delta Tau Chi house on campus. According to Gordon, the frat house was torn down and the bricks were sold.

John Belushi must be turning in his grave.

By Will Graves, West Virginia U.

Occidental College or California U.? You decide.

Other college locales of note:

- Loyola U., Ill. — *Flatliners
- Harvard U. — *Love Story
- Georgetown U. — The Exorcist III, The Pelican Brief, *Born Yesterday
- Occidental College, Calif. — Clueless, Real Genius, Sneakers, *Kicking and Screaming
- UCLA — *Higher Learning

Guest Expert: Weird Al Yankovic

On TV and movies filmed on campus: "If I ran into Tori Spelling on a college campus, I'd probably freak out. Why won't she leave me alone? It's over between us!"

(Before Condoms)

BY BRAD DUNN

Colorado State U.

Illustrations by Brad Norman, Western Michigan U.

1996:
"Don't worry, baby. I have a condom."

A.D. 85:
"No sweat, honey. I just drank a potion of hawthorn bark, ivy, willow and poplar."

2696 B.C.:
"It's all right, darling, I've applied crocodile dung and honey to my vulva."

THE NEXT TIME YOU CATCH yourself whining about the dulling effect of a condom or the fact that the Pill makes you moody, just consider the potions of yesteryear — yuck.

Birth control has had a long and storied life. Soon after humans answered, "Where do babies come from?" they asked, "How can we stop them?" The understanding of procreation itself was the progenitor of contraception. And although it wasn't until the last century that science produced any valid solutions, birth control appears to have had an odd infancy in ancient cultures.

In the beginning, when all the begetting was going on, Onan fathered birth control in the Old Testament. The book of Genesis recounts how the Hebrew "spilled his seed on the ground" during sex with his brother's widow to avoid getting her pregnant. This begat not only the "withdrawal" method but also the recognition of birth control in the West.

Ancient Chinese men made an art of the withdrawal method. They believed that if they had sex with a woman without reaching climax, their "seed" would grow stronger. Men with enormous discipline, then, had as much nonorgasmic sex as possible so that when they finally decided to get a woman pregnant, she would receive the highest-quality sperm.

While abstinence and withdrawal may have been the earliest methods for couples to avoid pregnancy, abortion was equally present in antiquity. Aristotle, when he wasn't waxing about Poetics, wrote, "The proper thing to do... if children are then conceived in excess to the [family] limit so fixed, is to have miscarriage induced before sense and life have begun in the embryo" (Aristotle, Politics).

The earliest formulas for abortion, however, come from Chinese Emperor Shen Nung. By his death in 2696 B.C., Nung had written various medical essays, including one in which the internal applications of certain plants and leeches assisted miscarriage. Early Egyptians also had formulas for abortion, like a concoction of dates, onions and the fruit of the acanthus crushed in honey, sprinkled on cloth and applied to the vulva.

Anti-climactic

By the 18th century, scientists had come up with more birth control solutions than you could shake a condom at. Recipes for pre- and post-sex vaginal mixtures were popping up everywhere. The 18th century writer Musnaeus figured that if either crocus or mint were applied to the vagina immediately after sex, there would be no conception.

The condom made its debut in England in 1709, although the idea actually dates back to ancient Egypt. By the end of the century, the best condoms were made from animal membrane and tied around the base of the penis with a pink silk ribbon. Before the membrane condoms made it to the East, the Japanese had already been using hard sheaths made from tortoise shells. Ouch!

Early forms of the diaphragm were also widespread at this time. Women inserted silver or gold balls to block off the womb. Sometimes these balls had bells inside them to make love-making more musical. Sponges soaked in water and brandy were placed in the vagina as a spermicide, but the results were unreliable. The search for contraceptive potions continues beyond the 1937 advent of the Pill.

Fortunately, in the late 20th century, we know enough about human physiology to be able to safely control fertility. Although scientists continue to experiment with new methods, there are plenty of proven ones on the market. The male birth control pill and the female condom, the two most recent brainchildren of humanity's contraceptive legacy, continue the effort to make sex more enjoyable by making it less productive.

Modern society often complains that its birth control practices diminish the sexual experience. Fortunately, the life history of contraception shows us that its methods will continue to evolve. Remember: It could be worse — you could be using a toe-nail condom.

Brad Dunn, who just graduated from Colorado State U., declines to make any comment about birth control.

Birth control has a history of cramping your style

By the 18th century, scientists had come up with more birth control solutions than you could shake a condom at.

That was then...

- "A spider's egg containing two worms, if attached to the body with deer skin before sunrise, will prevent conception for a year." (Pliny)
- "Immediately after ejaculation let the two come apart and let the woman rise roughly, sneeze and blow her nose several times, and call out in a loud voice. She should jump violently backwards seven to nine times." (Islamic physician Rhazes, A.D. 900)
- "Juquiammum [an herb] mixed with the milk of a Mare, and laid upon a piece of Hart's skin, and hung about the woman's neck keeps her from conceiving. If a woman takes a frog and opens his mouth and spit in it thrice, she shall not conceive that year." (William Williams' Occult Physique, 1660)

This is now...

- The Pill. Birth control pills ingested daily by women prevent the ovaries from releasing eggs. (97–99.9 percent effective)
- Intrauterine device (IUD). A small plastic device inserted into a woman's womb. (97–99.2 percent effective)
- Condom. A thin latex or animal tissue sheath covers the penis and prevents sperm from entering the vagina. (88–92 percent effective)
- Female condom. A loose-fitting plastic pouch lines the vagina and prevents sperm from reaching the egg. (72–97 percent effective)
- Diaphragm. A soft, rubber device used with sperm-killing cream or jelly fits over the cervix and prevents sperm from joining the egg. (82–94 percent effective)
- Cervical cap. A smaller version of the diaphragm that must be used with spermicide, but can be left in longer than a diaphragm. (82–94 percent effective)
- The rhythm method. The woman's menstrual cycle is charted to predict fertile times. Abstinence from intercourse or barrier contraceptives should be used during the nine or more "unsafe" days. (80–99 percent effective)
- Tubal sterilization: surgery that permanently blocks the woman's tubes where sperm join the egg or permanently blocks the man's tubes that carry the sperm. (99.6–99.8 percent effective)
- Hormone injections. Injections can either last 12 weeks or five years. (99.7–99.96 percent effective)
- Morning after pill. This is a hormone treatment that prevents the egg from either being fertilized or attaching to the wall of the uterus. Despite its name, it can be taken anytime within 72 hours after intercourse. (92–100 percent effective) —BD

(All percentages are from Planned Parenthood.)

My So-Called MTV

Less music, more television?

I can't turn on MTV and know that I'm definitely going to see videos anymore.

MELISSA HALPERN, BARNARD COLLEGE, N.Y.

BY JEREMY BISER
U. OF CONNECTICUT
ILLUSTRATION BY ROB YAVNIELI, SYRACUSE U. / PHOTOS COURTESY OF MTV

"What EVER HAPPENED TO THE 'M' IN MTV?" asks Eric Ferreri, 21, a senior at the U. of Connecticut. "I used to come home from middle school and high school and watch videos all afternoon, but now I'm lucky to find videos on MTV at all."

MTV has changed significantly from its initial 24-hour-a-day music video format, and many college students feel that with the introduction of so many non-music programs — like The Real World, Singled Out, Road Rules and Sandblast — it has largely been a change for the worse.

In the beginning, there was Martha (and Mark and Alan and Nina and J.J.)... and it was good.

"As a college student, my time is very limited," says Melissa Halpern, a senior at Barnard College, N.Y. "I can't turn on MTV and know that I'm definitely going to see videos anymore. It's disappointing because it seems like MTV is making me work, or adjust my schedule, just to see videos."

It seems unavoidable — students have less time, and MTV is airing less music. It's not like the old days, when you could spend a quiet evening with Adam Curry and kill several hours watching Devo and Van Halen videos.

"When I first started watching MTV, I loved it because it exposed me to all different kinds of new music all the time," says Andrea Williams, a sophomore at the U. of Connecticut. "But with all the non-music programs on in the evenings and weekends, which are the only times I have free now, I don't feel like I know what's going on in the music world anymore."

Television killed the video star

The fractionalization of MTV has been gradual. With the introduction of MTV News in 1987 and House of Style in 1989, the programming began moving steadily away from its 24-7 music roots. The schedule now includes cartoons, sports, fashion, soap operas, game shows, news, movie specials and even reruns of a former network series (My So-Called Life).

"I think some of the programs, like The Real World, are conceptually good," says Brian Woodward, a senior at Bentley College, Mass. "But when they run it four seasons in a row, plus all of the reruns of past seasons and similar shows like Road Rules, it gets to be incredibly repetitious."

That the network airs two or more continuous hours of one show — known as block programming — is another major complaint of students.

"The thing I can't stand is when they run five or six hours of straight non-music shows on the weekends," Ferreri says. "I'm finally able to watch MTV at different times than during the week, and sure enough, they're running 400 episodes of The Real World."

Halpern also says she misses the diversity of the old, non-block formatting. By grouping videos into genre-specific shows like MTV Jams, Yo! MTV Raps and Alternative Nation, viewers get less of a potpourri than in the past.

Not that it's all bad — many students say they enjoy some non-music shows, particularly Beavis and Butt-head, The State, The Maxx and MTV News.

"I understand that viewers need variety," Williams says. "MTV just needs to mix things up again and place a little more emphasis on music, like they did in the past. The non-music shows aren't bad. It's just that I miss watching videos."

"Now it's time for that big Dating Game...or...Singled Out kiss!"

YAK LIVE

Do you still want your MTV?
Yes: 29%
No: 71%

I don't want my MTV because at one point, it was the only video channel around. The only music I listen to is rap and R&B. MTV is too commercial. Toneka McInnis, freshman, Fayetteville State U., North Carolina • Yes. I definitely want my MTV because they show reruns of the hit show My So-Called Life. I guess it's like My So-Called MTV. Dan Javinsky, junior, California State U., Northridge • Yes. I still want my MTV — if they put the music back in MTV. I started watching back in the '80s with Martha Quinn when it was 24 hours of music videos. It was more of a showcase of all kinds of music, but now it's just so segmented. They're not showing enough music, especially not new music. Heather Kirkland, junior, U. of North Florida • MTV? Do they even play videos anymore? I don't want my MTV. Carrie Attell, junior, California State U., Sacramento • No! They don't play videos anymore. Between all the junk they have on there — VJs enjoying their vacations, a bunch of strangers living in a house and traveling across the country — it's not music television any more. It's ruining our country and our kids. Get it off! Mark Pearson, sophomore, Troy State U., Alabama • It's a joke. They used to have it going on when they had Yo! MTV Raps on five times a week, but now it's only on once or twice a week. Rundell Lewis, graduate student, Southern Illinois U. • Yes. I still want my MTV, but it would be nice if it still was MTV — as in MUSIC! Who really knows what Aeon Flux is all about? Toni Fujiwara, junior, Oregon State U. • Does anybody remember when MTV was a music video channel? I used to tune into MTV to catch the newest music and videos. The MTV of the '90s is junk. There are as many re-runs on MTV as [there are] on the big networks. They need to bring back the 24 hours a day, cutting edge, music channel. Suzanne Hackney, graduate student, Oklahoma State U. • What started out as a cool way to see music videos has turned into a highly biased and commercialized tool aimed at selling its brand of political, sexual and social views to a younger generation. End it! Matthew Camuth, graduate student, Ohio State U. • It was cool when it first started, but it has gotten totally weird since then. Not enough cool music, too many other programs. Charles Morrison, senior, U. of Southwestern Louisiana • I would love MTV if they'd show more music videos — what MTV used to be about — instead of showing The Real World over and over and over and over... Zachary Randell, senior, Florida International U.

A rare sighting on MTV — musicians playing music.

Sharon Stone would be proud.

The sound of music

Estimates on the music-to-non-music ratios seem to vary, with MTV saying they're as much as 80 percent music. However, a June 1994 article in The Village Voice found that MTV's non-music programs filled up roughly 50 percent of the prime time slots.

So we checked it out — during the week of Nov. 6 through Nov. 12, 1995, the total music-to-non-music ratio was 65 percent to 34.5 percent. During weekday prime time hours, non-music programs filled 58 percent of the time.

This programming seems unpopular. And yet it remains. Why?

"Those shows are through the roof popular," says Scott Acord, manager of corporate communications at MTV in Los Angeles. "It all just depends on who you talk to. Someone's watching these shows because the ratings are higher than ever. When we were all music videos, the ratings weren't as high as they are now."

The rumor mill is ahuzz with talk of an MTV2 — the answer to some viewers' prayers. The second channel would feature more music programming and fewer (if any) commercials. MTV refuses to comment on the rumor, but some industry insiders expect to hear a major announcement this summer.

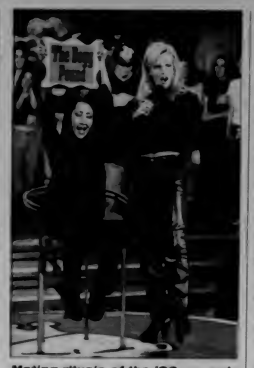
Teen angst

Here's the part that might be a little painful to hear — as much as MTV is growing away from us, we're growing away from MTV. Who do you think Singled Out most appeals to? A 23-year-old graduating English major? Or a 14-year-old junior high hormone-basket? The truth is, we're getting old.

"Maybe I've just outgrown the whole MTV generation thing," Woodward says. "I'm not like the MTV kids I see around town anymore."

The fact is, MTV isn't interested in old people. Despite the stated official target audience (18- to 24-year-olds), the channel knows that its future lies with the kids — the army of scrappy little consumers nipping at our generation's heels.

"I don't understand who watches these non-music programs, like Singled Out," says Brian Johnson, a senior at Pennsylvania State U. "They're not creative, like The Maxx or Liquid Television. And they don't seem to add anything music-wise."



Mating rituals of the '90s — and they call this progress?

The answer is probably sitting in math class at the local junior high, fantasizing about the latest Singled Out contestant.

"I think MTV appeals more to teeny boppers. Singled Out has gotta go — it's a waste of half an hour," says Carrie Attell, a junior at California State U., Sacramento. "All they play is Top 40 music. I think their format sucks."

It seems we're suffering from a major case of video withdrawal. MTV is a drug we got addicted to, and however unlikely it may seem, college has become our rehab center.

"It's like MTV gave us something special and unique when we were young," Woodward says. "And now they've taken all that away from us just because we got a little older and busier."

And speaking of getting older, MTV will turn 15 in August. Sources at MTV offices in New York would only disclose that "something is in the works" for the anniversary.

Will our generation and MTV continue to drift apart like estranged lovers? Or will we try to kiss and make up? Stay tuned for the next episode of Underdog. I mean MTV, when Kennedy defends music from non-music dating queen Jenny McCarthy.

Jeremy Biser is a senior at the U. of Connecticut. His favorite VJ is Adam Curry, mostly because of that incredible hair.

Days of Whine and Roses

The history of MTV is a little like wine and cheese. You'd think it would get better with age, but sometimes it just stinks. We put up with "Like A Virgin" getting too much airplay in the hopes that we'd catch a glimpse of "Cantorfold." We stayed up late at night counting the minutes to The Young Ones, and now we've got Beavis and Butt-head to look forward to. But it hasn't been all fun and games. No sirree. Sometimes you get chardonnay, sometimes you get cheddar. Here's our take on the situation:

NICE BOUQUET
The Young Ones
Monty Python's Flying Circus
The Real World I
Remote Control
Liquid Television
My So-Called Life re-runs
Speed Racer
World Premiere Videos
Beavis and Butt-head
MTV News
Rockumentaries

A LITTLE MOLDY
The Real World II, III, IV...
Road Rules
House of Style
Lip Service
Sand Blast
Singled Out

Guest Expert: Weird Al Yankovic

On MTV: "Currently, I feel like I have a spiritual bond with Kennedy, but I must admit that Martha Quinn has always rocked my world."

TITLE WHAT?

Twenty-four years later, gender equity remains a mystery

BY ROBERT MANKER
Assistant Editor
AND CARRIE HUTCHISON
Writer at U.
Photo illustration by Matt Dunker, U. of Kansas

LAWS AND RULES. THEY'RE MEANT TO ENSURE ORDER, civility and fairness in society. Without them, we would have chaos. And then there's Title IX — federal law requiring gender equity in education. With it has come chaos.

What is gender equity? How does the government define it? Does it or can it really exist? And how is it to be achieved? These are the questions at the heart of the Title IX debate as it applies to gender equity in college athletics. Almost a quarter century after the law's inception, many people think these questions are no closer to being answered than they were in 1972.

Meanwhile, the majority of college athletic departments still are not in compliance with Title IX. The situation has improved since an enforcement crackdown by the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights began four years ago, but the problems remain far from solved.

Addition by subtraction

Dave Taylor is preparing his U. of Wyoming baseball team — eliminated to achieve gender equity — for its final season. It's reverse discrimination, Taylor says, adding that Title IX is becoming the divisive issue of sports — akin to the affirmative-action debate.

Men's sports are getting slighted by Title IX.

To comply with Title IX, athletics departments must demonstrate one of the following: proportionality in participation and funding for male and female athletes; a history of increasing opportunities for female athletes or an accommodation of the interests and abilities of the underrepresented gender.

Most schools have chosen the first route to satisfy Title IX — proportionality. But it's often hard, if not impossible, to add opportunities for women without eliminating them for men. Shrinking budgets just don't allow it.

One popular method of achieving gender equity is to eliminate "non-revenue" sports for men — teams that cost more to operate than they bring into their athletic department — such as swimming, wrestling or, at the U. of Wyoming, baseball.

That monies then can be used to fund new women's teams or to fund existing women's teams at a higher level.

Todd Bell, assistant director of communications for the American Football Coaches Association, says too much emphasis has been put on the proportionality aspect of that test. "It's a numbers game, and it's the easiest one to prove," he says. "Title IX was implemented to ensure fairness, and it's kind of getting away from that."

Wes Brasher, a senior on the U. of Wyoming baseball team, says he understands the importance of Title IX and that budgets play a major role in decision making. But he thinks administrators should find better ways to achieve gender equity.

"I feel really bad for the guys who have to find somewhere else to play next year," Brasher says. "I think if [administrators] want to make things equal, they should add sports for women instead of penalizing men."

Male, female and football?

The fact that there is no "companion sport" for women matching the participation and funding levels of football is at the root of the Title IX debate.

In the proportionality equation, football, which allows for a maximum of 85 scholarship players, must be offset by approximately five women's teams of 17 full-scholarship players each. That means, on the surface, that a school with a full football squad must offer five more sports for women than for men to achieve gender equity.

But the NCAA has a biological news flash for us. There are actually three genders. That is the rationale behind its claim that football should be given special calculation privileges, if not complete exemption from the equation.

Grid coaches claim that their sport, along with men's basketball, brings more revenue into college athletic departments than any other sport, men's or women's. At many schools, a portion of that money is used to fund the "non-revenue" teams.

NCAA members ask why they should be penalized with reduced scholarship numbers and smaller head counts while they already are doing their part for Title IX by underwriting other teams.

"We've been accused of wanting to exempt football," Bell says. "We're just asking that they use a little bit more fairness in applying Title IX."

But fair is fair, says Donna Lopiano, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation. She says football is a men's sport and should be treated as any other men's sport. "Football asking for special relief under Title IX is a lot like IBM asking for an anti-trust exemption," she says.

It can be done

While most athletic departments are not in compliance with Title IX, Stanford U. is often recognized as the example to follow. The Cardinal sports program offers 16 teams, for men, 16 for women and one coed squad.

Stanford officials say they've tackled the football problem by awarding more scholarships to female athletes on "non-revenue" teams than for men playing the same sport. For example, the Stanford women's tennis team might receive five full grants-in-aid, while the men's tennis team might have only one. (Stanford U. officials would not release specific scholarship numbers.)

And through increased fundraising and revenue generation, Stanford has managed to add women's teams without eliminating men's squads.

The road ahead

The Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights is in charge of enforcing Title IX and has drawn much criticism for that enforcement. The OCR has been accused of failing to offer viable choices to athletic departments, placing too much emphasis on the proportionality option and discounting attempts by schools to achieve equity via the two other tests.

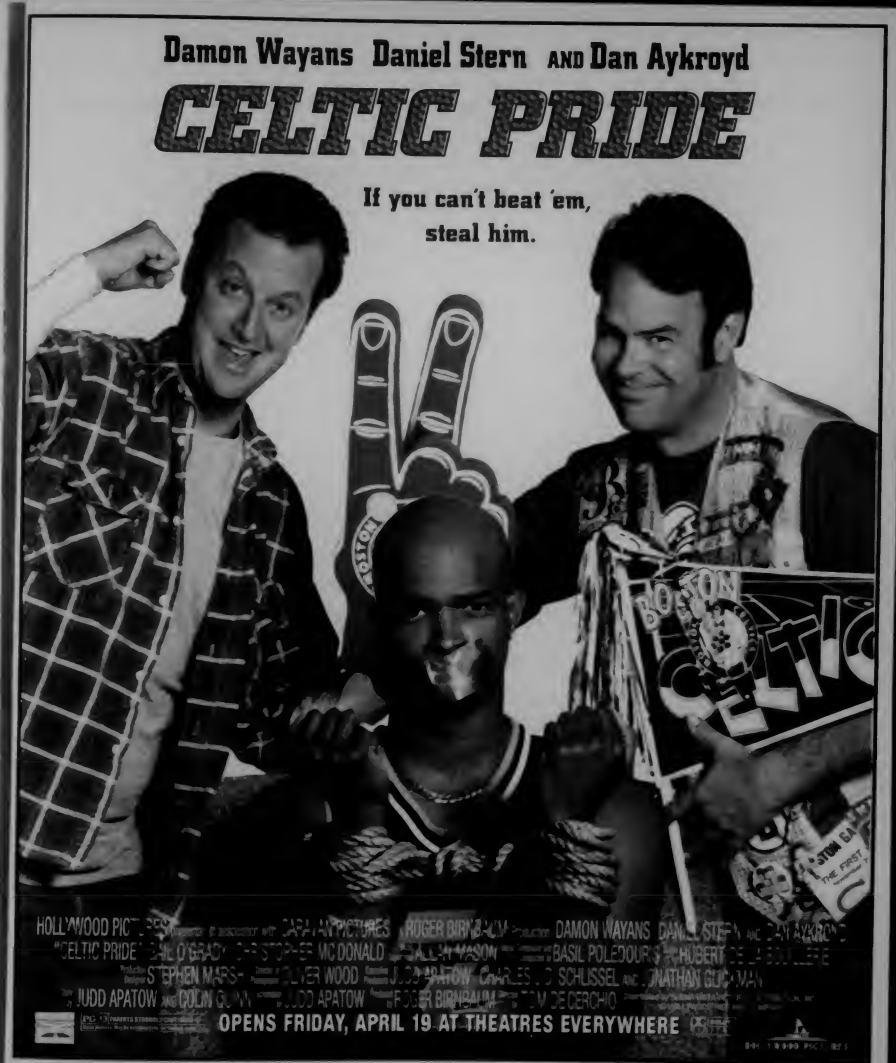
The concerns of various schools, several men's athletic organizations and other constituencies have snowballed into a call for the OCR to clarify its position on Title IX compliance. Those groups would like the OCR to recognize efforts to achieve equity in a less quantitative manner. Meanwhile, nothing has changed or been clarified.

The debate in the interpretation of Title IX appears to slice right across America and all the way to the nation's capital. In fact, Title IX's fate could become an issue in this fall's elections.

U.S. Rep. J. Dennis Hastert (R-Ill.), in an essay titled "The Unintended Effects of Title IX," encourages athletes to contact Congress members concerning negative aspects of the law. "First, we need people to understand that eliminating programs for men is not the way to comply with Title IX," Hastert writes. "It does not help women, and it unfairly punishes young men who want to participate."

Robert Manker and Carrie Hutchison not only tag teamed to write this story, but could also team most major tandem golf tournaments. Ever!

Title IX: Is it the answer to gender equity?



Damon Wayans Daniel Stern AND Dan Aykroyd
CELTIC PRIDE
If you can't beat 'em, steal him.
OPENS FRIDAY, APRIL 19 AT THEATRES EVERYWHERE

Rock

BY GLENN McDONALD

Rating System

★★★★★ Too
★★★★ Two
★★★ To ★★ Tu
★ (Spanish) Tutu

Pocket Band

One Bad Eye

"I used to want to be an astronaut, but then I saw Kiss in Cream magazine."

That's how it all began for Bob Sexton, the bass guitarist and founding father of One Bad Eye. OBE is a group well on its way out of the garage and into the club circuit.

Sexton describes the band's music as sonic blitzkrieg. "We're not your average bubble-gum crap. Our music is alternative, like when alternative meant alternative."

The band — Axis on lead vocals, Jo-Jo Albano on drums, Kevin Keller on guitar and Sexton on bass — pounds out an energetic, aggressive sound, which is a hybrid of influences from groups like Motorhead, Nirvana and Dead Boys.

Sexton compares lead man Axis to artists like Elvis and Tom Jones. "Axis can bring alternative to a new level instead of just screaming."

The origin of the band's name is not from a band member donning an eye patch, or having a slight astigmatism. In fact, there's nothing optical about the name at all. A friend of Sexton's in New Jersey had a habit of giving local bands random nicknames. The friend ran One Bad Eye past Sexton and it stuck.

The group will continue to rock Northern California, San Diego and Arizona, and like any ambitious artists trying to make it in the real world, the members are hopeful. What's next for Sexton and One Bad Eye?

"World domination ... either that or to make enough money to get a new car."

For more info on One Bad Eye: Order of the Gash, P.O. Box 93962, Hollywood, CA 90093.

Catherine Cruz, California State U., Northridge

Cracker
The Golden Age
Virgin

★★★★

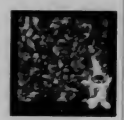
If there's one damn real alternative band left in this godless culture, it's Cracker frontman David Lowery's songs are as refreshingly bizarre now as they were 10 years ago when his band Camper Van Beethoven helped establish the college rock scene.

With The Golden Age, Cracker have managed to expand their sound in almost every direction. The punk songs rock harder ("I Hate My Generation"), the bluesy jams dig deeper ("Sweet Thistle Pie") and Lowery's fractured ballads of redneck soul still manage to be moving in their impossible way ("Dixie Babylon"). Guitarist Johnny Hickman finally comes into his own on Golden Age, co-writing all but two songs and providing the band's unique post-punk, country-rock guitar sound.

With occasional synths, strings and mellotrons, Cracker sound pretty much fearless on this record. And when you hear that tone in a voice, you know you're in for a ride.

Killing Joke
Democracy
Zoo

★★★



Generally credited with being the first industrial band, Killing Joke came out of London more than 16 years ago playing the kind of aggro noise now championed by nine inch nails and Ministry. Since then, the original members have followed some intriguing paths — composing for the Cairo Symphony Orchestra, producing for Paul McCartney and recording with New Zealand tribal musicians.

Democracy is something of a concept album, with singer/lyricist Jaz Coleman approaching ideas of personal and political activism from a kind of techno-pagan spirituality. Musically, the album is as dense and often unapproachable as any of their previous work, fusing tribal rhythms with superfuzzed guitars, exotic folk instruments and sampled, random noise. Not the pioneers they were 16 years ago, Killing Joke nevertheless hold their own in the industrial wasteland.

Los Lobos
Colossal Head
Warner Bros.

★★★★

Los Lobos are eclectic in the best sense of the word, and their five-alarm chili sound of blues, country, Tex-Mex and traditional Spanish and Mexican music has made them one of the most consistently interesting bands around.

Colossal Head finds the band confidently and boldly following the experimental route blazed on 1992's Kiko. The opening track, "Revolution," grooves on a deep funk bass and cowbell backbeat. Don't get too attached, though. By the time you've finished side one, Los Lobos will have led you through hard R&B ("Mas y Mas"), mariachi ("Maricela") and straight Chicago blues ("Can't Stop the Rain").

If "La Bamba" is all you know of Los Lobos, check out Colossal Head and start saving money — you'll need it to buy all their back records once you get hooked.

Semisonic
Great Divide
MCA

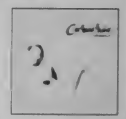
★★★

Once upon a time, there was a band called Trip Shakespeare. They made an album called Lulu. They sang absurdly eager pop songs with unapologetic, crooning voices. They wrote meandering, indulgent instrumental rave-ups. And they were very, very great.

But alas, they were not for this time. Semisonic feature two former members of Trip Shakespeare, and Great Divide is a successful distillation of the former band's bright, lively pop sound. Although still prone to arty noise experimentation, Semisonic have a lot of weapons — the melodies are solid pop gold, the harmonies faultless and the lyrics convincingly heartfelt. You better have a sweet tooth, though, because Great Divide ultimately goes down like a huge bowl of Cap'n Crunch. It tastes great, and you'll get a massive sugar high, but after awhile you'll just want to brush your teeth and take a nap.

The Cocteau Twins
Milk and Kisses
Capitol

★★★



The Cocteau Twins create the kind of multi-layered soundscapes those familiar with Enya or Jane Siberry will recognize. You know — Atmospheric. Lush. Ambient. Easy To Fall Asleep To. Lacking the wit of Siberry or the Gaelic forcefulness of Enya, the Cocteau Twins weave intricate melodies designed for the remarkable instrument that is Elizabeth Fraser's voice. The lyrics are seldom intelligible, and even when they are, they make no linear sense (song titles include "Serpentskirt," "Calfskin Smack" and "Eperdu"). So you have to approach The Cocteau Twins' work for what it is: ultimately passive music that relies heavily on texture and mood to communicate. Milk and Kisses contains some of the band's strongest melodies ("Tishbite") and successful sonic collages ("Rilkean Heart") but finally fails to move the hand forward in any significant way. The Cocteau Twins remain in a holding pattern through the lush atmosphere.

RADIO, RADIO

1. Cibo Mato, Viva La Woman, Warner Bros.
2. Frank Black, Cult of Ray, American
3. Various Artists, Twisted Willie, Justice
4. Possum Dixon, Star Maps, Interscope
5. Ministry, Filth Pig, Warner Bros.
6. NOFX, Heavy Petting Zoo, Epitaph
7. Tori Amos, Boys for Pele, Atlantic
8. Tortoise, Millions Now Living Will Never Die, Thrill Jockey
9. Ruby, Salt Peter, Work
10. Various Artists, Dead Man Walking Soundtrack, Columbia

Chart based solely on college radio air play. Camembutting radio stations: WWVU, West Virginia U.; KVRX, U. of Texas, Austin; KTRU, Rice U., Texas; KAMP, U. of Arizona; KRNU, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln; KWVA, U. of Oregon; WFAL, Bowling Green State U. and WRHL, U. of Kentucky.

The U Radio Chart is sponsored by

VIBRANCE.
ORGANIC CARE

Our Picks

Goldfinger
Goldfinger
Mojo Records

Goldfinger's self-titled debut seems to have the Midas Touch. The first single, "Here in Your Bedroom," is already receiving airplay and the music they describe as punk/ska is a hit with their hometown California crowd. The Goldfinger sound is akin to Green Day with hammering drum riffs and spirited vocals, but with a sharper, more talented bent to it.

Taj Mahal
Phantom Blues
BMG

If you're looking for a repeat of the lowdown and dirty, grind-and-groove sounds from Dancing the Blues, you may be temporarily disappointed in Phantom — but only temporarily. The album is definitely on the upbeat of blues, although "Here In The Dark" will quench longings for a down-home gritty funk. Don't miss Bonnie Raitt's cameo in "I Need Your Loving" or Eric Clapton's contribution to "Love Her With A Feeling."

Groove Collective
We The People
Giant Step Records

Guys, find your butterfly lapeled jackets. And gals, grab your wrap-around skirts. You're going on a cruise with this collection of groovy tunes. If you're not grounded in reality, you may find yourself on the Love Boat gyrating in that swanky lounge. It's the ship of good times and smooth pick-up lines with the slippery jazz that comes from this tight 10-piece band.

Van Gogh's Daughter
Shove
Hollywood Records

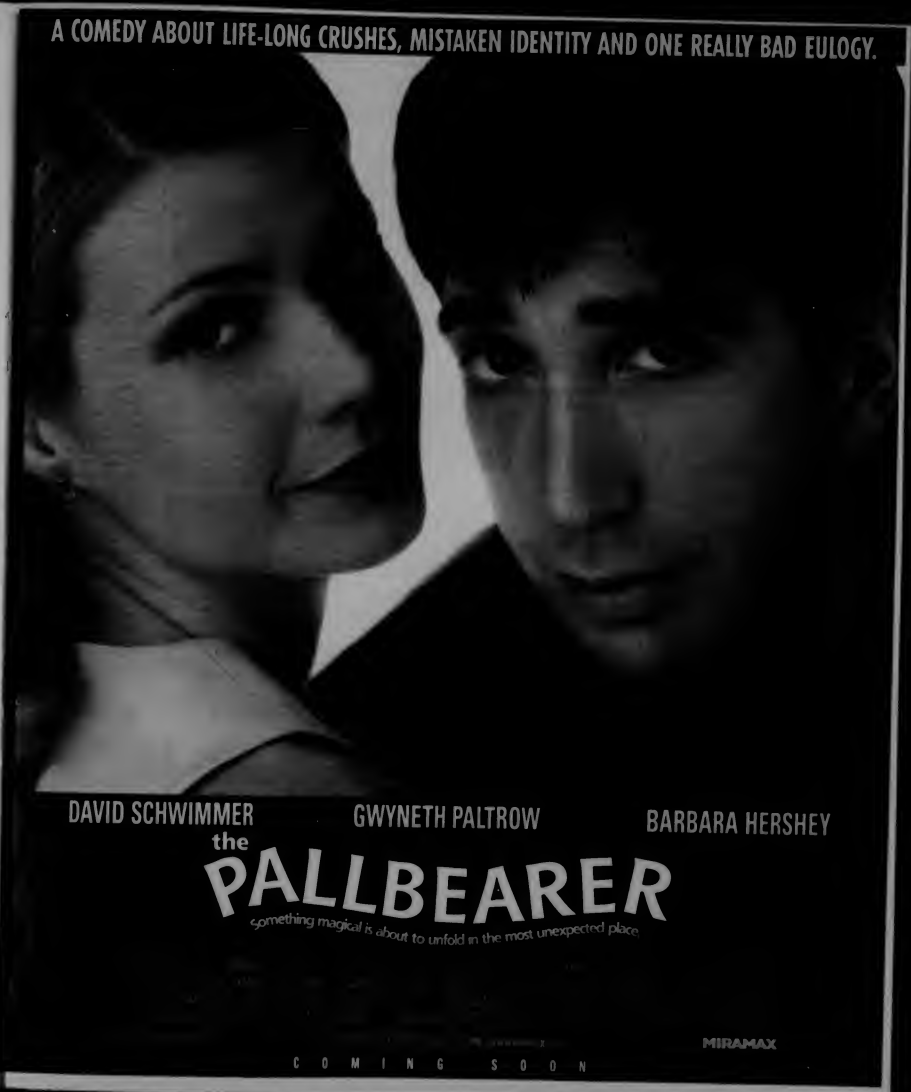
VGD consists of four women. Don't think Go-Gos or Bangles, though. Think Veruca Salt, you know, punk-pop stuff. With fun, frenetic songs like "U F—k" (no reference to this magazine, we hope) and "World Between Your Knees," VGD is afraid of no one — especially censors.

Gavin Friday
Shag Tobacco
Island

At first listen, you'd swear it was early Bowie or late U2 with a twinge of Reznoresque unrelenting darkness thrown in. Friday takes the listener on a journey through his debauched world of cabaret singers, impending apocalypse and 60-year-old transvestites. It's an imaginative departure from the deluge of feel-good rock you're already sick of.

Each month, asst. editors Rob, Col, Shad and Tricia listen to lots of lousy CDs just to find you a few gems like these.

It's all music all the time on U's music page:
http://www.umagazine.com/rocks



A COMEDY ABOUT LIFE-LONG CRUSHES, MISTAKEN IDENTITY AND ONE REALLY BAD EULOGY.
DAVID SCHWIMMER
GWYNETH PALTROW
BARBARA HERSHEY
the PALLBEARER
something magical is about to unfold in the most unexpected place
MIRAMAX
COMING SOON

Reel

BY TRICIA LAINE

IT'S A BIG MONTH FOR ALL OF YOUR favorite 20somethings. With Uma Thurman, Winona Ryder, Keanu Reeves and Ben Chaplin (we predict that he'll be a new fave), there's something for every soft heart in the house. The emphasis seems to be on romance and all things twisted. Although the oldies (Richard Gere and Nick Nolte) are sticking with the gravy in their newest crime dramas, April is for the young at heart!

Boys

Touchstone

Doe-eyed Winona Ryder captures the heart of Lukas Haas (Leap of Faith) and the rest of the class. See, she hangs out at an exclusive boys' high school. And well, you know how the hormones — er, emotions — are at that age. Basically, they're all tripping over each other trying to win her heart. So here's what we're wondering: Isn't Winona getting a little old to be hanging out with high schoolers?

Feeling Minnesota

Fine Line

The notion is that weddings bring out the best in people. Unless, of course, you just said "I do" to a nervous groom (Vincent D'Onofrio, Strange Days) you can't stand. And then you run into his brother, played by Keanu Reeves, and accidentally have sex with him while the guests are still eating the cake. Oops. Cameron Diaz (The Mask) is the lucky bride.

The Truth about Cats and Dogs

20th Century Fox

The twist women have been waiting for. Instead of Cyrano de Bergerac, it's Janeane Garofalo (although we think she's really cute) enlisting the help of the lithe Uma Thurman. As a charming radio personality, Garofalo catches the ear of a gorgeous photographer (Ben Chaplin (Remains of the Day). When he wants to meet her in person, she panics. Romantic twists and turns follow

The Pallbearer

Miramax

"Alas!" the people cried. If the weekly Must See TV quota of Friends just isn't enough, you can catch David Schwimmer playing a sappy romantic who can't find a job, a girlfriend or a way out of his mother's house. And you may be (un)happy to know that Pallbearer kicks off a glut of new movies starring the regulars from Central Perk.

Primal Fear

Paramount

Richard Gere makes a big stretch playing arrogant criminal defense attorney Martin Vail. When a shriveling, penniless man is accused of murder, Vail takes the case — if only to flex his courtroom muscles. Laura Linney (A Simple Twist of Fate) plays his tenacious ex-girlfriend/prosecuting attorney.

The Last Supper

Sony

A group of heady grad students sets a standing date with disaster. In order to discuss politics and current events, Cameron Diaz, Annabeth Gish (Beautiful Girls), Ron Eldard (Scent of a Woman), Jonathan Penner (The Naked Truth) and Courtney B. Vance (Panther) invite a different controversial guest to each weekly dinner party. The surprising guest list will titillate you as much as the movie's dark humor.

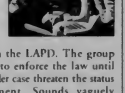
Celtic Pride

Hollywood Pictures

If you've been known to plan your life around a particular team's schedule (read: the Boston Celtics) and a certain show on a particular network by the name of something like, let's say, SportsCenter, then you have to fit Celtic Pride into your lineup. Dan Aykroyd goes to desperate measures — while drawing lots of laughs — to support his favorite group of ball bouncers.

Mulholland Falls

MGM/UA



Nick Nolte puts on his tough-guy hat and steps back in time to the 1950s as one of the biggest, baddest cops in the LAPD. The group makes up its own rules to enforce the law until glitches in a routine murder case threaten the status of the whole department. Sounds vaguely famil...sorry.

James and the Giant Peach

Disney

Millions of peaches... wait, that's a song. OK. Take the genius of best-selling children's novelist Roald Dahl (Charlie and the Chocolate Factory), add the makers of The Nightmare Before Christmas and trip it all up with the technique of stop-motion animation. It all comes together in this happy adventure that will leave you feeling just peachy.

Fear

Universal

As you can tell from the title, director James Foley (Glengarry Glen Ross) hopes to put knots in your stomach. Mark Wahlberg (Basketball Diaries) is the boyfriend turned bad. When he tries to tighten the reins on his girlfriend, Reese Witherspoon (Man in the Moon), her whole family gets involved. You'll know what it feels like to be stalked.

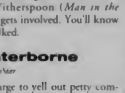
Mrs. Winterborne

TriStar

If you can resist the urge to yell out petty comments or raise your hand when you have a question, you'll probably like Ricki Lake's newest shot on the silver screen. Although it's no "my mother slept with my boyfriend and now she's pregnant," Lake's character does have an identity crisis of sorts. Stay tuned for advice.

Sunset Park

TriStar



Warm fuzzies and a hushel of sweaty gym socks are probably not what you'd expect from Sunset's leading lady, Rhea Perlman (TV's Cheers). She's taken the post as coach of a boys' high school varsity basketball team. And they're out to kick some proverbial butt. Enough said.

Psst! Have you heard? IA's web site now has movie news and gossip: http://www.umagazine.com

Screen Saver

The Celluloid Closet

The Celluloid Closet* chronicles the subtle and sometimes not-so-subtle history of Hollywood and homosexuality. This closet is packed full of all there is to know about how homosexuals are viewed in the movies — from the role of the sissy, Hollywood's first gay stock character, to the first movie — Boys In the Band (1970) — where gays looked openly at their own lives.

Watching Celluloid unfold is like standing in front of a closet straight out of Saturday morning cartoons. When narrator Lily Tomlin opens the door, an assortment of film clips comes crashing down on your head. You won't be the only one feeling a bit stupid for not getting the gay in-jokes the first time you saw these movies. From over 100 Hollywood films — we're talking mainstream movies like Rebel Without a Cause, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes and Ben-Hur — you'll be amazed and amused at how writers and directors skirted around the issue of homosexuality.

Celluloid* includes interviews with the likes of Tom Hanks, Whoopi Goldberg, Shirley MacLaine and Susan Sarandon. This is a must-see for all movie buffs and anyone interested in tales from the closet.

The Reel Deal

The Truth about Cats and Dogs

When a successful actress refuses to watch herself on screen, it seems fitting that she should play the character of Abby in The Truth about Cats and Dogs. (See preview this page.) You see, Abby has the wits to hook a would-be suitor, but she doesn't think she has the looks to seal the deal.

"I can't bare to see my own stuff," says Janeane Garofalo. "Oh my God, it's so unpleasant," she says about seeing herself on a huge screen — every flaw, times 10.

You may only know her as the crazy roommate and Gap princess in Reality Bites. But she's a seasoned actress and stand-up comedienne — we tracked her down between shows in St. Louis — and she was a cast member of Saturday Night Live. You wouldn't expect such a pro to hate to see herself in the movies.

"I could definitely relate to being the type of person that has to earn attention at a party through verbal skills," Garofalo says about how she identified with her character, Abby. "Every boyfriend I've ever had, I had to earn. It always started out as friends.

"I've never had someone say 'Wow!' in the beginning."

So why does she keep doing movies?

"You're being paid a lot of money to read a lot," she says. Her first love is stand-up comedy, but acting gives her the freedom and financial stability to go for her true love. Garofalo says there's a big difference between comedy, which she creates, and acting, which involves dialogue created by someone else.

"[Acting] can be very boring... If you're saying dialogue that you don't think is interesting," she says. "But at the same time, it's better than working in a factory."

JUMPING ON THE BANDWAGON

It can be a long, hard road from dives to record deals

BY OAKLAND CHILDERS
U. OF DELAWARE

THE THRONG OF sweaty collegians swarms a smoke-filled fraternity basement, desperately trying to hear and be heard over roaring guitars and pounding drums.

An especially tipsy party-goer strays from the keg and stumbles toward the makeshift stage at the rear of the tiny room. Through the haze, a familiar face materializes, then another. "Is that R.E.M.?" asks the plastered partier in disbelief.

Not likely. But had this happened 15 years ago in Athens, Ga., the scenario would sound less like a beer-addled fantasy and more like a foggy recollection of an average weekend.

From playing the pizza parlors and abandoned churches of Athens to recording the staples of American college rock, R.E.M. introduced a genre all its own.

The quartet — Michael Stipe, Mike Mills, Peter Buck and Bill Barry — soon had an established fan base growing exponentially out of its own back yard. R.E.M. became not just the prototypical college band but the yardstick by which all after it would be measured.

College towns ate to the music industry what minor league teams are to professional baseball. There's no guarantee that any band will raise the eyebrow of some major-label scout and score a 10-record deal, but it's always a possibility. That keeps the already vibrant college genre teeming with zealous young musicians — musicians hoping to become the next R.E.M.

Paying your dues

Today, college bands seeking more than an occasional gig at the local bar or frat house should take note — the path to stardom is a long one.

Five years of hard times are starting to pay off for the New Jersey band From Good Homes. Friends who grew up together in Spatta, N.J., the band recently released its major-label debut, Open Up the Sky.

"It was hard financially," says the band's front man, Todd Sheaffer. "I lived for three years in a place with no hot water and no kitchen." But a faithful following of local fans made the years before its record deal much easier on the group. "We've always had fans giving us encouragement and appreciating what we do," Sheaffer says. "Those people kept us going. I think in a way they kind of see it like they succeeded, too."

The now famous Dave Matthews Band came from similar beginnings. "We took every gig from debutante parties to fraternities," violinist Boyd Tinsley says of the band's early days. "We just played all the time. Along the way, you pick up a few extra fans."

In a little more than four years, the band has gone from playing U. of Virginia parties in Charlottesville to getting heavy play on both college radio and MTV.

But success has done little to change the lives of the Dave Matthews Band, save a few thousand new fans. "The main thing I see is just the road and the stage," Tinsley says. "It's just like the stages have gotten bigger."

The band may seem to have come from nowhere, but Tinsley is quick to dispel that notion. "It's not like we just made an album and got on MTV," he says. "We were playing hard all over the place for four years before MTV or any of that stuff came along."

Many paths to stardom

Getting to the top is usually a laborious process for college bands. But not all groups follow the typical formula — playing live shows in local dives for years before scoring the Holy Grail of the record industry, a major-label recording contract.

The Ocean Blue, friends from their middle-school days in Hershey, Pa., played live shows only after signing such a contract and cutting their first record.

"It wasn't until we contacted a manager about getting a record deal that we started playing out," vocalist David Schelzel says. "When we first got the band together, we played in each other's basements. There was no place to play in Central Pennsylvania."

But as the band's notoriety grew, so did the size of the venues it played.

"We now do proper concerts, where people come to see the band, and they are familiar with the music, whereas before, we could be walking into the lions' den," Schelzel says. "You could be playing for people who could care less that you are up there — who aren't interested in your music. It can be a terrible atmosphere."

Buffalo Tom, out of Amherst, Mass., have followed a more traditional road to success. The band got together while attending the U. of Massachusetts and soon began playing at local bars and at the school. The Buffalo Tom following grew gradually, culminating in their opening for Live last summer.

Fruitful gardens

Amherst is one of many college towns, like Athens, Ga., that seem to breed talented musicians. Bands like Dinosaur Jr. and Sebadoh ate just two of the acts making big careers from meager beginnings there.

Burlington, Vt., home to the U. of Vermont and hippie rockers Phish, is another town trying to add its name to that list.

"There are a lot of great bands here," says Paul Jaffe of Pure Pop Records, a music store catering to the local talent. "I've been to a lot of places in the country, and there is more talent here."

But as each college band makes it big, another is left wondering when its turn will come.

"A lot of the bands that we've known over the years and have been friends with are now doing very well," says From Good Homes' Sheaffer. "People in our band see that, and it creates a bit of pressure. It's like, 'Look at them. What about us?'"

Oakland Childers is a sophomore at the U. of Delaware and the keeper of two pigs. Susan Elizabeth and Golda Meir.

Superstardom isn't always automatic for the people.

They Came From Neptune

Sure, every campus has its weekend pickers and grinners, its dreaming drummers, its virtual virtuosos. Most local musicians fail to graduate beyond just that — playing the local scene. But there's a handful of college towns across the country responsible for producing more than their fair share of noted bands. Here are just a few:

Amherst, Mass. — Dinosaur Jr., Sebadoh, Buffalo Tom

Athens, Ga. — R.E.M., The B-52s, Pylon, Widespread Panic

Austin, Texas — Butthole Surfers, Eric Johnson, Timbuk3, Jesus Lizard, Scratch Acid, Daniel Johnston, Sincola

Boston, Mass. — The Breeders, Belly, The Pixies, Throwing Muses, Blake Babies (Juliana Hatfield, Antennae), Letters to Cleo, Hum

Chapel Hill, N.C. — Superchunk, Archers of Loaf, Jennyanykind, Spatula

No longer dreaming under the table.

wrap

ZEN AND THE ART OF CRAMMING

The bulimic study method

BY GLENN McDONALD
ILLUSTRATION BY JIM HUBER,
STATE U. OF NEW YORK, BUFFALO

CRAMMING IS A TIME-HONORED AND revered academic tradition, tracing all the way back to ancient Greece. Aristotle is said to have stayed up for three straight years while preparing his thesis on Poetics, and students at the Lyceum are generally credited with inventing the first form of Vivarin.

While not generally the most effective way of assimilating information, cramming is a good short-term solution for an upcoming test. The idea is to jam your frontal lobes with as much relevant information as humanly possible, then vomit it all back up within a day or so. Those of you who have been down this road know what I'm talking about. The amount of raw data you can functionally retain for 24 hours is amazing.

There are a number of ways to optimize your cramming performance, chemical and otherwise. As a rule, you should begin the process by defining your parameters. Do I need to ace this exam? Or will a "C" get me by? Am I willing to sacrifice pride for time by studying until five minutes before class and showing up in my robe with a cup of coffee? Am I prepared to risk permanent cognitive damage by revving my brain up to fifth gear for 14 hours? The answer to all these questions is yes.

Next you'll need your supplies. Find out exactly which books you need to read and go straight to the store to buy the equivalent Cliffs Notes. Purchase a set of multicolor highlighters, and remember — the more acrid the ink fumes, the better they will keep you awake when you snort them at 4 a.m.

Perhaps the most important element of a good cramming session is maintaining proper chemical parity. Caffeine will be your best friend for the next several hours, but you must respect her power. Don't peak too early — a good rule of thumb is to consume one cup of coffee every time you turn a page.

All right, then. Time to settle in. Remove from your room all possible distractions — records, books, plants, roommates, furniture, home-brewing equipment and carpeting. By painting warrior-like patterns on your face with the highlighters and chanting everything you read out loud, you will achieve a Zen-like state of consciousness.

For the next several hours you will descend into a world of near omniscience, absorbing all information you come across. You will be able to photographically recall pie charts pixel by pixel. You will memorize entire chapters verbatim and calculate pi to 100 digits. You will highlight and underline, memorize and prioritize. And you will not blink.

Like an Apache from a sweat lodge, you will emerge hours later into the bright sun for your 9 a.m. class. Then, in a mighty display of intellectual prowess, you will fill in little circles with a No. 2 pencil.

The down side, of course, is that within about an hour and a half you will have forgotten everything you learned. Oh, sure, bits and pieces will remain. Things like the atomic weight of tungsten and Massai puberty rites will continue to kick around your cerebellum for years, along with the lyrics to "Come On Eileen." But for the most part, you will have no serviceable recall.

Not that it matters. A passing grade is a passing grade, thank the gods. You've lived to see another day. Now breathe deep, rejoice and go get drunk. You done good, kid.

Glenn McDonald never perfected the art of cramming, and today he is panhandling for food on the streets of San Francisco. Could you be a dear and spare some change?

Double Take

As if you aren't filled with enough useless information and trivia, we have to go and make it worse. Shove everything you've learned at college into a tiny compartment in your melon, and make room for these gems:

Male octopi can only have sex eight times in their life (they have eight tentacles — you do the math).

Psychotics hardly ever yawn.

The longest permanent bar — at the Beer Barrel Saloon in South Bath Island, Ohio — is 405 feet 10 inches long.

The average cost of raising a child to age 18 is $231,140.

Since 1950, Helge Friholm of Denmark has collected 73,823 different bottle caps from 179 countries.

Fear of string is called linonophobia.

The heaviest goose egg on record is a 2,403-pounder laid by a goose named Speckle.

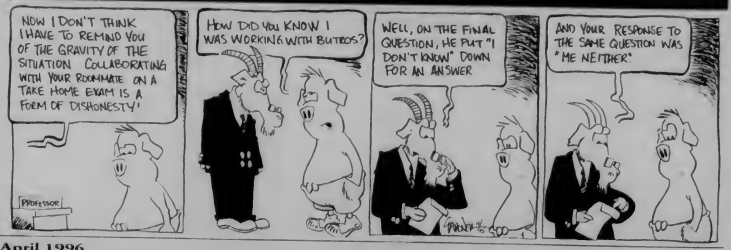
The longest time a motor scooter has been kept in non-stop motion is 1,001 hours.

The noisiest animal in the world is the howler monkey.

Just a little Scooby snack for the brain...

Colleen Rush, Assistant Editor

Butros, Alan Gardner, Utah State U.



NOW I DON'T THINK I HAVE TO REMIND YOU OF THE GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION. COLLABORATING WITH YOUR ROOMMATE ON A TAKE HOME EXAM IS A FORM OF DISHONESTY!
PROFESSOR
HOW DID YOU KNOW I WAS WORKING WITH BUTROS?
WELL, ON THE FINAL QUESTION, HE PUT "I DON'T KNOW" DOWN FOR AN ANSWER
AND YOUR RESPONSE TO THE SAME QUESTION WAS "ME NEITHER"

CLASSIFIEDS

EMPLOYMENT

Private Luxury Yachts Hiring
You can visit exotic destinations in the Caribbean, Mediterranean, Bahamas. Even the America's Cup in New Zealand. Experience not necessary. Great $$$ crewing on World Class Yachts. (NOT CRUISE LINERS) Seasonal or full-time. Our informative INSIDERS GUIDE takes out the guess work for you. Most people don't even realize these jobs exist. We know they do. We've done it and we wrote the book. For more info call 1-800-380-2687.

FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT 100's of Entry-Upper Level Positions No. Exp. Nec., Paid Training. Benefits For App. and Info Call 1-800-549-2300 ext 5122

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
Earn up to $2,000+ per month working for Cruise Ships or Land Tour Companies. World Travel (Hawaii, Mexico, the Caribbean, etc.) Seasonal and Full-Time employment available. No experience necessary. For more info call
(206)971-3550 ext.C98526

EASTERN EUROPE JOBS – Basic conversational English teachers needed in Prague, Budapest and Krakow. Excellent benefits plus bonuses. Call Global Employment Network 1-206-971-3680 Ext. K98521

RESORT JOBS

SUMMER WORK
Average First Year Profit
$5766
Apply online:
http://www.southwestern.com/~sw

FINANCIAL AID

FREE FINANCIAL AID
ATTENTION ALL COLLEGE STUDENTS!
Over $6 Billion in FREE Financial Aid is now available. Let us help you get grants & scholarships. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents. For more information, call Student Financial Services™
1-800-263-6495 EXTENSION F3608

NANNY SERVICES

BOSTON NANNIES. Experience, scenic, historic New England. Excellent salary, benefits, friendship support. Year commitment 1-800-456-2669

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT

Camp Greylock for Boys and Camp Romaca for Girls in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts seek men and women who like to work with children ages 6-16. Undergrads, grads, couples (families welcome). Openings in archery, baseball, basketball, football, in-line/roller hockey, volleyball, golf, lacrosse, sailing, Waterfront Director, swimming (LGI/LGI/WSI), tennis, waterskiing, windsurfing, pianist(accompanist), RN's, photographer. Non-smokers only. Call Greylock 1-800-842-3214, Cal Romaca: 1-800-779-2070 or write Greylock/Romaca, 200 West 57th St., #307, New York, NY 10019 e-mail greylockrg@aol.com

NORTHERN WISCONSIN RESORT. Needs waitstaff, kitchen staff, housekeepers. Salary, room/board. BOYD'S, FIFIELD, WISCONSIN 54524

1-800-4-SUMR-JOB! STUDENTS NEEDED!! CRUISE SHIPS – $$$+ TRAVEL! ALASKA JOBS – EARN TO $4000/MO! VACATION RESORTS/THEME PARKS – UP TO $15/HR! AIR COURIER JOBS – FLY DIRT CHEAP! CALL TODAY! ASK FOR ext. 2001 PROG

ALASKA SUMMER EMPLOYMENT – Fishing Industry. Earn up to $8,000+ in two months! Free transportation! Room and Board! Over 8,000 openings. No experience necessary. Call (206) 971-3510 ext A98526

100+ ENTHUSIASTIC COUNSELORS. Outstanding New England brother-sister camps. 2 hrs. N.Y.C. Sports, Aquatics, Hobby Activities. 2 Spencer Place, Scarsdale, NY 10583 (914) 725-4333

COUNSELORS for Jewish cultural resident camps in MA and NH June 19 – August 18. Great summer opportunity. Contact Cohen Foundation Camps, 30 Main Street, Ashland, MA 01721 800-375-8444

TALENT

MODEL SEARCH 1996
GRAND PRIZE - $1,000
Plus, National Magazine Exposure
To Enter, Send Photo & $2.00 to:
INTELLIGENT CHOICES - U
231 E. Alessandro Blvd., A-146
Riverside, CA 92508

TRAVEL

STUDY ABROAD in Southern France. Summer, Semester, Year Programs. Contact FAF 111 Roberts Court, Alexandria, VA 22314. 703-549-5987

Join Degrees of Freedom Travel in summer adventure trips Amazon and Inca Trail Peru Trek Bike/Hostel across Ireland degfree-dom@aol.com (800) 421-2344

CONTESTS

4TH ANNUAL U. PHOTO CONTEST FOUR $1,000 GRAND PRIZES

Here's your chance to win big money! U. is offering four $1,000 cash grand prizes for the best photo entries submitted in four categories: Campus Life/Traditions, All Around Sports (mud to varsity), Road Trippin' and Funniest Sights. PLUS, for each entry published in U. during the year, we'll pay $25. Last year's contest had more than 100 winners — and $10,000 in cash prizes.

Photos can be of anyone or anything on or off campus, from normal (whatever that is) to outrageous. For best results, keep the faces in focus and the background as light as possible.

Winners of the month will be published in U. and on our Web site. The four $1,000 Grand Prize winning entries will be featured in U.'s May 1996.

Send entries on color print or slide film, labeled (gently) on the back with your name, school, address, phone number (school and permanent) and a brief description of the event (who, when, where, doing what). (Funny captions get extra points.) Entries cannot be returned and become the property of U. Magazine. Deadline for entries has been extended to April 1, 1996 (no fooling).

Mail your entries to
U. MAGAZINE PHOTO CONTEST
1800 Century Park East, Suite 820
Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511

Takeshi Ouchi, U. of Washington
"Fuzzy navels will warm you up."

Yenny Garcia, Michigan Technological U.
"OK, so who's plain and who's peanut?"

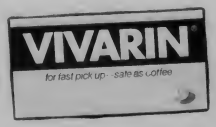
Kelli Caldwell, Oregon State U.
"Good clean fun."

STOP SLEEPING WITH YOUR PROFESSORS.

Is it the sound of that whispery voice, or those big, intellectual words? If your professors are putting you to sleep, Revive with Vivarin. Hey, it's tough juggling a full load, a social life—maybe even a job or an internship—plus squeezing in time to feed yourself, exercise, and keep in touch with the real world so you can someday conquer it.

Don't let fatigue get the best of you. Vivarin safely restores mental alertness, with the same amount of caffeine as about two cups of coffee. So stay sharp in class. Don't sleep your way to the bottom.

Revive with



©1995 SB SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare
Each tablet contains 200 mg caffeine, about two cups coffee. [illegible]

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 98 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, March 26, 1996

Star light, Star bright

A plethora oftalented skaters hit the ice at the Mullins Center for the Discover Card's Stars on Ice show, (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Lax tries to shoot down Eagles

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts lacrosse team travel to Chesnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College, (See Sports, Page 10).

WORLD

War games' end, trade offer signal a Taiwan-China thaw

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — China cooled its rhetoric and ended its war games yesterday, and Taiwan proposed a significant trade concession to Beijing, suggesting that both sides want to end their eight-month war of nerves.

China sent thousands of troops on military maneuvers near Taiwan and test-fired ballistic missiles in a failed attempt to undercut support for Taiwan's president, whom Beijing accuses of harboring dreams of independence.

Yesterday's developments indicate that the two rivals, having plunged into a confrontation that alarmed their Asian neighbors and drew in the U.S. Navy, are now looking for ways to get relations back to normal.

NATION

Whitewater investigation linchpin gets 28 months

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A former small-time banker who claims President Clinton pressured him to make an illegal $300,000 loan was sentenced yesterday to more than two years in prison and ordered to repay the government $2.04 million.

David Hale, whose allegations launched the Whitewater investigation, also was given three years probation and fined $10,000.

Hale left the courthouse smiling and said he would continue to cooperate with Whitewater investigators.

He brushed off questions about the investigation, describing instead the two years he has spent in seclusion since he pleaded guilty in 1994 and agreed to expose his friends.

"The night I was relocated we passed a little Baptist church, and outside it said 'Hell is Real.' I guess that's a good explanation," the 55-year-old Hale said.

Hale pleaded guilty to lying to the Small Business Administration to obtain millions in matching funds that he then used to make loans to enrich himself and his friends.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

ALANA caucus voting rights debated at meeting

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

The SGA student judiciary committee met in the Commonwealth room last night to debate whether caucuses are constitutional

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Staff

A Student Judiciary Hearing took place to hear both sides of an argument concerning the formation of an ALANA caucus within the Student Government Association.

Senator Peter Luongo and Senator Dan Kittredge presented their argument against the existence of an ALANA caucus under the current SGA constitution and by-laws.

The SGA's constitution "has nothing to do with appointed seats whatsoever," Kittredge said. "Appointed senate seats are not mentioned within the constitution."

"We are tired of constantly defending ourselves against these petitions" that are brought forth every semester, said Co-chair of the ALANA caucus Maurice Caston.

Nine seats on the ALANA caucus do not give the ALANA community "too much voice," Caston said.

I am not in favor of having certain people having more voice than other people, said Kittredge. This case is about the SGA constitution and not about the racial numbers that have been thrown around, he said.

The constitution firmly says that senators be elected by electoral districts, said Kittredge. The electoral district is where a person is elected and not appointed, he added.

They [Luongo and Kittredge] allege that caucus senators and area government senators are unconstitutional, said one former SGA Attorney General Phil McNamara. "They're wrong," he added. "They are forgetting a very important thing."

The constitution states that candidates are "apportioned by the senate as defined by its bylaws," said McNamara in reference to Title II, Chapter I of the SGA constitution. The constitution's bylaws defines apportioned as appointed electoral caucus seats and appointed area government seats, he said.

If everybody was on a level playing ground then ALANA senators would get a double voice and vote said McNamara. Even the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the University and the University Board of Trustees recognize an uneven playing field exists, he said. For example, the University's non discrimination law acknowledges an uneven playing ground, he added.

"It ensures an equal voice and vote. It will not double it," McNamara said. The ALANA caucus will ensure equal representation by voice and vote, he said. It is not only open to minority students, he added.

Yeltsin says Belarus union will not create single state

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin said Monday that Russia and Belarus would have strong ties under their new union, but denied the two countries were forming a single state.

President Alexander Lukashenko of Belarus announced Saturday that his country would sign an agreement with Russia next week creating a new union between the two countries.

Some Belarussians feared the union would strip them of their independence. But Yeltsin said each country would remain independent.

"It will not be a treaty on [creating] a single state, not at all. But it will be a treaty on very deep integration," Yeltsin told reporters in Moscow before leaving for Norway.

Speaking in Brussels on Monday, Belarussian Prime Minister Mikhail Chigir also insisted that both countries would maintain their independence.

News of the agreement drew strong reaction from Belarussian nationalists opposed to stronger ties with Russia.

About 15,000 people, many waving red and white Belarussian flags, marched through downtown Minsk on Sunday to demand continued independence and protest government moves toward closer links with Moscow.

The Belarussian National Front said 100 people were beaten, 12 detained and six hospitalized as a result of clashes with police during the demonstration.

Front leaders also said they planned to send a letter to Yeltsin warning that they will fight if the union goes ahead.

"If the Kremlin continues its policy of occupation, it will get another Chechnya," National Front leader Zenon Poznyak said the letter would say.

Most Belarussians, however, support closer ties with Moscow. The country of 10 million is floundering economically and many Belarussians long for the stability of the old Soviet system and look to Russia to bail them out.

Chigir acknowledged that his country is the poorest of all the former Soviet republics and said expanded trade with the West would, among other things, help Belarus pay the enormous bill it owes Russia for oil and gas.

In Moscow, the agreement drew mixed reviews from Communists, who generally support the restoration of the former Soviet Union. Viktor Anpilov, leader of the most pro-Soviet Communist party, was quoted Monday by the Interfax news agency as saying that the agreement was doomed to failure.

"There can be no talk of integration between ex-Soviet republics without the restoration of Soviet power, people's ownership and a single union of nations," Anpilov said.

However, Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov, who is the front runner in the presidential race, praised the new union Sunday and claimed some credit.

He said the move was prompted by parliament's Communist-inspired resolution a week earlier to denounce the breakup of the Soviet Union and to urge that it be restored.

That resolution has caused concern among former Soviet republics that do not want the close type of relations with Russia that Belarus is seeking.

Most vociferous in their denunciation of the Russian parliament's resolution have been the Caucasus Mountains countries of Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia.

The Central Asian countries have been more cautious in their response, with Kazakstan and Kyrgyzstan planning to sign an integration treaty with Russia and Belarus.

Candidates debate issues, seek to improve University

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

In a live, televised forum, the five candidates for the office of Student Government Association (SGA) president and trustee brought their campaign platforms to the University community Monday night.

The forum, which was held in the UVC TV19 studio in the basement of the Student Union Building, was the first public debate held for candidates to express their concerns about the state of the University and their intended plans to improve the education and quality of life here.

The candidates for president are Maurice Caston and Larry Plano, both members of the SGA Senate.

Caston is running in conjunction with SGA Secretary of Finance Sean Carter, a candidate for student trustee. Plano and student trustee candidate Neil Collins form the only other unofficial ticket. Joseph Fountain is the sole student trustee candidate running independently.

Caston and Carter, in their opening statements, presented a three prong platform which addressed the high cost of attending the University, the quality of food services provided to students as well as the effectiveness of undergraduate advising programs.

"We need to make this University accessible to students," Caston said, who cited high costs and poor services as the primary reasons students are driven away from the University.

Plano and Collins emphasized improving relations with the town of Amherst, expanding the student interest in the SGA and improving the overall reputation of the University.

"A lot of people don't really know what is going on in the SGA," Plano said. "We care about the student voice," added Collins.

Fountain said that campus safety was one of his foremost concerns, calling for more call boxes and an expanded Escort Service. In addition, Fountain said that, if elected, he would work towards a reform of Legal Services, harassment policies, the meal plan and increase subsidy for University child care services.

"With my knowledge of state politics, I'll be able to go to Boston and lobby on these issues," Fountain said.

The candidates answered a series of questions, at the conclusion of their opening statements, which addressed issues ranging from the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) to diversity and the ALANA community at the University.

Caston and Carter said that the apparent success of the SATF relief coalition will serve as a model for their administration.

Carter, who initiated much of the initial research which served as a starting point between students and administration during their negotiations, said that improving the quality of life at the University starts with student activities.

"I will help impress upon the trustees that student activities are a place where perhaps students learn more than in the classrooms," Carter said.

Plano said that he is a strong supporter of SATF relief, was frustrated by the reality of budget constraints which Registered Student Organizations have been suffering from in recent years.

"It hurts as a senator sitting around watching RSOs get cut," Plano said.

Plano said he is equally angered by delays in repairing classroom conditions.

"If I become President, I'm going to push the administration" on these issue, Plano said.

Fountain said that securing needed funds for student activities will require a measure of political savor beyond the economics of the issue.

"It's not just a knowledge of finances — you have to know how to lobby," Fountain said.

In light of the recent controversy which has arisen over the constitutionality of the appointed ALANA caucus within the SGA senate, the candidates spoke on the importance of diversity within the University.

Plano supports the existence of the caucus but would like to see it restructured, to ensure that ALANA students are never over represented, as well as under represented.

"I think that the big issue on this is fairness," Collins said, who did not offer direct support or opposition for the caucus.

Caston, who chairs the ALANA caucus, said that he would like to see a increased presence of students of color on the University. He cited a 1992 agreement in which the University committed to increasing the ALANA percentage within the student population to 20, a goal which has yet to be met.

Carter said that he would take this issue to the Board to speed its implementation.

"Anything that advocates on behalf of students should be encouraged," Carter said.

Fountain said that the University must step up its efforts to attract ALANA students to this school.

"The University is not working to outreach minority students," Fountain said.

Elections will be held Wednesday and Thursday during lunch and dinner hours.

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

"We need to make the administration look at us not just as students, but as people."
— Larry Plano
Candidate for SGA President

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

"When I graduate, I want to look back and say, these are the things I did for my fellow students. These are our issues."
—Joseph Fountain
Candidate for Student Trustee

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

"Students need to get their services, but keep their tuition lower."
— Neil Collins
Candidate for Student Trustee

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

"We've got to get into the administrations face. Chancellor Scott isn't running things. We're running things."
— Maurice Caston,
Candidate for SGA President

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

"As trustee, I can sway votes to realize reductions in tuition and fees."
— Sean Carter,
Candidate for Student Trustee

Campus Police Log

Burglary/ breaking & entering
March 13
A vehicle was broken into in Parking Lot 13.
There was a broken lock plate on a South College door.
March 15
A vehicle on Parking Lot 22 was broken into and had a car phone stolen.
March 18
There were pry marks on entrance on a Hills House door. Nothing was stolen.
There was an open access to the roof area of Lederle Research Building. No break in was reported.
March 19
A private contractor reported tools and a chainfall stolen from a locked storage area in the basement of Thompson Hall.

Larceny
March 13
A telephone was stolen from a Hills House office.
Two couches were stolen from the lounge area of McNamara Residence Hall.
March 14
A vehicle in Parking Lot 22 was broken into and had a radar detector stolen.
There was a report of a wallet stolen from the Campus Center.
A license plate was stolen in Parking Lot 50.
A wallet was reported stolen from Cance Residence Hall.
March 18
An individual reported sunglasses stolen from Lederle Research Building.

Accident
March 13
There was a minor two vehicle accident on Infirmary Way. Owners exchanged paperwork.
March 14
There was a minor damage to one vehicle on Campus Center Access Road.
There was an accidnet in the Campus Center garage loading zone.
March 15
A vehicle was damaged by an unknown vehicle on Thatcher Way.

Vandalism
March 13
There was a window in Emerson Residence Hall that was broken by a snowball.
March 14
A vehicle outside Moore Residence Hall had a smashed window.
There was a vehicle with a smashed window outside Berkshire Dining Hall Road.
Doors and mirrors of Brown Residence Hall were damaged by a BB gun.
Damage to a cable box splitter in Crampton Residence Hall was reported.
March 15
There was a windshield smashed on vehicle in Parking Lot 49.
A window was broken on an oven in a Cramton Residence Hall kitchen.
Tires were slashed on a vehicle on French Hall Road.

Weapons violations
March 14
A BB gun was confiscated from John Adams Residence Hall.

Health / safety hazard
March 13
A plastic window set on fire in Cance Residence Hall was causing an offensive odor.
March 15
There was a report of a gas odor emanating from Paige Labratory. Environment Health and Safety was notified.
March 16
There was a flashing light over a fire pull station in Bartlett Residence Hall. The matter was referred to Environment Health and Safety.
March 17
The Physical Plant and Environmet Health and Safety was notified of a fuel pump hose broken. Small amounts of fuel was spilled on the ground of the PVTA Bus Facility.

Annoying behavior
March 13
There was offensive graffiti written on a Patterson Residence Hall bullentin boards.
March 14
Ther was a report of individuals drinking and smoking in the lounge area of Washington Residence Hall.
March 18
Individuals playing frisbee were asked to move due to muddy conditions on playing fields near Stadium Drive.
An individual in Machmer Residence Hall reported receiving offensive letters.

Medical emergency
March 14
An individual in Brown Residence Hall, feeling ill, was taken to Health Services.
March 15
An individual in Pierpont Residence Hall with head lacerations was taken to Health Services.
March 17
An individual fell and complained of neck pain in the Mullins Center. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
March 19
An individual on Rifle Range Road was treated at Health Srvices for lacerations to the forehead.

Disturbance
March 14
Two individuals were fighting outside of Coolidge Residence Hall.
March 15
There was a fight in progress in Butterfield Residence Hall that was resolved. It was referred to Housing.

Family offenses, domestics
March 14
Two individuals were arguing outside of Crampton Residence Hall.
Brian James Bartini, 23, of 170 High St., Lee, was arrested for operating under the influence, assault and battery and for failure to have an inspection sticker.

Assist other pds
March 15
There was a breaking and entering of College Pizza. Police stood by until the arrival of Amherst Police.
Police assisted Amherst Police with a motor vehicle stop on Infirmary Way.
March 19
There was a report of erratic operation of a vehicle referred to Amherst Police.

Motor vehicle theft
March 15
A motor vehicle was reported stolen outside the North Village Apartments.

Missing person
March 16
Family requested a check on a missing person not affiliated with the University in Thoreau Residence Hall.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, March 26

Workshop — There will be a free tutor training workshop on the tutor-tutee relationship offered by the Learning Resources Center from 3 to 5 p.m. in Room 1038 of the W.E.B. DuBois Tower Library. Call 545-5334 by Tuesday, Mar. 12 to register.

Class — Bread & Circus will be sponsoring a cooking- class and fundraiser called "Nourishing the Whole Person in Recovery" from 6-8 p.m. in the Dakin Conference Room of Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The class costs $20 and preregistration is required. Registration forms are available at the Dickinson Programs of Cooley Dickinson Hospital, 76 Pleasant Street, Northampton and from Bread & Circus. Proceeds will benefit Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Wednesday, March 27

Election '96 — Voting for SGA President, Student Trustee and Area Government will be held from 11 a.m. – 2 p.m. in Franklin, Worcester, Hampshire and Berkshire Dining Halls, Student Union (for commuters) and the Newman Center (for Greeks).

Lecture — Professor Emanuel Rubin presents: "Orientalism and Orientalizing in Jewish Culture since 1800," sponsored by the Center for Jewish Studies. The lecture is free and open to the public, and begins at 4 p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 601.

Theater — A Little Night Music, a musical by Sondheim, about love triangles, infidelity, love and hate will take place at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6 and $4. Call 545-0415 for more information.

Lecture — Zionists for Action in collaboration with UMass Hillel, Five College Hillel, UMass Department of Judaic Studies and UMass Political Science Department welcomes Steve Grossman, Chairman of the Board of AIPAC, at 7:30 p.m. in 168 Campus Center. The lecture is entitled "U.S.-Israel Relations and the Middle East Peace Process: The Inside Story." The lecture is free and open to the public.

Meeting — UMass HANDS, the sign language club, will have its next meeting at 7 p.m. in 217 Herter. New members are welcome. For information call Shana at 253-0316, the HANDS office at 545-1925 or visit the office at 306 Student Union.

Meeting — There will be a "Men Stopping Rape" meeting from 6 to 7 p.m. in 902 Campus Center. All men are welcome to attend. For more information call Ben at 783- 8431 or Chris Wilson at 665-3767.

Meeting — The Golden Key National Honor Society wilol be holding a general membership meeting at 7 p.m. in 804 Campus Center. All members are strongly encouraged to attend. For more information call Michelle at 545-1995.

Meeting — The UMass Film Society will be having an informational meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Foreign Language Resource Center in Herter Hall.

Thursday, March 28

Election — Voting for SGA President, Student Trustee and Area Government will be held from 4:30–7 p.m. in Franklin, Worcester, Hampshire and Berkshire Dining Halls, Student Union (for commuters) and the Newman Center (for Greeks).

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be having a meeting at 7 p.m. at 306 Student Union to discuss trips and a petition. For more information call the office at 545–1925.

Notices

Special Olympics — North Valley Special Olympics is actively seeking athletes and volunteers for the upcoming track and field, aquatics, gymnastics, 10 pin bowling and volleyball seasons. There are slots available for special athletes of all ages and abilities. Newcomers are strongly encouraged to join. Registration is due on April 3. Parents are encouraged to call with any questions. For more information, call North Valley Olympics at 256–1622.

Music — Jimmy Connors, UMass graduate and student of world renowned musicians Archie Shepp and Yusef Lateef will be teaching four music classes this spring through Amherst Leisure Services and Supplemental Education. Two performance seminars, a World Music Class and America's Classical Music "Daze" begin the week of April 8. For more information, call LSSE at 256–4065.

Dance — New beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are offered Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. Cajun is a style of dance from Louisiana with arm movements similar to those used in the Texas two-step. Clog dancing is a traditional American folk dance that originated in the 1800's in the Appalachian Mountains. Partners are not needed and all ages are welcome. No prior dance experience is necessary. Classes are instructed by Maple Run, a non– profit dance group that performs at fairs and community functions. The classes are held at Betty Champion's Dance Studio, 132 Elm Street, Westfield. For more information, contact Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Mail Service — During the summer magazine subscriptions will not be forwarded due to the high volume of first class mail and the large amount of magazine subscriptions Mail Services receives. Now is the time to contact magazine companies to change addresses for the summer, June through August. September magazines are held in Mail services and will be delivered when school opens in September.

Financial Aid — Financial aid applications for summer are available in the Office of Financial Aid Services located in 255 Whitmore Administration Building. Summer financial aid applications must be returned to Financial Aid Services by April 15. Due to limited funds, late applications will not be considered. Federal Work–Study and Federal Direct Loans are available.

Religious — Classes in a variety of stimulating topics are held each week at Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst by Rabbi Chaim or Yocheved Adelman. Monday evenings at 7 p.m. is Parshat Hasavua, the weekly Torah portion, as illuminated by the mystical teachings of Kabbablah — for women only. Tuesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Talmud, the wisdom of our sages, tractate Berachot. Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. is Tanya, the classical work of Chassidic philosophy.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating students for the night of May 25. Applications are available at the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center. There will be no on-site registrations. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms and full payment must be returned by May 1. Call 545–2591 for more information.

Drum & Dance — Grupo Sofrito, a part of the UMass Drum and Dance collective, meets Tuesday through Thursday. For more information call 585-0013.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUM

WOMEN'S STUDIES

"Different Paths and Many Choices"

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1996
TIME: 6:00 PM
LOCATION: COMMONWEALTH ROOM
"Earthfoods"
STUDENT UNION BUILDING

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
WOMEN'S STUDIES

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Anna Bowen '92	Registered Nurse Holyoke Visiting Nurse Association Self-Employed Counselor, Consultant & Writer
Judy LeBold '81	Fundraising Consultant Producer, Director, Filmmaker
Ginny Rees '93	Director of Alumni Relations University of Massachusetts Alumni Relations
Cate Rowen '91	Vice President Market Street Research, Inc. Northampton, MA

Light dinner reception follows the panel
For more information, please contact:
University Career Center
545-2224

Fentons SINCE 1924 March Madness Sale
"Unbelievable Savings Throughout the Store"

All whiteBaseball/Softball Cleats
$5 NIKE MIZUNO PONY MITRE
YTH & ADLT Reg. up to $55

Batting Gloves
$5 SARANAC Reg. up to $16

All Baseball/Softball Gloves 10-50% off

Soccer Cleats
Soccer Balls Hand-sewn & Molded up to 50% off
s2-3, 4, & 5 $960 Reg up to $14

Fantastic Savings on Demo Tennis Racquets• All Tennis Shoes 30-50% off

All Running, Basketball, & Cross Training Shoes 30-50% off

STX/BRINE Heavyweight Sweatshirts $20 Reg $40

Hurry in to see all the unadvertised Screamin' Deals!

Fentons SINCE 1924 ATHLETIC SUPPLIES
377 MAIN ST. • AMHERST • 253-3973
Mon-Fri 9-5:30 • Sat 9-4

PAWSS
The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies
presents:

"THE IMPACT OF THE VIETNAM WAR ON AMERICAN SOCIETY"

a lecture by:

Howard Zinn
Professor Emeritus of Political Science,
Boston University

7:30 PM Wednesday, March 27th
Hasbrouck 20
University of Massachusetts

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. For more information please call PAWSS at 582-5519.

Workers protest for improved conditions

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

RYAN TILTZ / COLLEGIAN
University Staff Association members picket outside Whitmore yesterday.

Over 25 members of the University Staff Association (USA), composed of clerical, technical and administrative service workers, picketed outside Whitmore Administration Building yesterday during their lunch hour.

"We want better money. We want less mean-spirited action by management," said USA President Frank Olbris, who held a sign protesting the University's decision to pay over a million dollars to outside consultants. A 30-year University employee, Olbris is a Mail Clerk II in the Whitmore mailroom.

"We've been operating on the extension of an old contract from 1993," said Olbris, speaking of cost of living increases. The lowest paid clerical workers make $16,500, only $900 over the federal poverty level for a family of four, according to Olbris. "A lot of helping agencies use the poverty level, plus 10 percent" since it hasn't been changed in so long, he said.

Contract negotiations have been going on for close to three years. The clerks picketed yesterday because they want to "pressure the University to be more reasonable in its bargaining," said Olbris, who desires "clean rules" and "community discussion."

"Management wants to have more and more power, unilateral power, rather than a clear set of rules as to the reason for doing this," Olbris said. His example "this" was the possibility of reducing the number of sick days available with pay. Although Olbris was unable to comment on specific aspects of the negotiations, he said Gov. William Weld is publicly supporting the reduction.

"The University may be wanting to reduce its cost in the very narrow sense," but there are social implications, according to Olbris.

Sixty to 80 percent of the USA union is female, and "females are still the caregivers in our society," he said. Sick days, according to Olbris, should be times to care for immediate family members who are ill, not just the workers themselves.

"We're in mediation, not just bargaining," Olbris said. Mediators go between the two groups, which are in separate rooms, "kind of like what they did with the Palestinians and the Israelis."

The 150-member USA is affiliated with the Massachusetts Teachers Association and the National Educators Association (NEA), which at 2.2 million is the largest union in the United States.

University police, as well as Food Services and trades workers, are also seeking contract negotiations through their own unions, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers (IBPO) and the American Federation of State and County Municipal Employees (AFSCME).

Brown University hosts dissident writers conference

By Stacey Shackford
Special to the Collegian

A small tour group entered Sayles Hall at Brown University in hopes of seeing the impressive paintings and antique organ. Instead they were greeted by the deep forceful voice of Bei Ling reciting his poem "Chatter" in his native language of Chinese.

Ling, the editor of Tendancy magazine, was one of many dissident writers and activists from around the world, including Salman Rushdie and Carlos Fuentes, who gathered for the "Freedom to Write Conference" held March 19–22 at Brown University.

Using Brown's teleconferencing facilities, the Indian novelist Rushdie joined a panel of writers and human rights activists for a three hour session in the Salomon Center for Teaching on Thursday, March 21.

Shortly after 4 p.m., Rushdie's image appeared on a large screen over the panel's heads. The symposia was broadcast live over CSPAN and the Internet. The audience, both locally in the auditorium and globally through the Internet, was invited to ask questions.

Bei Ling was joined on March 21 by more than a dozen other writers who read from their works and discussed the difficult and dramatic situations under which they have lived and worked. Although most of the writers were international graduate students in Brown's Freedom to Write Program, the concern over the newly growing censorship of American activists and "controversial" writers, was also a prevalent theme.

Mark Amerika spoke of his disapproval of the communications decency act and the disturbing bipartisan support of the bill. "We must fight for the freedom to write in America... the guaranteed right to publish... writing in a digital age," Amerika said.

In preparation for Rushdie's appearance the next day, author and professor Robert Coover read excerpts from Rushdie's novel The Satanic Verses. Rushdie remains under an international death sentence, originally imposed by the Ayatollah Khomeini and the Iranian government in response to this novel.

Panelists included representatives from activist groups Human Rights Watch and PEN International, and international writers, including acclaimed Mexican novelist Fuentes.

Rushdie spoke about his role in The Satanic Verses to "explore the phenomenon of revelation" and how eventually every writer "must reckon with religion and make a serious encounter."

He also addressed his role as a secular committed to the division between Church and state. He said combining the two is dangerous.

"It is one thing to have the freedom of religion protected and another to protect what one believes from being discussed," Rushdie said.

According to Rushdie, it is lethally dangerous to separate the freedom of speech from the freedom of religion.

He also addressed his situation as a man forced to lead his life in hiding. He appealed to his audience to notice there is "some larger struggle happening here" and told about the tragic irony surrounding his case. Others do not receive nearly as much world–wide attention for their work and yet are in much more danger from governments, said Rushdie.

Rushdie also spoke directly to the activists present in the audience, saying, "when human rights and economics come into conflict, money always wins."

He said he is unsatisfied with the level of government activity and that his is only a modest success. Although the Iranian government claims they are not interested in his case, they have yet to produce this statement in writing, said Rushdie.

He also encouraged the audience to write to their senators and political leaders. "When faced with a bully the thing to do is not to be bullied," Rushdie said.

Amherst Select Board discusses local recycling

By Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The town of Amherst is accepting proposals for private recycling services to accommodate residents. At last night's Select Board meeting, members discussed various bids to offset the current revenue loss of the curbside recycling system.

Amherst Trucking and Waste Control offered a joint bid to Amherst. Their bid would only cover current customers, said Noel Ryan, the superintendent of public works.

"We're working it out with them to include everyone; single residence and apartments with up to four units," Ryan said.

Services for recycling pick-up will remain the same with the privatization. The town will oversee the process to make sure the system is running smoothly, said Select Board Chair Bryan Harvey.

The board also discussed distribution of 100 percent recyclable clear trash bags and enforcement of recycling paper bags. The Department of Environmental Protection granted Amherst $15,000 for clear bag distribution, said Karen Bouquillon, the solid waste/recycling coordinator.

"There has been a law since 1989 that says opaque bags are illegal," Bouquillon said. "Paper bags used for trash bags don't decompose. If you leave them now, they will still be in the ground in 2050."

All paper bags are required by the Amherst Board of Health Regulations to be recycled. Bouquillon said she is not targeting residents, but businesses in the area. The State sets a standard of having 46 percent of people using clear bags, but has not enforced it in the past.

"We want to congratulate the community for a high rate of recycling," Harvey said. "Enforcement should be done in areas where it will do the most good."

After a first warning for failure to use clear bags, a fine of $50 to residents and $250 to licensed haulers will be sanctioned. Bouquillon wants to work with people to avoid fines in the future.

The town contract with ACTV was also discussed at the meeting. The on–going process is finding ways to utilize the two public access channels currently available. The town hopes to use the governmental and educational channels to highlight local events and information.

"The town has to get its act together," Bill Venman said. "We don't want to go another 10 years with two blacked–out channels."

A problem with negotiating is not knowing costs for the channels since a program schedule is not available, Venman said. The Select Board has until the end of June to get its act together to negotiate with ACTV, Venman said.

"Getting the channels open is important, but if we don't figure out the programming, then it doesn't help," Harvey said.

In other matters, Ryan proposed putting a roof on an existing unused structure in North Amherst to provide a place for a salt shed. The severe winter caused a lack of salt for the town's roads, said Ryan. The roof will cost $10,000, saving the town $90,000 instead of building a new salt shed.

"It will not be an environmental problem because of the roof," Ryan said.

Look for the Collegian's guide to the Final Four on Friday, March 29,1996

UMass
STILL TIME TO ENTER

INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

Softball (M/W/C) ..... A.S.A.P.
Co-Rec Soccer (M/W/C) ..... A.S.A.P.
Co-Rec Volleyball (M/W) ..... A.S.A.P.

PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR SOFTBALL, SOCCER & VOLLEYBALL. CALL FOR CLINIC DATES.

The IM section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Use short but descriptive text no more than 175 letters per column. Photos will be sized down to fit your column space. All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to start by any questions.
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

STUDENT TRAVEL
The world's largest student travel organization
800-777-0112
STA TRAVEL

WANTED
WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, COMPUTER LITERATE, CREATIVE
MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS
Java, Shockwave, Emblaze, C++, VRML & Visual Basic
NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS
LEAN & MEAN 1 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART TIME HELP, INTERNS
please include: resume, letter of interest, reel
PASSION, BUT NO EXPERIENCE? WRITE US A LETTER!
VISION
Multimedia & Video
P.O. Box 776, Amherst, MA 01004
bballou@shaysnet.com
attn: Ben Ballou, Production Mgr
NO PHONE CALLS!

"At Touro, I knew that I could ask questions of anyone... and get answers."

Lieutenant (J.G.) Peter Galindez, USNR
Attorney, Judge Advocate General's Corps
Touro Law Center, Class of 1993

"A good lawyer knows the right questions to ask and where to find the answers. Anyone can look in a book. What makes the difference is learning from the insight of others. That's what I did as an undergraduate at Yale, that's what I did at Touro Law Center, and that's what I'll do as an attorney in the JAG Corps. Tapping into a variety of perspectives can make the difference between a good lawyer and a great one."

Touro's unique student-centered culture offers a legal education in an atmosphere of mutual respect, cooperation and collaboration. Faculty are committed to professional development and excellence in teaching.

Touro graduates, like Peter Galindez, are well prepared when they venture into the practice of law in today's competitive and ever-changing legal environment.

300 Nassau Road
Huntington, Long Island, NY 11743
516 421-2244 Ext 312 • 516-421-2675 fax
http://www.tourolaw.edu
TDD/TTY: 516-421-0476
Juris Doctor degree
LL.M. for foreign lawyers
Full/part time day/evening programs

TOURO COLLEGE
JACOB D. FUCHSBERG
LAW CENTER
Preparing students for real-world practice.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
45 main st. northampton 586-0155

Joseph Fountain for Student Trustee

As Student Trustee, Joseph will work toward:
- More call boxes around campus, better escort services and an education program to prevent violent crimes.
- Revisions of the harassment policy, so that it is fair to all students.
- Subsidizing of child care for undergrads with children and expansion of the present child care program.
- A better, more affordable, meal plan that is fair for all students.
- More University aid and grants for undergraduates and with my salary as Student Trustee I will set up book grants for students who demonstrate financial need.

"On March 27 and 28, please give me your vote for Student Trustee. I will be a vocal and strong student advocate and I'll get the job done."

HE'LL GET THE JOB DONE.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni F. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Cassimo Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey Brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Bob Dunn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Lisa M. Oliven Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Amy Paradysz News Editor
Emily Reily Photographs Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Sean Cahoon Staff Artist
Anna Lotto Co-Women's Issues Editor
Hannah Thorne Co-Women's Issues Editor
Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Lee Werner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Ethnarian

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1918 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Star–spangled campus

"Hey Tim, how was your Spring break?"
"Yeah, that's funny."
I did nothing.

I was the only person in Amherst that was under 30 years old. My senior year, and I didn't have enough funding to go somewhere for break.

You'll see me on campus. I'm the one who sticks out due to my blinding paleness. I'm also the only one not peeling layers of skin off my body. As a side note — I've always strongly felt that skin peeling should be an Olympic event. Whoever peels the longest layer without any breaks or tears gets the gold medal. Then they can use all of the dead skin from the event to make wallets and briefcases. OK, that even grossed me out, sorry.

I did use my spare time wisely though — I celebrity watched. You didn't know there are celebrities in Amherst? Actually, I really looked for people that look exactly like a star, but aren't. Here's what I found: look for them in your travels.

Tim White

Joe Pesci works in my apartment complex. He's put on a few pounds and wears a terrible toupee, but he is undeniably the man from Casino. It is a little humbling to see him on his hands and knees scraping garbage out of a gutter, but I'm not going to say anything to him; he might go crazy and start jabbing a pen in my neck.

I've been seeing Larry Bird on-campus for four years. He must be a senior by now. This kid looks just like him (give or take a foot). One of my friends saw him in a stairwell once and yelled "Nuuuuumber 33. Laaaaaurry Biiiird!" The guy stormed down the stairs mumbling "Everywhere I go..."

I saw 18 people who where mirror images of the lead singer of the Spin Doctors. You know, the Spin Doctors, the guys who wrote the song about Kryptonite and then proceeded to drop off the face of the planet? Yeah, those guys.

Speaking of singers, Billy Joe, the lead singer to Green Day, works at the Hampshire Mall. Depending on what hair color Billy Joe picks, it's him... just not quite as angry.

The little guy from the "Benny Hill Show" used to work at Franklin Dining Commons. In the show, he was the old guy who Benny Hill used to beat up or put in a dress, he never said anything. Does anyone who is still on the meal plan know if he still works there? Poor guy must have been desperate for a job after the show ended, so he came here.

I saw a guy who looks just like the guy in the Degree Deodorant commercial. Oh wait, that's him.

Dougie Howser is a student here too. He always has headphones on with black jeans and a black jean jacket, but I don't care how well he tries to hide himself, it's him.

Joan Osborne drinks uptown, nose ring and everything "What if Joan was one of us."

There was a Steven Wright sighting — out of control hair and all. I didn't exactly see him, but apparently he even sounded like the wacky comedian. If every time I looked in the mirror and saw Steven Wright looking back at me, I would probably invest in some surgery.

Maybe I should start a tour business, drive people around campus on a golf cart and point out all the celebrities. Nah, I'll just make a "Map of the Stars," sit on the sidewalk and sell them for five bucks a pop.

I wish someone would come up to me and say "Hey, you look just like Antonio Banderas!"

Actually, someone told me that I looked like that guy on the television show "News Radio." So, I found time in my busy schedule to tune in. I saw the guy that I supposedly looked like.

I didn't find that funny either.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Westward bound

Sunday night I was sitting on my couch, trying to figure out what to write about. Originally, I had planned on describing my trip to San Diego. How wonderful it was to lie on the beach. Hot sun beating down on my back, waves crashing in my ears, the smell of the sea filling my lungs. OK, I'm sorry. I'll stop now.

However, my editors words kept ringing in my head, "Try and write articles that actually have a point." I couldn't think of the actual purpose to a story about getting a tan, seeing the stars in Hollywood (we actually did encounter a few famous people, including Tori Spelling), and drinking dozens of margaritas.

Dawn Jennings

After starting the article about 20 times, I decided to put aside my paper and pen for awhile. I popped in Top Gun because it's always been a favorite of mine. Besides, while in California we actually got to visit the Air Force base where the movie was set. I never thought I'd be driving by signs for Miramar. Of course we never bumped into Tom Cruise, but it was still pretty cool. Watching the movie made me think of how I'd always wanted to go to California and how it was nice that I'd finally gotten to visit there. This is when I decided what I'd write about.

When I was in the eighth grade I remember coming home from school one day and informing my mom that I was going to go to UCLA and become an actress. I insisted it wasn't just a stage I was going through. "No Ma, it's not the same as when I wanted to become the first person to jump rope continuously for a year without stopping or when my dream was to get in The Guinness Book of World Records for owning the most fluorescent clothing." This was serious.

Well, I kinda outgrew the actress part. Considering Julia Roberts was younger than I am now when she starred in Pretty Woman, I've decided my chance of becoming a movie star might be a little smaller than I once thought. However, I still always wanted to live in California.

When two of my best friends from high school decided to postpone college for a couple years and go out West, I was extremely jealous. My parents and I had more than one "discussion" about the subject. You might have figured out that I lost these discussions, considering that I'm here.

Not that I'm sorry that I went to UMass. I'm sure I never would have gotten as much use out of my wool sweaters in California as I have here. Talk about the glass being half full. Yet, I've always planned on taking a couple years off before attending grad school and traveling to different places.

The last day we spent in California, my friends and I split up because we all had different ways we wanted to spend our last hours out there. I decided to go to the beach one last time and while lying there, I starting thinking.

For the last couple months, I've been debating whether or not I should stay at home next year while deciding what to do with my life. I've lived in the same area my whole life and enjoy the familiarity of it. My friends all live close enough to visit and I'd also have of my family nearby. Yet, being so far from home really got me thinking about the plans that I've always had.

Since the time when we were children we've all had dreams. Some of them we abandon as we grow older. I'm not really sure that the way I want to meet my prince is by swallowing a poisonous apple anymore. However, you shouldn't neglect your dreams because of fear of the unknown.

I've always wanted to go to California, yet have always had other obligations and restrictions as to why I couldn't. Yet, come May, I can do whatever I want. Most of you seniors are also in the same situation, whether you realize it or not. This is the one time in your life that you are completely free to do whatever you want. No change you make is permanent and home will always be there.

Therefore, don't give up on those goals just because they don't come easy. You have to decide what things are most important in your life and then follow these dreams. So if anyone wants to drive across country next year, I think we still have some room in the car.

Dawn Jennings is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO HOW HAVE YOU BEEN, MR. BUTTS?
NOT GOOD, HELGA, NOT GOOD...
ONE OF THE BIG FIVE, LIGGETT, AGREED TO SETTLE A MAJOR CLASS-ACTION SUIT AGAINST THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY!
THE WORST PART IS THEY'VE AGREED TO FUND ANTI-SMOKING PROGRAMS! CAN YOU BELIEVE IT? PAYING TO GET PEOPLE TO STOP BUYING THE VERY PRODUCT WE SELL?
WOW. WHAT A CONTRADICTION!
YEAH! FORTUNATELY, I WAS A PHILOSOPHY MAJOR. I'M TRAINED TO HANDLE IT.
3-26

Opinion/Editorial

LYING LYING SECTION
YES, NICOTINE IS ADDICTIVE, THEY DID EXTENSIVE RESEARCH ON IT
THE NICOTINE LEVEL IN CIGARETTES IS DELIBERATE
TOBACCO EXECUTIVES KNEW ALL ABOUT IT
IT'S DRIFTING OVER INTO OUR SECTION
Scientists
Tobacco Inc.
IS THAT TRUE?

Role–ing along

What is happening to our society? Crime rates are sky high. Poverty is rampant. Drugs are more prevalent now than they ever have been. AIDS is threatening to wipe out the human race. Is there an end to this madness?

If society is as bad as it is right now, then where will this downward spiral leave us 20 years down the road when our children will be growing up? As the world around us gets sadder and shadier, it seems nothing is being done to change the trend.

One of the reasons often given for society's decline is the lack of good role models. There are quite a few out there, but far from enough. While many have the opportunity to serve as positive role models, a small percentage actually serve that opportunity, leaving too many children under the guidance of negative role models, or with no guidance at all.

There are two types of role models. First, there is the type that is naturally in the spotlight. They are admired by many for their extraordinary abilities. Professional athletes fall quite nicely into this category.

Mark McGrath

The other type will not be found on television or in the newspaper, but they are able to set an example in the way they interact with others and in the way they carry themselves. Because of the bonds of varying levels that they create with others, they are able to influence them in many positive ways.

Recently, more and more of the former type have been losing their status as positive role models because of actions or choices unbecoming of that status. Such legendary athletes as Mickey Mantle and Magic Johnson are excellent examples of fallen stars. Both were at the top of their respective sports, on top of the world for that matter, until they made crucial mistakes, leading to their tragic ends.

Mickey drank his liver to death and took a perfectly good donor organ to the grave with him. Magic led a promiscuous lifestyle and came away with the HIV virus, a precursor to AIDS. The once great are now dead and dying. If you need more examples, look up Pete Rose, Mike Tyson or Michael Irvin. Each illustrates a different fault and a different demise to go with that fault.

In some ways, these role models' falls can benefit society. Sometimes the courage they show when dealing with their problems can be inspiring. The exposure of their problems can also bring attention to a previously hidden or underexposed problem. But these tragedies also serve as examples of the extent of society's demise.

We need not put all of the responsibilities of a role model into the hands of a few high-profile individuals. Instead, we should take the responsibility upon ourselves as a society. How can that be done? The answer will have to be one person at a time.

While it would not be possible for you or me to become a superstar celebrity role model, we can serve as the other type, the type that doesn't receive as much attention but nonetheless can change society for the better.

How can you do this individually? Take a long, hard look at yourself and figure out what strengths you have and how you can use them effectively. Look at people who have served as your role models over the years. Ask yourself what it was about them that set them apart. See if you can exude some of those same qualities.

While it may not seem so at first, the world is full of positive role models. These people may or may not even see themselves in that light. Teachers, doctors, volunteers and leaders in general can all be seen as role models, but the concept is not limited to them alone. Peers, older brothers and sisters, parents, anyone can make a difference in the lives of those around them. Do you have what it takes? Of course you do! All you have to do is put it into practice.

One day, I was sitting around dreaming about being someone that others looked up to. Not being athletically talented or popular or good-looking, I figured the role model status was beyond my reach.

Then it hit me. The way I looked at the situation is one of the biggest underlying problems. If people, no matter who they are, refuse to see themselves as role models or potential role models, then they have already admitted defeat.

Trust me, each and every one of us has qualities that can help to make the lives of those around us better and which can be used to influence others in positive ways. The secret is to realize that and to seize the opportunity to make a difference in this world.

All it takes is some time and patience in conjunction with the knowledge that anything is possible, no matter how bad things may look.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Patriotism goes through the Rauf

This country was founded with the belief that you are free to believe your own beliefs. Currently in the NBA, there is a certain strife over that very topic.

Justin C. Smith

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf of the Denver Nuggets is of the Moslem religion and refused to stand during the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." When a caller on a Denver talk show pointed this out early in March, the league decided it needed to take action on the matter.

Commissioner David Stern suspended Rauf without pay until he would comply with his contract. Each NBA player's contract has a clause that states he will conduct himself in a respectable manner during the national anthem.

The suspension lasted just a couple of days. Now while everyone else in the arena "honors America," Rauf holds his hands about a foot from his face as he bows his head and recites Moslem prayer. He claims that when he sees the American flag he not only sees the good it represents, but also the wrong doings of the country it stands for.

Rauf's strength in religious beliefs has been well documented. When Rauf attended Louisiana State University, he was still known under his birth name Chris Jackson but changed it to his now Moslem name in the NBA. He can only drink water during daylight hours of Ramadan, which in the heart of the season, and may at times hinder his performance on the court.

Were the superstar's personal freedoms infringed upon by the league's suspension or can the NBA players' contract be called unconstitutional?

Fans around the professional world have shown their displeasure with Rauf's antics by booing him vehemently as he is introduced over the public address system at games since his return. Despite receiving death threats Rauf didn't miss a game until injuring his ankle.

When attending games at the Mullins Center, I stand to salute my country during the band's rendition, and I show my appreciation for the great leaders of this nation that founded this country. They enabled my family to take part in this nation's "Land of Opportunity."

That doesn't mean when I stand there I am thinking of Thomas Jefferson signing the Declaration of Independence or of the slaves that he kept. I'm probably thinking about the test I have to take the next day or whether the fly of my pants is zipped.

Being an avid hockey fan, I have been at many games where the Canadian national anthem is also played. Because I am an American, do I recite "God Bless America" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy" while they play "O Canada?" No, but I do conduct myself in the same manner as I would as if it was Rene Rancourt singing Francis Scott Key's ballad at the FleetCenter.

I also understand Mr. Rauf's point that those same men oppressed people and held slaves during the time this land separated from the British and I respect his right to not share the same thoughts as I do. But this country has given him the chance to makes millions of dollars by doing something he enjoys, playing a game.

Standing and thinking whatever you want during the anthem is fine with me and you have a right to believe the Stars and Stripes means anything you desire, but respect is a small price to pay. The league shouldn't need to put it in one's contract for that person to respect the patriotism of proud American citizens.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Star skaters pull out all stops at Mullins

By Seema Gangadrkar
Collegian Staff

STARS ON ICE
Mullins Center
March 22

"There's no place I'd rather be than on this surface of ice," Scott Hamilton declared Friday night. Hamilton and fellow members of the Discover Card Stars on Ice tour showcased their talents in a one-night only performance at the Mullins Center.

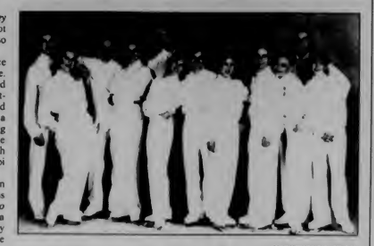
Stars on Ice, which is celebrating 10 years of quality figure skating, featured some of the finest skaters in the world. Joining Hamilton were Paul Wylie, Katarina Witt, Rosalyn Sumners, Kristi Yamaguchi and Kurt Browning. Pairs skaters included the Russian team of Elena Bechke & Denis Petrov and the Canadians Christine Hough & Doug Ladret. A new addition to the cast, the Finnish dance team of Susanna Rahkamo & Petri Kokko, rounded out the ensemble.

The show began with Ice Cream, featuring all the members of the cast. The energetic piece showcased skaters' trademark moves such as Hamilton's back flip and Bechke & Petrov's lifts. The opening number fused seamlessly into Browning's Hey Pachuco, a piece that showed of not only Browning's technique, but also his sense of humor and artistry.

Hamilton spoke to the audience several times during the performance. The first time he spoke, he recalled that it was 10 years since he had started the Stars on Ice tour and that it had grown from a five–city tour to a 55–city tour. He also sang a song describing all past members of the prestigious tour, a roster which included the likes of Brian Orser, Debi Thomas and Underhill & Martini.

Summers' performance to Jordan Hill's "Remember Me This Way" was followed up by Paul Wylie's Apollo 13. Yamaguchi took the ice with a classical program to The Seasons by Glazunov, a nice change after the earlier, louder programs.

The first act concluded with A Spaghetti Western, an ensemble piece consisting of Witt, Hamilton, Sumners, Browning, Bechke & Petrov and Rahkomo & Kokko. Sumners portrayed a salon girl known as Ooh Ahh, while Witt was the seductive Mistero. Browning, as Dusty, was the poor guy who got beaten up by Witt while Hamilton, as Mister, who after being pummelled by Witt, finally managed to get a kiss from her.



COURTESY HEINZ KLUETMEIER
Dorothy Hamil led Stars On Ice at the Mullins Center over spring break.

The second act featured Browning's "Brick House" program, a funky arrangement that he performed flawlessly. Yamaguchi, pig-tailed and dressed almost like a little girl, went about shushing the audience with Bjork's "It's Oh So Quiet."

The show concluded with a medley of Beatles songs, showcasing all the cast members and including a delightful performance from Yamaguchi to John Lennon's "Imagine."

Stars on Ice performed well Friday night and they were rewarded for their efforts with a standing ovation from the audience.

New video games add to the madness of March

March Madness is in the air, and if you can't get enough of college basketball on television, you can play it on your video game system.

There are two popular NCAA approved college basketball games for the Sega Genesis and Nintendo's Super NES: Acclaim's College Slam, and Electronic Arts' Coach K's College Basketball. Both feature over 30 of the most popular teams including University of Massachusetts, Boston College and University of Connecticut. The two games are dramatically different, but both are fun to play. College Slam is a two on two jam fest, while Coach K's is a classic five on five basketball game.

Despite NCAA restrictions against student athletes endorsing products, both games attempt to include the real players. College Slam simply lists the positions of the starting five, but their stats and on screen characters look remarkably similar to the real athletes. Coach K's uses a different technique. It simply uses the numbers of the players, and includes their real stats.

Although the real names can not be used and player's stats may change, College Slam takes this into consideration because you can edit player's names and stats. If you'd rather see Marcus Camby's name instead of "Center" playing for the Minutemen, the user can change it.

College Slam

College Slam is the younger sibling of NBA Jam, so they have a similar feel. Like it's older brother, it sports fast paced, frenzied action, but with a few new twists. Unlike NBA Jam, users have the choice of choosing two players from a roster of five. Unfortunately College Slam does not include old favorites who play off the bench.

Another difference between NBA Jam and College Slam are the hot spots and power ups. Through the options menu, users can configure the game to increase the arcade quality. The power ups are temporary and include re rims, whirlwind, hot or cold balls, and many more. Hot spots are places on the floor where players can score big points — this feature helps keep the game close.

College Slam: B+

Coach K's

The similarities between Coach K's and College Slam are few. Outside of both being college basketball games and including the nation's most popular teams, they are dramatically different. The rosters on Coach K's include most of the scholarship players, so you can call Tyrone Weeks or Rigo Nunez off the bench when playing as UMass. However unlike Slam, Coach K's uses last year's roster because the game is almost a year old.

Coach K's is a simulation, so there are no power ups nor hot spots. However, Coach K's allows the user to call plays in advance, and set defenses. Like a real basketball game, players can foul out unless the user chooses arcade mode in the options. The game even includes Injuries. Users can play simple exhibition games, a mock NCAA tournament, or an entire season that includes a tournament and a top 25 poll.

I preferred Coach K's because it is more realistic and involving. Arcade game players will probably like College Slam over Coach K's. Although I preferred Coach K's in single player mode, College Slam wins hands down when playing against friends.

College Slam is also available for the Sega Saturn, Sony Playstation, and computers. The computer version requires a 66 MHz 486, eight megabytes of memory, and a double speed CD-ROM. Both games reviewed were for the Genesis.

Who bassist brings classic rock to NoHo

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

The last time the rock 'n' roll world got a look at the Who was on their record breaking 1989 farewell tour.

Since then the remaining members have drifted into the shadows while their peers, the Rolling Stones and Page & Plant, have stayed in the limelight. Tonight at the Iron Horse, Who bassist John Entwistle makes a return of his own, on a smaller scale.

Never one for much spotlight, Entwistle was the backbone of the Who, keeping manic guitarist Pete Townsend in line. While Roger Daltrey and Townsend strived on wild on stage antics, Entwistle stayed in the background.

But tonight he takes center stage as leader of his new band which features Godfrey Townsend (guitar), Alan St. Jon (keyboards) and Steve Luongo (drums).

Since 1970 Entwistle has released six solo albums including his debut, Smash Your Head Against the Wall and his most recent effort, The Rock, which has remained unreleased but will be on sale at the show as a limited– edition, signed and numbered collector's item. On his solo releases the famous bassist has been constantly performing tunes that weren't made for the Who.

Tonight's show certainly will feature several tunes from these albums.

Who fans will be ecstatic to learn that Entwistle has been including classic songs from his former band, many that the band overlooked on their farewell 1989 tour.

In a recent interview with the Boston Phoenix, Townsend commented on the dim possibility of a Who reunion, "The saddest part for me is that I know it's pretty much over. We've been trying to do a reunion tour for years, and Pete [Townsend] won't do it. So it's an impossibility.

"If one of us can't do it, then we all can't do it."

Well, if the Who won't be rolling through the area again, tonight's rare performance by Entwistle may be the closest look music fans will have of a true rock 'n' roll dinosaur.

John Entwistle performs at the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m. The show is all ages. Call the club at 584–0610 for more details.

COURTESY BIG PRODUCTIONS
John Entwistle, legendary bassist of the Who, appears at the Iron Horse tonight.

SGA ELECTIONS
Coverage
UVC-TV 19
Candidates' interviews will air this week at 3:30PM on Channel 19
Monday, March 25
to
Thursday, March 28

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Softball, Soccer, & Volleyball
Clinics: Softball & Soccer- March 25 & 26
Volleyball- March 27
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Softball, Soccer, & Volleyball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

Graduate study at UMass Boston!
Find out about it at our March 28 open house
- A distinguished faculty
- innovative programs
- flexible schedules
- a convenient location
- and affordable costs

Our graduate programs and tracks include
Americon Studies (MA)
Applied Physics (MS)
Applied Sociology (MA)
Bilingual Education (MA)
Biology (MS)
Biotechnology and Biomedical Science (MS)
Business Administration (MBA)
Chemistry (MS)
Clinical Psychology (PhD)
Computer Science (MS, PhD)
Counselor Training (MEd, CAGS)
Critical and Creative Thinking (Certificate, MA)
Dispute Resolution (Certificate, MA)
Education, Early Childhood, Elementary, and Secondary (MEd, Teacher Certification)
Education/Higher Education Administration (EdD)
Education/Urban School Leadership (EdD)
Educational Administration (MEd, CAGS)
English (MA)
English as a Second Language Studies (MA)
Environmental Sciences (MS, PhD)
Environmental Sciences/Environmental Biology (PhD)
Gerontology (PhD)
History (MA)
History/Archival Methods (MA)
History/Historical Archaeology (MA)
Human Services (MS)
Instructional Design (MEd)
Nursing (MS, MS/MBA, PhD)
Nursing: RN-to-MS Program (MS)
Public Affairs (MS)
Public Policy (PhD)
School Psychology (MEd, CAGS)
Special Education (MEd)
Women in Politics and Government (Certificate)
The open house will take place Thursday, March 28, 4-7pm in Wheatley Hall Cafeteria (3rd Floor)
To learn more, call 617 287-6000
UMass Boston

Go Anywhere For Spring Break*?
* 9 days, 216 hours, 432 episodes of Seinfeld
Thousands of Pictures
Enter the best picture of Spring Break '96 Contest!!
Grand Prize
Dinner for two at Carmelina's &
Free Enlargement of the Winning Photo
Processing must be done at Advanced Video & Photo • Entries must be received by 4/5/96
Advanced Video Photo
328 College St Amherst 253-2222
26 N. King St Northampton 586-6501
136 College St So. Hadley 536-8863

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

RYAN TEZZI / COLLEGIAN

TWO CREAMS, ONE SUGAR....

Senior Air Force R.O.T.C. student Sean Horgan, passes out free samples of General Foods International coffee to passerbyes in order to raise money for the program.

■ ALANA

continued from page 1

The issue of discrimination carries over into the SGA, said Speaker Dan Castellano. An opportunity for an unequal voice is created by having only five out of nine ALANA senators as students of color, he said. Three out of the five were elected, he added.

"Each area government shall appoint one senator to the SGA government," Kittredge said. This causes smaller area government appointed seats to get more attention than larger area government appointed seats, he said.

"A level of ignorance and a level of prejudice" allow for the small number of ALANA students holding SGA positions, said Director of the Office of ALANA Affairs and alumni Nelson Acosta.

With a total of 45 senators from electoral districts, five are ALANA students of color, said Castellano.

If everything was up to par then there would be no need to create the ALANA caucus, said McNamara.

The senate, prior to the ALANA caucus, was 99 percent white males and ALANA students would invade the senate because they felt under represented, said Acosta. "People didn't feel there was an equal playing field."

The creation of the ALANA caucus was created because of an unlevel playing field, said Castellano.

The SGA is progressive because of the existence of the ALANA caucus, said Acosta. Since only one ALANA student was an SGA member in 1991, the ALANA caucus was reactivated in 1992, said Caston.

If the caucus was to be eliminated, the ALANA voice would fail to exist within the SGA, said Acosta. "Eighty-five percent of this campus is non-ALANA."

"We must include everybody in it. It can not be unilateral," said Acosta in reference to democracy. Democracy is when everyone has an equal say, he said, therefore, a level playing field is a representation of voices.

The caucus was created to offer an equal voice of representation, not a double vote, said Castellano.

Castellano cautioned against Luongo and Kittredge's motivation behind their case. "Their sole purpose is to eliminate the seats in the ALANA caucus."

A Senate Select Committee was formed in February to look into the formation of new caucuses such as a Women's caucus, a Disabilities caucus, and an LBGA caucus.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is looking for a

DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR

Applicants must be full-time undergraduate students with an interest in covering a wide range of events within the community.

Applications and job descriptions are available from Marni Helfner, managing editor, in the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center.

The deadline for applications is Monday, April 1, 1996 at 4 p.m.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

`Hit Dog' can fetch bases too

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. — If you look at Mo Vaughn's numbers and figure he's a home run hitter, if you look at his 245-pound frame and assume he is slow, it may already be too late to stop him from stealing second.

"When you're a big guy, they don't think you can run at all. But I just want to let people know that I am an athlete," he said, drawing an extra syllable out of the word. "And more people are starting to see that."

They'd better. Because as well-informed as pitchers are of the damage the "Hit Dog" can do with his bat, it isn't enough if they forget about him once he reaches base.

"It's always going to be a threat, to make people think about something else more than just the hitter," the reigning AL MVP said. "Knowing that you might go, that's a distraction. And if I steal some bases, it's only going to help the club."

Vaughn batted .300 last year, hitting 39 homers and driving in a league-leading 126 runs. MVP voters also noted his leadership role on the team and in the community. Few, however, were swayed by his career-high 11 stolen bases.

But manager Kevin Kennedy considers good base-running an essential part of the game, whether it's speedy center fielder Dwayne Hosey or the more earthbound Vaughn. And that means Vaughn has a conditional green light.

"When a guy's not paying attention to him, he'd better be able to do it," Kennedy said. "Even if he gets thrown out, it wouldn't bother me. The idea is to plant the seed. Maybe it'll break the concentration of the pitcher. The big thing is to let them know that I'll do it."

New Boston base-running coach Maury Wills said there's no reason Vaughn's size should keep him from stealing enough bases to help the Red Sox win a couple of games. After all, Wills says, most of it is mental: reading the pitcher, getting a good jump, picking your spots.

"It represents outsmarting the other guy," Wills said, "like a game of chess."

And last year, Vaughn was a grandmaster.

He was successful on his first eight stolen base attempts, topping his previous career high of four in three weeks. He had 10 by the All-Star break before Kennedy told him to stop.

"I shut him down," the manager said. "Jose (Canseco) had gotten hurt and I didn't want to lose two of my big guys." Wills said he doesn't doubt that Vaughn can be a threat. "(But) It's not a good idea for him to steal a lot of bases," the former Dodgers speedster said.

"Hank Aaron could have stolen 50 bases easily. But it's not a good idea because it tires you out. You're sore and you get raspberries all over. A base-stealer doesn't feel like going dancing after the game. And Mo's too valuable as a home run and RBI guy to steal a lot of bases."

Conventional wisdom would agree. With Wil Cordero and John Valentin likely batting before him and Canseco and Kevin Mitchell following him in the order, Vaughn would be valuable enough staying put and waiting for one of the other sluggers to drive him home. But Kennedy bristles at the suggestion.

"If they're going to give it to us, we're going to go," he said. "This is not going to be a station-to-station team. This is not going to be a team that waits for a home run. This is a team that will use all of it's weapons."

The Berkshires can put their Sox on

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Fans can laugh and children shout again in the Berkshire Mountains: the mighty Red Sox, apparently, are not out.

A tentative deal, if approved, will restore the team's broadcast schedule of games to virtually all cable television subscribers around Berkshire County, cable and team sources said Monday. "I think it's a great thing," said Fran Markham, acting general manager of Time Warner cable system in Pittsfield. "There are subscribers who have never been without the Red Sox. I'd hate to start them now."

Markham's company has also been negotiating for two other Berkshire cable companies. The three systems cover all but three small Berkshire towns.

Kevin Shea, a Red Sox spokesman in Fort Myers, Fla., said the team is now turning its attention to reaching the blacked-out pockets that remain in Northern New England. "We're not done," he said.

The Red Sox have long set aside a major part of their television rights for ordinary, over-the-air broadcast, hoping to spur interest in the team and receipts at Fenway Park. The contract for those games, now a total of 80, was held for 21 years by superstation WSBK-TV (channel 38) in Boston.

When that contract expired, the Red Sox reached a one-year deal Jan. 2 with WABU-TV (channel 68) in Boston, a full-service commercial station owned by Boston University. However, WABU was not plugged into a broad cable network, like the superstation. Team, broadcast and cable officials around New England have been racing in recent months, broadening the reach of the signal to more areas outside metropolitan Boston.

Like much of New England, Berkshire County, the westernmost in Massachusetts, is home to thousands of Red Sox loyalists vexed by the prospect of a television diet this season. The blackout there was also frustrating to the team because its general manager, Dan Duquette, grew up in the Berkshire town of Dalton.

"Our loyal fans in the Berkshires are as important to us as fans anywhere else in New England," Duquette said in a statement announcing the pact Monday.

For an additional charge, Berkshire County and most other places can also see up to 76 different regular season games via cable on the New England Sports Network, known as NESN.

Markham said the new arrangement with WABU-TV calls for the Berkshire cable systems to install satellite dishes to capture the broadcast game signal. He said the proposed accord was undergoing a final legal review this week.

"This is a double deal," said Ray Fisher, general manager of Adelphia Cable in North Adams, another one of the cable companies in the pact. But he said Adelphia subscribers in Bennington, Vt., which the company also serves, remain without a way of receiving the broadcast games.

Shea, the team spokesman, said the agreement will bring the games to about 45,000 Berkshire households at no additional cost as part of the standard cable package.

He said arrangements have now been completed to supply the games to about 11 million viewers around New England.

NCAA tickets add to March Madness

By David Wilkison
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It was madness all right Monday for people trying to buy tickets to the NCAA Final Four without taking out a bank loan.

"I've been in business 16 years, and I've never seen anything this absurd," said a New Jersey ticket broker who refused to be identified. "It's crazy. I don't want to get involved with it." With just 18,500 seats available, brokers' prices ranged from $950 in the upper levels to $8,000 for courtside tickets to Saturday's semifinal games and Monday's championship contest at the Continental Airlines Arena.

"It's steep compared to other NCAAs, but you've got limited capacity, an East Coast location and East Coast teams," said a Chicago-based broker who would identify himself only as Richard. "Obviously getting Syracuse and UMass are going to drive prices higher," he said. "Mississippi State isn't going to help you, but overall I'd say the schools are pretty good and Kentucky is a big draw."

Only 1,000 of the $70 three-game ticket packages were made available to the public through an NCAA-sponsored lottery last year. About 91,500 applications were received.

Syracuse, Massachusetts, Mississippi State and Kentucky received 2,500 tickets apiece, the NCAA controlled 3,500, the National Association of Basketball Coaches got 3,000 and the Meadowlands Organizing Committee 1,000.

Fueling the steep prices is the limited seating. By comparison, 38,540 saw last year's championship game at the Kingdome in Seattle, and 64,151 attended the title game at New Orleans' Superdome in 1993.

Beginning in 1997, arenas must have a seating capacity of at least 30,000 to qualify for the Final Four.

"They're hot. Real hot," ticket manager Barb Donnelly said of Kentucky's allotment. More than 1,200 students lined up at 6:30 a.m. Monday to participate in a lottery for 800 tickets. The other tickets were split among the athletic department and administration to sell to donors and others.

"They had calls last week from people from California and beyond saying, I'd be willing to give $5,000 or $10,000 just to get on your donor list to get tickets," Donnelly said.

In Starkville, Miss., students started camping out at Mississippi State's ticket office shortly after the Bulldogs beat Cincinnati on Sunday for a chance at several hundred tickets. A Potomac, Md., man who would identify himself only as Chris, ran a $300 ad in USA Today seeking tickets, possibly from a college student looking to make some fast cash.

He spent $200 for a ticket to last year's Final Four and was willing to spend as much as $1,000 this year. He had no callers by midday Monday.

"It's in a small arena in New Jersey next to New York and everybody wants to go," he said. "They have to pop up sooner or later. Hopefully the economy in Mississippi isn't doing great." Russell Ford, president of Syracuse's northern New Jersey alumni branch, started working the phones early Monday, trying to get tickets to the games to be played just 30 minutes from his Morristown home.

"I'm resigned to the fact we're not going to get tickets because they're just not available," said Ford, 30. "Would I love to go the game? Yes, but you have to be a realist."

■ Basketball

continued from page 10

said. "If we win that last game on Monday, hopefully we'll get respect."

"Until we win the championship, we're not going to get the respect that we deserve," Padilla said.

"We won't get no respect until we win the championship," Clarke said, "and that's our goal."

When the two teams met on Nov. 28, it was Camby would made things happen — burning the Wildcats with his 32- point, nine-rebound and five-block performance.

In this second matchup, the Wildcats will most likely focus their defense on the 6-foot-11-inch National Player of the Year, much like they did to Tim Duncan in the Midwest Regional Final. Against the Kentucky defense, Duncan struggled scoring just one point in the first half and 14 for the game — 10 of which came from the free throw line.

"They're going to try to do their best to shut me down. I just have to be prepared," Camby said. "This year our goal was to win the whole thing. We won't be satisfied until we do."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Dana Dingle and the men's basketball team are looking to grab national respect and a National Championship when the begin play in the Final Four Saturday in the Meadowlands.

Lakers haven't forgiven Ceballos

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — If Cedric Ceballos expected his Los Angeles Lakers teammates to forgive his unexcused four-day Arizona vacation, forget it.

Ceballos finally turned up Sunday, but the Lakers didn't toss out a welcome mat for him. His sudden disappearance last Wednesday has splintered a team fighting Houston for fourth place in the Western Conference and home-court advantage in the first round of the playoffs.

"He abandoned us, you know. At a time like this, at a time we have to stick together," guard Nick Van Exel said.

"It's going to be hard. We've got a team captain who just walks out."

Ceballos, 26, claimed unspecified family problems needed his attention, but he didn't otherwise explain his trip to Lake Havasu, Ariz., where he water-skiied while the Lakers wondered why they didn't hear from him for four days.

"I had some personal and family problems to deal with. I apologize for myself and the actions of not letting my employers at the Lakers organization know this," he said. "It just got to a point where it was just a little too much for me. I just needed time."

Ceballos was taken off the suspended list Monday, and left with the team on a six-game road trip beginning Tuesday night at Orlando.

Instead of starting against the Magic, he will play in a reserve role, coach Del Harris said.

Ceballos insisted his absence had nothing to do with basketball, and he dismissed rumors that he is unhappy about playing fewer minutes since Magic Johnson rejoined the team Jan. 29.

"I've always been happy with my role," Ceballos said. "You bring a Hall of Fame player back, everybody's going to adjust. Those adjustments were made and they're fine with me."

Angriest of all the Lakers is Johnson, a self-described "ultimate team player" who put retirement on hold to return to the team this season.

"This is the worst time for all this to happen," he said. "I'm really sick and tired of it."

"He abandoned us, you know. At a time like this, at a time we have to stick together. It's going to be hard. We've got a team captain who just walks out."

– Nick Van Exel

Johnson said Ceballos going AWOL has taken away from his comeback.

He said he plans to wait until the offseason before deciding whether to return next year.

"Maybe I won't throw myself back into next season. I don't know," Johnson said. "It's hard for me to deal with all this. I'm too old."

Just as Michael Jordan recently lit into teammate Dennis Rodman for head-butting an official, Johnson expects to have a long talk with Ceballos.

As of Sunday night, Ceballos had not explained his hiatus to his teammates.

"What is he going to do? Is he going to commit himself or not? That's the big question," Johnson said after scoring 28 points against Charlotte in his second start in place of Ceballos.

"I want to welcome him back, but let him understand we need a commitment from him."

Johnson fondly recalled a time when players didn't abandon their teammates and willingly sacrificed personal glory to win.

"What happened to the good old '80s? I never would have seen a guy walk out," Johnson said. "If a guy had personal problems with us years ago, we would've helped him through."

In a further sign that all is not well in Lakers dressing room, someone placed a decorated milk carton in Ceballos' locker, with words clipped out of the newspaper to form the phrases, "Where in the world is Ceballos?" and "MIA."

Ceballos is respected, if not well-liked by his teammates.

He is the Lakers' leading scorer with a 22.4-point average, but his erratic behavior could jeopardize his status as co-captain.

"A lot has to come off everybody's chests," Johnson said. "He's going to have to sit down and listen.

"We have to set our priorities straight or we're going to be an early exit (from the playoffs)."

Ceballos met with Lakers executive vice president Jerry West and general manager Mitch Kupchak on Sunday.

"He didn't look like the same lively, active guy that I know," West said. "I could see something there that I hadn't seen before."

Ceballos wasn't the only starter who didn't play in the Lakers' 103-94 loss to Charlotte.

Center Vlade Divac stayed home due to tonsillitis, and wasn't on the flight for Orlando on Monday.

A team spokesman said Divac's status was uncertain, that he was scheduled to see a doctor.

■ baseball

continued from page 10

but Northwestern tallied three in the bottom of the fourth to pull away.

Each team scored a pair more, but Northwestern came away with the win.

The Minutemen were led by catcher Andy Kiah and Jette, who each hit for doubles.

Murphy, who was solid in centerfield, went three–for–five on the evening with three singles and a walk. He reached base safely on all five at– bats.

Right–hander Jeff Puleri started the game for UMass, but was overpowered by the tough Wildcat squad.

Freshman southpaw Bill Cooke finished the game.

UMass 12, Niagara 10

UMass got back on the winning track in the fifth game of its Florida stay, defeating Niagara 12–10. Because of a time limit the game was played in only six innings. The Minutemen improved their record to 4–4.

The first inning was a scoring binge for each team, as UMass tallied four and Niagara brought in six.

Shortstop Gorrie went two–for–four on the day with a pair of doubles. Murphy and Bryan Mazzaferro also turned in doubles.

The left-handed Dart picked up his first win of the season, pitching the game's final two innings. He allowed no runs and K'd three.

UMass 8, Northwestern 7

In the final game of UMass' stint in Fort Myers, the Minutemen exacted some revenge on the Wildcats.

The win brought its record above .500 for the first time this season.

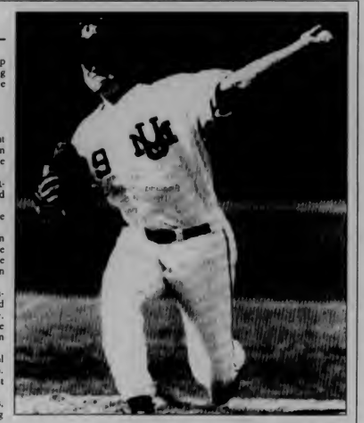
Pinch–hitter Brian Samela drove in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth, on a RBI single. The Minutemen rallied after being down 7–0.

Kelly and Thistle each had doubles, while Kelly and Murphy had RBI singles to tie the game. Samela's game– winning single drove in pinch–runner Ryan Hodgson.

Righty Steve Levy pitched the final frame of the game to earn the win. Paronto started the game and went six innings.

He allowed seven runs on 11 hits, while striking out three and walking none.

The Minutemen will play at Boston College today. First pitch is set for 3 p.m.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior David Dart earned his first win of the season over Niagara during spring break as the Minutemen posted a 5–1 record on their Florida road trip.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 10

Led by a stellar goaltending performance by sophomore goaltender John Kasselakis, the Minutemen dominated the Bulldogs.

Led by a three–goal, two–assist game from Glass, UMass opened an early 8–1 lead at the Yale Lacrosse Stadium. Yale went on a 5–1 run in the fourth quarter but it was too little too late.

"We got a great effort from John Kasselakis," Cannella said. "They didn't score a goal until the third period. That's a tremendous effort on our part."

Hofstra 15, Massachusetts 14 (OT)

The emotional roller coaster that defined this game ended on a down note for the Minutemen.

After an Eric Bailey goal tied the game with just five seconds left, the Flying Dutchmen responded in overtime, as Blake Miller scored just 49 seconds into the sudden death session to give Hofstra the win.

"I told the guys while the one goal does change our record and the outcome of the game, it doesn't take anything away from us," Cannella said. "We played hard the whole game. We competed. We came back. It was Hofstra's night and it went their way."

The game served as a coming–out party for freshman Jay Negus, who scored four goals in the loss. Glass added three goals and two assists as well.

■ softball

continued from page10

tournament champions, South Florida.

Freshman Katie Kendarski had two hits and scored a run as the Minutewomen built a three–zip lead over South Florida going into the top of the seventh.

Pitcher Liz Wagner held the Bulls to two hits over the first six innings, setting the side down in order in the sixth, but she ran into trouble in the final frame.

The first batter of the inning reached on an error, and Wagner hit the next Bull batter. Both runners scored but Wagner closed the door by striking out Jancen Sobush, SFU's No. 3 hitter, to seal the win.

The Minutewomen were knocked out of the tournament by Florida State. Seminole pitcher Renee Espinoza struck out six on her way to a 3–1 triumph and got all the support she needed from battery mate Kristy Hull who drove in all three of FSU's runs.

Wagner again pitched well giving up just three unearned runs on six hits without allowing a base–on–balls.

Massachusetts finished up its break with a 7–3 record, boosting its overall record to 12–10.

"I felt that, overall, we had a pretty good trip, and I was very disappointed that we didn't move into the national poll last week," Sortino said. "I'm hopeful that we are the number one team in the region this week, and that we move into the Top 25."

sports notice

There will be a all sports staff meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. This is a mandatory meeting and all writers on the sports staff must attend. Anyone interested in becoming a writer is welcome and encouraged to come. Any questions call Candice Flemming at 545–0719.

■ NHL

continued from page10

My, aren't those Rangers clever! As was the case two years ago concerning the host of trades make by then–coach/GM Mike Keenan, praise for this exchange heavily outweighed criticism. Sure, maybe Mattias Norstrom will be the second coming of Borje Salming, but McSorley and Churla will of course help the Blueshirts wear out the physical favorites in the Eastern Conference.

Then the Maple Leafs make a similar swap, inviting Wendel Clark back for a second tour of duty in Toronto and Mathieu Schneider, a very underrated all–around defenseman. Cliff Fletcher, you fool! To the Islanders he peddled Kenny Jonsson, another fine young Swedish blueliner, and Sean Haggerty, perhaps the best American– born player in the Canadian Hockey League. No doubt it's pandemonium in Toronto, right?

Five years from now, one of the deals will probably look very stupid for the team who got the veterans. But why are the odds so stacked that the miscue was the Maple Leafs'? There's that big market–U.S. team bias again.

• The Hockey News devoted its cover story for the March 29 issue to the inaugural World Cup, which replaces the Canada Cup this summer. This should really be something. The U.S. and Canada will basically field NHL All–Star teams something like those that will skate in the 1998 Nagano, Japan Olympics. THN made its own rosters, and only the U.S.' Steve Konawalchuk (Steve Konawalchuk?) sticks out suspiciously.

• The Bruins have done a great job cutting down the wide open goals against them, and that's allowed Bill Ranford to post some nice numbers that have a lot of people saying he'll carry Boston a good ways in the post–season. But it was Kovalev who weaseled his way past everyone for the game winner Saturday to beat the Bruins at the Fleet. They'd come all the way back from a 3–0 deficit, only to see their comeback denied by a very poor defensive display in crunch time.

If we see that next month, Ranford won't be carrying anything but his equipment out of his locker.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217

Make Friends with SAMUEL ADAMS
Thursday, March 28th
6:00-8:00pm
Introducing Sam Adam's Golden Pilsner & Cherry Wheat
Beer Specials, Raffles & Prizes

243 Reasons to Return to Long Island
SUMMER
STONY BROOK SUMMER SESSION
* 243 courses in 45 subjects
* Day and evening classes
* Low NYS tuition
* Register by mail, fax, phone or in person
* Live on campus or commute
* Two terms: May 28-July 12; July 15-Aug.23
For free bulletin, call 24 hours (516) 632-7070
Please send me the 1996 Summer Session Bulletin:
Name
Street/Box No
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
An AA/EO educator and employer
STONY BROOK
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Summer Session Office
Stony Brook, NY 11794-3730

FAMOUS FOR WOW! 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Best Stand Best Burgers in the Valley
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
PETE'S

The return of UNSOLD TEXTBOOKS will begin on Monday, March 25, 1996.
Though it takes several weeks to complete the process, we can not guarantee to have the book you need, in stock, after this date.
UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST
Faculty members who want to hold books later in the semester should call 545-3570.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Miscellaneous
Announcements	Motorcycles
Apartment For Rent	Personals
Auto For Sale	Room For Rent
Employment	Room Wanted
Entertainment	Roommate Wanted
For Sale	Services
Found (2 days Free)	Summer Sublet
Happy Birthday	To Sublet
Houses For Rent	Travel
Instruction	Transportation
Lost	Wanted to Rent
Musicians	Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For a good time [illegible] on the web [illegible]

University Productions & Concerts [illegible] come see what concert production is [illegible] about at our General Committee Meeting tonight at 6:00 in the UC 702. Everyone is welcome come get involved.

AUTO FOR SALE

For Spring Break! [illegible] 1980 Station wagon, [illegible] $900. Needs to [illegible] 549-8073

83 Volks Rabbit 64[illegible] miles [illegible] good condition $2000 253-[illegible]

EMPLOYMENT

Town of Amherst Leisure Services [illegible] camp, office, maintenance, [illegible] Positions. Pool managers, [illegible] swim instructors, cashiers, [illegible] supervisors, camp directors, [illegible] with teaching experience, [illegible] needy supervisors, art director, [illegible] camp managers, [illegible] camp counselors, and ball field maintenance worker. Applications available at Personal Resources Office and Amherst Senior Services Office, Bangs Community Center. To Be Hired Work Amherst. Preferred application deadline 7/5/96. Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer.

EMPLOYMENT

$40,000/year Income Potential - Home typists/PC users. Toll free 1-800 898-9778 ext. T-1732 for listings.

$35,000/year Income Potential. Reading books. Toll free 1-800 898-9778 ext. R-1732 for details

Earn $1,000's weekly stuffing envelopes at home. For free information send a S.A.S.E. to Investment Distributors, P.O. Box 3219 Coos Bay, OR 97420

Summer Jobs - Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is seeking seasonal warehouse/delivery personnel. Housing assistance for exceptional candidates send resume or letter of interest to Brian K. Smith, Operations Manager, Island Food Products, P.O. BOx 4068 Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

FOR SALE

Moving Furniture for sale Call 253-4238

Ash wood convertible futon two frames $180! Call Rick 259-1350

Power Book 150 8mg ram 250mg Excel, Word, Claris, Bookcase, more! Only 2 weeks old. $1800.90, 546-6867

Fully loaded 486 Compact Concerto lap top with detachable screen. Electronic pen. Trains, script into text. 2 speed. ethernet/fax CDROM /PCMCIA slot/ Bubble jet printer. $2,000 546-4736

Brother Word Processor with spread sheets, business letter, and thesaurus software. Originally bought for $300 and valued at $400. resale price $150 or best offer. Call 549-3774 for more information

FOUND

Found- Texas Instrument TI-85 mastbook on 5/11. Call 6-5/51

HOUSE FOR RENT

Cape Cod Summer Rentals Waterfront Houses - Falmouth area 508 477 6000.

PERSONALS

Beth I hope this will help. It's title #2. Communications is my major, and my eyes are not blue. Pls love, Boy Jen F.

This is a hint for your next title. My hair is straight but curly too! I live with others just like us. Try and guess if you must. LML-Your Big Sis

ROOM FOR RENT

Amherst 2BR $256 67 each/mo (heat, cable incl.) Josh or Gabe 253-1404

Room for Rent. Belchertown beautiful house. For info call Justin 323-7460

4 Bedroom house need immediately. For more info call Barb 253-8633

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906.

Internet Access $29 monthly. Account includes your own websites. Contact ITAC at (800)44-4005.

Wordprocessing Service for theses, articles, papers, written or recorded transcription. Fax transmission available (413) 243-8080

SUMMER SUBLET

Puffton 3 bedroom apartment. Cheap! Call 549-5751

WANTED

CASHSSS for your magic cards 585-8382 after 5PM

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enrolling states! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Outstanding performer
5 Stock holder
9 — -ski
14 Atmosphere
15 Has — in one's bonnet
16 Winner at Gettysburg
17 Stagehand
18 Onion?
20 Song of praise
22 Roof window
23 Castro's capital
26 Sundial figure
27 Manner
29 Untouched
33 Angling device
34 Footstep
36 Corsica neighbor, for short
37 Part of MOMA
38 Aviary sound
39 — Lanka
40 26 Across minus IV
41 Vex
42 Dynamic beginning
43 Delicious drink
45 Surpasses
48 Copenhagen coin
49 Fence steps
50 Forensic forum
53 Agriculturist
56 Capable of being controlled
